HAT'S YOUR LOT!

The Duke finally retires at 96 after his 22,219th engagement

The Duke of Edinburgh has bowed out of public life to cheers and a rousing rendition of For He's a Jolly Good Fellow played by the band of the Royal Marines.

It rained heavily on his final parade on Wednesday morning, necessitating a raincoat and bowler hat as Prince Philip, 96, performed his last solo engagement almost 70 years after his first.

The weather failed to dampen the enthusiasm of an umbrella-wielding crowd who had gathered outside Buckingham Palace, and whose applause was rewarded with a wave of acknowledgement by the duke as he walked off the palace forecourt and into retirement.

Philip, who announced that he was stepping down in May, had chosen the forecourt of Buckingham Palace and a Royal Marines military parade to stage his final solo act.

As Captain General of the Royal Marines, he took the royal salute and inspected an honour guard to mark the finale of the 1664 Global Challenge, a series of endurance feats by marines to raise awareness of and funds for the Royal Marines Charity.

Among those he met were Cpl Will Gingell, 33, and Cpl Jamie

Thompson, 31, who had run 1,664 miles over 100 days, and Sgt Matt Burley, a physical training instructor, who swam 1,664 lengths underwater over 10 days.

"You all should be locked up," Philip joked in characteristic fashion.

It was the 22,219th solo engagement carried out by the duke since his wife became Queen in 1952. As far as Buckingham Palace could ascertain, his very first had been on 2 March 1948, a few months after his marriage to Princess Elizabeth, when he attended the London Federation of Boys' Club Boxing finals at the Royal Albert Hall. Court Circular recorded that the prince, then aged 26, presented the prizes.

A Royal Navy man to the core who was mentioned in dispatches during the second world war, Philip's choice of a Royal Navy and Marine Corps engagement as his last was described as "an honour" and "brilliant" by Lt Col Gary Green, who devised the 1664 Global Challenge.

'wonderful figurehead'

Of having the duke as the head of the Corps, he said: "It makes the Corps exceptional, it builds our Commando spirit and he's a wonderful figurehead for all Royal Marines to look up to."

Philip, who may still accompany the Queen at times, has been among the most active of the royals right up to retirement. This year he has spent 52 days carrying out public engagements, more than the Queen and the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, at 49, 45, and 39 days respectively, but not as many as his daughter, the Princess Royal, who has clocked up 111 days so far, or his eldest son, Charles, at 89 days.

Lady Myra Butter,

who has known Prince Philip since childhood, told Radio 4's Today: "I'm sure that he won't disappear; he will be greatly missed by everybody. He's been such a stable character in all our lives - he's always there and he's always been there for the Queen and I think we're very, very lucky to have him."

The prime minister, Theresa May, tweeted a tribute to the duke, saying: "As he carries out his final public engagement, I thank the Duke of Edinburgh for a remarkable lifetime of service.

"I hope the Duke, after 22,219 solo engagements since 1952, can now enjoy a well-earned retirement!"

He may be bowing out of public life, but not as dramatically as readers of the Daily Telegraph's website were informed on Wednesday when an accidental slip of the keyboard resulted in the headline: "HOLD HOLD HOLD, Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, dies aged XX", announcing his death and publishing details of his funeral. The Telegraph swiftly pulled the article and apologised, saying it would be "reviewing its publishing processes as a matter of urgency". In May, when his retirement was announced, the Sun's website also erroneously announced his death.

High Court rules out Iraq war trial for Blair

The High Court has blocked a bid by a former chief of staff of the Iraqi army to bring a private prosecution against Tony Blair over the Iraq war.

General Abdul Wahed Shannan Al Rabbat has accused Mr Blair, while UK prime minister, of committing a "crime of aggression" by invading Iraq in 2003 to overthrow President Saddam Hussein.

The general wanted to prosecute Mr Blair and two other key ministers at the time - foreign secretary Jack Straw and attorney general Lord Goldsmith.

His lawyers asked London's High Court for permission to seek judicial review in an attempt to get the Supreme Court, now the highest court in the land, to overturn a ruling by the House of Lords in 2006 that there is no such crime as the crime of aggression under the law of England and Wales.

Lord Thomas of Cwmgiedd, the Lord Chief Justice, and Mr Justice Ouseley dismissed the general's application, saying there was "no prospect" of the case succeeding.

Delivering a written judgment, he said the court had taken the

An Iraqi general claimed Tony Blair committed "the crime of aggression" by invading the country in 2003 to overthrow Saddam Hussein view that: "Because of a decision by the House of Lords binding in this court, there is no crime of aggression under domestic UK law."

'hopeless'

He also said there was no prospect of the Supreme Court reversing the decision.

Westminster Magistrates' Court refused to issue summonses in November last year on the grounds that the ex-ministers had immunity from legal action, and in any event the current Attorney General, Jeremy Wright QC, would have to give consent.

The general applied to the High Court in London for a judicial review of the magistrates' court decision. He lives in Muscat, Oman, does not possess a passport and cannot travel to the UK.

The Attorney General intervened in the case and his legal team urged Lord Thomas of Cwmgiedd, the Lord Chief Justice, sitting with Mr Justice Ouseley, to block the general's legal challenge on the grounds that it was "hopeless" and unarguable because the crime of aggression is not recognised in English law.

The UK was part of the coalition led by the US which invaded Iraq after US president George W Bush and Mr Blair accused Hussein of possessing weapons of mass destruction and having links to terrorists. Michael Mansfield QC, appearing for General Al Rabbat, said at a recent hearing that the inquiry into the invasion conducted by Sir John Chilcot, which concluded with a report published in July last year, justified the prosecution of Mr Blair.

Mr Mansfield said the main findings were contained in a paragraph early in the 12-volume report and could be summarised as concluding that Hussein did not pose an urgent threat to the interests of the UK, and the intelligence regarding weapons of mass destruction had been presented with "unwarranted certainty".

