Lord, let's stop the Carnival!

- Met call for Notting Hill review after record arrests at this year's event
  - Police tired of being used as 'punchbags', says spokesman

THERE were growing calls from police this week to review the future of the Notting Hill Carnival after a record number of arrests at last weekend's event.

The Metropolitan Police Federation claimed that officers 'dread' working at London bacchanal, where 43 PCs were injured this year, with eight taken to hospital, and a record number of people arrested.

The event, which takes place on the streets of Notting Hill in the London borough of Kensington and Chelsea, was founded in 1966 and has become one of the world's leading street festivals, considered by many to be an iconic part of British culture.

But Ken Marsh, the chair of the MPF, which represents rank and file officers, said police "dread" having to work at the carnival, adding that an "unacceptable" number of officers were being attacked.

"This is not a peaceful and fun-loving event that our members look forward to policing. They dread it," he said.

"A seemingly growing number of people appear intent on hijacking this carnival and turning it into a bank holiday battleground, and an excuse for using our members as professional punchbags.

'utterly unacceptable'

"Last year, we had an officer stabbed. This year, colleagues were assaulted, abused and spat at. Forty-three were injured, with eight needing hospital treatment. It's completely and utterly unacceptable."

Police made more than 450 arrests at the carnival, held in west London over the bank holiday weekend. However on Tuesday afternoon Dave Musker, the commander in charge of policing carnival, said that the number of arrests had been inflated by the new Psychoactive Substances Act, and that a revised method of recording injuries to police had resulted in closer attention being paid to officer welfare.

The policing operation also came in for criticism from witnesses who reported seeing stop and search powers being disproportionately used against young black men. Ash Sarkar, 24, a senior editor with Novara Media, said she witnessed searches on both days of carnival, including one on Sunday when the suspect was kept handcuffed long after police had determined he was not carrying anything illegal.

The three day event had been largely peaceful, Cont. on page 5, col. 4

Britain could stay in EU if public opinion shifts, claims Tony Blair

■ Former PM says Remain supporters should continue to warn voters about consequences of Brexit

Tony Blair has claimed Britain could remain in the European Union, despite the referendum result in favour of Brexit, if public opinion shifts in the next few years.

The former prime minister told a French radio station that people had the right to change their minds on the result of the June referendum, and said the debate would continue throughout the UK's exit negotiations.

Theresa May has repeatedly insisted that "Brexit means Brexit", stressing her determination to respect the result of the referendum by taking the UK out of the EU.

But Blair, who wanted the UK to stay in the EU and as Labour prime minister argued for joining the euro, said remain supporters should continue to warn voters about the costs and consequences of Brexit.

'the debate continues"

Speaking to the French radio station Europe 1, Blair said it was probable that the UK would leave the EU but possible it could stay in.

Negative economic consequences such as a fall in the value of sterling, damage to the financial services industry, weaker car manufacturing or a reduction in foreign investment in the UK could shift the debate, he suggested.

"At the moment, today, it is not probable, but the debate continues and I believe it is possible," Blair said, adding that there was no reason why remain supporters should simply accept the result of the referendum, in which 52% of people voted to leave and 48% wanted to stay in.

"Who made a rule that we have to stop the debate now?" he said. Asked whether the campaign to stay in the EU could continue and British people could still change their minds, he said: "We have the right."

Blair said the prime minister, Theresa May, had to stick to her position that "Brexit means Brexit" in order to preserve the unity of the Conservative party, but added: "For the rest of us, we are free to have a debate."

'bad idea'

He also pointed out that it was difficult to know what Brexit actually meant before the terms of leaving had been negotiated with the other member states.

"We have done something rather bizarre with Brexit," he said.

"It's like moving house without having seen the new house. We have made an agreement to exchange, but we don't yet know the terms of Brexit, we don't know the costs and the consequences."

He added: "There will come a moment when we have had the negotiations and we can see the terms we are being offered by the rest of Europe and we will be able to say that it is a good idea or perhaps that it is a bad idea with major consequences."

Champagne by the pint?

■ Churchill's favourite bubbly maker to sell Pol Roger in pint bottles following Brexit vote

One of the world's oldest champagne makers is preparing to sell the fizzy drink in pint bottles – Winston Churchill's favourite measure – after Britain leaves the European Union, the Telegraph reported this week.

Pol Roger wants to sell champagne in imperial measures for the first time since 1973, when Britain's decision to join the European Economic Community meant only metric measurements were allowed.

