London fire: death toll rises to 17 but 'no more survivors'

■ Casualty numbers expected to rise significantly as rescuers comb through upper floors

At least 17 people died in a massive fire that engulfed a west London block of flats, police said, as they warned that figure could rise further.

Earlier, the fire service said rescuers did not expect to find any more survivors in the smouldering ruins of Grenfell Tower, in north Kensington.

Sniffer dogs are to be sent in to search evidence identification of people still inside.

The Queen has said her "thoughts and prayers" are with families.

People have seeking desperately news of missing family and friends.

More than 30 people remain in hospital - 17 of whom are in a critical condition

early hours

Firefighters called to the 24-storey residential tower hours the early of Wednesday, at a time when hundreds people were inside, most of them sleeping.

Many were woken by neighbours, or shouts from below, and fled the building. Fire crews rescued 65 adults and children, but some stayed in their homes, trapped by smoke and flames.

On Thursday morning, London Fire Commissioner Dany Cotton said her crews had identified a "number of people, but we know there will be more".

The size of the building means it could take weeks, she added.

Asked how many were still missing, Met Police Commander Stuart Cundy said it would be "wrong and incredibly distressing" to give a number.

temporary structures

"I know one person was reported 46 times to the casualty bureau," he said.

A brief search of all floors in the tower had been carried out, but the severity of the fire and amount of debris meant a thorough search would be "difficult and painstaking", Commander Cotton said.

Temporary structures will be built inside the block in order to shore it up before more thorough work can begin.

The cause of the fire, which took more than 24 hours to bring under control, remains unknown.

Throughout the morning, only smoke was seen coming from the charred building, but by Thursday lunchtime flames flared up again on one of the lower floors.

Dozens of people left homeless spent the night in makeshift rescue centres, as wellwishers signed a wall of condolence near the site.

London-born singer Adele and her husband visited the scene on Wednesday evening, and was seen comforting people. Singer Rita Ora also pitched in, helping to sort donations outside the tower.

Photographs messages in English and Arabic have been left for loved ones.

Alongside them are words of anger and calls for justice, with people saying their safety concerns were not listened to.

The local authority Kensington and Chelsea council -44 households had been placed in emergency accommodation so far.

Through the night, people donated food, clothes and blankets for those left without homes.

early morning some volunteers said they were overwhelmed with donations and were turning people and vans away.

'less rigorous'

volunteer, Bhupinder Singh, said: "It is times like this that the best of our community comes out. This is where you find out how good it is to be a Londoner.'

Questions have been raised about why the fire appeared to spread so quickly and engulf the entire building.

One report claimed the type of cladding on the outside of Grenfell Tower, installed in 2015 during a refurbishment, had a polyethylene - or plastic - core, instead of a more fireproof alternative with a mineral core.

cladding Similar was used in high-rise buildings hit by fires in France, the UAE and Australia, the report claimed.

The government has said checks were now planned on tower blocks that have gone through a similar upgrade.

Construction Rydon, which carried out the refurbishment, initially said in a statement that the work met "all fire regulations" the wording was omitted in a later statement.

Fire risk assessment in tower blocks was "less rigorous" since responsibility for it shifted from the fire brigade to the Berry, Sian owner, housing committee the chairwoman of London Assembly, said.

A man ran forward and managed to catch the baby, she said.

Lamrani Ms told the Press Association: "People were starting to appear at the windows, frantically banging and

GIVING NOTHING AWAY: the DUP's Arlene Foster and Nigel Dodds arrive for talks at No. 10

May struggles to make deal with DUP

WITH A week already passed since the General Election, the future of nation's government remained uncertain as the Conservatives struggled to make a deal with the Democratic Unionist Party to secure the majority they need to rule.

Talks were ongoing in midweek between Tory leader Theresa May and DUP boss Arlene Foster, without whose support May cannot form a government.

Sources at Westminster claimed a deal was being held up by Foster's 'extreme' terms in exchange for her party's support, but on Thursday May appeared to call Foster's bluff by announcing the Queen's Speech, which cannot be given until a deal is done - was scheduled for next Wednesday.

A separate senior Tory source claimed talks with the Northern Irish party "have been progressing well" and they expect their 10 MPs to help prop up the Prime Minister's ailing government.

To add to the confusion, Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams claimed the Tory-DUP talks were a violation of the Good Friday Agreement which guarantees peace in Northern Ireland.

Speaking in Downing Street, he said: "We have just finished a meeting with the British prime minister and her secretary of state and we told her very directly that she was in breach of the Good Friday Agreement."

The agreement states that the British Government must remain neutral in all talks on the future of Northern Ireland.

A statement from Andrea Leadsom, the Leader of the House of Commons, confirmed the new date for the Queen's Speech in a statement on Thursday.

