QUEEN CONDEMNS 'WICKED' ATTACK

■ Monarch visits injured victims of Manchester bombing

The Queen has condemned the "wicked" Manchester attack as she met children injured by the suicide bombing.

She visited Royal Manchester Children's Hospital on Thursday where she also spoke with staff who have treated the victims.

The Queen expressed her shock that young people had been targeted in the bombing at an Ariana Grande concert.

At least six children were killed in Monday's blast, including an eight-year-old girl, and a number of others were seriously injured.

The Queen praised hospital staff for "coming together" after hearing how many had come in from home offering their assistance in the wake of the attack.

Speaking to the parents of Evie Mills, 14, the Queen said: "It's dreadful. Very wicked, to target that sort of thing."

She also told Evie, from Harrogate, she thought Ariana Grande was a "very good singer", adding: "She sounds very, very good."

The Queen told a member of staff: "The awful thing was that everyone was so young. The age of them."

She also met Millie Robson, 15, who suffered injuries to her legs, and wished her a speedy recovery.

The Queen spoke to Mille's dad David, who had been waiting at the exit of the arena for his daughter when the bomb exploded.

"It's not something you expect at all," she said.

Amy Barlow, 12, from Helmshore, Lancashire, who suffered injuries to her legs, also met the Oueen.

Her parents have told how a merchandise seller ripped up concert T-shirts to help stem the bleeding from their daughter following the blast.

Dad Grant, 46, said:

Queen Elizabeth visited with some of the young victims and their parents Thursday.

"The guy selling T-shirts used the T-shirts as bandages."

Mum Kathy, 43, who was with her daughter when the bomb went off, added: "I think he was selling them outside, but he very quickly dumped his bag on the floor, ripped them all up."

She said it felt like "someone had thrown a massive firework" when they were struck by shrapnel coming from the bomb.

Minute's silence

Hundreds of people gathered in Manchester city centre on Thursday to observe a minute's silence to remember the victims of the arena bomb attack.

The country fell silent at 11:00 BST for the silence, which ended with a round of applause at St Ann's Square.

Cards, flowers and teddy bears now adorn the statue there - adopted as the focal point to remember the victims.

Twenty-two people were killed and 116 injured when Salman Abedi detonated a homemade device on Monday.

Chalked out messages like "we will stand together, no fear one love" on the ground have not faded despite the numbers coming to pay their respects and leave poignant tributes.

Less than a mile from Manchester Arena, people gathered around the tributes left at the site's statue while others cont. on page 2, col. 1 observed the silence out of the windows from offices above.

The silence ended with a round of applause and people sang the Oasis hit Don't Look Back in Anger.

Stephanie Carr, 65, from Reddish, Greater Manchester, said: "It was so emotional. It leaves you speechless and the singing at the end typifies Manchester."

She said a lady who she did not know came over and gave her a hug.

"We have to be there for people. I felt like a proud a Mancunian. Not everyone in the world is bad. If we were to stop living they would have won," she said.

Nick Dawson, 49, from Salford, said: "Showing the world that good people will always gather together to defy evil. It's a mark of respect. A mark of defiance."

Manchester United fan Adrian Box, 49, from Grimsby, travelled to the city to mark his respects. Standing with a rival City fan he just met, he said: "We should unite.

"We can't let these people defeat us. I'm proud I've adopted this city."

Sadness and tears

Greater Manchester mayor Andy Burnham was among the crowd who observed the silence at the square.

Lord Mayor of the city Eddy Newman, council leader Sir Richard Leese and Lord-Lieutenant of Greater Manchester Warren Smith joined those in the silence at the square.

Mohammed Shafiq, chief executive of the Ramadhan Foundation, said it was an important show of unity.

'absolutely united'

He said: "We often talk about how things divide us but Manchester over the last few days has been absolutely united."

Helen Dover, 41, from Droylsden, said: "I wanted to pay my respects.

"It means so much, it's terrible what's happened it's nice to so many people. It means so much."

Shannon Davies, 17, said she and her friends were caught up in the emotion of the day too.

She said: "We just feel really sad. We have all cried about it."

A minute's silence was observed across the country including Liverpool.

Nineteen of the victims have been named so far and include children and teenagers.

The youngest is eightyear-old Saffie Roussos. Off-duty Cheshire police officer Elaine McIver is also among the dead.