The French company's board approved the move in the summer and is now discussing a new bottle size in imperial measurements with its suppliers.

Brits favor burka ban

■ British public back outlawing controversial garment by two to one, new poll finds

A majority of the British public are in favour of banning the burka in public, a poll has found, while almost half say the burkini should also be prohibited.

The findings come as a controversial ban on the burkini in France has stirred debate on the subject of Muslim clothing.

Although the country's highest administrative court overturned the ban on the Islamic swimsuit on Friday, mayors have vowed to defy the ruling.

The issue has been widely debated in Britain ever since France the became European country to ban the burga - the Islamic full-face veil - in 2011.

According to the YouGov survey, 57% of respondents in the UK supported banning the veil in public places, while 25% were against outlawing it.

The only age group to oppose a ban was 18-24-year-olds, while all others were in favour, with the oldest group backing the prohibition by an overwhelming 78 per cent to 12.

first Conservative and Ukip voters backed a burga ban (66% and 84% respectively). And while fewer than half of Labour (48%) and Lib Dem (42%) voters supported such a move, they still outnumbered those who opposed the ban (37% and 30% respectively).

Looking at attitudes to burkinis, 46% of people were in favour of outlawing it while 30% would oppose a ban.

The British government said last week it would not introduce a ban on the Islamic swimsuit, saying it "sees no need" of to dictate how people

Mrs. Trump takes on Daily Mail

Melania Trump (above, center) has filed a $150 million lawsuit against The Daily Mail and Tarpley, a U.S.-based blog, claiming that the two outlets made false and defamatory statements about her involvement in an escort service.

"These defendants made several statements about Mrs. Trump that are 100% false and tremendously damaging to her personal and professional reputation," Charles Harder, a lawyer for Melania Trump --Donald Trump's wife -said in a statement. The suit was filed in state court in Montgomery County, Maryland.

"Defendants broadcast their lies to millions of people throughout the U.S. and the world - without any justification," Harder continued. "Their many Harder lies include, among others, that Mrs. Trump supposedly was an 'escort' in the 1990s before she met her husband. Defendants' actions are so egregious, malicious and harmful to Mrs. Trump that her damages are estimated at $150 million dollars."

Melania Trump had last week placed The Daily Mail, Tarpley and other news organizations on notice for what she and her attorney said were false and defamatory statements in reports about both her employment and immigration history.

Those notices were sent three days after The Daily Mail published a report citing a story in a Slovenian magazine that claimed a New York modeling agency that once represented Trump "also operated as an escort agency for wealthy clients." That report was then picked up or referenced by other news outlets, including Tarpley.

London's elite 'pushed out of exclusive postcodes by super rich'

■ Displacement of old money is in turn pricing neighbourhoods in south and east London beyond the reach of average Londoners

SPARE A thought for the lawyers, architects and academics who have traditionally made up Britain's elite.

A new report released this week reveals that the 'great and the good' – as they have long been known - are being being pushed out of their enclaves in Mayfair, Chelsea and Hampstead by an influx of global super rich investors, causing a chain reaction of gentrification across the capital.

Research by the London School of Economics suggests an influx of extremely wealthy overseas buyers is leading the old elite to sell up and move from London's most exclusive postcodes and buy in areas they previously considered undesirable.

Dr Luna Glucksberg, of the LSE's International Inequalities Institute claims this displacement of old money and affluent middle class professionals is in turn pricing neighbourhoods in south and east London out of the reach of average Londoners and threatening to push those on low incomes to the margins of the city and beyond.

"The changes happening at the top end of the market are real, and although they do not affect large numbers of people directly, the ripple effects they generate do resonate across London," Glucksberg said.

dramatic price rises

"In terms of the impact on London as a whole, this represents a very different kind of 'trickle down' effect from what politicians across the spectrum have long argued would be the benefit of the 'super rich moving into our city'," said Glucksberg. "Affordability for average Londoners in the rest of the city is likely to become an even more difficult issue to solve."

The trend was contributing to dramatic house price rises in areas ranging from Battersea and Clapham to Acton, as the old elite bought property there with the significant profits – usually in the millions – made from selling up to the global uber-wealthy, the researcher found.

"The study shows that the wealthy individuals and families that live in London's most exclusive areas no longer feel able to compete at the top end of the capital's property market," said the researcher. "Instead they feel like they are being pushed out of elite neighbourhoods. the first time, this elite group are buying flats for their children in areas they never would have previously considered."