Originally scheduled for Monday, June 19, the instability created by last week's election result meant it had to be postponed after the Prime Minister lost her overall majority.

The Tories have been trying to get an agreement for the 10 DUP MPs to vote with them and allow their legislative programme for the coming year to be passed.

Talks are on-going and the fact a date for the Queen's Speech

'She was saying 'come and get me': father's desperate search for his missing 12-year-old Jessica Urbano

IN ONE OF the most harrowing tales of the dreadful Grenfell Tower fire this week, the father of 12-year-old Jessica Urbano, has told about how his daughter pleaded with him to come abd rescue her before her phone went dead.

The young girl had been alone in their flat sleeping while her mother and and sister were at work and her father visited a friend in the same tower block.

Ramiro Urbano, last spoke to Jessica as she attempted to make her way out of the building from their 20th floor flat, as the fire engulfed the building.

Mr Urbano, who had been in flat on the 3rd floor, told ITV News: "She phoned us at 1.20am and she was already two floors down.

"She was saying 'come and get me' but we couldn't get in there."

'terrible tragedy'

"I went straight to go upstairs, firefighters were already in there and they wouldn't allow me to go up. I told them 20th floor, 20th floor, my daughter."

Mr Urbano said while he was talking to Jessica "the phone cut off" and he hasn't heard from her since.

The family have been searching everywhere including hospitals for news.

"We've seen people who live on the top floor and they only realised the fire at 2.30 and they

Election 2017

Austerity is over, May tells Tories

■ Apologetic PM admits: I got us into this mess, I'll get us out

Theresa May is poised to bring to a close seven years of austerity after Tory MPs warned that they would refuse to vote for further cuts.

The prime minister spent Monday night apologizing to her cabinet and backbenchers, saying that she took full responsibility for losing the party's Commons majority and running a poor campaign. "I'm the person who got us into this mess and I'm the one who will get us out of it," she told a meeting of the 1922 Committee

Sources said that she accepted that voters' patience with austerity was at an end after Boris Johnson, David Davis and a series of Tory MPs told her that she had misjudged the public mood.

The ongoing negotiations with the Democratic Unionist Party are expected to force Mrs May to ditch or change campaign pledges and senior Tories said that cuts to school budgets must now be scrapped. She must also find billions for social care without raiding pensioner benefits.

black hole

When it comes to matching Labour's spending promises, Mrs May's room for manoeuvre is limited. Philip Hammond, the chancellor, had already softened the Tories' deficit reduction programme by pushing back the deadline for balancing the budget to 2025. It was also revealed this week that he faces a £7.5 billion black hole in his existing plans because finance measures postponed until after the election may not clear a hung parliament.

Restrictions on corporation tax relief, estimated to bring in £4 billion over four years, the "making tax digital" programme to save £2.2 billion and scrapping permanent non-domicile status to bring in £1.4 billion will need to be passed to make his figures add up.

'national interest'

Gavin Barwell, Mrs May's new chief of staff, told reporters that austerity had repelled voters as he explained the loss of his Croydon Central seat. "There's a conversation I particularly remember with a teacher who had voted for me in 2010 and 2015 and said: 'I understand the need for a pay freeze for a few years

MAY: Labour's spending promises have left her with limited room to manoeuvre to deal with the deficit but you're now asking for that to go on potentially for ten or 11 years and that's too much.' That is something that Jeremy Corbyn was able to tap into," he said.

Ruth Davidson, leader of the Scottish Conservatives, piled on pressure for a change of approach, including on Brexit, after a private meeting with Mrs May. "This election taught us that the country wants us to be in government but they don't want us to have a majority," she said. "That means we have to work with others on some of the big issues of the day and that to me includes Brexit."

Michael Gove, who has returned to the cabinet as environment secretary, said the government must seek the "maximum possible consensus".

Asked about reports that senior Tories were holding talks with Labour to secure cross-party support for a softer Brexit, Mr Gove said it was "news to me" but added: "I talk to politicians from every party in order to make sure that we get the right approach . . . that's what governing in the national interest is all about."

A source close to Mr Corbyn told the Press Association: "It's not us and we don't use the terms soft or hard Brexit."

Senior party figures believe that Conservatives' reliance on the DUP will make the kind of Brexit envisaged by Mrs May less likely. The DUP is concerned that if Britain leaves the customs union, its core rural constituency could suffer economic damage. It is opposed to any deal Northern Ireland that could make a united Ireland more likely.

I could be in No.10 by Christmas, claims Corbyn

■ Labour leader in confident mood following his party's surprise election gains

A buoyant Jeremy Corbyn has insisted that he could be prime minister by Christmas.

Just days after Labour's astonishing General Election surge, the hard-Left leader said he was expecting another national poll within months and insisted his party could win.