It also concluded that peaceful alternatives to war had not been exhausted and that the war in Iraq was not necessary.

The report found that the US and UK had undermined the authority of the UN Security Council by invading without its authority.

Mr Mansfield told the court: "Nothing could be more emphatic than this evidence. It does not say there was an unlawful war or crime of aggression.

"It doesn't need to because the criteria are arguably all there in that paragraph."

Robert Hardy dies

The actor Robert Hardy, star of TV series All Creatures Great and Small, has died aged 91, his family has said.

Hardy, they said, had a "tremendous life" and "a giant career in theatre, television and film spanning more than 70 years".

He was also known for numerous portrayals of Winston Churchill.

In more recent years, he appeared as Cornelius Fudge, the Minister for Magic, in four of the Harry Potter films.

His family said: "Gruff, elegant, twinkly, and always dignified, he is celebrated by all who knew him and loved him, and everyone who enjoyed his work."

TV star Ant McPartlin set to leave rehab after 'winning drink and drugs battle'

■ Friends say Ant 'is on the mend' and wants to make a TV return hosting I'm A Celebrity... Get Me Out Of Here in October Troubled TV star Ant McPartlin aims to be out of rehab in a month and well enough to present the hugely popular UK TV show I'm a Celebrity: Get Me Out of Here in the autumn.

The ITV show starts in October and sources say he aims to have made a full recovery by then.

Ant, 41, checked into rehab after admitting drink and drugs problems to his wife and his showbiz partner Dec Donnelly.

The Britain's Got Talent presenter had confessed that he was relying heavily on prescription drugs and booze and needed help.

A source close to Ant, quoted in the Sunday Mirror, said: "He is doing really well. It has been a tough few weeks but he is coming through it and is now over the worst of it."

'huge emotional bond'

Multi-millionaire Ant is said to have wept as he revealed the crisis to his wife Lisa Armstrong and co-star Dec, also 41.

Now after nearly two months in rehab where he has been closed off from loved ones as he focuses on recovery, he will be reunited with family and friends.

Dec recently said he would never host the jungle show – on screen in November – without his fellow Geordie. And rumours flew that ITV morning show presenter Holly Willoughby would be presenting I'm A Celeb solo instead.

A source said: "Ant and Dec are a team with a huge emotional bond. They are like brothers and Dec will only be hosting I'm A Celebrity with Ant by his side.

NATIONAL TREASURES: Ant and Dec on I'm A Celeb

"Ant has been very brave and is totally committed to his recovery. All that matters to him is getting well and getting back to his best.

"That's why, until now, he has decided he needs to be on his own to focus entirely on his illness and how he can best recover.

painkiller addiction

"Ant knows he has so much love and support – but this is a very personal battle that he is determined.

"Ant's priority is getting better. He has put his health before everything else, he is very committed to being well again."

Ant developed painkiller addiction after taking pills for chronic knee pain.

He became hooked on the prescription medication Tramadol, which can cause slurred speech, drowsiness, headaches and impaired co-ordination.

At the same time he was also drinking heavily. Problems set in two years ago when he had an operation to repair damaged cartilage in the knee.

He told friends the surgery was "botched" and continued to present Britain's Got Talent, unaware he was carrying a fracture. But his determination to carry on meant he eroded the bone until his kneecap slipped.

Those close to him said the pain often left him writhing in pain on his dressing room floor. Doctors warned there is a danger that one day his knee may collapse, impairing him for life.

Ant had hidden his addictions from Dec and 40-year-old Lisa – a make-up artist on Strictly Come Dancing.

Life sentences for four men plotting 'Lee Rigby-style' terrorist attack

■ Tahir Aziz, 38, Naweed Ali, 29, Mohibur Rahman, 33, and Khobaib Hussain, 25, convicted at Old Bailey of preparing acts of terrorism

Four men have been jailed for life for plotting a "Lee Rigby-style" terrorist attack to murder members of the police or military using a pipe bomb and meat cleaver.

The men, all from the Midlands, were convicted at the Old Bailey on Wednesday of preparing acts of terrorism, having amassed weapons and were thwarted by a major counter-terrorism operation.

Three of the men called themselves the "three musketeers" on a messaging app they used to plan the attack.

Two of the men were from Birmingham, Naweed Ali, 29, and Khobaib Hussain, 25, and two were from Stoke, Mohibur Rahman, 33, and Tahir Aziz, 38. Ali, Hussain, and Rahman refused to leave Belmarsh prison to attend the sentencing hearing.

They were arrested in August 2016 and counterterrorism officials believe it was one of the most significant plots thwarted in the past year.

Mr Justice Globe noted that the four-and-a-half-month trial had come amid four separate attacks in Britain.

He said: "These attacks demonstrate in stark form the carnage that can be created by different types of terrorist attack that can be carried out with a vehicle, explosives and loaded weapons.

"I am satisfied from the evidence and the jury verdicts, but for the intervention of the counter terrorism unit of West Midlands Police and the security services, there would have been not dissimilar terrorist acts in this country using at the very least the explosives and or one or more bladed weapons."

The judge referred to the defence lawyers' attempts to get the jury dismissed and their "root and branch" attacks on the credibility of all the prosecution witnesses from West Midlands Police, which he said were "totally unfounded".

The men were arrested on 26 August 2016 after a bag of weapons, including a pipe bomb, an air pistol and a meat cleaver with the word kafir (unbeliever) scratched on it, were found under the driver's seat of Ali's car. In Aziz's car they found a samurai sword bought from a sex shop in Stoke for £20.

MI5 set up a fake delivery company based in Birmingham employing two of the men as they investigated the plot, which helped them get access to the mens' cars.

The prosecution said the four defendants were likely to have been planning an imminent "Lee Rigby-style" attack on a police or military target.

