ELECTION SE

FOR JUNE 8TH

■ PM tells reporters: 'Country is coming together but Westminster is not'■ Labour's Corbyn supports shock decision despite trailing badly in polls

Theresa May has announced plans to call a snap general election on 8 June.

In a surprise statement this week, the Prime Minister said Britain needed certainty, stability and strong leadership following the EU referendum.

Explaining the decision, Mrs May said: "The country is coming together but Westminster is not."

Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn said his party wanted the election, calling it a chance to get a government that puts "the majority first".

The prime minister will refuse to take part in televised leader debates ahead of the vote, Number 10 sources said.

Mr Corbyn said Mrs May should not be "dodging" a head-tohead encounter, and the Lib Dems urged broadcasters to "emptychair" the prime minister - hold a debate without her.

Live TV debates took place for the first time in a UK general election in 2010, and the experiment was repeated in 2015 using a range of different formats.

A BBC spokesman said that it was too early to say whether the broadcaster would put in a bid to stage a debate.

The House of Commons overwhelmingly ratified the decision in a 522-13 vote on Wednesday – well in excess of the two thirds vote required to bring the vote ahead of the next scheduled election date of 2020.

Explaining her change of heart on an early election, Mrs May said: "I have concluded the only way to guarantee certainty and security for years ahead is to hold this election."

She accused Britain's other political parties of "game playing", adding that this risks "our ability to make a success of Brexit and it will cause damaging uncertainty and instability to the country".

"So we need a general election and we need one now. We have at this moment a one-off chance to get this done while the European Union agrees its negotiating position and before the detailed talks begin.

"I have only recently and reluctantly come to this conclusion. Since I became prime minister I've said there should be no election until 2020, but now I have concluded that the only way to guarantee certainty and security for the years ahead is to hold this election and seek your support for the decisions we must take."

In a statement outside Number 10, Mrs May said Labour had threatened to vote against the final Brexit agreement and cited opposition to her plans from the Scottish National Party, the Lib Dems and "unelected" members of the House of Lords.

"If we don't hold a general election now, their political gameplaying will continue and the negotiations with the European Union will reach their most difficult cont. on page 2, col. 1 THE BRITISH WEEKLY, SAT. APRIL 22, 2017 stage in the run-up to the next scheduled election," she said.

Mr Corbyn said he welcomed the prime decision, minister's saying it would "give the British people the chance to vote for a government that will put the interests of the majority first", saying that this would include dealing with "the crisis" in housing, education funding and the NHS and pushing for an "economy that works for all".

He told the BBC: "I'm starting straight away and I'm looking forward to it and we'll take our message to every single part of this country... We're campaigning to win this election - that's the only question now."

Asked if he will be the next prime minister, the Labour leader said: "If we win the election yes - and I want to lead a government that will transform this country, give real hope to everybody and above all bring about a principle of justice for everybody and economic opportunities for everybody."

Scotland's Minister Nicola Sturgeon said she would be fighting the election "to win".

"I think the prime called minister has this election for selfish, narrow, party political interests, but she has called it and therefore I relish the prospect of getting out to stand up for Scotland's interests and values, standing up for Scotland's voice being heard and standing against the ability of a right-wing Conservative Party to impose whatever policies it wants on Scotland."

In his response to Mrs May's announcement. Lib Dem leader Tim Farron tweeted: "This is your chance to change the direction of your country. If you want to avoid a disastrous hard Brexit. If you want to keep Britain in the single market. If you want a Britain that is open, tolerant and united, this is your chance."

He also accused the PM of "bottling" the TV debates and urged broadcasters to "empty chair" her if she refused to take part.

Mrs May spoke to the Queen on the phone on Easter Monday to let her know of the election plan, the prime official minister's spokesman said. She also got the full backing of the cabinet before calling the election.

Former prime minister David Cameron called Theresa May's decision to hold a snap general election "brave and right". In a tweet, he added: "My very best wishes to all Conservative candidates."

ELECTION 2017: Corbyn vows to 'overturn the rigged system'

Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn has vowed to "overturn the rigged system" by putting power and wealth back in the hands of "the people".

In his first major general election speech, he said the June poll was not a "foregone conclusion" and Labour could defy the "Establishment experts".

He also said Labour would not back a second EU referendum.

Theresa May the election was about ensuring "strong and stable leadership" for the

It was also about strengthening Brexit government's negotiating hand, she said.

The PM is hoping to convert the Tories' double digit poll lead into a bigger Commons majority.

Her decision to hold a general election - after previously insisting she would wait until 2020 took her rivals and many in her own party by surprise.

Mr Corbyn could have blocked it in Parliament but instead ordered his MPs to back the snap poll in a Commons vote on Wednesday.

After his speech, the Labour leader was asked to rule out backing a second EU referendum replying that he respected the result but that the UK had to have continued access to the EU single market and should not "tear up the workers' rights agenda, environmental protection agenda, or any human rights agenda".

Shadow chancellor John McDonnell also declined to rule one out, saying the government should "put the deal to Parliament and possibly to the country overall".

But asked later, Mr Corbyn's spokesman said: "A second referendum is not our policy and it won't be in our manifesto."

The Conservatives said it was "yet more evidence" of "Labour chaos".

The Labour leader looks set to run an antiestablishment campaign, presenting himself as a champion of the powerless against political and business elites.

He attacked "morally bankrupt" Conservatives who he said would not stand up to tax avoiders and other members of a "gilded elite," who were extracting wealth "from the pockets of ordinary working people".