Glucksberg, who previously spent seven years researching London's most deprived estates, said while the displacement of wealthy residents might not inspire sympathy the trend illustrated the deep social impact of the global super rich on the city.

The researcher added that international buyers of luxury high rise apartments did not want low income housing – or social housing as it's termed in the UK - on site and developers did everything to shift social tenants elsewhere.

Six teenage boys arrested over death of Polish man in Essex

■ Brother of dead man says attack happened after group heard victim speaking native language

Six teenage boys have been arrested in Harlow, Essex, after an eastern European immigrant died following a brutal street attack which his brother said began after he was heard speaking Polish in the street.

Amurderinvestigation was launched on Monday into the death of Arkadiusz Jóźwik, 40, from Poland. The factory worker, who had been living in England for the last four years, was knocked unconscious outside a row of takeaway shops on Saturday and later died in hospital.

Essex police, who were called to the scene shortly after 11.35pm on Saturday, said the attack on Jóźwik and a second Polish man who survived the assault was apparently unprovoked and that one line of inquiry was the possibility of it being a hate crime.

During an emotional visit on Tuesday to the scene of the attack, Jóźwik's brother, Radek, spoke of how there had been a surge in hatred towards eastern Europeans after Britain's vote to leave the European Union. He said he been told by police that the attack happened after they heard him and his friends speaking the Polish language.

head injuries

"He was standing eating pizza and they picked on him because of that. He does not speak much English. The young teenagers are so aggressive.

"Parents need to speak with their children – they are out of control. One of the teenagers started and then seconds later there are 10 or 12 people attacking him.

"After the Brexit vote it has got worse – I have seen people change – it is hard at the moment."

Four 15-year-old boys and one 16-year-old boy, all from Harlow, were arrested on Monday on suspicion of attempted murder and then arrested on suspicion of murder. All five have been bailed until 7 October pending further inquiries. A sixth boy, a 15-year-old from Harlow, was arrested on Tuesday afternoon on suspicion of murder and is awaiting questioning.

The attack took place outside some shops in an area of Harlow known as The Stow. Jóźwik suffered head injuries and was taken to the Princess Alexandra hospital in Harlow. He was later transferred to Addenbrooke's hospital in Cambridge, where he died on Monday.

No, I don't need a baby, insists Renée

■ Actress is busy promoting the latest installment of the Bridget Jones saga

RENEE ZELLWEGGER: said she loved her Bridget Jones character because 'she makes it OK to be imperfect.'

ACTRESS Renée Zellweger was back on the media circuit this month, promoting new new film, Bridget Jones's Baby, the third (and presumably final) installment of the much-loved saga of a metropolitan singleton struggling with relationships, work and ageing.

And the actress – whose own checquered romantic history has long made her a tabloid staple — was happy to speak her mind about marriage, men and babies, telling one interviewer that she doesn't need children to be happy.

The 47-year-old actress shut down questions about whether playing a pregnant woman in the comedy sequel had made her 'crave' a child of her own.

Renée replied: 'I've never been that deliberate about my life and the things that I would require in order to be happy.'

The star went on to explain why she loves playing hapless yet lovable girl-next-door Bridget in the film franchise so much, citing her as an inspiration to many.

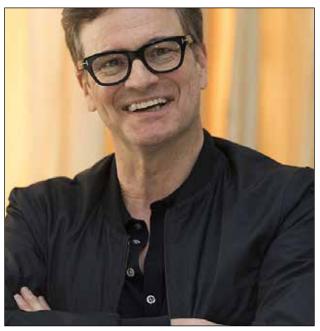

'She makes it OK to be imperfect,' Zellweger told Extra.

She makes it OK to be human at a time when we feel probably that there's a lot of social pressure to be a certain way, to look a certain way, to have established certain things in your life by a certain phase in your life experience. She's sort of challenging those notions.'

The actress, who has been dating musician Doyle Bramhall for four years, has been enjoying a whirlwind promotional tour for the new film alongside Colin Firth and Patrick Dempsey.

The film's plot centres around Bridget discovering she is pregnant, but she doesn't know whether new love interest Jack (Dempsey) or ex Mark Darcy (Firth) is the father of her baby.

Bridget Jones's Baby it set to hit cinemas on September 16.