Physics teacher banned after mile high romp with pupil

■ Teacher initiated affair with student on flight home from school trip, tribunal told

A physics teacher who had sex with a pupil in the lavatory of a plane was caught after a second pupil tried to blackmail her, a tribunal heard this week.

Eleanor Wilson, 28, was described as intoxicated when she flew back from Geneva and starting flirting with the boy at the back of the plane while caring for another poorly pupil, a panel heard.

The boy - who had drunk five mini bottles of wine - joined her in the lavatory for sex and oral intercourse, it was heard.

The academy teacher, from South Gloucestershire, continued their relationship, texting and meeting up for drinks, despite rumours circulating at school.

But the relationship came to light seven months later when another pupil emailed Wilson saying he would reveal the tryst unless she had sex with him, it was said.

Police and the school found out and Wilson was dismissed and brought before a professional conduct panel earlier this month.

She was found guilty of unacceptable professional conduct and bringing the profession into disrepute and banned from teaching.

denial

The hearing found: "The panel heard evidence from Pupil A that during a school trip, he and Miss Wilson became close.

"During the flight home from the trip, Pupil A gave evidence that he and Miss Wilson were flirting at the back of the plane, whilst looking after another pupil who was unwell.

"Pupil A gave evidence that Miss Wilson was intoxicated and that he had himself drunk approximately five miniature bottles of wine on the flight.

"Pupil A gave evidence that he and Miss Wilson entered the toilet, kissed and had oral sex and intercourse without using protection. Miss Wilson denied this allegation in its entirety, as evidenced within the notes of the school's investigation.

"The panel considered all of the evidence, and after hearing his oral evidence and having the opportunity to test it, preferred the evidence of Pupil A."

rumours

It added: "In the following months it is alleged that the relationship with Pupil A continued through text messages and meetings outside of school.

"In March 2016, Miss Wilson received a series of emails from Pupil C, in which he confirmed knowledge of a sexual relationship between Miss Wilson and Pupil A and in which he said he would inform the school unless she engaged in sexual conduct with him."

The boy - whose age and name are not included in the panel report - thought the pair were an item and admitted he was in love.

The headteacher confronted Miss Wilson in September 2015 after hearing rumours she was in inappropriate relationship with an unknown pupil.

But no action was taken due to a lack of "corroborating evidence", the report said.

The two-day hearing found Wilson guilty of all but two of the allegations, on the balance of probabilities. They concluded that while she did let pupils drink and consumed alcohol herself on the school trip that this element was not sexually motivated.

The panel gave her a prohibition order banning her from teaching indefinitely in any school and ordered she cannot apply to teach again.

Corbyn 'disgusted' at Arsenal owner over hunting TV channel

■ Gunners-supporting Labour leader says Stan Kroenke 'should stick to football' after launch of blood sports TV channel

Jeremy Corbyn has accused the Arsenal owner, Stan Kroenke, of glorifying blood sports by launching a subscription hunting channel.

The Labour leader, who is a keen supporter of the Premier League club based in his Islington North constituency in north London, said the American billionaire should concentrate on football after the unveiling of his new My Outdoor TV channel, which will show the killing of lions, elephants and other potentially endangered species.

The channel, which was launched at the Game Fair in Hertfordshire, is owned by Outdoor Sportsman Group, part of Kroenke Sport Entertainment.

It promises to show "thousands of hunting, fishing and shooting episodes featuring the biggest names in outdoor TV ... how-to videos and even wild game recipes".

One of the programmes, Dark Continent Quest, follows renowned hunter Jana Waller, who is seen stalking game with a bow and arrow. The channel has insisted it will only show hunts that are "ethical and fair chase".

Corbyn said he was "appalled at the glorification of killing wild and rare animals on this TV channel".

"As an Arsenal fan I'm disgusted that Stan Kroenke is involved in such a brutal, unethical and unnecessary activity. This is not sport. Kroenke should stick to football if he wants to be involved in sport. 'Blood sport' is a contradiction and there should be no place on television or anywhere else for it," the Labour leader said.

Trophy hunting has come under increasing public scrutiny in the UK, with American dentist Walter Palmer the target of an online hate campaign after it was revealed he had shot and killed a protected lion called Cecil, who was being tracked as part of a study by Oxford University.

'Frail' Sir Bruce unlikely to perform again, says close friend Tarby

Showbiz legend Forsyth has suffered a series of health problems

FEARS were growing this week that Sir Bruce Forsyth may never perform in public again after his close friend Jimmy Tarbuck described the TV legend as "frail".

The Liverpoolian comic spoke out after 18 months in which the 89-year-old has suffered from a series of health problems. The former Strictly Come Dancing presenter has been out of the public eye since being diagnosed with two aortic aneurysms in 2015.

Tarbuck, 77, told an audience in Blackpool last weekend: "He's OK, but he's a bit frail. He's had an aneurysm. It's very serious. I saw him a week ago. He is on good form."

On Monday Sir Bruce's spokesman declined to comment on the latest rumours about his health.

Fans have been concerned about the ex-Play Your Cards Right host since he disappeared from the spotlight after suffering a fall nearly two years ago. He was initially expected to recover within a few months, but further setbacks confined him to his home in Virginia Water, Surrey.

ailing health

Sir Bruce was found to be suffering from two aortic aneurysms and he underwent keyhole surgery in October 2015. Last year he was too unwell to attend the funerals of his old and dear friends Ronnie Corbett and Terry Wogan. He was also forced to drop out of a Children in Need special at the last minute due to his ailing health.

