MAY'S HUGE MAGER FAILS

Gamble on early election backfires, as likely hung parliament leave's PM's future on a knife-edge

THE PRIME MINISTER'S huge gamble on calling a snap election to strengthen her hand ahead of Brexit negotiations went horribly wrong this week, as early returns suggested a hung parliament was on the way.

Theresa May had promised to convert a comfortable early lead in the polls into a rock-solid parliamentary majority for her party, but as Thursday night bled into Friday morning it had all gone horribly wrong for the Tories, with losses up and down the country and resurgent Labour support in both the inner cities and in Wales, casting huge doubt on May's ability to survive.

Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn was in no doubt that Thursday's results should force May's Speaking resignation. following his re-election as the MP for Islington North, the Labour leader said people had voted "for hope for the future".

Mr Corbyn, who won his seat with more than 40,000 votes, said at the election count: "The prime minister called this election because she wanted a mandate. Well the mandate she's got is lost Conservative seats, lost votes, lost support and lost confidence.

'strong and stable'

"I would have thought that's enough to go, actually, and make way for a government that will be truly representative of all of the people of this country."

At press time May had indicated that she expected her party to continue with a reduced overall majority or needing to forge a coalition to maintain a majority, and pledged to bring 'the leadership and stability' the country needed.

But elsewhere shocked Tory MPs were already briefing against her, pinning much of the blame not only on badly received the Conservative manifesto, but on the performance of May personally, after she made it a presidentialstyle contest by putting her "strong and stable" leadership at the centre.

Anger was also directed at May's close circle of aides, Nick Timothy and Fiona Hill, who ran a campaign excluding senior cabinet ministers and oversaw the writing of the manifesto.

The former chancellor George Osborne, who was sacked by May last year, was one of the first senior party figures to cont. on page 4, col. 1

17 arrested as probe into terror attack expands

■ Tributes flow to victims as it emerges attackers were known to security services

LONDON police have arrested 17 people in connection with the weekend terror attack which left eight people dead.

Police have named Youssef Zaghba, a 22-year-Moroccan-Italian old man who lived in east London, Khuram Butt, 27, from Barking, and Rachid Redouane, 30, who also lived in Barking, as the men who carried out the attack.

The three men drove pedestrians into on London Bridge before stabbing people in Borough Market.

Police have been praised for ending the attack within eight minutes of the first 999 call.

The Independent Police Complaints Commission has said 46 shots had been fired at the three attackers by eight police officers - five from the Met and three from the City of London force.

On Wednesday night, two men were arrested on a street in Ilford, the Metropolitan Police said. A 27-year-old man was held on suspicion of the preparation of terrorist acts, while a 33-year-old man was arrested on suspicion of possession with intent to supply controlled drugs.

A third man, aged 29, was arrested on suspicion of the preparation of terrorist acts at an address in Ilford.

The other two men arrested were held under the Terrorism Act earlier on Wednesday - a 30-yearold detained in Ilford and a 27-year-old in Barking.

Twelve people arrested after the day after attack have been released without charge.

NHS England said 29 patients remained in London hospitals, with 10 in a critical condition.

A British Transport Police officer who was seriously injured after confronting the three attackers armed only with a baton has said he did "everything I could" to fight them off.

The officer, who has not been named, has been praised for his bravery, and added: "I want to say sorry to the families that lost their loved ones. I'm so sorry I couldn't do more."

The family of French national Alexandre Pigeard, a waiter at Boro Bistro, in Borough Market, said he was stabbed to death while working on the restaurant's terrace.

"Alexandre was а marvellous son, a perfect older brother and a radiant young man," they said in a statement. "All his friends praised his kindness, his good humour and his generosity."

On Wednesday, police searching for French national Xavier Thomas, 45, said they had recovered a body from the Thames, bringing the death toll to eight.

Mr Thomas's next of kin have been told, police said, but formal identification has not yet taken place.

Meanwhile, the prime minister of Spain said Ignacio Echeverría, 39, who died defending a woman with his skateboard, should be given a posthumous award - the Silver Cross of the Order of Civil Merit. Mr Echeverría was from Madrid and was working for HSBC bank in London.

The others killed in the attack have been named as Sebastien Belanger, 36, from France, Australians Sara Zelenak and Kirsty Boden, Canadian national Chrissy Archibald, and James McMullan, from Hackney, London.

It earlier emerged that

Khuram Butt, Rachid Redouane and Youssef Zaghba have been named as the London Bridge

Khuram Butt was known known to police and MI5 in 2015, but the Metropolitan Police said there had been no evidence of a plot.

Butt had appeared in a Channel 4 documentary The Jihadis Next Door, broadcast last year. An Italian police source confirmed that Youssef Zaghba had been placed on a watch list, which is shared with many countries, including the UK

In March 2016, Italian officers stopped him at Bologna airport and found IS-related materials on his mobile phone. He was then stopped from continuing his journey to Istanbul.

But speaking house at her in Bologna, Zaghba's mother told the BBC she believed her son was radicalised in the UK.

Rachid Redouane claimed to be a Moroccan-Libyan. He married a British woman, 38-yearold Charisse O'Leary, in Dublin in 2012.