Labour would "end this racket" and "overturn the rigged system," he told an audience of Labour supporters in London.

He also said Labour was the only party that would "focus on the kind of country we want to have after Brexit" dismissing Mrs May's election campaign as an "ego trip about her own failing leadership".

Addressing Labour's poor opinion poll ratings, he said he was given a 200/1 chance of becoming Labour leader in 2015 and he defied those odds.

Corbyn Mr said: "Much of the media and Establishment are saying this election is a foregone conclusion.

"They think there are rules in politics, which if you don't follow by doffing your cap to powerful people, accepting that things can't really change, then you can't win.

"But of course those people don't want us to win. Because when we win, it's the people, not the powerful, who win."

He added: "They say I don't play by the rules their rules. We can't win, they say, because we don't play their game."

Harry opens up over 'total chaos' as he struggled to deal with Diana's death

■ Prince reveals he sought professional help after two decades of unresolved grief

Prince Harry has disclosed that he sought counselling after enduring two years of "total chaos" while still struggling in his late twenties to come to terms with the death of his mother.

The Prince said in an interview with The Telegraph that he "shut down all his emotions" for almost two decades after losing his mother, Diana, Princess of Wales, despite his brother, Prince William, trying to persuade him to seek help.

Disclosing that he has spoken to a professional about his mental health, he describes how he only began to address his grief when he was 28 after feeling "on the verge of punching someone" and facing anxiety during royal engagements.

Describing the "quite serious effect" that losing his mother had on his personal and professional life, he tells how living in the public eye left him feeling he could be "very close to a complete breakdown on numerous occasions".

The Prince, now 32, turned to counsellors and even took up boxing. He says he is now in "a good place".

candid insights

Prince Harry has decided to give an unprecedented insight into his past in the hope it will encourage people to break the stigma surrounding mental health issues.

He has spoken to Bryony Gordon for the first episode of her podcast, Mad World, in which she will interview high-profile guests about their mental health experiences.

The 30-minute conversation is one of the most candid insights into the innermost thoughts of a modern young member of the Royal family. The Prince, together with his brother and sister-in-law, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, have set up Heads Together, a charity which promotes good mental well-being.

Prince Harry, who was 12 when his mother died, says in the podcast that he spent his teenage years and twenties determined not to think about her.

"I can safely say that losing my mum at the age of 12, and therefore shutting down all of my emotions for the last 20 years, has had a quite serious effect on not only my personal life but my work as well," he said.

"I have probably been very close to a complete breakdown on numerous occasions when all sorts of grief and sort of lies and misconceptions and everything are coming to you from every angle."

Asked whether he had been to see a 'shrink' to offload his thoughts, he said: "I've done that a couple of times, more than a couple of times, but it's great."

The Prince admitted that at times he had struggled with aggression and turned to boxing as an outlet for his frustration.

"During those years I took up boxing, because everyone was saying boxing is good for you and it's a really good way of letting out aggression," he said.

"And that really saved me because I was on the verge of punching someone, so being able to punch someone who had pads was certainly easier."

'quite a big club'

He eventually sought support with the encouragement of his brother and others close to him, who told him: "Look, you really need to deal with this. It is not normal to think that nothing has affected you."

Since learning to talk honestly about his feelings, he said, he now feels able to put "blood, sweat and tears" into making a difference for others.

"The experience I have had is that once you start talking about it, you realise that actually you're part of quite a big club," he said.

Later this year, the Prince and the Duke will commemorate the 20th anniversary of their mother's death, commissioning a statue and presenting awards in her name to honour "kindness, compassion and service".

Prince Harry said of his loss: "My way of dealing with it was sticking my head in the sand, refusing

"During those years I to ever think about my k up boxing, because mum, because why would that help?

"[I thought] it's only going to make you sad, it's not going to bring her back.

"So from an emotional side, I was like 'right, don't ever let your emotions be part of anything'.

"So I was a typical 20, 25, 28-year-old running around going 'life is great', or 'life is fine' and that was exactly it.

"And then [I] started to have a few conversations and actually all of a sudden, all of this grief that I have never processed started to come to the forefront and I was like, there is actually a lot of stuff here that I need to deal with."

He said he now counts himself very lucky that it was "only two years ... of total chaos" before he learnt how to talk about it. "I just couldn't cont. on page 5, col. 4

Celeb's boyfriend sought after acid attack in London nightclub

POLICE ARE searching for the boyfriend of a prominent British TV personality after a vicious acid attack in an east London nightclub left one woman blinded in one eye.

The 22-year-old was one of 20 people who suffered burns when the substance was sprayed at the Mangle E8 club in Hackney, east London on Monday.

Police have launched a manhunt for Arthur Collins, a 25-year old scaffolder, businessman and self-proclaimed bad boy whose on-again, offagain romance with TV celebrity Ferne McCann has caused consternation among the star's friends and handlers.

Although McCann is almost unknown on these shores, she shot to fame in Britain as part of the popular reality TV show The Only Way is Essex (TOWIE), joining the cast in its ninth series in 2013 and she guickly become a staple of the nation's tabloids. In 2015, she parlayed her TOWIE fame into a spot in another popular reality show, I'm a Celebrity... Get Me Out of Here!, finishing in third place, before finding a slightly more upmarket niche as a regular showbiz reporter

FERN AND ARTHUR: friends of the star have reportedly urged her to ditch her volatile boyfriend

on the ITV breakfast night told the BBC: "It show This Morning. was just a normal night

Although Collins remained at large at press time, investigating officers have arrested three people in Hertfordshire and a 33-year-old woman was arrested on suspicion of firearms offences and is in custody in a north London police station.