His former Miss World

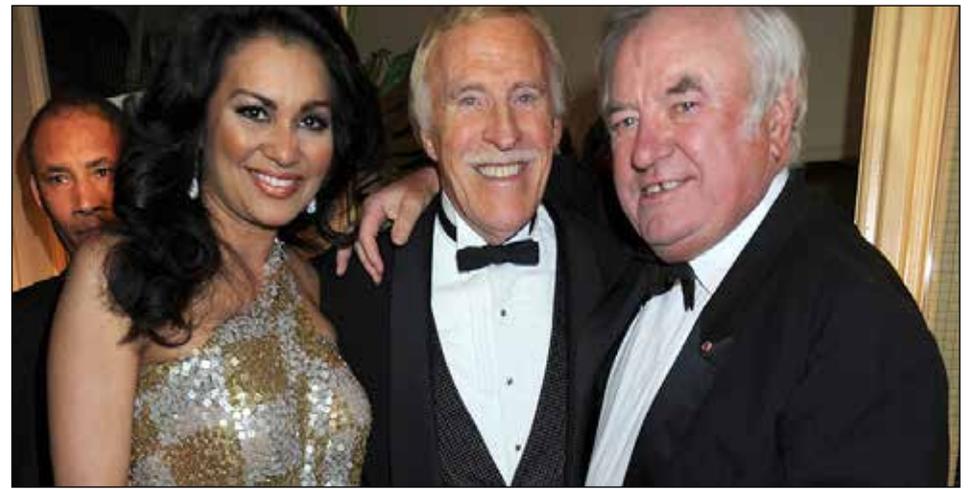

wife Wilnelia, 59, told in an emotional interview how she was "petrified" the father-of-six might not survive surgery. "I don't think about it too much," she said. "I hope I'll be prepared somehow, but it doesn't feel real.

"He's the man I fell in love with because his brain is there.

"He has a bit of a problem moving, but we still laugh and talk.

"I pray, I believe. The main thing is that he's doing well. The pain is more emotional - sometimes we cry, but mostly we laugh."

Sir Bruce went on to spend five days in intensive care in March after suffering a chest infection. His daughter Julie Forsyth said at the time that the family were rallying around him and that he had been "doing great".

"I have been to see him and he's doing great," she said.

"He is getting over a chest infection so it's a bit difficult, but he's doing good."

Another friend added:

"Wilnelia was by his bedside virtually the entire time and has been amazing. "Now Bruce just wants to get home and slowly build his strength back up again.

He remains in great spirits."

Sir Bruce's manager Ian Wilson paid tribute to the hospital staff on his behalf, saying: "Sir Bruce Forsyth would like to thank everyone for their good wishes. He and his family would also like to say a special thank you to the NHS doctors, nurses and staff at St Peter's Hospital for their kindness and care."

long career

Sir Bruce was knighted five years ago following a 70-year career which began at the age of 14 with a song and dance routine called Boy Bruce, The Mighty Atom. His big television break came in 1958 presenting ITV's Sunday Night at the London Palladium, which he later hosted with Tarbuck. He went on to star in both BBC and ITV game shows such as Beat The Clock, Bruce Forsyth and The Generation Game, Play Your Cards Right and The Price Is Right.

The veteran entertainer left Strictly three years ago but wanted to appear in Christmas and charity specials, until his poor health prevented him doing so. He has been married three times. His children, Julie, Debbie, Louisa, Laura, Jonathan and Charlotte, have given him nine grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. The knighthood followed a long campaign to see him honoured for his services to showbusiness.

Getting your oats twice a day is key to long life, says oldest family

With a combined age of 1,075 years and 68 days the 13 Donnelly siblings of County Armagh can proudly lay claim to being the world's oldest family.

Indeed their ability to defy the passing years has seen them inducted into the Guinness book of world records.

But what can now be revealed is the secret behind their longevity - traditional porridge oats.

Having grown up on a farm their diet has always been made up of locally sourced ingredients; free range pigs and chickens for bacon and eggs and vegetables grown in their own backyard.

However, the Donnelly clan are convinced that what has really guaranteed their long life is their habit of eating porridge, not just for breakfast everyday, but for supper too.

"The key is that you need to get your oats at night," said Leo Donnelly, who at 72 is the youngest of the siblings. "We've always followed Daddy's habit of that nice warm bite before sleep.

"Porridge at around 10pm, then porridge again for breakfast at 7am. Cooked oats, milk, perhaps a spot of jam on top."

He added: "It has always stood us well, porridge before sleep and after sleep. People thought it was unusual, but now the living proof is there for all to see."

The family's reliance on oats and their apparently beneficial effect on their health and long years have prompted scientists at the International Longevity Centre (ILC) to launch a study of the Donnellys' diet. But for the Donnellys tucking into a bowl of porridge is just part of their fundamentally wholesome diet and lifestyle, which also sees them steer clear of alcohol.

"The farm oats in our porridge were always local and of the finest quality," said Leo. "Our diet has never been from processed or polluted foods.

"We worked with nature, everything eaten was either grown or reared by us. Mummy would say go outside and wring a chicken's neck, that would be for dinner. The vegetables we ate we had grown, the fruit we ate we picked, the eggs laid were from our chickens, the bacon came from our pigs, the bread we made by hand. Farm oats did not arrive from foreign lands."

The result, says Leo, is there for all to see.

"There was never a fat Donnelly raised," he maintains.

MORSE CODE: New season of Endeavour continues the origin story of iconic Oxford detective

SUNDAY nights have always been a great time to catch up on quality British drama on PBS, and this month is no exception with the debut of Season Four of Endeavour on PBS.

For those unacquainted with the compelling British police procedural, it is a prequel to the long-running Inspector Morse and, like that series, is set primarily in Oxford. Shaun Evans portrays a young Endeavour Morse beginning his career as a Detective Constable with the Oxford City Police CID and being moulded into the iconic character immortalized by the late John Thaw.

The series launched five years ago in the UK, introducing the young Morse as a disillusioned detective who plans on resigning from the force until taken under the wing of veteran Detective Inspector Fred Thursday (Roger Allam), the "guv" at the Oxford City Police's CID, who sees in him an unblemished detective whom he can trust.

As Morse gradually finds his feet and shows his brilliance by cracking several difficult cases, he earns the respect of some in his department – and the resentment of others. In the seasons which follow Morse undergoes personal and professional crises – including being shot by a suspect and sabotaged by his colleagues – all the while displaying a unique gift for detective work.