DUP seen as kingmakers as Tories face life without clear majority

Ulster group is resolutely pro-Union and pro-Brexit and are expected to drive a hard bargain for support

The Democratic Unionist party made major gains in Northern Ireland on Thursday, and with ten seats could hold the whip hand in ensuring a workable Conservative majority at Westminster.

The DUP are vehemently pro-Union pro-Brexit, and and may find themselves kingmakers provided Theresa May categorically rules out a second Scottish independence referendum and promises to follow through on withdrawal from the EU.

The SDLP and the UUP both had bad nights at the polls, but Sinn Fein's improved performance muddied the waters a little, with the party hinting it will lend its support to Jeremy Corbyn, a key long-term ally in parliament.

In the first sign that the general election would bring a surge in the DUP's fortunes, its Lagan Valley MP, Jeffrey Donaldson, was returned with 26,762 votes - up nearly 8,000 on his majority in the last election.

The DUP was on course through the early hours of Friday morning to make gains in South Belfast and South Antrim. Emma Little Pengelly looked likely to take the South Belfast seat from Alasdair McDonnell of the nationalist SDLP.

The overall Northern Ireland result would end up with the DUP holding 10 seats, two more than last time, and possibly having a major say in the formation of the next Westminster government. A revised the exit poll put Conservatives on 322, four short of a majority - which would make the DUP's support crucial.

'best deal possible'

Speaking after his victory, Donaldson said the DUP "could be very influential" at Westminster once all the votes were counted. "Even if the Tories get a small majority or there is a hung parliament, the DUP MPs this time around will have a big say in terms of national government," he said.

Donaldson stressed the DUP "would not be parochial but would

SNP lose more than 20 seats - but remain majority party north of the border

THE CONSERVATIVES were not the only party left licking their wounds after Thursday's election results.

It was also a very poor night for the SNP, as the party looked destined to lose at least 20 seats and saw their deputy leader, Angus Robertson, lose his seat to the Scottish Conservatives.

Douglas Ross of the Tories overturned а majority of 9,065 to defeat Mr Robertson by 4,200 votes in Moray.

The seat had been a key target for the Conservatives in Scotland, with the Tories desperate to defeat the SNP's Westminster leader.

The SNP's Tasmina Ahmed-Sheikh has also lost Ochil and South Perthshire to the Tories, who were third in 2015.

At press time the SNP were on 33 seats - a majority of the 59 Scottish constituencies - with the Conservatives winning 10 seats so far, and Labour winning seven. SNP's The Iohn Nicolson lost Dunbartonshire East to Jo Swinson of the Liberal Democrat, who have also won Edinburgh West and Caithness, Sutherland and Easter Ross.

Speaking as she arrived at the Glasgow count, First Minister Nicola Sturgeon said that the SNP had won the election in Scotland, with the party achieving its second best performance ever in a Westminster election.

on the result of the election and I will take time to do that. But it would be the wrong thing for me to do at this hour to take decisions before having had the opportunity to properly think about it.

"But properly think about it I will certainly do".

Scottish Conservative leader Ruth Davidson hailed a "historic" night for her party, which she said was largely due to opposition to the prospect of a second independence referendum.

make decisions that would be beneficial for the whole of the United Kingdom". On Brexit, he said the party would seek "the best deal possible" for both Northern Ireland and the UK as a whole.

With the rival Ulster Unionists possibly losing all their seats, Donaldson the outcome said could "bring the day of unionist unity even closer", which means a single party representing the pro-union position in Northern Ireland.

'Northern Ireland voice'

The DUP leader and former first minister Arlene Foster got a euphoric reception from her supporters inside the Titanic Centre in Belfast at about 2am on Friday.

Asked about backing the Tories in a postelection deal, Foster said: "We have always said that we would put forward the strongest possible team in any Brexit negotiations. Obviously we want devolution back up and running again as quickly as possible so we can have a discussion about getting a distinctive Northern Ireland voice. It's important we have that Northern Ireland voice in those Brexit negotiations."

resurgence after losing votes in the Stormont assembly election in March "underscored the fact that Northern Ireland remains British". Sinn Féin was the other the big winner, with the party poised to wrest the of losing all its seats at Westminster, including Ritchie Margaret in South Down, where Sinn Féin's Chris Hazard has mounted a very serious challenge.

Gerry Adams, the Sinn Féin president, ruled out any possibility that the party would reverse its traditional policy of boycotting Westminster. Adams said: "No. If we are fortunate enough to have candidates elected as MPs it will on the basis that we will not be going to take react to the result, saying if the exit poll were correct it would be "catastrophic" for the Tories and the prime minister personally. He also described Conservative the manifesto as "one of the worst manifestos in history" and expressed disappointment that the party was perceived as turning away from liberal metropolitan voters.

"It's difficult to see, if these numbers are right, how they would put together the coalition to remain in office," he said on ITV. "But equally, it's quite difficult to see how Labour could put together a coalition. It's on a real knife edge."

'biggest gamble'

He said there would be a "huge postmortem" about a manifesto drawn up by a very small circle of people in Downing Street and the overall style of the election campaign.

Osborne went on to suggest that Boris Johnson, the foreign secretary, would have "a little smile on his face right now" given the boost to his chances of taking over as Tory leader.

Sir Craig Oliver, the former director of communications at Downing Street for David Cameron, came to a similar verdict on Sky News.