Champagne:

that champagne in pint bottles could be ready for sale around the time that the UK is expected to leave the European Union.

James Simpson, the managing director of Pol Roger UK, said: "It seems that one advantage of escaping Europe is that we can do what we like with bottle sizes."

'God's own bottle size'

Pol Roger, one of the few family-owned champagne makers, produces 1.5 million bottles of champagne a year from its vineyards around Epernay, northern France, most in standard 0.75 litre bottles.

Mr Simpson said it was likely that Pol Roger would produce several thousand in pint bottles to test demand for the smaller bottles.

The news was hailed by Simon Berry, chairman of London wine merchant Berry Bros & Rudd, one of Britain's oldest wine merchants.

Mr Berry said he had tried for decades to persuade French champagne makers to sell their wine in pint measures – yet was told he was breaking the law by the European Union.

Mr Berry said he had "fantasised about the return of the pint" of champagne for decades. He added that "now we are no longer beholden to Brussels" and could "drink our champagne from God's own bottle size".

before violence erupted late Sunday afternoon. Police blamed the late arrival of troublemakers determined to ignite violence, while community organizers claimed the police were at fault for heavy handed tactics.

Police had been granted a section 60 order covering the entire carnival area which allowed officers to carry out random searches. The policing operation, which seemed initially to take a light touch, changed as the day progressed, with officers taking to the streets in riot gear after nightfall.

Ninety arrests were made for alleged possession of points and blades, and 169 for drugs.

Ishmahil Blagrove, 48, author of Carnival, a history of the Notting Hill carnival, said he believed there was a concerted effort by the police and local council to defame the carnival. He said a comparison of crime rates between the carnival and Glastonbury or other music festivals showed them to be comparable. He said that he had also been left on edge by the appearance of riot police at the carnival.

"I thought there must be something happening in the area ... but there wasn't. The tactic is almost to agitate and provoke certain responses, I saw that myself yesterday. I can bear witness to that. This is what happens," Blagrove said.

"So when they talk about 400 arrests, there is nothing scientific about it. Those arrests are determined by what senior commanders say; whether they are going to go heavy, or whether they are going to go soft on certain things. When they see casual weed smoking, if they turn a blind eye or not; that determines the figures. They can doctor those figures as much as they like.

"When we talk about five stabbings, they want to go to Rio, where they wake up and find five or six bodies in the gutter. Notting Hill Carnival, compared to Trinidad or Brazil, is one of the safest in the world – not just the second largest – it's one of the safest."

As usual the Carnival saw a smattering of celebrity sightings, but the one that drew the most tabloid ink centered on singer Lily Allen, who pictured guzzling Jack Daniels straight from the bottle before passing out and being carried away by a male friend.

The ensuring social media frenzy so upset the singer that she announced her intention to quit Twitter following the incident, revealing she intends to focus on her new music.

Fed up of seeing tweets about her wild party weekend, the 31-year-old singer posted: 'I have been busy recording my fourth solo album and it's very close to being finished.

The star then thanked her loyal fans for sticking up for her, before revealing she will be taking a break from social media to concentrate on her upcoming album. PAGE 6 THE BRITISH WEEKLY, SAT. SEPT. 3, 2016

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE FOR CHANGE

Meet A Member: Annaliese Morgan

Meet Annaliese Morgan from Halifax, West Yorkshire, who moved to LA barely two months ago.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

It was a knowing. I passed through on my way back from Hawaii with my two boys a few years ago and I just knew, the three of us ,knew LA had taken our hearts immediately...I still have the copy of the LA Times I bought that day! We've been returning ever since, it also happens to be the nerve center for my work - writing and designer pet health care. Me and my boys love the people, lifestyle, the pets, the sports and the sheer variety of life LA has, with my eldest boy taking interests in the creative fields too, my youngest loving outdoor adventure; LA was a match for us in every respect.

What do you miss most from home?

Not sure vet! Based off the time I have spent in LA previously it will be rainy foggy nights in November when you are inside all cozy thinking Christmas, about walking my dog across fields, Yorkshire tea... oh, and Polos.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? If so, why?

Love at first sight, came out of nowhere. There is a lot more freedom and opportunities to be who you are, and the people are amazing. The beach city living is win-win

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Expect action stations this week as work may catch you snoozing. The lesson is to anticipate what could go wrong and take the time to fix the problem ahed of time. This will not stop you from making time for a fun weekend.