Speaking on the BBC's flagship Sunday morning program The Andrew Marr Show, Corbyn promised to support the push to leave the EU, but signalled that Labour will seek to wreck the Government programme due to be set out in the Queen's Speech.

And after defying forecasts from many of his own MPs that he was leading Labour to electoral oblivion, Mr Corbyn declared that he was staying put in his job for the long term.

"Look at me – I've got youth on my side," the 68-year-old joked. Mr Corbyn was still grinning about Labour's 9.5 per cent vote increase that gave his party an extra 30 MPs when he gave his first major broadcast interview since polling day.

When told by Marr that he looked "chipper", the Labour leader said: "It's a nice Sunday morning. And what better place to spend it than with you."

Mr Corbyn used the interview to claim his resurgent party, boosted by the support of millions of younger voters, was ready to seize power.

Speaking as a new Survation poll gave Labour a five-point lead over the Tories, with Mr Corbyn's party on 45 per cent and the Tories on 39 per cent, he said: "I think it's quite possible, quite possible there will be an election later this year or early next year and that might be a good thing because we cannot go on with a period of great instability.

"We have a programme,

"I think it's quite possible, quite possible there will be an election later this year or early next year - JEREMY CORBYN we have the support and we're ready to fight another election campaign as soon as maybe because we want to be able to serve the people of this country on the agenda we put forward which is transformative and has gained amazing levels of support."

Turning to policy, Mr Corbyn vowed to oppose the Queen's Speech in an attempt to bring down Theresa May's administration.

"We're going to put down a substantial amendment to the Queen's Speech which will contain within it the main points of our manifesto, and so we'll invite the House to consider all the issues we put forward which I've mentioned – jobsfirst Brexit, mention the issues of young people and austerity – there's many other things," he said.

In a separate newspaper interview, Mr Corbyn claimed that his party was now united and ready to put the two years' of civil war over his leadership in the past.

was announced made it seem likely an agreement is close to being finalized.

But a source in the Conservatives confirmed said no official partnership had been signed.

They said however they were "confident there'll be sufficient support across the House for the Queen's Speech", putting pressure on the DUP to vote with them next week or risk allowing Jeremy Corbyn to try and form his own Government.

One potential upside of the alteration date for the Government is that it will no longer clash with the date when Brexit negotiations were due to begin in Brussels.

It is not yet clear whether the EU withdrawal talks will go ahead on June 19 though, after Brexit Secretary David Davis said they will start "next week".

Borough Market reopens after terror attack

■ Iconic London center of commerce dates back more than 1,000 years

Borough Market has reopened for business after it was forced to close following the London Bridge terror attack.

Traders held a minute's silence to remember the victims before the market bell was rung at 10:00 BST on Wednesday.

The historic market has been closed since the attack on 3 June while police carried out forensic investigations.

Donald Hyslop, chair of trustees, said earlier "today we begin to reclaim and remake this place".

He added: "We give this place back to you with love, and we only ask you two very small favours.

"Firstly, a call that echoes through a thousand years of history: spend a little money with us if you can.

"And secondly, come here today, come here at the weekend, come here when you can, it's your market.

"London is open. Borough Market is open."

Hundreds of people, including London Mayor Sadiq Khan, gathered to mark the occasion after days of intensive cleaning and clearing by the community to return the site to its former glory.

Mr Hyslop said markets bring people together and for thousands of years a market has stood in the area, surviving fire, flood, plague and war.

artisan foods

Staff at one restaurant in the market said they had "emerged from a tough time as a stronger family".

Workers in the El Pastor were hailed as heroes for throwing objects at the terrorists as they burst in during the attack.

In a post on the restaurant's Instagram page, they said "the kindness and bravery shown by individuals and groups on the the night of 3rd June and afterwards has been awe-inspiring."

The reopening of the market comes as inquests into the deaths of the eight victims were held at Southwark Coroner's Court.

Borough Market, positioned at the south end of London Bridge, has existed in one form or another for about 1,000 years, making it one of the oldest markets in London.

Originally a wholesale market, it now centres around artisan foods.

It is one of the largest food markets in the country, with more than 100 stalls selling gourmet goods from both Britain and abroad. As well as selling food to take away, there are more than 30 bars, cafes and restaurants.

It is a tourist attraction in its own right, attracting about five million visitors a year.

The market and its surrounding streets have been used as film locations for such features as Bridget Jones's Diary, Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels and Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban.

It is often depicted in films, news and documentaries showing the throng of commuters journeying to work into the City from London Bridge Station.

Former Top Gear host apologizes to wife after latest prang

■ Richard Hammond was filming new episode of The Grand Tour when he crashed £2m electric supercar

FORMER Top Gear host Richard Hammond has apologized to his wife after crashing a supercar while filming his Amazon series The Grand Tour in Switzerland.