Season four opens in the summer of 1967, and the effects of the Cold War and sixties counterculture are being felt in Oxford. It has barely been two weeks since the events depicted in the Season 3 finale, and we find Oxford's finest picking up the pieces of their personal and professional lives. Endeavour waits to hear the result of his Sergeant's Exam, and self-medicates to numb his heartache over the love of his life, Joan.

Endeavour airs Sunday nights at 9pm through September 10th. Check local listings for details.

Meet a Member: Russ Kane

Not all Brits in LA Members live in Los Angeles: in fact a fair number are scattered around the globe. This week's Member is Russ Kane, who lives in London.

Seeing as you don't live in Los Angeles how did you end up joining Brits in LA?

If I had a pound for everyone in LA who suggested "Oh Russ, you must get in touch with these guys" I would be driving a Ferrari. And still have change. You are the stuff of legend!

Have you ever visited Los Angeles - if so we would love to hear what your impression of LA is?

I've been to LA many times and it is a bewildering, magical place. Unlike any other city it actually doesn't seem to have 'a centre' like Rome or London. Or heaven forbid, Birmingham. So unless you have someone who really knows their way around, the city will remain an enigma. I've been exceptionally lucky and always been shown the town in microscopic detail, so have been able to enjoy all it has to offer – and that's saying something. Living in London, the first thing you discover in LA is that the sky is actually blue, there is a large yellow object called, apparently, the Sun, and food portions for one person feed an entire British family of four. Bewilderingly, no one drinks at lunchtime – an error that I am on a one-man mission to correct. The one aspect of the city that one has to experience to understand is that one minute you are in a modern, bustling metropolis, yet within twenty minutes, you are in the solitude of the countryside, complete with coyotes and snakes. Mind you, being in the entertainment business, I'm used to snakes.

Do you think you could ever see yourself moving to LA, if not tell us what keeps you in London?

It has always been a dream of mine to live much of the year in LA. I love the climate, the scenery, the friendliness of the people, the food and its ambiance. What's not to like? But I'm a born and bred Londoner (cue music from 'Mary Poppins') and like the River Thames, it runs through my veins. My family live here, my friends live here and....oh to hell with them...I'm in!!!

Do you have a hidden gem that you want to share with us?

Too many to mention. Every time a friend says 'let's meet here for breakfast/lunch/dinner' I fall head over heels with the venue. I've never been disappointed. My personal favourites are The Petersen Automotive Museum on Wilshire Boulevard along Museum Row. As a devout petrol-head this was like going to heaven! I loved the pier in Santa Barbara and kept expecting to see Charlie and Alan Harper wander by. Joan's on Third (8350 W 3rd St, 90048) was a cornucopia of choice for lunch and The Los Angeles Museum of the Holocaust in Pan Pacific Park (100 The Grove Dr, Los Angeles, 90036) was utterly magnificent and humbling. There but for fortune...

Why would you recommend other overseas readers joining Brits in LA?

Are you kidding? Any organisation that can have the Grande Dame of Showbiz, Shirley Greene and the coolest guy never to actually be in the Rat Pack, Dickie Shelton, under one roof is a must go-to organisation. Plus it's fun to look at another Brit in the LA sunshine and just burst out laughing saying "It don't get much better than this".

We hear you have been working on an exciting project. Care to tell us more about it?

Well OK... if I must. Only as you asked so politely. Otherwise I really wasn't going to mention it. Said no one ever. As an act of utter madness, I am bringing my one man show, 'Kaned Laughter' (see what I did there) to The Santa Monica Playhouse for mercifully just two nights Friday 22nd and Saturday 23rd September. Curtain up 8pm (or whenever more than three people turn up). I've unleashed this 90-minute show (well, calling it a 'show' is a little over-stated, but you get my drift) twice in London's West End to my utter astonishment it sold out in 48 hours both times. To the theatre's stunned disbelief it remains the second-fastest selling show in their entire history. The fastest (before you ask) was some bloke called Sir Michael Gambon in a play directed by some newcomer called Sir Trevor Nunn. I can live with that.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

My late Dad was not one for handing out advice – until after the event of course when he was a post-rational genius. Timing eh? But he gave me two pieces of wisdom that have stood me in good stead since I was knee-high to his cigar and brandy. "Always give a firm handshake when you meet someone" (I do) and "Son, never run after a woman or a bus – there's always another one along soon". Yup.

Lastly, how can we find you on the Internet?

My Twitter account is @russellkane and my Facebook is Russ Kane. I'd be delighted to welcome you to the antics that keep me amused, or very, very angry!

LEAVING LAS VEGAN?!?

Seems everyone has gone Vegan mad in LA of late.

The move to the strict vegetarian diet is prompted (at least in part) by a new Netflix documentary called "WHAT THE HEALTH?". An after watching it, I too succumbed to the power of suggestion and haven't eaten meat in over three weeks. On Facebook this week I asked how many of my friends have also been bitten by this bug. And to my surprise quite a lot of them. So I started to do a little more investigating and asked a few Brits in LA members to give their opinions on the Kip Andersen's film. Some excerpted opinions can be found below. For the full version, please check out the BiLA column on the britishweekly.com website.

Andersen makes a strong argument that most major diseases can be avoided and potentially reversed by giving up meat and dairy. Diet is indeed the most powerful tool we have to fight against disease. Many health experts agree that the vast majority of Americans eat way too many animal products. However, Andersen isn't a scientist or nutritionist - and some other experts (including health care professionals) are debunking those claims, that really come through in the way he (Andersen) cherry-picked the research presented in the film. I agree this powerful movie has a huge impact but like everything involving diet, you make your own decisions based on the research you do.