"If this is true, if this is accurate, in CCHQ there will be deep and lasting shock," he said. "It was the biggest gamble a politician has taken for a long time and if that exit poll is right, it's failed."

In an ominous sign for May, Liam Fox, the international trade secretary, would not guarantee that the prime minister would not have to resign. "It's very early in the evening and we'll have to wait and see," he said.

The only pocket of hope for the Conservatives was Scotland, where the wing of the party led by Ruth Davidson ousted Angus Robertson, the SNP Westminster leader, in Moray and took another seat in Angus. Some Tories attributed this to Davidson's more liberal outlook and cheery demeanour in contrast to May's social conservatism and a campaign in which she was accused of being a "gloombucket" by the Daily Mail's sketchwriter.

On Thursday night, Conservatives senior were already discussing potential replacements, with reports that Johnson was tapping up MPs about his prospects. Betting companies immediately began running odds on potential candidates to replace the Conservative leader, with Johnson in the lead, followed by Philip Hammond, May's chancellor.

The foreign secretary, who was sidelined for much of the Tory campaign until the end, repeatedly dodged questions about whether he would like to lead the party and called on people to "contain themselves" until they had seen the final result.

One Conservative MP who held his safe seat said May would be "toast" if she had not managed to at least match David Cameron's record of 330 seats, with the possibility of a new leader installed if they were to attempt to run a minority government. Nick Clegg has lost his live by the sword, you die seat to the Labour Party by the sword." in Sheffield Hallam, Sir Vince, who was the Sir Vince, who was the business minister in the coalition government, won back his Twickenham seat from the Conservatives with a majority of 9,762.

Clegg loses seat on mixed night for Lib Dems

He had been the local MP since 1997, but lost the seat to Conservative Dr Tania Mathias in 2015, who took it with a majority of 2,017.

Ms Swinson, the former equality minister, won the seat in Dunbartonshire East from the SNP with a majority of 5,339.

She won the seat to represent her local area from Labour in 2005 when she was just 25, becoming the first MP to have been born in the 1980s.

However, she lost it in the 2015 election when the SNP won 56 of the 59 constituencies in Scotland.

Mr Clegg took the party into a coalition with the Conservatives in 2010 and became the deputy prime minister to David Cameron.

At the time, the Lib Dems held 57 seats, but after the next election five years later, the number was cut to eight.

Senior figures within the Lib Dems have ruled out a similar deal after Thursday's election, as the Conservatives have again come out as the largest party - but failed to secure a majority.

Sir Menzies Campbell said he would be "astonished" if the current leader, Tim Farron, joined with the Tories for a second coalition, or formed a "progressive alliance" with Labour.

The party's press office has tweeted that there will be "no coalition" and "no deals".

Sir Menzies told the BBC: "We know about coalitions and we know [how] getting influence is very, very difficult indeed.

"Our experience after the last coalition [is] the major party gets the credit for everything that is done and the junior party takes the blame for the things the people don't like."

He said that Theresa May had made her position on pursuing a hard Brexit clear, adding: "How could Tim Farron possibly ally himself with that? He [could not] take the party with him, nor any of the over 100,000 membership."

But Sir Menzies also criticised Jeremy Corbyn's approach to Brexit - saying it "frankly almost defies definition" - so he could not see any way Mr Farron could join with that party either.

Former Lib Dem leader Paddy Ashdown tweeted that Britain "is more polarised than ever in my life time", if the exit polls are right.

The Lib Dems focused their campaign on winning the votes of Remainers, pledging a second referendum on the Brexit deal negotiations and calling for the UK to remain in the single market.

Knives out for May as Tories scent blood

ALL THINGS CONSIDERED, it was a rather difficult night for the leader who relishes the description of 'a bloody difficult woman'. And as the election returns began to flood in during the wee small hours of Friday morning, there was an eerie silence from the Conservative party both about the future of the government and their leader.

But in the bars of Westminster the second guessing was rampant, with finger pointing galore over both the style and the substance of Theresa May's campaign.

During the last few weeks the prime minister toured many Labour-held target constituencies with the aim of winning over the opposition's pro-Brexit heartlands. But her proposed shake-up of social care, which meant people would have to pay for care in their homes out of the value of their property, went down extremely badly with voters, along with a proposal to abandon the triple lock on pensions and withdraw winter fuel payments from the wealthy.

More than one Tory MP complained bitterly about May's decision to publish a manifesto containing a raft of unpopular policies and a complete lack of sweeteners to appeal to the electorate. Then there were May's halting TV performances and her refusal to debate head to head with the Labour leader, Jeremy Corbyn.

As the BW went to press Labour and Lib Dem spokesman were gleefully sticking the boot in. A Labour source said: "If this goes like it seems, Theresa May's credibility is completely shot. As May said herself, if she lost just six seats in this election she would not be prime minister."

Emily Thornberry, the shadow foreign secretary, said May "should go, because I think she has manifestly failed", while deputy leader Tom Watson said May was a "damaged politician whose reputation may never recover".

But it was also a bad night for the Ukip, who lost support nationwide and now seem like a busted flush as a political force in the UK.

What happened to May's victory glide?