TAURUS: A stitch in time is appropriate this week so be ready should any kind of minor problem appear to stop your plans at the last minute The holiday weekend will be better enjoyed if you make sure all is order .

GEMINI: You may be reminiscing on past good times these next few days or so. Don't wait as time and tide wait for no man. Your boss Mercury is strolling backwards again. This is a good couple of weeks to take care of any unfinished business.

CANCER: Your inability to face the fact of your own making will be your problem this coming week. Stop procrastinating and have a plan of action ready; this is timely advice for this weekend.

LEO: In order to get the best results go all out this week ahead and make sure that you pay all the bills as you could end up paying double, simply because you did not check. Life is kinder to you currently so relax.

VIRGO: You have a busy month ahead so this weekend take a break with family and friends away from the crowds and hopefully you'll spend this birthday in a fun environment for all concerned. Happy Birthday!

LIBRA: You may be ready to take off and leave the madding crowd behind...or so it seems. The fact is that whatever is pending in your life in any area will feel unresolved. You will feel so much more relaxed when you take care of this.

SCORPIO: At long last your living space and any repairs are improving and it might be good for you to take a little trip or maybe just overnight. Be sure to take a special outfit with you as fun is starred for this holiday weekend.

SAGITTARIUS: You do not normally listen to what others tell you should be doing. What's different this week is that wiser ears are listening. It could be that for a change someone close you can trust is giving you the heads up...so listen.

CAPRICORN: Humor is a blessing when you are down or not feeling so good so remember this: as the week progresses you could be more concerned about someone close. Your presence is what will help them feel better.

AQUARIUS: You are ready for that holiday break and even a trip this weekend at the last minute. You will think more clearly away from familiar places and you will enjoy the change.

Do not get involved in any family disput unless absolutely forced to.

PISCES: You may be feeling a bit out of sorts and this is due to a subconscious need to connect with others who are lighter in spirit than you. As you know, life never stays the same. For you sensitive souls it's changing soon.

Girl in the Afternoon: first impressionists...

Exclusive interview with author Serena Burdick about her book set during the Belle Epoque

Rating: ★★★

"On a spring afternoon in a Brooklyn park as my sister and I watched our children clamber over play structures," says Girl in the Afternoon author Serena Burdick. "I was searching for an idea for a novel, and my sister, an outstanding painter, suggested write about Paris and the impressionist artists. I wanted to write about a female impressionist. They don't get nearly as much attention as the male impressionists, or the models of the impressionists. male I intentionally veered away from writing from the perspective of the muse of a famous male artist, which is what a lot of historical fiction about artists does."

The story of a girl from a wealthy family in Paris who wants to be an artist in the 1870s? A great concept for a book. 18-year-old Aimée Savaray dreams of becoming a respected painter in the maledominated art world. Her parents are wealthy Parisians, part of Belle Epoque society. Henri is an English boy, about her age, who's been part of the family since he was a child. Aimée is falling in love with her adopted brother. After they kiss, Henri disappears. The Franco-Prussian war is raging all around them, putting everyone's life in jeopardy. Aimée immerses herself in art. Édouard Manet mentors her. Will Henri return?

For a book about an artist, readers may be expecting more visual details about her art and more drama to bring life to the heroine. young beautiful daughter off to an artist's studio without a maid or chaperone to keep on eye on her? Until she gets caught modeling nude, Aimée's parents seem to have no plans for her life. When her family decides they expect her to marry, they lack ideas of who would be suitable. The drama is with her mother.

"Edouard Manet shows up in Girl In The Afternoon," says Burdick. "But, he's not the focal point of the story. And neither is the art itself. I did this to reflect the idea that women couldn't have it all. Men could have their art, their lover, their wife, but when a woman's life became complicated with passion or family obligation, her art was forced by the wayside, if not forgotten altogether."

Burdick researched French history, Impressionists Edouard Manet through books and maps. learned to navigate the streets of Paris while immersing myself in Emile Zola novels. I kept handwritten notes with categories for food, transportation, clothes, architecture, furniture.... I read the 1,000-page diary of the Russian female impressionist Marie Bashkirtseff. I also read the diary of Julet Manet, the daughter of the female impressionist Berthe Morisot, as well as the niece of Edouard Manet."

She used the University of Massachusetts Du Bois Library. "It's the second tallest library in the world. My dad took me there as a child and I remember holding his hand as I stared in awe at floor upon floor of books.