'normal night out'

The others were held when officers went to Mr Collins' home in Broxbourne and found a cannabis farm and illegal firearms.

A spokesman for Hertfordshire Police said the 54-year-old man and a 52-year-old woman were arrested on suspicion of cultivation of cannabis.

One of the victims of the acid attack on Monday night told the BBC: "It was just a normal night out. To be involved in something like that... it annoys me, especially when you're just minding your own business and just going about what you normally do."

She added that she was not aware of a fight or argument breaking out until she was burned.

"I didn't clock until I got burned which is annoying because If there is an argument or a fight then my natural instinct is to walk away. I don't get myself involved in anything like that.

"So if I heard an argument I would have walked away straight away but there wasn't an argument, there wasn't a fight. The minute it happened was when I knew. I thought water had just been thrown or alcohol or something like that."

The woman, who wishes to remain anonymous, added: "My burns and what I've got are not ideal and I hate the fact that they are going to scar and that I'm in pain with them.

"But I think what upsets me more is the fact that you are seeing young girls my age and even young men my age that have got scars on their face that you know are going to scar and make a massive impact on their life."

Ms McCann has appealed for Mr Collins to go to a police station.

'noxious substance'

Scotland Yard believe the acid was sprayed at two men, but hit others, following a dispute between two groups.

The injured men, aged 24 and 29, remain in a specialist burns unit hospital in Essex, both in a serious but stable condition.

A 22-year-old woman, who was also injured, said the men were black, but their faces were turned white by the acid.

Det Insp Lee McCullough said the "noxious substance used" was still being analysed.

Two other men, as well as Mr Collins, are wanted for questioning over the attack although police have not released any further information about them.

Hundreds of people had to be evacuated from the event, including three other stars of The Only Way Is Essex - Jamie Reed, Jade Lewis and Chloe Meadows.

The company behind the event tweeted it was cooperating with the police investigation.

The acid attack is one of three similar reports made to police in London over the past week.

RICH HISTORY: St Mary at Lambeth is located next to Lambeth Palace, the Archbishop's offficial residence

Builders find remains of five 'lost' Archbishops of Canterbury

The remains of five Archbishops of Canterbury have been found beneath a medieval parish church next to Lambeth Palace, the Archbishop of Canterbury's official London residence.

Builders renovating the Garden Museum, housed at the deconsecrated church of St Mary-at-Lambeth, found a hidden crypt containing 30 lead coffins.

Site manager Karl Patten said: "We discovered numerous coffins - and one of them had a gold crown on top of it".

The remains date back to the 1660s.

Mr Patten, from the building contractors Rooff, said his team were exposing the ground, lifting the flagstones in the church, when they uncovered an entry to what looked like a tomb.

They used a mobile phone camera on the end of a stick to search the void.

Garden Museum
Director Christopher Woodward said he received a call from the builders and immediately assumed something had gone wrong with the project.

"But wow, it was the crown - it's the mitre of an archbishop, glowing in the dark," he said.

The red and gold mitre was resting on top of one of the coffins - which were stacked on top of each other in a brick-lined vault.

The Sunday Telegraph's of Harry Mount, the first outsider to be granted access, said: "It is a spinetrich tingling view".

The coffins have been left undisturbed, though builders have installed a glass panel in the chancel floor above them for visitors to catch a glimpse.

Beyond that, Mr Woodward said: "We still don't know who else is down there".

However, further clues may lie in the history of the church.

One of the most sacred and precious sites in London, St Mary's was built in the 11th Century along London's Embankment, opposite Westminster Abbey, by St Edward the Confessor's sister.

Mr Woodward said: "This church had two lives: it was the parish church of Lambeth, this little village by the river...but it was also a kind of annex to Lambeth Palace itself.

"And over the centuries a significant number of the archbishops' families and archbishops themselves chose to worship here, and chose to be buried here."

Though the church is steeped in history, Mr Woodward and his team did not expect to make such an exciting discovery.

He said: "We thought there was no crypt because it's so close to the Thames that it would have been flooded."

Ailing Python continues to look on the bright side of life

■ Terry Jones determined to keep enjoying "beer and long walks" as he battles dementia, says his friend and co-star Michael Palin

NOT DEAD YET: Palin and Jones at the latter's London home earlier this month

MICHAEL PALIN has revealed that his old friend and former co-star Terry Jones is staying positive despite a debilitating battle with dementia.

Palin told The Guardian this week that the 75-year-old revealed his diagnosis in a very "matter of fact way." "(Jones) would stop people in the street and tell them: 'I've got dementia, you know. My frontal brain lobe has absconded'," Palin said.

"He knew exactly what was affecting him and he wanted to share that knowledge - because that is the way that Terry is.

"Terry still goes on very long walks... often following the most obscure routes and it is very hard to keep up

"Frontotemporal dementia (FTD) may cause loss of inhibition, but Terry was never very inhibited in the first place."

'memory lapses'

Jones, who is is wellknown for his role in the Monty Python series, and co-directed the hit film Monty Python and the Holy Grail, first exhibited signs that all was not well with his health in July 2014. He and his close friend Michael Palin performing with the rest of the surviving Monty Python's Flying Circus troupe in a show of sketches and songs, Monty Python live (mostly) at the O2 in London.