When Theresa May called a snap election seven weeks ago, she was quite reasonably banking on a Tory landslide, said George Parker in the FT. Simply by projecting an image of strength, the Prime Minister was confident she could romp home with a clear mandate for the coming Brexit talks.

How wrong she has proved to be. Instead of a procession to Downing Street, May has faced a "slog to reach the finishing line". Her popularity has slumped. Polls show that 38% of voters see her in a more negative light than they did at the start of the campaign-just 21% have of her. You can see why, said Andrew Rawnsley in The Observer. In the past few weeks, the PM has flip-flopped over the cost of social care and ducked a direct TV debate with Jeremy Corbyn. When put under pressure in interviews, she has appeared "rattled" and totally nothing so much as an ill-programmed automaton. Even some Tories now refer to her as the "Maybot".

She has also managed to alienate her own party members, said The Economist. A poll last week conducted by the Conservative Home website found a majority disenchanted with May's "Red Toryism" – her thinly veiled rejection of Thatcherism and of "untrammelled free markets". But it was the tone of the Tory campaign that was most offputting, said Matthew Parris in the Times. Why did it have to be so shrill? The silly slogans and the personal attacks on Corbyn have so irritated voters that they now say they "might actually send to Downing Street a man they've already told pollsters they don't think is up to the job".

Or maybe people just changed their minds about Corbyn, said Louis Staples in The Independent. I have. Before, he struck "unsure. me as an inconsistent" liability. But his performance on the stump suggests an altogether smarter politician. Instead of being "sucked into an endless battle of sound bites over Brexit", he played to his strengths, banging the drum for better public services and housing.

Corbyn's trump card was his promise to deliver better services without increasing most people's taxes, said John Curtice in The Daily Telegraph, whereas May confronted the electorate with problems it was going to have to face. That was a canny strategy for a man who'd been written off as one of the most unpopular leaders in polling history. Corbyn has also been able to project an image of "humour, modesty and sincerity", said Charles Moore in the same paper, a vital advantage in an age where "authenticity" is the quality voters now tend to look for in a politician, be it Donald Trump on the Right, or Greece's PM, Alexis Tsipras, on the Left. In the hard times since the credit crunch, voters are increasingly rejecting the established authorities in favour of new prophets. Only later do they discover that the prophets turn out to be false ones.

Trump renews feud with London mayor

President blasts Khan over attack response
 US mayors defend their London counterpart
 Khan had reviously called the president 'a buffoon'

US President Donald Trump has again lashed out at London Mayor Sadiq Khan over his assurances to Londoners following Saturday's terror attack.

He accused Mr Khan of offering a "pathetic excuse" for saying there was no reason for people to be alarmed.

Mr Khan had in fact said people should not be alarmed by an increased police presence.

After a vigil for the victims of the attack, Mr Khan said he would not allow Mr Trump to "divide our communities".

Seven people were killed and 48 others injured in the attack on Saturday.

Mr Trump took issue with Mr Khan's statement in the aftermath of the attack, when the mayor said:

"Londoners will see an increased police presence today and over the course of the next few days. No reason to be alarmed."

The US president responded: "At least 7 dead and 48 wounded in terror attack and Mayor of London says there is 'no reason to be alarmed!'"

He followed this up with another tweet on Monday, saying: "Pathetic excuse by London Mayor Sadiq Khan who had to think fast on his "no reason to be alarmed" statement. MSM [mainstream media] is working hard to sell it!"

The mayor's spokesman earlier made clear that he was telling Londoners not to be worried about the increased presence of armed police officers in the city.

Speaking to the BBC after the vigil, Mr Khan said: "We've got to recognise that some people want to divide our communities, some people thrive on fuelling division.

"That's not me, that's not the London I know, and we aren't going to allow anybody, whether it's Donald Trump or anybody else to divide our community."

His spokesperson earlier said he "has more important things to do than respond to Donald Trump's ill-informed tweet that deliberately takes out of context" the mayor's remarks.

Calls to withdraw invite Mr Trump's attacks on Mr Khan have drawn condemnation from both sides of the Atlantic.

His critics have accused him of being insensitive and twisting the mayor's words.

Politicians in the UK day

TRUMP AND KHAN: a spokesman for Khan said the Mayor 'has more important things to do than respond to Donald Trump's ill-informed tweet' on Monday called on the prime minister to withdraw the invitation for Mr Trump's state visit later this year.

The leader of the Liberal Democrats, Tim Farron, said: "This is a man insulting our national values at a time of introspection and mourning."

American support

Over the weekend, Prime Minister Theresa May refused to criticise Mr Trump, simply saying that Mr Khan was doing a "good job".

"Try to imagine the UK prime minister attacking the Mayor of NYC the day after 9/11," said European Parliament cabinet member Simon O'Connor.

New York Mayor Bill de Blasio was quick to defend Mr Khan, praising him for "doing exactly the right thing".

"I don't understand why Donald Trump is trying to undermine a man who's trying to protect the people of London. It makes no sense," Mr de Blasio said during a press conference in New York on Monday.

And the US Conference of Mayors, representing more than 1,400 American cities, backed Mr Khan.

"He has risen above this crisis of death and destruction, as mayors continue to do, to alleviate fear, to bring comfort to his people of London," the mayors wrote in a statement on Sunday.