Soldiers on the streets as threat level raised to critical

THOUSANDS OF SOLDIERS were deployed on the streets of Britain this week amid fears that accomplices of the Manchester suicide bomber are preparing further attacks.

For the first time in 10 years, the terror threat was raised to the highest possible level, from severe to critical, meaning an attack is "expected imminently".

Investigators fear that the British-born bomber Salman Abedi, a 22-yearold of Libyan descent, was part of a wider network of Isil-inspired terrorists, including a bomb-maker, who may still be at large.

Prime Minister Theresa May also announced that troops would replace police officers at set-piece events including sports venues and concerts.

It will be the first time since 2003 – when the Government reacted to a plot to bring down an airliner – that troops are deployed on the streets.

With the FA Cup final this weekend, Mrs May acted on the advice of the Joint Terrorism Analysis Centre after chairing two meetings of the Cobra emergency committee.

Security will also be stepped up at major public events and terrorist targets such as railway stations and airports.

It is the first time Britain has been on maximum terrorist alert since 2007, when a blazing car loaded with gas canisters was driven into Glasgow Airport.

Intelligence experts the believe device detonated at a concert by the pop singer Ariana Grande at the Manchester Arena on Monday night was so sophisticated that Abedi must have either been given specialist training abroad or used a bomb made by a technician who has not yet been captured.

It emerged that Abedi had travelled to Libya, raising fears he had been trained there and posing questions for the security services on whether he should have been tracked.

Mrs May described the bombing as "one of the worst terrorist incidents we have ever experienced in the United Kingdom" and said it "stands out for its appalling, sickening cowardice – deliberately targeting innocent, defenceless children and young people who should have been enjoying one of the most memorable nights of their lives".

In the hours following the explosion Special Forces troops were sent to Manchester to support a series of raids on homes of suspected local extremists. Military bomb disposal experts were already involved in the operation on Tuesday when police stormed the house in the Fallowfield area of Manchester where Abedi is believed to have lived with relations.

Abedi is the first terrorist to successfully detonate a suicide bomb in Britain since four al-Qaeda sympathisers killed 52 people in co-ordinated attacks on London in July 2005.

The terrorist, the first to specifically target children on British soil, was brought up in Manchester, where he attended a local comprehensive school before studying at Salford University.

His family fled Libya to escape Muammar Gaddafi's regime, but his father moved back there after the fall of Gaddafi during the Arab Spring in

The intelligence services are urgently investigating whether Abedi had links to known extremists in Libya. A number of Libyans who have spent time in Manchester before moving back to north Africa are known to have connections with al-Qaeda and Isil.

Mrs May said of the attack: "We struggle to comprehend the warped and twisted mind that sees a room packed with young children not as a scene to cherish, but as an opportunity for carnage.

"But we can continue to resolve to thwart such attacks in future, to take on and defeat the ideology that often fuels this violence, and if there turn out to be others responsible for this attack, to seek them out and bring them to justice."

Home Secretary blasts US over leaks

■ "I have been very clear with our friends that this should not happen again," says Rudd as US reveals bomber's identity

Amber Rudd has strongly criticised US security services for leaking information relating to the Manchester terror attack and warned Washington it must not happen again.

A number of details including the identity of the attacker and the death toll entered the public domain in the immediate aftermath of the suicide bombing with the information reportedly leaked by security officials in America.

Ms Rudd described those leaks as "irritating" as she said that the UK had told its key security ally to stop releasing information which British police do not want publicly known.

She was asked on BBC Radio 4's Today programme whether she intended to look at the issue of information sharing which may be working against the wishes of the police.

She said: "Yes quite frankly. The British police have been very clear that they want to control the flow of information in order to protect operational integrity, the element of surprise, so it is irritating if it gets released from other sources and I have been very clear with our friends that this should not happen again."

Ms Rudd was also asked whether the American leaks had compromised the investigation.

Investigators fear that the British-born bomber Salman Abedi, a 22-year-old of Libyan descent, was part of a wider network of Isil-inspired terrorists, including a bomb-maker, who may still be at large. Ms Rudd said it is "likely, possible" that the attacker was not acting on his own and that Abedi was known to UK security services.

'necessary tools'

She also insisted that the security services have the tools they need to combat terror.