"Terry was always very good at remembering lines," recalled Palin last week. "But this time he had real problems, and in the end he had to use a teleprompter. That was a first for him. I realised then that something more serious than memory lapses was affecting him."

increasingly erratic

Jones, now 75, later passed standard tests designed to pinpoint people who have Alzheimer's disease. His speech continued to deteriorate nevertheless. "He said less and less at dinner parties, when he used to love to lead conversations," said his daughter Sally.

Eventually, September 2015, Jones diagnosed was having frontotemporal dementia (FTD), condition that affects the front and sides of the brain, where language and social control centres are based. When cells there die off, people lose their ability to communicate, and their behaviour becomes increasingly and impulsive. Unlike Alzheimer's, there is no loss of reasoning or orientation. However, planning, decision making and speech are affected, and patients often seem less caring or concerned about their family and friends.

Sally recalls that even though her father's speech was faltering, he was still initially able to outline his plans and thoughts by email. "However, the emails slowly became more and more jumbled, and by autumn last year he had to give up," she said. "For someone who lived by words and discussions this was tragic."

Jones's family revealed his condition to the public six months ago, and at last year's Bafta Cymru ceremony in October, his son Bill had to help his father collect his award for outstanding contribution to television and film. The only words that Jones was able to utter were to tell his audience to "quieten down".

'memory lapses'

Palin and Jones first started working together in 1965 on The Frost Report, a collaboration culminated formation the the Monty Python Flying Circus team in 1969. Jones was also co-director (with Terry Gilliam) of Monty Python and The Holy Grail before directing the Python films Life of Brian and The Meaning of Life. He went on to direct other films, including Personal Services and The Wind in the Willows. He has also written books on medieval history and the Iraq war (to which he was bitterly opposed).

The pair still regularly have lunch together. "We chat - well, I chat," added Palin. "But when the meal is over he makes it clear he has to move. He has to get to the next thing on his agenda and he just puts his head down and goes. I have never felt discomfited in his presence, however. There is no embarrassment. He doesn't shout or show his bottom."

NO LAUGHING MATTER: Terry Jones and the gang in their Python heyday put my finger on it," he said. Even at royal engagements, he said, he had found himself battling a "flight or fight" reaction without properly understanding why. Once he started opening up to friends, he added, he found those same friends felt able to "unravel their own issues".

turning point

Dismissing previous speculation he may have suffered mental health issues because of his time in Afghanistan, he said he felt clear that coping with the death of his mother on a very public platform had the greatest impact.

"I can safely say it's not Afghanistan-related. I'm not one of those guys that has had to see my best mate blown up next to me and have to apply a tourniquet to both their legs. Luckily, thank God, I wasn't one of those people."

Prince Harry said his work with the personnel recovery unit, where he listened to wounded, injured and sick servicemen and women talk about serious mental health issues, had proved a turning point in his understanding.

"I know there is huge merit in talking about your issues and the only thing about keeping it quiet is that it's only ever going to make it worse," he said.

On eventually seeking help, the Prince said: "It's all about timing. And for me personally, my brother, you know, bless him, he was a huge support to me. He kept saying this is not right, this is not normal, you need to talk to [someone] about stuff, it's OK.

'a little nervous'

"The timing wasn't right. You need to feel it in yourself, you need to find the right person to talk to as well."

But he added: "I can't encourage people enough to just have that conversation because you will be surprised firstly, how much support you get and secondly, how many people literally are longing for you to come out"

Confessing he was "a little nervous, a little tight in the chest" about the interview, the Prince said he was determined to make a difference while the younger members of the Royal family are "still interesting" to the public, doing his bit before Prince George, Princess Charlotte and any of his own future children step into the spotlight.

Of his current focus on mental health, he said: "What we are trying to do is normalise the conversation to the point where anyone can sit down and have a coffee and just go 'you know what, I've had a really s-day, can I just tell about it? Because then you walk away and it's done." He is now in a "good place".

"Because of the process I have been through over the past two and a half years, I've now been able to take my work seriously, been able to take my private life seriously as well, and been able to put blood, sweat and tears into the things that really make a difference and things that I think will make a difference to everybody else." Fictitious Business Name Statement: 2017062633. The following person(s)

Brits in the Wood...Hollywood that is!

■ Two enterprising expats present an entertaining and informative weekly podcast, with a focus on interesting Brits in Hollywood

From Charlie Chaplin to James Corden, from Stan Laurel to the Beckhams, from Basil Rathbone to Ozzy Osbourne, Brits have always flooded to Hollywood....and they continue to do rather well, thank you very much.

British journalist Claire Bullivant – who relocated to Tinseltown ten years ago was musing this over in a pub on Sunset Boulevard with British broadcaster Caroline Feraday – when the pair came up with an idea to create a podcast which tapped into their British perspectives on La La land.

They launched the 'Brits In The Wood' podcast last month (March 2017), to already critical acclaim and thousands of downloads.

'I can't believe the response we've had so far,' says Caroline, who is best known for her radio shows on Capital FM and BBC radio in the UK.

'amazing place'

'We really hope people enjoy what we're doing. We love America and especially love LA. You guys are so welcoming to us Brits. We hope we give a little insight into LA life and show the world what an amazing place it is here,' explains Claire.

Caroline, who left her popular BBC radio show behind to move to LA in 2013 says: 'I always say it's like popping on Brittinted spectacles and then looking at Hollywood through our eyes. That's the journey we take our listeners on. Claire's been here ten years and absolutely loves LA. I am a little more cynical. I love the weather and the people but the traffic could be better,' Caroline laughs.