Mr Khan, a Muslim, has previously criticised the president's plans to temporarily restrict travel to the US from six mainly Muslim countries.

After Mr Trump as a presidential candidate announced his plan, Mr Khan told the BBC he hoped he would "lose badly", adding that he was a "buffoon".

He also called Mr Trump's views on Islam "ignorant", leading the New York billionaire to challenge him to an IQ test.

Injury forces ailing Collins to postpone comeback shows

Phil Collins has had to postpone his sold-out comeback shows after being taken to hospital.

The singer, who has recently returned to playing live after a decadelong break, suffered from a fall in his hotel bathroom on Wednesday night and cut his head during the accident.

Collins' management told The Telegraph that the star missed his step due to the 'drop foot' induced by the emergency back surgery he underwent in 2015.

"Phil suffers from 'drop foot' as a result of a back operation which makes it difficult to walk," his representative said.

"He rose in the middle of the night to go to the toilet and slipped in his hotel room, hitting his head in the fall on a chair. "He was taken to hospital where he had stitches for a severe gash on his head close to his eye and is recovering well. He will be kept under observation for 24 hours."

Collins "sends his sincere apologies and thanks to fans", and has postponed the shows – his first in 10 years.

He started his run at the Royal Albert Hall on Sunday night, and was due to perform Thursday and Friday. These shows have been rearranged for November 26 and 27 this year.

The music world was taken aback in October when Collins announced he would be coming out of retirement after officially stepping down from showbusiness in 2002.

Collins has suffered a number of health problems since 2000, when he lost his hearing in his left ear. In 2007 he was left unable to play the drums while on tour with Genesis, due to a lifetime spent at the kit. He also spent several years as an alcoholic until 2012. In 2015, he underwent emergency surgery after waking up unable to move his foot.

But Collins appears to be on good terms with his condition, even naming his comeback tour, Phil Collins: Not Dead Yet, Live.

Collins is set to continue the European leg of his tour in Cologne at the weekend, and is set to play Hyde Park as part Barclaycard British of Summer Time festival on June 30.

Louis keeps the faith with star-maker Simon!

■ 1-D star signs 18 month deal with music Svengali

Louis Tomlinson has signed an 18-month record contract with music mogul Simon Cowell, making him the ONLY One Direction star to remain loyal to the X Factor judge who found them fame in 2010.

Oo-er!

'I'm very happy to have signed. I'm excited to be continuing my relationship with Syco, and also working with the brilliant team at RCA in the US,' said Tomlinson.

The singer released debut solo his Just Hold single, On, a collaboration with Steve Aoki, in December and launched the song on The X Factor with the help of Simon.

'I've been working really hard in the studio and can't wait to show you what I've been writing.'

Speaking to The Sun, the 25-year-old added: 'As always, I'd like to thank the fans for their unbelievable support.'

His One Direction bandmates – Harry Styles, Niall Horan, and Liam Payne all decided to sign contracts with other labels, with Payne to Capitol Records, Horan to Universal, Styles with Columbia, and ex-bandmate Zayn Malik signing to RCA Records.

THAT'S MY BOY: Louis and Simon

Cowell had previously admitted he was expecting a phone call from the boys for help with their careers post-One Direction – only it never came.

'I hear so many things now, which they're doing, which I'm not involved with. It's a bit like I'm getting the hint you don't want me to come to the party.

Sorry for making you famous,' he said.

A label insider also added that it was 'no secret Simon was upset when the other guys went to different labels but he has always been closest to Louis'.

'They have worked together very closely in the past 18 months on various projects, so staying loyal was a nobrainer for him,' my source added.

VB in PJs in NYC: the bees-knees?

Victoria Beckham looked more ready for bed than ready to wear when she stepped out in a pajama-style outfit in New York this week.

The fashion designer, who is known for her love of oversized outfits despite his slim frame, cut a cool figure as she strolled through the Big Apple on Wednesday wearing a loose-fitting sky blue pyjama set from her SS18 resort collection.

The two-piece looked remarkably like what many mere mortals sleep in on a nightly basis, but Victoria elevated the look with a pair of nude heels and square designer sunglasses.

With a hand in one pocket as she strode out of her hotel, the 43-year-old looked cool, calm and collected as she set off for another busy day in the fashion state.

Victoria is currently in the city to showcase her Spring/Summer 2018 collection, and

BED BATH AND BEYOND? Victoria Beckham in another head turning outfit this week in the Big Apple shared her excitement with fans on social media.

She wrote on Twitter: "Excited to be in New York to preview my ready-towear collection! x VB".

Victoria has certainly put on a colourful display while in the city, having stepped out in a tangerine outfit earlier in the day.

Ten ways to live, doggie-style!

Health & Fitness with Ricky Parcell

At The Body Camp Ibiza (www. in thebodycamp.com), all guests get the honor of living with our infamous dog "Rebel" for seven healthy and mindful days - he is our mascot, leader and reminder how to live life to the full! He is a daily reminder to everyone at the villa that behaving like dog is one of the best ways we can live our life.

Here are my top ten ways to be more like a dog...

1. Be honest about your feelings

How a dog feels is never in question....when a dog is unhappy it shows they withdraw and make sad noises! When a dog is happy, they wag their tail like crazy and are full of energy.