"My research material was gathered through the library's extensive database, and from the help of the research librarians, who, I have discovered, are the most valuable resource a writer can have," added Burdick.

Burdick, also an actor, had written short stories throughout her life, but never tried to get any of them published. "I figured the competition was so great it would take me just as long to get a short story published as a novel." Burdick has a second novel at a publisher now. Girl in the Afternoon has yet to be optioned for film or TV.

Burdick is currently writing her third novel, which takes place in New York City in 1915. Her book tour promoting Girl in the Afternoon has her at events and signings all over the United States. This month's dates include September

Book Corner with Gabrielle Pantera

Brits in LA

First World Problems; and how to rise above them...

I am feeling a bit sorry for myself this week - my car got hit whilst parked outside the post office and even though I was not even in the vicinity I still have to pay a $500 deductible ('excess' to the Brits).

Then to make matters worse, I come home to find that the builders working on the apartment above me have decided that it will be okay to 'borrow' my electricity - I can only imagine that they didn't think I would notice the royal blue extension cord that led from my balcony to their front door; or perhaps they mistook my friendliness gullibility...either way I feel like I have had a week of woe!

Brits doing good

But I started to feel rather ashamed of my #FirstWorldProblems (Yes, I actually do catch myself thinking in #hashtags occasionally, doesn't everyone?); I had read some of the emails that had arrived in our Brits in LA email account. Two that struck a chord with me in particular were from Petrie Williams and Iulia Verdin - both long-time members who were asking us to help us help others by raising awareness of their efforts to highlight the plights underprivileged of kids and teens in Los Angeles. You may remember Petrie from past years - she is the brains behind the charity SafetyHarborKids.org who pledge to enrich the lives of orphans, foster and homeless children through education in the areas of college, career and the arts. They have a their 9th Annual Polo Match Fundraiser coming up on September 10th at Will Rogers Park - and have set up a very generous discount for Brits in LA readers (feel free to donate more if you are feeling flush!) If you'd like to attend and nab the Brits In LA discount visit safetyharborkids.org/ events/britsinla.html.

Julia Verdin has made a film about the seedier side of Hollywood it is a story about sex traffickers which are sadly very prevalent in Los Angeles - 'Lost Girls' premieres at the prestigious LA Shorts Film Festival this weekend, on Sunday September 4th at the Regal Cinema in downtown. Visit LAShortsFest.com for more info. Julia is such a champion of Brits in LA, that it would be lovely to return her continued support with a sold out premiere - so go if you can!

Want to volunteer?

These two subject matters really did give me the reality check I needed, as I am pretty sure any of the kids involved would trade my surprise $500 bill and a cheeky 'leccy tea leaf' in return for me offloading their bag of problems. I know it's very clichéd to say, but if ever you are feeling down on your luck there really is always someone who would be grateful to only have your troubles to deal with. Doesn't mean that your worries aren't relevant, so if you need an ear, you can always drop us a line or come along to one of our breakfasts and have a chat there.

We are always being asked if we can send volunteers to help in various fields so drop us a line if you would like to be added to our volunteer list at: BritsinLA@gmail.com. I have regularly donated to a related local charity 'Children of the Night'. They help rescue children from prostitution - they are always looking for volunteers as well as donations. Visit www. childrenofthe night.org/get-involved for full details.

Duke Dumont tix

If all else fails and you still don't feel better, catch the latest episode of Eastenders - it never fails to cheer me up. Although I did one better the other night, as not only was EE icon Patsy Palmer the DJ for the birthday celebrations of fellow Brit Jane Owen, but Jessie Wallace was also in attendance! Kat and Bianca rocking out in LA! See, even the cast of the most miserable soap opera in Britain get a happy ending!

Attn: Duke Dumont fans: the British DJ and music producer is performing September 24th at The Novo, located at LA Live in downtown LA and we have two tickets for readers. To get your name in the sorting hat, email britsinla@gmail. com with your name and contact details. Put the word abracadabra somewhere in the email and I'll put your name in the hat twice! Winner will be chosen at random on Tues. Sept. 6th at noon.

Don't forget that Pub Quiz at the Pikey is back on Tuesday September 6th with Sandro Monetti - visit us at www.britsin. la for times and rules - I will be attending so give me or Sandro a shout if you need a team to join.

Have a great Labor Day Weekend - visit us on Facebook if you need some tips on what to do for the end of Summer holiday weekend...