The presenter injured his knee after the car veered off the road and down a grass verge. The host was taking part in a hill climb race on Saturday when the vehicle, a £2 million electric supercar, spun off the road, crashing down a hill.

Speaking from his hospital bed, the former BBC presenter published a video on drivetribe.com, a leading digital platform for car enthusiasts, where his leg is propped up and supported by a brace.

In the video, entitled "I'm not dead", he thanks medical staff for treating him and apologizes to his wife Mindy and daughters Izzy and Willow.

serious head injuries

A tweet sent by a friend on Sunday morning confirmed that he had suffered a broken leg and needed surgery.

The statement said he was "flown by air ambulance to hospital in St Gallen to be checked over revealing a fracture in his knee.

"Nobody else was in the car or involved in the incident, and we'd like to thank the paramedics on site for their quick response."

The 47-year-old presenter was in a coma for two weeks and suffered serious head injuries after a jet-powered car he was driving for Top Gear crashed in 2006.

He was also injured in a motorbike crash while filming in Mozambique earlier this year.

The second series of the Amazon Prime show was due to be broadcast in October this year. Fans speculated online that the crash might mean this could be delayed.

HAMMOND: the presenter joked he was getting 'a Swiss Army knee'

Series co-host Jeremy Clarkson said he "genuinely thought" Richard Hammond was dead after the crash.

Clarkson told of the "coldness" he felt when he realised the crash had happened, adding that his knees turned to "jelly".

He said Hammond was referred to as a "body" following the incident and that he did not want to see him, "not after a crash that big".

Writing on Drive Tribe,

Clarkson said: "I don't know what went wrong. Hopefully, when he comes out of surgery and is feeling up to it, he will be able to tell us.

"What I do know is that I genuinely thought he was dead." Page 6 The British Weekly, Sat. June 17, 2017

Meet A Member: Kerry David

Meet Kerry David from East Haddon, Northamptonshire who moved to LA in 1988 to pursue filmmaking.

How did you wind up in LA?

I originally left my home in England for what was supposed to be a two-week backpacking trip around France, but got the travel bug and ending up spending several years roaming throughout Europe, New Zealand, and Australia. I only came to the US to renew my visa, with every intention of heading back to Oz ASAP. However, shortly after I arrived I got an offer I couldn't refuse: to join an all-girl band and spend the next chapter of my life singing, touring, and writing songs. After that wild adventure, I joined the cast of a four-person rock play written by Rex Weiner and produced by Adam Ant and John Densmore, and then landed a job at Paramount Pictures. then for Tom Cruise Nicole Kidman until I started my own production company and decided to make LA my home.

What do you miss most from home?

I miss the British countryside. Seems silly to say with all the beauty America has to offer, but I grew up on a farm, horse riding, surrounded by animals and I think my soul is tied to those rolling green pastures and country lanes.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since?

When I first came to LA it was electric. I was living with my uncle who was a confirmed bachelor and loved to be out and about, lived the rock and roll scene, The Rainbow, The Whiskey and The Roxy, were always on the agenda. He built Harleys from the ground up and was basically just an all around awesome influence. He showed me HIS LA, the cool side! I thought it was brilliant. A place where literally anything could happen.

It's changed SO MUCH since then. The traffic for starters. Then it was actually manageable. At the weekend, you could ride from Santa Monica to Malibu along PCH in half an hour! Now it's over an hour! Melrose was a really happening street – it was the equivalent of King's Road in that you'd go there to see and be seen music and fashion were everything back then and the stores were affordable and unique. It was so vibrant.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus London?

The biggest difference living here to living in London is that here the have friends here already idea you can do anything you want to, and can succeed is prevalent – it's not so much in London. There's a positivity and support system here that kind of propels you to succeed and backs your journey. I didn't grow up with that belief or feel that was there for me in London, but here I knew I could do it.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

I love going out to Saddle Peak Lodge. I don't know if it's a hidden gem, but it's certainly a gem worth rediscovering if you haven't been in a while.

you What would suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

would definitely recommend moving here – but I'd temper the recommendation with try it out for longer than a two week vacation at first. It takes a good two years to really settle into LA in my opinion and it definitely helps if you

- especially Brits who will understand the "It's not England" mentality we sometimes have when we get homesick.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

Gosh, so much great advice has been given to me over the years. I'd say off the top of my head, the best piece of advice I've ever been given is "Always be prepared to walk away from the deal" - it has saved me many times.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment? I make my living as a film and documentary producer but I recently launched a passion project with Jennifer Pfister to prevent the extinction of Africa's iconic animals (all gone within nine years if we don't act to stop it!). It's called "Over And Above Africa" www. OverAndAboveAfrica. com. It's an innovative

London: the hits keep on coming

Our Brits in LA weekly column seems to be morphing in to 'Brits suffering in the UK', but please forgive me for writing about British events once again.