2. Live in the present moment

Dogs don't worry about the past or future...they realize the present is the real, true gift for all of us to enjoy!

3. Be able to go from zero to excited - very quickly!

Just telling them they are leaving the house can get them excited - imagine being able to get into this mental state of happy, so quickly without alcohol, food or drugs!

4. Communicate if unhappy and don't hold grudges (Good boundaries)

When feeling threatened by another dog or person, they bark straight away and don't hold back. Afterwards you don't see the dog act like they have grudge against the thing that upset them. Imagine being able to let arguments go and not carry them around with you in the mind all day.

5. Don't feel guilt about chilling or relaxing

Dogs do not need an invitation to relax....they do this anywhere and never seem regret it! Why do we feel guilt if we do rest sometimes?

6. Accept circumstances and don't try to change things

Whatever the situation a dog finds itself in....cafe, park, car etc. it does not grumble and complain. A dog just accepts and enjoys the moment wherever they are.

7. Don't worry about death and fear very little!

Dogs don't seem to be aware of the concept of dying and seem to fear very little (including moving transport) Perhaps if we all had this within us, we would find life less stressful?

8. Just have fun!

Dogs need no excuse to have fun - they simply find an object to play with and just do it.

9. Don't drink or use food / other substances to forget or suppress emotions to feel good. You don't see many dogs drowning their sorrows at the bar or eating fast foods to feel good. They seem to eat when they are hungry or food is given to them. If they have an emotion, they display it clearly and get it out they don't look for the nearest alcoholic drink to numb any pain.

10. No judgement whatever you do to dogs, they are the same.

Dogs constantly offer unconditional love and if you accidentally harm them (for example step on them), they don't judge you for it. They continue to love you - even though they may be in pain.

Dogs are a constant reminder that we make the human experience sometimes far too serious and complicated. Have a think about your daily behavior ....when was the last time you walked up to tree or lamp post, cocked a leg up and looked the other way?!

Meet A Member: Sebastian Sacco

Meet Sebastian Sacco from Sussex who moved to LA last week(!) to pursue acting.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA? I just found LA had so many more open doors for me. It has also always been my dream to come America and work in here.

What do you miss most from home?

Sarcasm and decent public transport. Why did I ever complain about the tubes!...

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? I first came out two and half years ago. I instantly fell in love and knew I had to get back here.

Now reality has come in and my eyes are way more open but I'm still very happy to be here and know I've done the right thing. What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus your home town?

Well the weather is obviously the first thing. There something very exciting about LA. Walking around London you might occasionally spot something from TV or film but here it's everywhere. Bit like being in New York. You kinda feel like you're in a giant film set.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us? Go to Swingers Cafe, (locations on Beverly Boulevard and on Broadway in Santa Monica) order the vegan burrito. Repeat 2-3 a week for the rest of your life.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

Do your research and speak to as many people who live or lived here as vou can. It's such a huge jump. One I'm trying to get my head around. There seem to be many more pitfalls here than in England.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given? Get the vegan burrito! No jokes. I'm only in my first week, so don't know how true this is but I got told that it takes two years to get anywhere in this town. So only 103 weeks to go.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment? My twitter and Instagram are @SebSacco or find me on lacasting.com/ sebastiansacco.

ARIES: Your boss Mars is visiting the water sign of Cancer, which can make your life somewhat subdued for a while. Bear in mind: nothing lasts forever. Use this down time to relax and enjoy life. This weekend will be busy

TAURUS : You need to look long and hard this week ahead at where you are heading. If it is the right direction with some creative project you will likely find you need to make a detour. Only you can figure this out.

GEMINI: With Saturn in your opposing sign it's very possible you are engaged in a financial discussion of any kind. Keep your mind focused on the expected outcome and do not back away from your goal. Happy Birthday.

CANCER: It is a month of makeovers - either for you or your home or (if you can afford it) both. Either way get moving as it's the right time. Mars the fire planet will move you through the old and bring the new.

LEO: As this month begins you could find yourself stretched beyond your limits in a couple of areas of life; one is work (or the lack of it) and following on is cash flow. It's going to get easier before next week.

VIR GO: Any task you take on will be easier to deal with and will likely last until the end of this month. Be on the safe side and make it a priority to complete anything outstanding because new ideas and opportunities will come up next month.

LIB RA: Travel is much on your mind and this can make you stressed or feel limited. The clue is to make an effort to keep busy or to take short trips to visit interesting places. Jupiter visiting you currently is backing you, so you can easily afford to branch out.

SCORPIO: Pressure may have got you down and feeling blue recently. However, now your boss Mars is visiting your cousin Cancer the pressure is already lifting. Jupiter going direct these past few days will open the doors for the best days of the year so far.

SAGITTARIUS: You can complete the first part of the year in whatever way you having been trying to do now that Jupiter your boss is in a positive light for you. However, do not take any short cuts financially (or otherwise) as you are still dealing with Saturn.

CAPRICORN: It is time to tell the truth, either for you or someone you know who is not. Mars in the opposing sign of Cancer will also stir up your emotions somewhat. Do not let them get to you, especially this weekend on a full moon.

AQUARIUS: Social groups and gatherings will be the much on your agenda these next few days or so. You will benefit much from other people's input, so be open to what your gut feelings tell you....it will be much to your advantage.