She said: "I believe they have all the legislative support that they need. We work closely to make sure that they do and in my conversations, not just today and over this

Corbyn links terror threat to wars abroad

UK foreign policy would change under a Labour government to one that "reduces rather than increases the threat" to the country, Jeremy Corbyn said on Friday.

Aselection campaigning resumed after the attack in Manchester, the Labour leader pointed to links between wars abroad and "terrorism here at home".

Mr Corbyn, who opposed UK military intervention in Iraq and Afghanistan, and voted against strikes in Libya and Syria, said: "We must be brave enough to admit the 'war on terror' is simply not working.

"We need a smarter way to reduce the threat from countries that nurture terrorists and generate terrorism."

He also pledged to "reverse the cuts to our emergency services and police" arguing that "we cannot be protected and cared for on the cheap".

General Election 2017

Paying tribute to the "solidarity, humanity and compassion" of the people of Manchester, he said those are the values that would guide a Labour government.

He added: "No government can prevent every terrorist attack. If an individual is determined enough and callous enough, sometimes they will get through.

"But the responsibility of government is to minimise that chance - to ensure the police have the resources they need, that our foreign policy reduces rather than increases the threat to this country, and that at home we never surrender the freedoms we have won and that terrorists are so determined to take away."

He also referred to 'British values' so evident in the aftermath of the Manchester Arena attack, saying: "I want the solidarity, humanity and compassion that we have seen on the streets of Manchester this week to be the values that guide our government. There can be no love of country if there is neglect or disregard for its people."

Corbyn and a small group of his aides have planned a "phased return" to electioneering after the pause, which was agreed to by the major parties.

The bench will be revealed in an extension to the set in Trafford in the coming weeks.

An inscription will read: "For Martyn and all those who lost their lives on 22nd May 2017. We Stand Together", according to a post on the show's website.

Mr Hett, from Stockport, has received a number of high profile tributes, including from popstar Mariah Carey.

Sir Roger Moore dead at 89

■ From Simon Templar to James Bond, the actor rose from humble beginnings to become a byword for style and charm

Former James Bond star Sir Roger Moore has died in Switzerland at the age of 89 after a short battle with cancer, his family has announced.

A message shared on the actor's official Twitter account read: "With the heaviest of hearts, we must share the awful news that our father, Sir Roger Moore, passed away today. We are all devastated."

The statement was signed by Sir Roger's children, Deborah, Geoffrey and Christian.

Sir Roger had a long career getting his first break in the Ivanhoe TV series in the 1950s. He found fame on the small screen as Simon Templar in The Saint a decade later, and after a brief but memorable stint starring opposite Tony Curtis in The Persuaders, he took the role for which he is now best remembered, that of suave British spy James Bond, playing 007 in seven films over 14 years from from 1972 to 1986, when his successor Timothy Dalton was formally announced.

Moore was officially unveiled as James Bond at a press conference at the Dorchester Hotel in London on August 1 1972.

"I think that I've got an even-money chance to make it," he told reporters. "After all, I've been around a long time in this business. I did The Saint on television for seven years."

The debonair star, who added a distinct light-hearted touch to the 007 role, also admitted that, while he thought Sir Sean Connery had been the greatest Bond, fans were "lucky" to have the current star of the franchise, Daniel Craig.

He said: "I think that Sean was obviously the great Bond.

"He was obviously the right person, he brought the right personality to the performance, otherwise Bond would not have gone on past the first six that he did. He was a tremendous Bond.

"Today, I think we're very lucky to have Daniel Craig because he is quite extraordinary. I always say that Sean looked like a killer - but Daniel Craig would finish it off.

Roger George Moore was born on October 14 1927 in Stockwell, south London, the son of a policeman whose job was to draw plans of crime scenes to be produced in court cases; his mother was a cashier in a restaurant in the Strand.

Overweight as a child (he lost the weight in adolescence), he nearly from pneumonia, bronchial attended Hackford Road school and primary went on to a scholarship at Battersea Grammar, leaving before his 16th birthday to start work as a £3 10s-a-week paint and trace artist and tea boy at a film company. "I only lasted a year," he remembered. "I don't think my tea was up to scratch."

move to Hollywood

A friend suggested he make some money as an extra at Denham Studios, then filming Caesar and Cleopatra. He auditioned at their Wardour Street office and started work the same day. After only three days as an extra, Moore was approached by the co-director of the film Brian Hurst. Hurst offered to pay his drama school fees, and with his help Moore applied for a place at Rada.