The podcast, which has already been picked up by iTunes, Stitcher and Google Play, has already featured big name guests including Spandau Ballet lead singer Tony Hadley, a former Miss Great Britain and well known model - Leilani Dowding, Vikings actor

'irreverent and insight-

Claire says there's many more in the offing: 'Our very first podcast, where we interview Billy Morrison (the Cult, Billy Idol, Royal Machines) kind of made us realize we were on the right track. Billy really opened up to us and talked about his near death experiences drugs overcoming addiction. He's now one of the most famous rockers in the business who has some great stories about Ozzy Osbourne, his best mate. It's fascinating to hear about his journey. It's a real rags to riches story too and something you don't normally get to hear in normal interviews where stars are just promoting their latest project. We're after their life story really... in an hour [laughs]. Hopefully we get some of it.'

Caroline continues: 'It's a lovely inclusive mix of irreverent and insightful.

DYNAMIC DUO: Bullivant and Feraday

In fact, recent guest, British director Elliott Lester, commented how we put our guests at ease, so we get such a great conversation with them. I think people enjoy hearing a bit of classic British "banter," she joked.

Claire and Caroline say that they hope they offer inspiring insights, a bit of laughter and an entertaining and informative hour for listeners — and are already building up a fast fan-base.

'It's not only for Brits, or for people in LA. We are both journalists so are naturally inquisitive about people with interesting tales to tell, and think we have a unique perspective to ask them pertinent questions and throw in a few tales of our own.'

From celebrity names to industry insiders, they say they discover what it takes to live the dream and make it in LA by talking to those that have done just that, and those are universal themes.

Brits In LA

Meet a Member: Laura Lochrin

Meet Laura Lochrin from Glasgow, Scotland who moved to LA five years ago to pursue a healthier outdoor lifestyle for her daughter who has cystic fibrosis. With her family settled into a new Californian life Laura was able to take time to launch her Interior Design Business – 'Laura Lochrin Interiors'.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I loved the lifestyle – the surfing, the hiking, the horse riding – and of course the sunshine – definitely a little different from the West Coast of Scotland! Also we wanted our daughter to attend Children's Hospital Los Angeles.

What do you miss most from home?

Of course family.... but other than that its got to be the food!! It's ridiculous, when I visit home I know I'm leaving at least 10lbs up! I really miss a good Indian, a good Chinese, a chippy and wagamama (a popular Asian-inspired food chain in the UK)_....I also really miss Sainsburys and Marks & Spencers!

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? If so why?

My expectation was always that it was laid back and relaxed, and I think that is still true now. People are happy and believe anything is possible and that attitude never gets old.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Glasgow?

Ha! The sunshine! An obvious answer....but one that makes a real difference to how I live my life. It never gets old to me to be able to get out the car and saunter instead of running the gauntlet to get out the rain! Also - the traffic - the sheer volume is unbelievable....and to add to that, something happens to Californians when they are behind the wheel, they are such lovely people face to face but driving - not so much!

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us? In L.A my favourite place to eat is Katsuya – their crispy rice with spicy tuna is to die for, also (not in L.A) – but Temecula wine country! One of my favourite places....try Wilson Creek winery at the weekends for their champagne slushies... hard to beat!

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here? Really try and understand where you stand with healthcare before you get here, it's a steep learning curve coming from the NHS, and the last thing you want is a surprise bill that you didn't expect. But my experience has been nothing but positive so I would say, make the leap, California is so gorgeous and I have no regrets and truly feel at home here now.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

Make sure you are a confident driver! And make sure you really understand the visa/immigration procedure, its daunting but just try and be as informed as possible.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment?

My website for my Designer Interior business "Laura Lochrin Interiors" has just recently launched at lauralochrininteriors. com - check it out to find out more about what services I offer or follow me on Instagram (@lauralochrininteriors) for gorgeous home inspiration and updates. I would also love to offer all Brits in LA members 20% off any service – just get in touch!

Brits In LA

When two worlds collide... it's good to talk!

I usually find it quite entertaining when two worlds collide. Regular readers will know that I always get a kick out of it when a cast member from one of my favorite Eastenders shows. attends a Brits in LA event. This past Tuesday the lovely Michelle Collins honoured Breakfast Club with her presence!

But a not-so-pleasant example occurred just last week. I was disturbed to discover I had crossed paths (possibly several times) with President Assad's wife. Asma al-Assad has been in the news a lot recently, the stories are mainly focusing on her whitewashed Instagram account which depicts a very different Syria to the country from which countless thousands of refugees are trying to escape. One such article happened to mention her early life in Britain, and I was taken aback when I learned we had attended the same high school at the same time. This revelation stirred all kinds of emotions, including horror but mainly sadness, as even though we may have had a similar start in life, we took extremely different paths and appear to have very opposing morals.

There is currently a call to revoke Amsa's British citizenship. I completely understand this reaction, but I do wonder if she too has no choice. I would like to think that the British government will consider this very carefully before they act, as she may well need their protection at some point.

Princely passes

Possibly my favorite collision was with a popular member of the Royal Family; Craig and I were lucky enough to be invited to the annual Cartier Queen's Cup Final in Windsor many years ago. During the event I was approached by a young man who informed me that 'Wales' wanted to meet me, I of course asked 'Who?' and was amused to be told he meant Prince Harry.