PISCES: This month you have the powerful Mars in your cousin sign Cancer assisting you to move onwards and upwards. Keep your vibe low-key and cool, this will help to keep you from overwhelming yourself and impeding your progress.

Not for The Birds: an engrossing new du Maurier biography

Exclusive interview with author Tatiana de Rosnay discussing her new biography of novelist Daphne du Maurier

"Daphne du Maurier's life reads like a novel," says Manderley Forever author Tatiana de Rosnay.

"I went to Cornwall, where she lived and I met her family. I had never been to Cornwall and was blown over by it. I was able to understand why she was so passionate about it and why she was so inspired by it. Cornwall appears in nearly all her novels."

English author and playwright Daphne du Maurier wrote moody stories of romance in the paranormal. Her short story The Birds was the basis of the Alfred Hitchcock romance/ horror film about a community attacked by flocks of birds.

London, Born in Daphne du Maurier was the granddaughter of author and Punch cartoonist George du Maurier, who created the character of Svengali in the novel Trilby. Her parents were actormanager Sir Gerald du Maurier and actress Muriel Beaumont. Daphne du Maurier was one of five women recognized in a set of British Women of Achievement stamps issued in 1996.

Du Maurier's most successful novel Rebecca, became an immediate hit upon publication in 1938, selling over three million copies. The book has never gone out of print. It's been adapted for stage and screen many times...including as a 1940 film directed by Alfred Hitchcock, a 1979 miniseries directed by Simon Langton, a 1997 miniseries directed by Jim O'Brien, and even a 1952 Filipino film starring Tessie Agana and Van De Leon.

Hitchcocks' Alfred The Birds, while loosely based on the 1952 story by Daphne du Maurier, was also inspired by reallife bird attacks in 1961. Residents of Capitola, California, experienced seabirds slamming into their houses, possibly due to shellfish poisoning. Hitchcock's film presents a series of sudden, unexplained violent bird attacks on people. The film stars Rod Taylor and Tippi Hedren, with Jessica Tandy, Suzanne Pleshette and Veronica Cartwright.

As a child de Rosnay read and reread Rebecca. Rosnay explores her idol's life from the age of seven, through her teens, marriage and old age. This book is a celebration of the life of Du Maurier, who passed away in 1989.

"Writing books is an adventure that is different each time," says de Rosnay. "This book enabled me to meet the family of my favorite writer. It has been a wonderful experience, an unforgettable one. She is my favorite writer since I was ten years old. I started writing because of her. A publisher named Gerard de Cortanze noticed that I always mentioned Daphné du Maurier during my interviews. He suggested that I write her biography."

For her research, de Rosnay read all of Maurier's books and all the biographies written about her and her family. "I spoke to her children and grandchildren and to people who knew her. I read articles in the French and British press. I found them in bookstores, online, in libraries and in archives. I was helped by people who know her work well."

Since 1992, de Rosnay has published fifteen books. She writes in English and French. She's won awards for Sarah's Key and The House I loved. Four of her books have become movies. In the U.S., the most famous one is Sarah's Key with Kristin Scott-Thomas.

Tatiana de Rosnay was born in Neuilly, near Paris, and is now based

Costa: Chelsea don't want me

■ "My relationship with the coach has been bad this season"

Chelsea striker Diego Costa says he has been told by manager Antonio Conte that he is no longer in the club's plans.

The 28-year-old scored 20 goals in 35 Premier League games to help the Blues win the title but now appears set to leave Stamford Bridge.

"I'm a Chelsea player, but they do not want me there," Costa said.

"Antonio Conte has told me by message that I do not follow at Chelsea and that's it. Conte said he did not count on me for next season."

Speaking after Spain's 2-2 draw with Colombia on Wednesday, Costa added: "My relationship with the coach has been bad this season. It's a shame, I've already forwarded the message to Chelsea people to decide.

"You have to find a team."

Brazil-born international Spain Costa joined Chelsea from Atletico Madrid for a reported £32m in 2014.

He spent four seasons at Atleti and suggested he might be open to a return, despite the La Liga club being banned from signing players until the January transfer window.

"Being five months without playing? I do not know, it's complicated, but people know that I love Atletico a lot and that I love to live in Madrid," Costa said.

"It would be nice to go back, but it's difficult to be four or five months without playing. It's a World Cup year and there are many things to think about. I need to play, just that."

In January, Costa was left out of the Chelsea side for an away match at Leicester after he was involved in a dispute with a fitness coach.

It followed reports of an offer from China that would have been worth £30m a year in salary. At the time, Chelsea said they had no intention of selling him.

Later in January, Tianjin Quanjian's owner said a bid to sign Costa had been scuppered by new rules over foreign players in the Chinese Super League.

From next season, Chinese clubs will only be able to field three foreign players per game, instead of four as previously allowed.

vision for how he might fit into his team, as well details of a prospective £180,000-a-week salary. It was also alleged on Wednesday that Van Dijk was flown for a meeting in Blackpool with Klopp and received regular messages from the manager, though Liverpool declined to comment on Wednesday night.

Premier League rules state that no club official or intermediary can make a direct or indirect approach to a player unless he is either out of contract or they have written consent from the selling club.

Liverpool initially made no public comment but, after being asked for their observations by the Premier League and then a day of discussions with Southampton, issued an extraordinary statement.