In one of his few successful non-Bond films, Sir Roger Moore played Shawn Fynn in The Wild Geese

During a spell of National Service Moore was married for the first time to a blonde figure-skater, Doorn van Steyn and he found temporary work as a male model advertising Brylcreem and Colgate toothpaste as well as swimming trunks and various items of knitwear.

But his star really began to rise after meeting the singer Dorothy Squires during a party in 1952. Despite a ten-year age difference, the two began a passionate affair which culminated in his divorce from Doorn and marriage to Squires in 1953. The pair moved to Hollywood as Squires tried to launch her career in the United States, but it was Moore who caught the eye of agents and directors, and he quickly established himself as an actor, securing small roles in The Last Time I Saw Paris (1954), which starred Elizabeth Taylor, and Interrupted Melody (1955) starring Glenn

A regular role in the historical romance series Ivanhoe followed, but his marriage to the Squires was souring. On several occasions Moore admitted to being so afraid of his drunken, foul-mouthed wife that he spent the night sleeping in the garden rather than face her.

'flat and lifeless'

In 1961 Moore returned to Europe and accepted a part in an Italian potboiler, The Rape of the Sabines. His co-star was the Italian actress Luisa Matioli. The two fell in lover and moved in together, and while the pair were living in Italy, British TV impressario Lew Grade offered Moore the part of Simon Templar in a television adventure series based on Leslie Charteris's swashbuckling hero The Saint. Shown on ITV between 1962 and 1970, The Saint ran for 118 episodes and made Moore a star not just in Britain but in the 80 or so countries around the world to which the show was sold.

In 1970 Moore moved on from Simon Templar to Lord Brett Sinclair in the Persuaders, and two years later played Bond for the first time in Live and Let Die. Critics felt that his first attempt at James Bond was "flat and lifeless": nevertheless the film, made for $7 million, grossed $126 million at the box office. In his second Bond film, The Man With the Golden Gun (1974) Moore began to settle into playing the role for laughs. By his third film, The Spy Who Loved Me (1977), he was firmly established as "the amusing Bond".

Moore became a tax exile when Labour returned to power in 1974, and after turning over the role of Bond to Timothy Dalton in 1986 he made a handful of films, mostly forgettable.

Moore abandoned his first attempt at an autobiography when the first 6,000 words stolen, along were with his luggage, at Geneva airport 1992. At 81 his ghosted memoirs, My Word is my Bond, appeared in 2008. In his dotage he admitted to being drawn each morning to the obituary pages out of "morbid curiosity". He had a second bash at autobiography in Last Man Standing in 2014.

Created a CBE in 1999, Moore was knighted four years later for the charity work which for more than a decade had dominated his public life. In 2007 he was awarded a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame for his work on television and in film, appropriately located Hollywood at 7007 Boulevard.

Roger Moore is survived by his fourth wife, Kiki Tholstrup, and his three children. PAGE 6 THE BRITISH WEEKLY SAT MAY 27 2017

According one local

The home's vision of a place where elderly people could be cared for in a warm and kind environment continues to this day. The British Home later opened its doors to welcome older adults of all nationalities, and today enjoys a diverse mix of residents

Brits In LA

Manchester forever in our hearts

We have so many Brits in LA members from Manchester that my heart fell into my stomach and the tears started rolling when I heard of the fatal and evil attack at the Ariana Grande concert this week.

And when the footage started to emerge of kids and parents running for their lives, I just lost it.

I write this from New York, which, as we know dealt with one of the most heinous crimes of this century. When talking with residents about the horrific attack, people started recalling that day to me.

I met up with John Pirkis, (former Brit in LA member who now runs Brits in NY for us) at the BAFTA announcement for the Student Awards on Monday evening, he where was recounting the story of the maniac who mowed down civilians Times Square just a week before. unfortunately He witnessed the whole incident and gave a statement to the police. Again as he told me, my heart sank a little more.

I began to think about all of life's atrocities, all over the world and how we as a society deal with it.

Must we live a life of fear? Must we stay in our homes, eternally until the big bad wolf comes knocking? I do not mean to be trite but it is a a genuine question. That anxiety makes me not want to leave the comforts of my home, for fear of attack. Is nowhere safe? When, on almost monthly basos we hear about an attack on a mall, or a cinema, or a bus, or a bridge...and now a concert packed with children? This latest attack has shaken the world because of innocence lost. It's tragic beyond words. And I'm sure I speak on behalf of the whole of the British community expressing our heartfelt condolences to the victims and their families at this very sad time. I had other stuff to talk about this week - specifically about a couple of fabulous gettogethers we had, but it feels disrespectful to mention them in the light of recent events.