For now I'm sticking with my plan and have been researching the whole lifestyle change. The biggest thing I've observed is how meat eaters JUDGE you and like to make fun, in a very - mean girls "you can't sit with us" way. Which I take with a pinch of salt. However, having chatted some serious vegans and getting some good knowledge - including about how B12 supplements are a must and how GREAT cashew milk tastes, AND how protein bars and shakes have dairy in them, AND where you can buy great-tasting vegan cheese, I feel a lot more knowledgeable on the subject. I have also discovered some new vegan restaurants that have actually been on my doorstep for a while. Crossroads (8284 Melrose Ave, Los Angeles) for one. Upscale, great tasting food for a chic clientele. Cafe Gratitude-- a more grungy granola-crunching vibe with good wellness juices and a mean avocado on toast - multiple locations including 639 N Larchmont Boulevard and Rose Avenue in Venice. Then there is Gracias Madre, a vegan Mexican restaurant with kick-ass drinks (8905 Melrose Avenue in West Hollywood).

One thing I can tell you for sure that has happened a lot in these three weeks. I'm feeling clearer, thinner, more alert and have a ton of extra energy. But the biggest issue is some rather alarming flatulence which has fouled up the bedroom a storm at nights - here's hoping for the sake of my marriage that the wind calms down somewhat!!! Lol.

PAUL FOX shares his case for WTH?

- My husband and I have always tried to eat healthy at home and exercise where possible, keep take-aways and fast food down to a rare occurrence and generally look after ourselves.

Then, after watching (the documentary) "Cowspiracy" a while back, seeing the cows kept perpetually pregnant to be able to milk them (and the calves just being disposed of), we both decided to not buy any more dairy. With so many other 'milk' options for coffee and breakfast that it didn't feel like too much of a loss anyway.

And then last Monday evening we sat down with some trepidation to watch 'What the health', as we had heard so many people say that watching this documentary would change the way you eat forever. And it did.

We are now starting on a journey to see what happens if we cut out all animal products from our diet. The documentary hits really hard, the WHOLE industry, how the animals are reared, treated then slaughtered and packaged, the effects of the farms on local communities and indeed the planet, the personal health effects of eating as much animal product as we do, and most infuriating was finding out that government advice bureaux are funded by the meat and fast food industry AND pharmaceutical companies, telling people to continue eating meat, even processed foods, when moving to a plant based diet clearly proves to help diabetes, cancer and other related diseases - it's all an horrendous vicious circle that sounds like it could all be massively eased in one simple way. Eat fewer animals.

And the case against the documentary is courtesy of MARTIN LEE WHITE:

"While there are perfectly valid reasons for going vegan, the cancer and diabetes claims in this propaganda film (it's not a documentary) do not count among them. This film is irresponsible scaremongering that lacks credibility when presenting the scientific data. Right off the bat, the representation of the World Health Organization's classification of processed meat as a Class

1 carcinogen demonstrates how woefully misinformed the presenter is....The processed meat analysis showed an increase in colorectal cancer risk from 5.6% to 6.6% with daily consumption of 50g. Sure, that's 18% higher, but it's a small absolute increased risk. In any case, to interpret the difference to eating processed meat as the sole causal factor is wrong.

Epidemiological studies uncover correlations, but however hard you try to control for various factors, correlation does not equal causation. Perhaps people who eat processed meat consume more processed foods in general...many of which contain lots of sugar. And that's my second main beef here.

(The film's narrator) largely glazes over the large and compelling body of evidence linking the rise in sugar and high fructose corn syrup consumption to diabetes, obesity and even inflammation. Instead, he prefers to cherry-pick his way through data to line up animal protein as the only possible culprit. It's intentionally biased, sensationalist and wrong.

The rest is up to you to make up your own minds on what the hell you think is best for you and your loved ones. I'm just glad this isn't a pyramid scheme that I'm too late to join :)

WHAT THE HEALTH? Is available on Netflix now.

Good health to you all, Craig Young

Becks junior calls foul on downside of fame

Brooklyn Beckham says fame has its “ups and downs”.

The eldest son of multi-millionaire power couple David and Victoria Beckham moaned that it has been hard to be a normal 18-year-old because he is so well-known.

Oo-er!

Speaking to US website Entertainment Tonight, the aspiring photographer said: “Fame has its ups and downs. I get opportunities most people my age don’t get. But I can’t do what most 18-year-olds do.

“I can’t go out partying all the time, I have to work and get up early.”

Brooklyn – who published his first book of photography earlier this year – also spoke of the pressure on him to follow in his dad’s footsteps on the soccer pitch.

And he revealed he had a hard time as an Arsenal Academy player and said: “Every time I made a mistake everyone was looking at me like, ‘Oh my God, like, he made a mistake.’”

Young Beckham is now planning to take a bite out of the Big Apple to focus on his photography – and though he’s a “little” nervous about living on his own, the talented teen says his famous parents have spent his lifetime doing prep work.

“My dad’s always taught me how to do stuff on my own,” he told PEOPLE Magazine this week.

Beckham’s first photography book – What I See – is currently available on shelves, but he’s still working on perfecting his craft. In fact, photography school is the impetus behind Beckham’s move to New York City in just two weeks.

“I’m studying art and photography, like film and digital – a mix of both,” the 18-year-old shares. “I’m really excited to start and I feel like it’ll be a really cool thing for me to focus on for a few years.”

Despite a “tough time” with his public life, Brooklyn bagged his first fashion shoot at just 16 – an entire ad campaign for Burberry.

He appears to crave fame just like his mommy and daddy... Just sayin’!

Hiddleston teaming up with Branagh for RADA Hamlet

British actor Tom Hiddleston will play Hamlet in a new production directed by Kenneth Branagh.

Branagh’s theatre company is joining forces with RADA for the production, which will take place at the drama school’s Jerwood Vanbrugh Theatre in central London.

Oo-er!

It runs from September 1 to 23 and will raise funds for RADA’s Attenborough Campaign appeal.