Not only would it feel wrong to tell you about all the 'fun stuff' going on in LA this week, but I do know that our readers back home do take some solace in the fact that us expats still think, care and feel for them immensely.

On Sunday, September 2, 1666, London caught on fire. The city burned Wednesday. through and the fire - now known as The Great Fire of London - destroyed the homes of 70,000 out of the 80,000 inhabitants of the city. But for all that fire, the traditional death toll reported is extraordinarily low: just six verified deaths. (quoted from www. smithsonianmag.com)

The Grenfell Tower death count has already doubled that and is expected to rise significantly. The onslaught of tragic that events have affected Britain in recent weeks are just incomprehensible. I'm sure I am not alone in trying to remind myself that if there was a scale of countries that are currently suffering, the UK would undoubtedly be very low down the list. Nonetheless, I think most of you would agree that it is only human to feel greater empathy with people or places that you are more familiar with; hence we are not quite as disgusted by Kentucky Fried Chicken as we would be if the 'C' stood for cat.

When I first read the headline 'Fire breaks out at Tower Block in North Kensington' my heart sank, as that is where my niece Cassie and her family reside. Thankfully they were safe, as they live in a block opposite Grenfell Tower. But not so lucky for her, as she and her young children could only stand back and be a witness to the horrific events unfolding, right from the 'comfort' of their home. If you grew up in a small town or on an estate you will know how tight knit the neighborhoods are and this goes for the residents in and around Latimer Road - all the kids go to the same schools, hang out at the local parks and community centers; even I in the role of 'Great Aunt' have been to the playground there a few times over the years.

I just can't begin to fathom the anguish that they are all going through, almost forced to watch helplessly whilst their friends and neighbors attempt to escape from the surreal floor towering inferno. My niece said she still can't get the sound of their screams out of her head. Sadly at the time of writing this I have learned that one of her 12 year old sons classmates did not survive and there are still several of their friends missing.

Community spirit has yet again been the hero of the day, as less than 24 hours later the local aid centers had to ask everyone to slow down as they were inundated with donations. And a big up to Jamie Oliver who has a restaurant nearby and has offered free food and refuge to the all of the victims.

I am so proud and impressed by Cassie and her neighbours, who found the strength to work straight through the day by volunteering to sort the hundreds of donated items received.

There are many posts going around on social media saying that 'no more donations are required', which is not strictly true, as the surviving residents have really lost everything. So please persist and make sure to check in at the weekend, as there will certainly be further requests. I asked Cassie to recommend a particular local charity and she suggested Latymer Community Church who have been a consistently active channel of support over the years - they have a fundraising page which you can access via the latymer.org.uk/ link: grenfelltowerrelieffund. htm and you can donate from wherever you are in the world.

Mv shock sadness has once more been tinged by fury and confusion. How could this happen? These recent tragedies could surely have been avoided? It appears to me that they are often the result of cut backs, neglect and bureaucratic red tape - just as in the case of the brutal London Bridge massacre, where not only did one of the attackers appear on a documentary called 'The Jihadi Next Door', but several news sites also reported that the City of London Corporation, (which owns London Bridge), was even asked about security barriers the week prior and a spokesman apparently responded that there were "no plans" for them. (!!)

I know first hand that fire safety is not a priority for council tenants. I grew up on a housing estate in West London and we never even saw a fire extinguisher in our block of flats, let alone an escape route from our top floor flat. We were even told that we could have a fire door installed but it would cost about £600, which just wasn't feasible for our lowincome family. Bear in mind this was the council inflated price over 20 years ago, nowadays it can apparently cost 4 figures. So as you can imagine, it won't be a huge surprise to me if the blame ends up falling at the feet of the cont:/

York & Albany: real life Hotel Hell for Ramsay?

Gordon Ramsay, profanity-dishing British chef who hosts top US TV show 'Hotel Hell', ironing out flaws in other people's struggling hotels, is having his own living nightmare!

I hear the television star's upmarket York and Albany hotel and restaurant in London lost £882,000 last year. That brings the total debt for Ramsay (York and Albany) Ltd to £13million in just eight years.

Oo-bloody-er!

Part of the problem, it would appear, is that he signed a deal guaranteeing to £640,000 a year rent.

The hotel, in trendy Camden, north London, has been voted a disappointing 651 out of the 1,066 hotels in the capital on TripAdvisor.

Of the 297 reviews on TripAdvisor, 57 were average – with 37 rating it poor and 27 saying it was plain terrible.

One user wrote: "Ironic that Mr R is doing a programme called Hotel Hell. Mr R should start with his own place! Wouldn't go back."