Kelly O sued for defamation by her old man's ex-squeeze!

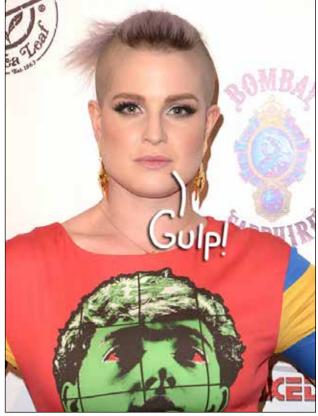

Rarely do I go so tabloid in my column... But I had to report this one... Ozzy Osbourne's mistress is suing his daughter, Kelly, for DEFAMATION!

Whaaaaaaa?

Celebrity stylist Michelle Pugh filed a lawsuit Wednesday in Los Angeles County Superior Court, the New York Daily News reports. In the suit, Pugh says she was "slut-shamed, bullied and harassed for allegedly breaking up a marriage" and "wrongfully accused of a crime.

Her complaints come after a series of tweets sent by Kelly Osbourne in May that addressed her father's affair. In one tweet she wrote, "Anyone looking for cheap chunky LOW-lights a blow out and a blowjob call (Pugh's phone number)."

When one of her followers responded by asking why the affair would only be one person's fault and saying it "takes two to tango," the Black Sabbath rocker's daughter replied: "My father is almost 70. Ever heard of elder abuse?"

Though Kelly deleted the first tweet, Pugh's lawsuit says the damage had been done, and the tweets sparked a "rash of mass cyberbullying," according to the Daily News.

The lawsuit comes just as Pugh told People this week the musician gave her "the greatest love of my life" and Ozzy Osbourne downplayed the relationship, with his representative telling the magazine he has gone into "intense therapy" for 'Private' Adele shuns KK dinner invite!

According sources superstar Adele TURNED recently DOWN dinner invitation from the Kardashians - because she doesn't want to appear on their TV show.

Oo-er!

Kardashian matriarch Kris Jenner offered the singing superstar the chance to have a slapup meal with the famous clan after she discovered the British singer had relocated to Los Angeles and lived just a stone's throw away from daughter Kim Kardashian and son-inlaw Kanye West.

The celebrity power couple also have a three-year-old daughter North West, who is the same age as Adele's little boy, Angelo, with the dinner being to celebrate this year's MTV Video Music Awards.

But the 28-year-old singer sent back a flat reply of 'no' - despite being a big fan of their E! series, Keeping Up With The Kardashians.

According to The Mirror, the famously private singer refused the invite because she wasn't taken with the idea that the meeting would be filmed for the latest episodes of their reality series.

A source told the paper: "Kris feels it would be amazing for Kim and Kanye to give Adele an LA welcome and insiders' knowledge after she bought a place here."

They added: "At this stage, Adele is not sold on that idea.

"She hasn't ruled out a dinner another time it's just a reality show isn't for her."

Despite this, family remain on good terms with the singer - with Kendall Jenner being named as one of the star's VIP guests earlier this year during a tour of the US.

Adele is now settling into her new life in America and is taking a break from the road before her tour restarts.

Hot at 51: Hurley still dares to bare!

She rose to fame thanks to former boyfriend Hugh Grant, incredible figure and a VERY daring black Versace dressed held together with pins back in 1994, but British actress Elizabeth Hurley proves she still looks hot at 51!

The sizzling recently stripped off to a bikini from her own range as she enjoyed the last days of the English summer showing off her jaw-dropping body.

Looking tanned, toned and very happy the mum-of-one shared a picture of herself lounging what in appeared to be her back garden.

She captioned the shot: "Last rays of summer, English style @elizabethhurleybeach #countrylife ????."

The day before she once again enjoyed the gorgeous weather as she slipped into another bikini.

And again she treated her fans to a picture this time a selfie that revealed her ample cleavage in a frilly black number.

The Royals beauty wrote alongside it: "Sun in Herefordshire @elizabethhurlevbeach #frillybikini ????."

Speaking last year about how she maintains her incredible figure, she revealed on The View: "I have to be careful because I am 50. I always watch what I eat, but I eat plenty of food.

Wilshere in surprise Cherries loan move

England midfielder Jack Wilshere has joined Bournemouth on a season-long loan from Arsenal.

He also held talks with Crystal Palace, while Serie A side Roma also showed interest in signing the 24-year-old.