RADA alumnus Hiddleston will lead a cast that also includes Lolita Chakrabarti as Gertrude, Kathryn Wilder as Ophelia and Nicholas Farrell as Claudius.

Hiddleston said the role offered “almost limitless possibilities for interpretation”.

“I can’t wait to explore them, with this great cast, at RADA. Kenneth Branagh and I have long talked about working on the play together, and now felt like the right time, at the right place,” he said.

“The performing arts exist to bring people together, not to break or keep them apart. I hope the funds raised by the production will help RADA continue to provide a wider field of equal opportunity to train actors, stage managers and technical theatre artists, from every background, to a standard of excellence and professionalism. We need to keep the doors open for everyone.”

The campaign hopes to raise $30 million to regenerate its Chenies Street site and provide RADA’s first on-site accommodation for students.

The project will also include a new library, archive and a 250-seat theatre, named the Richard Attenborough Theatre.

Branagh, who is RADA’s president, returns to the school to direct Hamlet, a role he performed in 1981 while studying there.

In an exclusive interview, he told The Stage: “I’m not someone who gets particularly nostalgic, but there is definitely a moment in your life where you look back with a different clarity. This is one such moment, and doing Hamlet here feels like coming full circle. RADA gave me confidence, support and creative freedom. I had a fantastic time here.”

Tickets for Hamlet will be available by ballot, which will be open from midday on August 1 until 6pm on August 6. Successful applicants will have 48 hours to book their tickets, with purchases limited to two tickets per person.

I might well go and see this!

Dark British mysteries for those lazy summer days

Great reads from a new crop of British mystery novels

We're right in the middle of the dog days of summer. What better time to relax and catch up on some of the best recent British mystery books we may have missed reading earlier in the year.?

Requiem for a Mezzo by Carola Dunn

It's March 1923. Daisy Dalrymple takes a break from writing to attend a performance of Verdi's Requiem at the Albert Hall. Her date is Scotland Yard's Detective Chief Inspector Alec Fletcher. Daisy's neighbor Muriel Westlea gave her the tickets. Muriel's sister Bettina is singing the mezzo role. At the performance, Bettina drops dead on stage. It's from the glass she drinks from on stage. Laced with cyanide poison. Who wanted her dead and why in such a public way?

Detective Chief Inspector Fletcher doesn't want Daisy on the case, but that won't stop her even if it means investigating on her own.

BRITISH WEEKLY SPORT

That match begins on Friday, when the hosts will look to buck a recent trend in home Tests in which they have followed an emphatic win with a heavy defeat.

Whatever happens in Manchester, South Africa will not be able to register a third successive Test series win in England and are in danger of losing in Britain for the first time since 1998.

With South Africa 252-7, England realistically had the game won when Moeen began his 15th over in the hour after lunch, but that takes nothing away from the theatre of the moment.

The obdurate Elgar finally played a loose shot to edge to Ben Stokes and, next ball, Rabada poked forward to give a catch to the same man.

With the over completed, Moeen had to wait for the chance of the hat-trick, and hurried the ball into the pads of Morkel only for a huge appeal to be turned down.

The review came instantly, the crowd at The Oval nervously watched replays on the big screen and then joined in with the joyous celebration of the England team when Morkel's fate was sealed.

Moeen is only the fourth man in Test history to seal victory with a hat-trick and the first for 60 years.

Not since James Kirtley took eight wickets against South Africa at Trent Bridge in 2003 has an England bowler made a bigger impact on his Test debut than Toby Roland-Jones.

The tall pace bowler had Temba Bavuma and Vernon Philander lbw to successive deliveries to finish with match figures of 8-129.

That left the battling Elgar to resist with the lower order and, though he was clearly struggling with an injured left hand, he played pulls and drives to move from an overnight 72 to an eighth Test century.

The opener had the chance to become the first South Africa player to carry his bat since he did it against England at Durban in 2015.

After he fell, Moeen ensured the game ended quickly.

England's task at Old Trafford is not only to seal a first Test series win in four attempts, but also to improve a pattern of mixed results in home matches.

Of their previous nine wins on home soil, five have been followed immediately by a loss.

Not only that, they must find a way to win Tests when they do not bat first.

This result extends an excellent record of batting first in home Tests - it is now 14 wins in 17 matches dating back to 2013.

However, their record fielding first is poor, only four wins from 14 matches in the same period, worse than all but Bangladesh and Zimbabwe.

It is up to Joe Root's side to find more than one way of winning a Test.

Wenger bullish on Sanchez return

Arsenal manager Arsene Wenger expects Alexis Sanchez to return to training on Tuesday after repeating his belief that the forward will stay at the club.

Sanchez was set to report back for pre-season on Sunday after his summer break, but has stayed away because of illness.

"He has flu, yes. I had him on text yesterday," said Wenger after Saturday's 5-2 win over Benfica.

"There's no development - he is staying, of course."

The striker posted a picture on Instagram on Friday with the one word caption 'sick.' He had been given permission to return to pre-season training late after helping Chile to the Confederations Cup final in Russia.

Sanchez, 28, is entering the final year of his Arsenal contract, as are Mesut Ozil, Kieran Gibbs, Alex Oxlade-Chamberlain and Jack Wilshere.

But Wenger, who signed a new two-year deal of his own in May, does not believe that uncertainty over their futures will have a negative impact on the squad.

"The players who have one year of their contract have to respect their contract and play out their contract," Wenger said.

Arsenal impressed as they beat Benfica, with Theo Walcott scoring twice and Olivier Giroud and Alex Iwobi also on target while Lisandro Lopez scored an own goal.

MATIC: assured United debut against Sampdoria in midweek

Mou hails 'genius' Matic

Jose Mourinho has hailed Nemanja Matic as a 'genius' after the Serb made his first appearance for Manchester United in their 2-1 win over Sampdoria on Wednesday evening.

The £40 million signing from Chelsea played the opening 45 minutes as he looks to improve his fitness ahead of the new campaign.