FEELING THE HEAT: top TV chef Gordon Ramsay's swanky York & Albany is hemorrhaging cash due to its eye-watering £640k annual rent commented: "Ironic that Mr R is doing a programme called Hotel Hell. Mr R should start with his own place!

"Small dismal bog standard room, nothing like the ones on the website which boasts.

"The sink tap just spluttered cold water and the shower ran constantly cold."

And one disgruntled guest went so far as to say: "Breakfast was horrible - ordered full English which appeared in about two minutes flat - obviously all pre-cooked and kept tepid while a choice of eggs was added – just nasty. Staff couldn't care less."

Last year, a spokesman for the star stressed that guest feedback was welcomed and taken seriously 'across all our properties'.

He added: "The York & Albany enjoys a strong online rating with the majority of TripAdvisor reviews having rated it as either 'Excellent' or 'Very Good'."

Sources close to Ramsay insisted the £13 million shown as liabilities in the accounts was cash earmarked for investment in his long term financial plans.

The financial results for the hotel show the onerous impact of the £640,000-a-year rent on the York & Albany's results.

But a spokeswoman for Gordon Ramsay Holdings said: "Overall the group is performing well and returned profits in the latest financial year."

So far the food empire is keeping mum...but it sounds to me like the hotel's goose is cooked!

Stargazing/Book Review

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: It's time to speak out in a situation that has been in flux for quite some time. While your boss Mars is visiting watery Cancer your intuition will be on alert. The full picture will be clearer by the end of next week.

TAURUS: You can be sure you are on the right track career-wise this month when you listen to your inner voice. Pay attention to what your wants are rather than what you need. Maybe your life is somewhat hectic lately, so block out anything that is not relevant.

GEM INI: You have a lot of energy at your disposal this next week or so. However you should be careful not to put others on the defensive. You have a lot of different areas you are dealing with currently and you can achieve a lot by taking some time to relax and enjoy the down time. Happy Birthday CANCER: Chances are you have been a bit reclusive of late. While this is often a normal thing for you sometimes, be sure you are seen out and about this week. Mars the fire planet visiting you is giving you some steam to get you motivated. Happy Birthday early birthday!

LEO: This is a time for being more understanding about others in your life and the way they conduct their lives. While life has its ups and down always remember the lesson in everything. Joyful events are about to transpire so look for the positive in everything.

VIRGO: It's time for you to be actively looking for a healthier way of life. This may mean different things for some of you. Whatever area it is (physically or emotionally) make it a priority now. This does not have to be boring, just refreshing.

LIB RA: Now that Jupiter has turned to face you its possible chance encounters can turn into real possibilities in any area of life. So do not be sitting around waiting for the opportunities to appear, be proactive and available for any new adventure.

SCORPIO: You may likely be having some health-related challenges in some area of your life. Usually you have plenty of energy (more than most people), so if you feel like taking a rest or a break from life in general this is the time. Mid next week you will ready to take on anything. SAGITTARIUS: The movement of your boss planet Jupiter means it's time for you to take some chances. This should be outside of your normal comfort zone. This period is absolutely made for you adventurous souls, just remember to be cognizant of others' feelings as you move forward. CAPRICORN: With Pluto living with you and sitting still it is not the best time to start to establish a new stream of income or change jobs. However if this has been in process for a month or more it would be fine to go ahead. With Mars opposite you feeling mellow you can trick him to play for your side.

AQUARIUS: You are on the verge of a brand new cycle and you can actually achieve this week something you have long desired. Your boss Uranus is very powerful currently and will not take no for an answer. You are often unconventional but never boring. Go for your goal, it's a good time.

PISCES: Life has been a bit boring of late for some of you while for others it may seem uneventful. Sometimes it is good to take a backseat and chill out. This week sees the end of this cycle so just enjoy it and make ready for a busier-than-usual July.

The House at Bishopsgate: down by the riverside

■ Exclusive interview with author Katie Hickman about her new novel, in which a rich merchant returns to Jacobian London with a traumatized wife rescued from a Sultan's harem

"I have always been fascinated by the allure of strange houses, and by their effects of the people who live in them," says The House at Bishopsgate author Katie Hickman. "Imagining this house, which becomes almost like a character in the novel, was one of the joys of writing this book."

In 1611, Paul Pinder and his bride Celia Lamprey arrive at their home at Bishopsgate. It had stood empty for almost ten years and must be restored to its former glory. Paul, a rich merchant, was the British Ambassador in Constantinople. He brings the Sultan Blue diamond home with him. It seems to have magical powers.

Celia had kidnapped and forced into the harem of the Great Sultan. Paul got Celia back and still wanted to marry her. Frail and traumatized by her experiences in the harem, Celia is unable to cope with the management of the house and staff. Paul arranges for her good friend Annetta to ioin them. She arrives to find the widow Frances Sydenham has insinuated herself into the Pindar household. She seems to have a spell on both Celia and Paul. And, Paul's brother Rafe is always after something.