"Liverpool Football Club would like to put on record our regret over recent media speculation regarding Southampton Football Club and player transfers between the two clubs," said the statement.

"We apologise to the owner, board of directors and fans of Southampton for any misunderstanding regarding Virgil van We Dijk. respect Southampton's position and can confirm we have ended any interest in the player."

well the As as continuing threat of Premier League action and the embarrassment this has caused, Wednesday's developments have also dealt Liverpool a huge blow in their transfer planning. Van Dijk was regarded apparently as central to the squad that surgery Klopp envisaged ahead of a season when he will face the demands of both Champions League as and Premier League football.

Sources at Southampton suggest that even a fee of £50 million or £60 million as insufficient for a player who only signed a new contract last summer until 2022. Club sources also say the attitude of the three-man board chairman Ralph Krueger, and directors Les Reed and Martin Semmens – is that Van Dijk will not be sold.

Southampton have sold key players regularly over the past three years but are in negotiations over major investment from China and adamant they can simply say 'no' to all offers. They are also currently looking to Germany as they weigh up potential managerial successors to Claude Puel, with Roger Schmidt and Thomas Tuchel both on their shortlist of candidates.

Puel is on holiday and remains likely to be sacked but a definitive decision will not be made until alternatives have been assessed.

Schmidt, 50, is a leading candidate after leaving Bayer Leverkusen in March and, while also of strong interest to Ajax, is already well known to Southampton. He is admired for his development of players and was previously a factor in the decision to sign Sadio Mané from Red Bull Salzburg in 2014 because he favours the high-pressing, passing game that Southampton regard as their identity.

Liverpool are also in talks with Sporting Lisbon over a deal for forward Gelson Martins as they fear being priced out of a move for Roma's Mohamed Salah.

Reports in Portugal claim Martins, 22, is the Reds' latest target as talks over Salah stalled after Liverpool's opening offer of £28m was rejected.

Roma are believed to want even more than the £40m touted as the original price tag for the 24-year-old Egypt international - leaving Liverpool to consider moving on alternative targets unless the Italian side compromise.

Liverpool are understood to have now made contact with Sporting for Portugal international Martins, who has a release clause of about £50m.

But this is likely to be negotiable as Sporting have not automatically qualified for the Champions League group stage.

Shakespeare confirmed as Foxes boss

Leicester City have named caretaker boss Craig Shakespeare as their permanent manager on a three-year deal.

53-year-old The was given the job on a temporary basis in February, following the sacking of Claudio Ranieri.

Shakespeare, who has only worked as caretaker or number two, was Ranieri's assistant after joining the club under former Foxes boss Nigel Pearson.

"This is a really exciting opportunity for me to continue along this new path in my career," said Shakespeare.

"Our preparations for pre-season and the new Premier League campaign have been ongoing for some time, but we can now move on with certainty and ensure we are well equipped to compete at the levels now expected of a club like Leicester City."

Shakespeare won eight of his 16 games in charge last season, leading the club to the Champions League quarter-finals.

As reigning Premier League champions, Leicester were one point above the relegation zone with 13 matches left when Ranieri departed.

But Shakespeare 23 points, collected including wins in all his first five games, to guide the club to 14th place.

Reds find Van Dijk picture not so pretty...

Liverpool have apologized to Southampton and have formally ended their pursuit of Virgil van Dijk, following a complaint by the Saints to the Premier League.

The south coast club demanded have an investigation into whether the Reds made an illegal approach for their captain and that request has not been dropped even after Liverpool's contrite statement. The Premier League will now speak to both clubs before deciding whether disciplinary action should follow.

There is a suggestion the Premier League might not investigate if both clubs are willing to put the matter behind them, although that would leave it open to accusations of turning a blind eye to potentially significant rule-breaking.

It is understood that Southampton have evidence to back their complaint and, following discussions on Wednesday between the two clubs, Liverpool opted for what amounted to a path of damage limitation. Liverpool were sanctioned earlier this year by the Premier League for 'tapping up' a schoolboy player and offering him and his family inducements. In that instance, they were fined £100,000 and banned from signing academy players for at least a year.

England reach U-20 World Cup Final

England reached the final of the Under-20 World Cup for the first time by coming from behind to beat Italy on Thursday.

Paul Simpson's side dominated the second half with new Liverpool striker Dominic Solanke scoring twice through a calm equaliser and a long-range strike.

Everton's Ademola Lookman netted the second, tucking home a finish from six yards out on 77 minutes.

England will play Venezuela, who beat

Uruguay, in Sunday's final in South Korea (kick-off 11:00 BST). Italy had taken the lead within the first two minutes when Juventus winger Riccardo Orsolini slotted home from inside the area.

But England created chance after chance in the second half to become the nation's first men's team to reach any World Cup final since the senior side in 1966.

England finished top of their group, which included a thumping 3-0 win over six-time Manager Simpson had told BBC Sport before the match that reaching the final would be "massive" and their approach and style of play is "changing everyone's perception of English football".

champions Argentina.

The scoreline could have been even more emphatic but Solanke flicked a header wide and forced Italy goalkeeper Andrea Zaccagno into a fine save, while Shinji Ojo struck the outside of the post with a curled effort.