I will however say this...though it sometimes seems our humanity is eroding, the best of us is also revealed in dark times. When I see how many of the local community rallied around Jim Tavare after his terrible recent accident and more recently when co-founder BiLA Darren Darnborough, who celebrated a birthday this week, urged his many friends on social media to take the money with which would have bought him a drink and instead send it to the fundraising efforts for the Manchester victims. It might only seem like a small gesture but if such efforts can spread virally then we can get stronger and more united in the face of evil.

I also heard from member Alan Nesbit. who was home in Manchester at the time, who told me that if his kids would have been with him, they definitely would have gone that night - and he went on to retell how the Manchester civic spirit rose and people took to the streets for the vigil and bonded and crowd and hugged one another and vowed to stay strong for the victims and their families.

perhaps heart-warming most moment of Thursday's minute's silence across the country for the victims, the people of Manchester came together for an impromptu and respectful chorus "Don't Look Back In Anger", the 1990s anthem from Manchester's iconic rock band Oasis. To see those poor, shocked and bereaved people listening to their better angels, and preaching love and forgiveness rather than hate and revenge, was beyond moving for me.

So in closing, if we live our lives in fear. The terrorists have won. So I encourage you (as well as myself) to live every day as if it might be your last. Hug a stranger. Tell those closest to you how much they mean to you. Commit random acts of kindness. Help people who need it. DO WHAT YOU CAN. Inspire, mentor, volunteer. Be the best person you can be, BE KIND...for it's the only way we can LIVE.

Lots of love to you all. Craig

Italian citizenship molto bene for Mr. Darcy!

I hear actor Colin Firth wants to become Italian.

Oooh-er!

The 56-year-old British star has applied to the Italian embassy in London for citizenship following the United Kingdom's decision in 2016 to leave the European Union, which is commonly referred to as Brexit.

A source told the Daily Mail: "Colin was horrified by Brexit and is worried about the consequences."

The Oscar-winning actor is married to Italian film producer Livia Giuggioli and Colin speaks her mother tongue fluently.

Colin who has children Luca, 16, and Matteo, 13 - currently lives in London with his wife, but has previously criticised the decision to leave the European Union following a referendum last year.

Colin said: "For me this is a disaster of unexpected proportions. Brexit does not have a single positive aspect.

"Many colleagues, including Emma Thompson, are, like me, enthusiastic Europeans, and we still cannot believe What's more, Colin has previously claimed he doesn't feel rooted in the United Kingdom, either.

The acclaimed performer - who was raised in the village of Grayshott in Hampshire, England - explained in 2010: "I don't feel planted here. I feel very connected to America. My mother grew up there and I spent a year in high school in the US. Growing up, I felt almost American in lots of ways."

Colin will be able to retain his British passport even if he is awarded Italian citizenship, because both countries permit dual nationality, unlike some other European Union countries including Germany.

A spokesman for the actor explained: "Colin applied for dual citizenship (British and Italian) in order to have the same passports as his wife and children."

However, spokesman declined to comment on whether Colin's decision was motivated directly by the United Kingdom's impending exit from the European Union.

It is what it is Colin... I think you are "over thinking" it. In any case there's always the USA!

Gervais has new sitcom in the works!

MY FAVORITE motormouthed comic Ricky Gervais is developing a new sitcom.

Not a moment too soon!

The 55-year-old funnyman is known for starring in top shows such as the UK version of 'The Office' and 'Extras', but the star – who hasn't appeared in a sitcom since the end of 'Derek' in 2014 - has said he's "written five pages" of a new show about a man who is forced to move in with an "absolute loser relative"

He said: "I had five projects which I have narrowed down to one sitcom. I have written five pages. I shouldn't say but the idea is I get separated from my wife and I have to move in with an absolute loser relative.

"I have lost everything. I haven't got a house, I haven't got a job because she kept me and I was a bit of a kept man, and now I have to start dating again. It's horrendous.

He added: "At 55, I've got to start from scratch,

GERVAIS: currently 'obsessed' with stand-up and all I want is her back. So it's about me trying to cope without this life-long partner and how the real world is harsh. It is going to be harsh."