"This extraordinary mansion actually existed in real life," says Hickman. "It was built by Paul Pindar in 1611 when he came home from the Orient to showcase his collection of exotic furniture, treasures and jewels. Its oak carved front became a famous sight. That is now preserved in the Victoria & Albert Museum in South Kensington." The house was demolished in Victorian times to make way for the new railways. Liverpool Street Station was built on its site.

Hickman's research for the book ranged from cooking manuals to Shakespeare plays, to seventeenth century treatises on garden design and ghost stories.

"The early seventeenth century, just after the death of Elizabeth I, when King James I and his Danish wife, Queen Anna, came to the throne, was a time of huge cultural innovation and energy. I always use the London Library and the British Library. But I also like to look at real things, so I used the brilliant new Renaissance galleries at the V&A and the Museum of London for visual reference. It was surprisingly difficult to recreate Jacobean London, because so little of it is left. Nonetheless, a real treat for a historian."

The House at Bishopsgate is the third book in a trilogy, after The Aviary Gate and The Pindar Diamond. The three novels took more than ten years to write.

"I was lucky enough to do an incredible amount of traveling during the writing of all three books," says Hickman. "When it came to The House at Bishopsgate, I found myself having to focus very intensely on my own home town, London itself, which was a wonderful experience. I live in Southwark, one of the most ancient parts of London. It made me look at my own surroundings with totally new eyes. Bishopsgate Without, the area which was beginning to spring up outside the Bishop's Gate on the north side of the city walls, was a thoroughly modern suburb in 1611. Home to a number of elegant new houses built by the newly rich merchant class."

"The original idea was in fact one of my characters," says Hickman. "A wonderful maverick and libertine called John Carew. He acts as a cook and companion to Paul Pindar, the Levant Company merchant around whose fortunes the novels revolve. In the first novel, The Aviary Gate, I was left with a feeling that Carew had never really had his moment in the sun, so to speak. It was to give voice to him and his amazing adventures that I wrote the House at Bishopsgate."

Pickford completes £30m Toffees move become the most expensive British keeper in history after Everton paid £25m - rising to what would be a club record £30m - to sign him from Sunderland.

The 23-year-old has signed a five-year contract at Goodison Park.

"It is a great club, a massive club and it is a great opportunity," he said.

Pickford made 29 Premier League appearances last season but could not prevent Sunderland being relegated.

He joined the Black Cats' academy in 2010 and had spells on loan at Darlington, Alfreton Town, Burton Albion, Carlisle United, Bradford City and Preston.

Pickford made first-team debut Sunderland in a 3-1 FA Cup defeat by Arsenal in January 2016.

added: "Last He season was my first in the Premier League so to get this opportunity with Everton now, to be able to go forward with my career and show everyone what I can do with Everton is unbelievable.

This is an exciting time for the club and for me, too, with the ambition being shown. I just want to be the best I can be to help."

Manager Ronald Koeman added: "Jordan is a very talented young professional who also has a real hunger for success, and that's important for us as we now look to make further progress in the seasons ahead."

The deal is an initial £25m transfer fee with £5m of potential add-ons, making him the third most expensive keeper ever.

Gianluigi Buffon's move from Parma to Juventus in 2001 was reported to be worth 53m euros, or £32.6m at the time, while at current exchange rates, Ederson's 40m euros transfer to Manchester City last week is equivalent to £35m, which is a world record in sterling, but not Pickford's fee smashes the previous record for British goalkeeper, when Koeman - then Southampton boss paid £10m to sign Fraser Forster from Celtic in 2014.

Despite being Pickford is eligible to play for the Under-21s as rules allow a select number of over-aged players in the squad.

Madrid defender Varane hauled down Dele Alli in the box and was given a straight red card, as Kane stepped up to equalise.

as well as we needed to, I thought we tired," said Southgate. "We put in a huge amount of effort and it was a problem for us with their pace and got a result. In the space of 90 minutes we saw the things we are very good at, with the ball we caused a lot of problems and looked a threat and created good openings and took our first goal very well.

"On the other hand we have to get better as a team and at managing the game, especially when they went down to 10 men."

Draw leaves Scotland with no room for error

World Cup qualifying Group F

SCOTLAND have no room for error in their remaining World Cup qualifying campaign following an exhilarating ultimately disappointing 2-2 draw with England last Friday.

The merits of performance that combined elements of doggedness, two glorious instances of technique and familiar defensive and passing shortcomings, were contained within the 90 minutes.

Hours after the end of the 2-2 draw with England at Hampden, Scotland were further behind their rivals for second place in Group F.

Slovenia defeated Malta 2-0, while Slovakia won 2-1 in Lithuania, results that leave Scotland in fourth place, three points behind Slovenia and four behind Slovakia.