I politely declined, as by this point he had already garnered quite the reputation with his preference for older women. On reflection I realize that he was probably just seeking out a mother figure. He bravely revealed this week that he had finally sought counseling to address these issues caused by the loss of his mother, Princess Diana. The rebellious acts that have created headlines over the years were more than likely a huge cry for help. He credited his brother Prince William for encouraging him to eventually seek help. The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge and Prince Harry are also spearheading the Heads Together campaign (headstogether.co.uk) to end the stigma around mental health and encourage people to forget the 'stiff upper lip' mentality and speak out instead of suffering in silence.

I think we have all been affected by this in one way or another - just the anxiety of starting a new life and moving to a new country is enough to send anyone a bit bonkers, and we all react in different ways. Mental health issues can be triggered by many things, not just traumatic events. I have struggled with mild anxiety and lethargy over the past couple of years and it turns out that for me it is caused by extremely low iron levels. I am fortunate enough to have found an excellent GP who made the discovery that I am anemic. This comes with many symptoms which can often be confused with mental health including problems. fatigue which unsurprisingly can lead to a form of depression. If I hadn't spoken up about this to my doctor I may not be getting the help that I needed; I am sure many of you suffer silently, but rest assured you aren't special or beyond help. The first step is talking about it - whether it be with family or friends or even initially just being honest with yourself. If you aren't as lucky as me to have a doctor you feel comfortable discussing this with, you can find lots of resources online, including of course the Heads Together website, but there are also tons of local organizations listed on the US government mental heath website - I have created this easy link for you to remember, just in case you need it at a later date. www.tinyurl. com/headstogether.

As always, feel free to drop me a line at eileen@ britsin.la or come along to our weekly Brits in LA Breakfast Club supported by Air New Zealand - on April 28th we have a really fun one planned. It is officially LA LA Land Day! Post your photos on #Instagram and use these hashtags #BritsinLA #lalaland to be entered to win a complimentary Breakfast Breakfast for Two (or if you are hungry you could iust have two breakfasts for one!) winners will be picked on Saturday 22nd April and your free meals are to be redeemed on LALALand Day!

Cheers! Eileen

Now that's really posh!

Former Spice Girls singer Victoria Beckham has received an OBE from the Duke of Cambridge for services to the fashion industry.

Victoria, who was joined by her husband David Beckham and her parents for the investiture ceremony at Buckingham Palace, was recognised for her 17-year career.

The sultry star wore an all-black outfit for the investiture ceremony, pairing a black top with a long draping skirt and matching high-heeled stilettos.

After her OBE was pinned to her jumper by Prince William, Victoria allowed herself to grin as she talked with the Prince.

Before she collected her award, Victoria appeared a little nervous upon arrival.

The 43-year-old looked rather downcast as she sat in a car alongside David and her mum.

The Beckhams have been close to the royals for many years now, thanks to David's charity sports work.

The couple even attended Wills' wedding to Kate Middleton in 2011, when Victoria was pregnant with youngest child Harper.

In a speech afterwards, she said: "It was an absolute pleasure to be at Buckingham Palace today. I'm proud to be British, honoured and humbled to receive my OBE from the Duke of Cambridge.

"If you dream big and work hard you can accomplish great things.

"I'm so happy to share this very special occasion with my parents and husband; without their love and support, none of this would be possible."

The Spice Girl turned fashion designer – who is mum to four kids – has said that rather than having a huge circle of friends, she surrounds herself with just the people she genuinely enjoys spending time with, including her family.

"I'm very close to my sister and a friend I went to school with, and then three or four others. I think a true friend understands that you can't see them as much as you might want, because they're busy as well.

"Everyone I'm friends with has a career and a family."

She broke news of her OBE to kids Brooklyn, 17, Romeo, 14, Cruz, 11, and Harper, five, on a festive break in the Maldives.

Friends of the fashion designer said she was "delighted and humbled for the recognition".

Oo-er.. Now she really is Posh!

Not so Swift: Harry opens up about his famous fling!

In his first Rolling Stone profile as a solo artist, Harry Styles has opened up about his new music, his future, and how he can't seem to get away from those Taylor Swift songs that may be about him.

But the only moment that really stood out was his action, not his words, when Swift came up in conversation.

"I gotta pee first. This might be a long one," Styles said. He reportedly left the table and added, "Actually, you can say, 'He went for a pee and never came back."

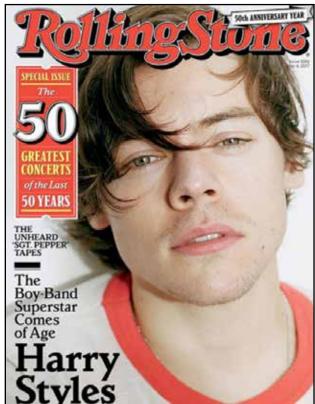

Styles briefly dated Swift in 2012, and the country star later released two songs, "Style" and "Out of the Woods," with lyrics that are perhaps too obviously about Styles.

"Imean, I don't know if they're about me or not," he said, "but the issue is, she's so good, they're bloody everywhere."

He also touched on their blossoming but short-lived relationship, saying it was all a real learning experience.

"In writing songs about stuff like that, I like tipping a hat to the time together," he said. "You're celebrating the fact it was powerful and made you feel something, rather than, 'This didn't work out, and that's bad.'

"And if you run into that person, maybe it's awkward, maybe you have to get drunk ... but you shared something. Meeting someone new, sharing those experiences, it's the best s-- ever. So thank you."

The former One Direction singer is set to release his first solo album on May 12. The first single, Sign of the Times, was a surprise for many "One D" fans who noted the singer stray away from the former bands pop-style to a more raw, David-Bowiemeets-Queen sound.