But fans of the star might have to wait some time before the idea is finished and pitched to television networks, as Ricky says he's too "obsessed" with standup comedy to think about anything else.

He added: "Honestly, I am obsessed with standup now. I was thinking I might go out straight after this tour and do another

Meanwhile, doesn't think it's likely fans will ever see his character David Brent - who he made famous on 'The Office' - again, despite the success of the 2016 movie 'David Brent: Life on the Road'

He told The Sun: "I just wanted to revisit him, like catching up with an old friend. Never say never. It's a bit on the edge of sad versus comedy already and revisiting him at 60, still trying to be a rock star, there might not be any comedy left. It might be too tragic."

While I am sure Ricky's fans will be thrilled to hear of his small screen comeback, they may have to wait a few more years. The comedian admitted he doesn't expect it to hit screens until 2019. Sad Face!

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Your financial situation could be getting a boost as early as next week. Look for an opportunity to get dressed and out and about. It's a good week to go after anything you fancy.

TAURUS: The sun in your second house can bring a situation that is unresolved to a head. Although you probably want to ignore it, it is not going to be ignored. The new moon in your sign recently will assist you to complete it.

GEM INI: Now that your boss Mercury has turned forward it's time to complete what has transpired in your life these past few weeks. You will be travelling (mentally or otherwise) to a place where you can achieve things in a positive way.

CAN CER: Movement is good for you and this week it's all around you and in the family also. Be strong and understand you are not everything to everybody. Others may perceive this to be selfish, others who care, know better.

LEO: Health issues of (yours or others) could hold you back from enjoying the weekend. So get plenty of rest and make it your priority to not spend time stressing about things you cannot change.

VIR GO: As this coming month is the start of a new phase be sure you are ready and willing to get going on your particular plan for change. No matter if it is a change you are not expecting; it will work out well.

LIBRA: Jupiter as your house guest this past year is going backwards; it is in the part of your life that's not always on show. You probably will not see the changes until they are upon you. Relax! You cannot do much else.

SCORPIO: Pluto, who is one of your boss planets, is traveling backwards currently. This is always going to bring up the past. But right now that means good news in what has been a rollercoaster of a year. What is past due in love or money will roll right to your door.

SAGITTARIUS: Your ruler Jupiter is strolling backwards currently and it can be the right time to take a risk if you dare. Of course there are not many that are braver than you. Be the light bearer this coming week and you will be rewarded.

CAPRICORN: The saying goes that a fool and his money are easily parted. This can run true this next week or so for you. Even though you are not easily fooled be careful about being involved in get rich quick schemes. You have more to offer this week than money.

AQU ARIUS: People of your sign rarely like to be told how things should be when you know better than others how it is. You are nobody's fool in life. This week ask yourself if it is even worth disputing anything.

PISCES: Do not be put off by anything that looks difficult at first. If you want to go for it get going. The results will far outshine anything you have achieved these past few weeks. The way ahead is no more a problem.

"I want to be able to savour life while I am still relatively young," - Sam Allardyce place finish.

"I have no ambitions to take another job," Allardyce said in a statement.

"I want to be able to savour life while I am still relatively young, and when I am still relatively healthy enough to do all the things I want to do, like travel, spend more time with my family and grandchildren without the huge pressure that comes with being a football manager.

"This is the right time for me. I simply want to be able to enjoy all the things you cannot really enjoy with the 24/7 demands of managing any football club, let alone one in the Premier League."

Allardyce revealed his decision to chairman Steve Parish at a meeting in London on Tuesday. The Eagles are now looking for their eighth manager in seven years.

Although it took Allardyce six games to get his first victory, the former Bolton, Blackburn, Newcastle and West Ham boss maintained his record of never being relegated from the Premier League.

Only Sir Alex Ferguson, Arsene Wenger, Harry Redknapp and David Moyes have managed more games in the Premier League.

Allardyce's final game in charge of Palace came on Sunday, a 2-0 loss at Manchester United, having guaranteed safety the previous week by thrashing Hull 4-0.

Following defeat at Old Trafford, Allardyce indicated his plans to improve the squad in the summer.

He had told BBC Sport: "We now need to grow, develop and invest. You need to choose the right players and not the wrong ones. Recruitment is the difficult task in the summer."