It is not certain that England, on 14 points, will stay top of the group, but it remains likely for the only side still unbeaten in the section.

It is also fair to assume that Gareth Southgate's squad are more likely than not to secure victories in each of their remaining four games, away to Malta, at home to Slovakia and Slovenia, and away to

In order to progress to next year's finals, Scotland will need assistance from their oldest rivals, certainly, since if England do not defeat Slovakia and Slovenia then Scotland will need to win all of their final four games - away to Lithuania, at home to Malta, at home to Slovakia, then away to Slovenia.

To put that in context, Scotland have earned eight points from their opening six fixtures, a return of 1.3 points per game. Yet, should England remain dominant, then there is a thin sliver of hope left for Gordon Strachan's side.

They drew 1-1 with Lithuania at Hampden - which, along with the listless display in the 3-0 loss away to Slovakia, has been the most galling performance of Scotland's campaign - but the Lithuanians have won only one of their three home games so far and only Malta have conceded more goals in the group.

Yet, while Slovakia have conceded four and Slovenia three, Scotland have shipped 10 goals - a stark reflection of team's the greatest vulnerability.

Scotland ought to consider a win in Lithuania achievable, although that is still a different order from it being likely.

Scotland then face two home games and the obligation to take six points from them has not changed from when the draw was made.

Second place is not yet out of reach and, for now, that position still delivers a place in the play-offs.

Had Scotland lost heavily or meekly to England then they might have been looking for a new head coach.

For now, they still have

■ Misery for Morgan as humiliation by Pakistan ends Champions Trophy dreams

Champions Trophy semi-final, Cardiff England 211 (49.5 overs): Root 46, Bairstow 43, Hasan 3-35 Pakistan 215-2 (37.1 overs): Azhar 76, Fakhar 57

Pakistan won by eight

wickets

ENGLISH cricket fans were left disappointed yet again this week after a promising run in the Champions Trophy came to a dismal end on Wednesdasy with an eight-wicket semi-final thrashing at the hands of Pakistan in Cardiff.

England struggled on a slow pitch against some brilliant Pakistan bowling and fielding, mustering only 211.

Fakhar Zaman's 57 launched Pakistan's chase, while Azhar Ali made 76 as victory was sealed with 12.5 overs to spare.

Pakistan will play in Sunday's final at The Oval.

England move on to a Twenty20 series against South Africa next week, but the disappointment of this defeat could linger for some time.

Eoin Morgan's men were favourites to win tournament, but comprehensively outplayed in the Welsh sunshine in front of a crowd full of noisy and energetic Pakistan supporters.

While England eased to the semis through some wonderful all-round displays, Pakistan had to recover from an openinggame hammering by India and only scraped into the last four with a thrilling defeat of Sri Lanka on Monday.

However, it was Pakistan who better adjusted to the used, worn surface, stifling England's much-vaunted batting line-up. The hosts could manage only seven fours in their final 30 overs and not a single six throughout.

In contrast, Pakistan plundered runs freely against an attack that offered too many opportunities to score. England may point to conditions that did not suit them, but the margin of the defeat shows that is no excuse.

This was an outstanding opportunity for England to win their first global 50-over trophy, ended by the team that beat them in 1992 World Cup final.

Midway through the England innings, the game was delicately poised. The hosts had reached 118-2 with Morgan and Test captain Joe Root at the crease.

From there, though, Pakistan were imperious. Led by pace bowler Hasan Ali, who took 3-35, and backed up by some tigerish fielding that improved after Jonny Bairstow (43) was dropped twice, Sarfraz Ahmed's team squeezed the host nation.

Root was caught behind off 18-year-old leg-spinner Shadab Khan for a busy 46 and Morgan played a loose waft to edge Hasan and depart for 33.

It began a regular fall of wickets around Ben Stokes, who failed to find the boundary in a 64-ball Moeen Ali was brilliantly caught at deep square leg by Fakhar, Adil Rashid was run out by sub fielder Ahmed Shehzad's direct hit and, when Mark Wood was run out attempting a single to wicketkeeper Sarfraz, it completed a collapse of eight wickets for 83 runs.

England's hopes rested on taking early wickets, but they were punctured by the strokeplay of who Fakhar, threw everything at the new ball.

Facing a barrage of short deliveries, left-hander Fakhar was hit on the head by Wood, but also caused chaos with pulls to the boundary and a top edge over wicketkeeper Jos Buttler's head for six.

He shared 118 with Azhar before being stumped off Rashid, leaving Azhar to snuff out any hopes of an England revival in a stand of 55

Southgate laments England game management

England must learn to "manage the game" better after falling to a 3-2 friendly defeat against 10-man France, says manager Gareth Southgate.