Styles noted that when he and Swift her photographed together in Central Park, he had an eye-opening realization about what happens when you mix romance with fame.

"When I see photos from that day, I think, 'Relationships are hard, at any age," Styles said.

"And adding in that you don't really understand exactly how it works when you're 18, trying to navigate all that stuff didn't make it easier.

"I mean, you're a little bit awkward to begin with. You're on a date with someone you really like. It should be that simple, right? It was a learning experience for sure. But at the heart of it—I just wanted it to be a normal date."

Oo-er 'arry... Oo-er!

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: It is time to move closer to your goals that you likely set last month. If it is a new business idea all the better, as it will be to your advantage to prepare, (but not make make) the final move until early next month. Mars your boss in your money house looks promising. TAURUS: As you move into your birthday month you will feel so much better. Mars leaving your life and moving into your money house will effectively change your financial picture for the better. It's time for fun this week ahead. Happy Birthday!

GEMINI: Your boss Mercury is still retrograde until early May. With this in mind you are best to remain low key. The good news is Mars the powerful male planet is moving into your life this week and will be good for you in many ways.

CANCER: While you want things in your life to be rock solid and settled a lot of the planets are still going backwards for a while ahead. Your best path now is to stay put. This does not mean all of your life, just the parts that are not quite determined yet.

LEO: This is an excellent time to plan for the future in any area of your life. It is not however the time to move forward quite yet. Some of the planets are still unsettled and will not be moving easy for a few weeks ahead. You will have some very happy family gatherings soon. VIRGO: Your boss planet Mercury is still going backwards until next month. Your financial diary is pretty full and you will be scrambling to fulfill a financial obligation that you cannot skimp on. Should you decide to not make this payment on time the consequences will be harsh LIBRA: Your lovely boss Venus is now moving slowly forward. While this is good for your financial picture she is not going full speed ahead until next weekend. This indicates a time to stop and smell the roses. You would be wise to rest up a while this next week or so, as May looks busy.

SCORPIO: This past week you need to keep calm and not panic. With so many twists and turns it has been a roller coaster of emotions recently. You are likely feeling bewildered but just rest easy; the best news is yet to come and by next week much will be resolved in your life.

SAGITTARIUS: You will feel like you are moving through life in mud. Everything is slowed down for this month and some of May. So make the most of the time frame by finishing up any unfinished business. Saturn in your sign going backwards will bringing closure in some area by May.

CAPRICORN: Your nature is to be patient and ambitious but these qualities have been tested recently. With your boss planet Saturn turning backwards it's best to be aware of your thoughts and feelings - but do not mix them up! You do not have to always believe everything your heart tells you.

AQUARIUS: Travel is on your mind and even short day trips will help you to be more in tune with your life. Put any pending plans on hold until mid-May as then the world will be your oyster. Do not resurrect - or allow another - to bring up old history...it serves no purpose.

PISCES: If you are concerned with finances be sure to understand you are not alone. The water signs (of which you are one) have had a tough time of late due to adverse planetary actions. As in all of life, nothing lasts forever so take care of whatever you can, the rest will be ok

So High A Blood: it may get your heart racing...

■ Exclusive interview with author Morgan Ring on the Tudor who time forgot

"As researched Margaret, I realized that her life offered new perspective relationship between England and Scotland in the sixteenth century and on the Reformation in Britain, two of my own historical preoccupations," So High A Blood author Morgan Ring.

"The book started life as an undergraduate dissertation, which grew into an MPhil thesis, and finally evolved into a full-scale book. I have always been drawn to biography as a way of writing history. It lets us explore major themes in precise detail. So when I was looking for a dissertation topic, and my supervisor mentioned the understudied, clock-collecting Margaret Douglas, couldn't resist."

It's Christmas 1530 in the Tudor court. The niece of King Henry VIII, fifteen-year-old Lady Margaret Douglas, arrives. Half English and half Scottish, and Catholic, Margaret incurs the king's wrath by her engagement which was not approved. When the king takes over the church and England becomes Protestant, she will need to tread very carefully.

Margaret connives for her son to become a suitor of his cousin Mary Queen of Scots. Margaret loses her freedom. But her grandson unites the crowns in 1603 as King James I of England and VI of Scotland.

Because So High A Blood started as a PhD thesis, historical accuracy was paramount from the start. "The first thing I had to do was get a sense of how much material survived," says Ring. "So, I started with catalogs and calendars. Then I chased up footnotes and talked to archivists. Sometimes, you have no idea what you're looking for because not everything has been cataloged and not every catalog is available online. After that, it was a question of archive time at the University Library in Cambridge, the National Archives and the National Records in Edinburgh, the National Archives at Kew, along with Lambeth Palace Library, the College of Arms, and above all, the British Library."

Ring visited the settings for most of the key scenes in the book: Tantallon Castle near North Berwick, Stirling Palace, Holyrood, Temple Newsam, and Hampton Court.

"Margaret was imprisoned in the Tower of London several times," says Ring. "So, I haunted it in all weathers and in all seasons of the year. I also had a wonderful month as a visiting fellow at the Huntington in San Marino, California."

So High A Blood is Ring's first book. It has yet to be optioned for film or TV.

Michael Fishwick in London and George Gibson in New York are Ring's editors.

"It's been a privilege and a delight to work with Bloomsbury in both the UK and the U.S." says Ring. "The only real difficulty is that I've bought far too many of their books. I'm still figuring out how to get them all home to Canada."

Ring is currently writing a book about reading and the Reformation.