Lisbon Lions 'greatest feat in football'

Sir Alex Ferguson has described the Lisbon Lions' 1967 European Cup win as "the greatest feat in football".

Celtic's 2-1 win over Internazionale 50 years ago established the team as "pioneers of doing the impossible," Ferguson insisted.

"They set the pattern for a period, particularly when Manchester United the next year did it," the Scot said.

"From '65 to '67, if someone had written a book about it they would call it fiction. It was amazing."

Ferguson was speaking at an event at Glasgow's SSE Hydro venue to celebrate the achievement of Jock Stein's Celtic side on 25 May 1967.

The former Manchester United manager said the European Cup win paved the way for other British sides to follow.

"They were [pioneers] for British football, there's no doubt about that," Ferguson said.

"Sir Matt [Busby] at Manchester United was rebuilding the team after the Munich air disaster, but they got to a semifinal, which was a great achievement for a very young side.

"For Celtic to do it with 11 players from within 25 miles of each other is astonishing. This [event] will recognise the achievement, but [also] applaud the players and management staff who achieved it. It will never be done again."

United dedicate win to victims

After winning Europa League, Mourinho says: "If we could, we would change obviously the people's lives for this cup."

Manchester United dedicated Wednesday's Europa League victory to the victims of Monday's attack in the city, as the club made tributes in their memory.

United's 2-0 win over Ajax in Stockholm came two days after 22 people were killed by a suicide bomber following a concert at Manchester Arena.

The club tweeted a photo of a banner reading: "Manchester - A City United."

United manager Jose Mourinho said: "If we could, we would change obviously the people's lives for this cup."

Manchesterborn striker Marcus Rashford said the win was "for you Manchester," while the world's most expensive player Paul Pogba said: "We played for the people who died."

Wayne Captain Rooney encouraged people to donate to help the families of the victims; Juan Mata said the players had "focused on the game and to win and to lift the spirit of the town at least for some hours and we feel proud of that" and midfielder Ander Herrera said: "I want to dedicate this trophy to the victims."

He added: "What happened two days ago was horrible. Yesterday we morning devastated. It was difficult to train but the manager told us the only thing we could do is win this for them, and that is what we have done.

"We are just football players but we have an audience so we want to work together for a normal world. This happened in Manchester but everywhere we want to see a united world and fight for peace."

On an emotional night in Sweden, Pogba and Henrikh Mkhitaryan scored the goals that won the Europa League for the first time in United's history - and with it a place in the group stages of next season's Champions League.

Officials considered postponing Wednesday's game following bombing the earlier, but it hours was decided it should go ahead. However, United did cancel their pre-game news conference.

United boss Mourinho said: "It is really hard and that is why we didn't want to have a press conference because we had to prepare ourselves to do our job and try to forget events that are obviously much bigger than our job.

"But the world goes on. It doesn't stop and we have to do our work. The players put a wall up and stayed isolated from everything and did really well."

United's victory Stockholm means they have now won all three of Europe's major competitions, having previously won Champions League three times - in 1968, 1999 and 2008 - and the Cup Winners' Cup in 1991.

The Europa League is their second major trophy of Mourinho's debut season in charge, having also won the League Cup in February.

The former Chelsea boss recently said he has had to work "harder than ever" this campaign and his delight was clear to see at full-time.

He was hugged by his son and thrown into the air by his backroom staff before embracing his players on the pitch and applauding the United fans inside the Friends Arena.

His side produced a professional, counterattacking display with just 31% possession and afterwards said: "There are a lot of poets in football but poets don't win many titles."

When asked about this in his post-match news conference, he said: "The poets are the ones that win every match. I think I am going to try to have one of these jobs. I never managed in my career to win every match - I always lose matches.

"In a bad season - in a season where sometimes I felt that my team was the worst team in the world, where I felt that

Big Sam quits Palace

Sam Allardyce has resigned as Crystal Palace manager just five months after he joined the Premier League club.

Allardyce replaced Alan Pardew in December on a two-andhalf-year deal with the Eagles one point above the relegation zone.

Mourinho sometimes I was the worst manager in the world - we managed to win three trophies.

"We to go Champions League by winning a trophy, not by finishing second, third or fourth, and we have the honour of going to the Super Cup.

"So I think the season was really good. A victory of pragmatism, of humble people who respect opponents and try to stop their qualities and exploit their weaknesses."