But the Gunners refused to do business with Roma because of the way they handled a potential move for defender Kostas Manolas earlier summer.

The Cherries have also signed Romanian winger Mihai Dobre, 18, from FC Viitorul for their under-21 squad.

Wilshere has international caps and played six times for confirmed he would keep the 30-year-old as his captain.

"Come Russia I feel that will be the time to say goodbye to international football," said Rooney, who has scored 53 goals in 115 England appearances.

"My mind is made up."

He continued: "It's still two years away. I started playing professional football when I was 16, and started playing internationals when I was 17. Fifteen years is a lot. I'd be 34 by the next tournament.

"I've had a fantastic international career so far. I've enjoyed every minute."

If he plays in Sunday's World Cup qualifier in Slovakia he will break David Beckham's record for the most capped outfield England player.

Rooney has not yet discussed with Allardyce what position he will play.

He was a midfielder during Euro 2016 under Roy Hodgson, who left his post after the shock last-16 exit to Iceland.

Under new United boss Jose Mourinho this season, he has played behind the striker - which is where Allardyce has told the media Rooney will play for England.

HART SET ON ITALY

■ England No. 1 finalizes Torino loan to escape from City hell

Manchester City and England goalkeeper Joe Hart has signed for Italian side Torino on loan for the rest of the season.

The Football Association gave the 29-year-old permission to leave the England camp on Monday so he could travel to Italy for a medical.

"Signing Joe Hart is a source of great satisfaction," said a statement on Serie A side Torino's website.

Hart could make his debut in Torino's next game at Atalanta on 11 September.

The England number one has 63 caps for his country but had been told by new City manager Pep Guardiola that he was free to leave.

"I am convinced I can still learn a lot at Torino," said Hart, who will rejoin the England squad for Sunday's 2018 World Cup qualifying match in Slovakia.

Hart failed to feature in the Premier League under Guardiola, who has signed Chile goalkeeper Claudio Bravo, 33, from Barcelona.

"It's been a difficult few weeks but that will never cloud the amazing journey and experience your great club [City] has

2018 World Cup will be last England hurrah for Rooney

England record goalscorer Wayne Rooney will retire from international football after the 2018 World Cup in Russia.

"The feelings I felt during the recent Steaua Bucharest game [his final appearance] will live with me forever."

Officials at City had vowed to help Hart "find the best solution" in order to keep his international place.

City are paying some of Hart's wages to allow him to move to Serie A for the season, though the amount is not known.

Torino are seventh in the Serie A table, with three points from the first two games of the season.

"I think Joe needs to get stuck in there with the right attitude, learn the language and just enjoy the experience," he told BBC Radio 5 live.

98, City have also loaned out midfielder Samir Nasri and striker Wilfried Bony - ith to Sevilla and Stoke respectively.

Defender Eliaquim Mangala is set to join the trio in leaving Manchester. Mangala has travelled to Valencia to agree a deal with the Eliaquim La Liga club.

The 25-year-old France international had a number of options after being told he could find another club.

Luiz back at the Bridge

PERHAPS the biggest surprise of the transfer window deadline day was the return of David Luiz to Chelsea for a reported £34m fee.

The Brazilian defender was a firm fan favorite during his previous spell at the Bridge, but his erratic defensive performances led to Jose Mourino selling him to PSG for £50m - a world record for a defender, in 2011.

Luiz told the club's website: "I'm delighted to return to Chelsea. We had a fantastic story during my first time at the club and I want to help the team and Antonio Conte achieve a lot of success. I always had a wonderful relationship with the fans and I am looking forward to wearing the blue shirt at Stamford Bridge once again."

Luiz had reportedly found himself demoted behind his compatriots Marquinhos and Thiago Silva at Parc des Princes and, two years after departing for France in a deal potentially worth £50m, he made clear his desire to return to London.

The 29-year-old has signed a three-year contract at Stamford Bridge, where he claimed the FA Cup, Champions League and Europa League during a three-and-a-half-year spell under the stewardships of Carlo Ancelotti, André Villas-Boas, Roberto Di Matteo, Rafael Benítez and José Mourinho.

Chelsea also confirmed the deadline day signing of Marcos Alonso from Fiorentina, easing the frustration of manager Antonio Conte, who had earlier been frustrated in his pursuit of Napoli's Kalidou Koulibaly and Alessio Romagnoli of Milan, neither of whom were reportedly interested in moving to a club not involved in Champions League football this term.