Ring is moving to

Book Corner with Gabrielle Pantera

Denmark. She was born in Toronto, Canada. She read History at Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and stayed on to write her MPhil and PhD.

But, despite sending on Leonardo Ulloa for Shinji Okazaki at half-time and leading the shot count 17-2 after the break, they were unable to breach a resolute Atletico defence for a second time.

"In the first half, we played really well but the goal changes the game plan - we knew we had to score three - so I had to make the change," Shakespeare told BT Sport.

"In terms of effort, commitment, application - as a group we were tremendous.

four Premier Leagues, five FA Cups and three League Cups. He also has Champions League and Europa League medals.

He has made 713 appearances since his debut in 1998 - 578 of them as captain.

"I feel I still have plenty to offer but understand opportunities that here will be limited for me," Terry said.

The centre-back, who has scored 66 goals for the club he joined as a 14-year-old, has made just four Premier League starts this season.

Terry made his debut for Chelsea as a 17-yearold in a 1998 League Cup match, and has gone on to score 40 Premier League goals over 19 years.

"I will always be a Blue and am desperate to end my final season as a Chelsea player with more silverware," said Terry, whose team have a four-point lead at the top of the Premier League.

"I've always been conscious that I depart at the right time, in the right way, and I feel that the end of this season is the right time for the club and I."

Terry is one of just five defenders to have won the PFA Player of the Year award.

He retired from international football in 2012 after winning 78 England caps and signed a one-year contract extension with the Blues in May 2016.

"I'm eager to carry on playing and so will be looking to continue with a new challenge," Terry added.

Redknapp Harry has taken over at Birmingham City a desperate gambit to keep the Blues in the Championship.

And the veteran manager has claimed he will not be paid for his three-game stint in charge if they do make the drop into League

The 70-year-old agreed to take over at St Andrew's on Tuesday, a day after Gianfranco Zola resigned.

"I'm not being paid. It doesn't bother me though," Redknapp told BBC Radio 5 live.

"I have got a bonus. It's not a massive one, but I said 'if I don't keep you up, I don't want paying'."

Former West Ham, Tottenham Portsmouth manager Redknapp revealed he had the same arrangement when he worked as an adviser to Derby County at the end of last season.

He added: "I said to them 'if you don't make the play-offs, I don't want any money'. If we hadn't made the playoffs, I wouldn't have got paid anything."

Rash strike sends United through

■ Tyro scores late as Mourinho's men struggle in front of goal yet again

EUROPA LEAGUE Quarter Final, 2nd Leg Manchester Utd......2 Anderlecht.....1 (aet: 90 mins: 1-1) aggregate score: 3-2)

Marcus Rashford's extratime goal Thursday night sent Manchester United into the Europa League semi-final at the expense of Anderlecht on a evening of high tension at Old Trafford.

The Europa League has acquired huge significance for United and manager Jose Mourinho as it offers a potential route into the Champions League, away from the battle for topfour places in the Premier League - making this victory crucial.

United took the lead on the night and in the tie when Henrikh Mkhitaryan drilled in a low finish in the 10th minute but Anderlecht restored parity when Sofiane Hanni scrambled home an equaliser after 32 minutes.

Mourinho's side were their own worst enemies with a shocking display of finishing as they missed chance after chance, their cause also undermined by injuries to defender Marcos Rojo in the first half and a serious-looking knee injury to top scorer Zlatan Ibrahimovic at the end of normal time.

United were facing the prospect of a penalty shootout but Rashford, a scorer against Chelsea at the weekend, made the decisive contribution after 107 minutes with a brilliant turn and finish from Marouane Fellaini's knockdown.

Manchester United flirted with an exit from the Europa League here and if they had gone out they would only have had themselves to blame.

As on so many occasions this season, United created multiple chances only to waste the opportunities and leave themselves hostages to fortune and the threatening counterattacks of Anderlecht.

Rashford, Ibrahimovic and Paul Pogba were all guilty of a succession of bad misses as the flaw that has undermined United all season reared its ugly head once more and kept Anderlecht in contention right until the final whistle in extra time.

On this occasion, at least, United rescued themselves with Rashford's goal but Mourinho will know his side must discover the killer touch from somewhere if they are to secure the Champions League place that must be the minimum requirement from this season.

United can celebrate another step towards winning the Europa League and the Champions League place that comes with it - but this may yet prove to be expensive night for Mourinho as the season reaches its climax.

The biggest concern will surround Ibrahimovic, whose knee looked to give way at he challenged for a high ball in the final moments of normal time. He managed to get to his feet and wave away the waiting stretcher but was helped off as he limped down the tunnel at the Stretford End.

Departing Foxes get taste for Champions League

Craig Manager Shakespeare challenged his Leicester team to reach the Champions League again after their quarter-final loss to Atletico Madrid on Tuesday night.

The Premier League champions were the last surviving English team in this season's competition.

But, despite a spirited second-leg display, a 1-1 draw meant Atletico progressed via a 2-1 aggregate win.

The whole club, from the supporters to the players to the owners can be immensely proud," said Shakespeare.

"We had rattled with the effort and commitment we showed. It's no discredit to lose to a team of that calibre.

"I've just said to the players that they should want more of this and they've agreed that that's what they want.

"All players want to play at the highest level and the Champions League is the highest level but we have to get back to winning ways in the Premier League

Seeking to overturn a 1-0 first-leg deficit, Leicester fell further behind to Saul Niguez's header in the first half on Tuesday, meaning they required three goals to progress.