Matic was forced to train alone at Chelsea prior to his move to Old Trafford and played no part of his former club's pre-season tour of the Far East.

But the Serb make an immediate impact at the heart of United's midfield against the Serie A club and impressed in his defensive role alongside Paul Pogba and Andreas Pereira.

When asked about the 29-year-old's display against Sampdoria in Dublin, Mourinho told MUTV: "This is Matic.

"In my opinion, to play simple in that position is genius, and he's a genius because he makes everything so simple, the team runs, the ball runs, he's fantastic in his position.

"The way he plays, he plays with his brain, of course he needs physicality to be a at the top of his game, but obviously no pre-season, no pre-season, it's not easy."

But despite Mourinho's praise for the player, one leading football writer in the UK has claimed the Serb was United's second choice player for the position - with Eric Dier their preferred target.

The Times' football writer Gabriele Marcotti claimed the Manchester giants settled on Matic after after Spurs refused to countenance a bid for their highly-rated midfielder.

"I think the other target or alternative in that role for Manchester United was Eric Dier," Marcotti told ESPN.

"Obviously negotiating with Tottenham was tough. Tottenham did not want to let him go.

"Obviously everybody has a price.

"I think they took a long, hard run at Dier but then they saw they weren't getting anywhere with Spurs."

Matic became United's third summer signing following the arrivals of Victor Lindelof from Benfica and Romelu Lukaku from Everton.

And the midfielder admitted he was delighted to work with Mourinho once more and revealed his bold plans for silverware in his first season at Old Trafford.

"This squad is very good, it is more mature, and they have already worked under Jose for one year and know what they have to do," Matic said.

Atleti edge Reds on pens

Liverpool suffered their first defeat of the pre-season campaign after losing 5-4 on penalties in the Audi Cup final against Atletico Madrid in Munich on Wednesday night.

The game finished 1-1 after 90 minutes, with Roberto Firmino's spot-kick cancelling out Keidi Bare's first-half opener for the La Liga side.

Liverpool captain

Jordan Henderson saw his penalty saved by Miguel Angel Moya in the resulting shootout.

And Filipe Luis stepped up to net the decisive spot-kick.

Jurgen Klopp's side reached the final of the four-team competition after beating hosts Bayern Munich 3-0, while Atletico progressed with a 2-1 win over Napoli.

Liverpool, who won the Asia Cup last month, will now prepare to face Athletic Bilbao in Dublin in their final friendly match before their league campaign begins at Watford on 12 August.

Meanwhile, Atletico will now travel to England to face Premier League newcomers Brighton in a friendly at the Amex Stadium on 6 August.

Forrest fires to send Hoops safely through

Rosenborg.....0
Celtic.....1
(agg: 0-1)

James Forrest's outstanding strike from a tight angle saw off a dogged Rosenborg side to secure Celtic's place in the Champions League play-off round on Wednesday night.

The visitors created the better opportunities in a goalless first half but had to survive a spell of Rosenborg pressure after the interval.

Celtic's patience was rewarded when Forrest lashed the ball in from the right of the area after 69 minutes.

Rosenborg pushed forward in the final stages but could not break Celtic down.

The Scottish champions will face Astana, Qarabag, Rijeka, Hapoel Beer Sheva or Slavia Prague in the play-off round, with Kazakh side Astana and Israel's Hapoel having lost to Celtic in last year's competition.

Celtic manager Brendan Rodgers had opted for an element of caution, leaving the fit-again Leigh Griffiths on the bench and starting winger Forrest as a makeshift central striker.

Erik Sviatchenko returned to the starting line-up, but lasted only 24 minutes before injury forced him off. Celtic endured the setback, though, and eventually prevailed, with Forrest spurning a one-on-one with the goalkeeper late on to increase the lead.

The Scottish champions created few chances in the home leg, but Rodgers was confident his side would benefit from an extra week's training as they try to rediscover the devastating attacking fluency of so much of last season's play.

Kieran Tierney was certainly prominent early on as a threat down the left, surging forward from his full-back role, and one drilled cross presented an opportunity to Forrest, whose effort was tipped over by Rosenborg goalkeeper Andre Hansen.

Celtic's best other effort came from a set piece, with Jonny Hayes slinging over a cross that Sviatchenko headed on target only for his Danish compatriot Nicklas Bendtner to block the ball on its way to the goal-line.

Rosenborg tried to prompt and probe in the final third when they could make ground forward, but all that Celtic goalkeeper Craig Gordon had to cope with was a weak long-range effort by Milan Jevtovic.

The home side were more assertive after the interval, though, noticeably closing the Celtic players down more urgently. The change in approach was effective, since they enjoyed a spell

COMFORT ZONE: Celtic's James Forrest started as a striker but scored the critical goal after moving back to the wing of pressure.

Celtic mostly stood firm, but Bendtner was a threat and showing a deft touch with his chest, he steered a high ball cleverly into the path of Yann-Erik de Lanlay, who pulled his shot beyond the far post.

Needing to alter the dynamic of the game, Rodgers replaced Hayes with Griffiths, hoping that the centre forward and proven scorer would provide a cutting edge to his side.

Bendtner continued to show more willingness to be involved, and another intervention led to Mike Jensen's shot just brushing the outside of the post.

Rosenborg's menace would have been a concern for Celtic, but the visitors played with maturity and continued to rely on their self-belief; it was eventually rewarded.

Sinclair burst through the middle to the edge of the area then moved the ball out to Forrest on the right, who skipped past his marker then lashed the ball high past Hansen from a tight angle, the ball crashing in off the underside of the bar.

It was the breakthrough that Celtic craved, and enough to secure a deserved place in Friday's play-off round draw.

Moeen finished with 4-45 as South Africa, chasing an unlikely 492, were bowled out for 252.

England lead the series 2-1 with only the fourth Test at Old Trafford to play.
