TAKING ON THE LONDON FATBERG

A "sewer war" has been launched by British engineers on a "monster" fatberg as heavy as 11 double-decker buses that has clogged a Victorian-era sewer tunnel in London's East End.

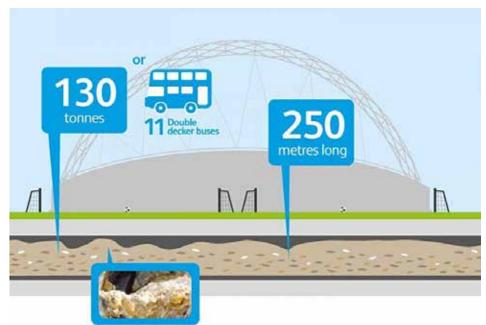

The 250-metre-long fatberg - a mass of congealed fat, wet wipes, nappies and condoms - was found below the streets of Whitechapel last week. Thames Water officials said was as long as two football fields, and as hard as concrete and estimate it will take three weeks to dissolve.

Eight workers are using high-powered jet hoses to break up the fatberg before sucking it out into tankers for disposal at a recycling site.

Head of waste networks Matt Rimmer told the Evening Standard: "This fatberg is up there with the biggest we've ever seen. It's a total monster and taking a lot of manpower and machinery to remove as it's set hard.

"It's basically like trying to break up concrete. It's frustrating as these situations are totally avoidable and caused by fat, oil and grease being washed

'A TOTAL MONSTER': the engineer heading the effort to remove the fatberg urged Londoners to be more careful about what they flush down the toilet down sinks and wipes flushed down the loo."

Workers are removing about 20 to 30 tons per shift, working nine hours a day, seven days a week.

Mr Rimmer said:

Mr Rimmer said:
"We check our sewers routinely but these things can build up really quickly and cause big problems with flooding."

The fatberg is more than 10 times bigger than the one in Kingston in 2013 which made national headlines after local residents in the well-to-do suburb complained their toilets would not flush.

Last year crews used a crane to remove a sevenmetre "snake" of mainly wet wipes, weighing about 1500lbs, from a sewer under Newcastle, while another 300 kilograms were removed by crew members using buckets.

The company said it spends about £1 million a month clearing blockages from its sewers. Mr Rimmer urged people to think about what they flush down toilets: "The sewers are not an abyss for household rubbish."

Skye 'not a real island', says MP

■ Scottish politican under fire for suggesting famed island does not have the transport issues 'real islands' do

An outspoken Nationalist MSP has provoked ridicule after questioning whether Skye is a "real island" because it has a bridge to the mainland.

John Mason used a meeting of Holyrood's rural economy committee to question why Skye should be included in Scottish Government legislation that aims to help Scotland's islands.

He suggested that Skye should be excluded as it does not have transport issues which "real islands" do, before questioning civil servants whether its inclusion was "unanimous".

But Scottish Government officials

responded that his question was "quite surprising" as Skye was "definitely" an inhabited island and his comments provoked mockery on social media.

One Twitter user said they were looking forward to Mr Mason explaining why Britain is not an island because of the Channel tunnel.

The Glasgow Shettleston MSP provoked ridicule in 2016 by disclosing that he was still boycotting a travel agent that opposed independence, nearly two years after the referendum.

He was forced to apologise earlier this year after appearing to compare the IRA killers of three Scottish soldiers in Northern Ireland to "freedom fighters."

In June, amid concerns about declining literacy in Scotland's schools, he took to Twitter again to question whether a surgeon not being able to spell was a problem.

His latest gaffe occurred as Holyrood's rural economy committee examined the Islands Bill, which aims to offer greater powers to island local authorities and create a sustainable future for the islands.

Speaking during an evidence session with the civil servants dealing with the legislation, Mr Mason asked: "Was it unanimous that something like Skye should be included? It says that bridges are ignored, but surely Skye doesn't have the problems of ferries and transport which real islands do?"

Edward Mountain, the Tory committee convener, replied: "I'm sure we'll all agree that Skye is a real island".

Darren Dickson, one of the officials, said: "We've actually had it asked of us three times whether Skye is covered by the bill - people obviously aren't reading the explanatory notes very clearly because it's quite clearly stated that Skye is included."

Battered husband secretly filmed his wife because he feared cops would not believe him

A battered husband installed a hidden camera in his home to film his wife attacking him as he feared police wouldn't believe him, a court has heard.

Neil Tweedy, 45, had endured violence from wife Helen since 2005, including an assault on their wedding night in 2008 where she kicked, punched and smothered him with a duvet, before making him sleep on the sofa.

Defence lawyer James Street told the court that school teacher Mrs Tweedy had "significant mental health problems" their wedding night in caused by binge drinking.

Mr Tweedy eventually reported the crimes after Mrs Tweedy continued the abuse after the birth of their daughter, now four.

The victim secretly recorded the assaults at the couple's £200,000 semi-detached home in Greater Manchester because he was afraid that police would not believe him without evidence. Over a two-month period three incidents of Mrs Tweedy slapping her husband over the head and swearing at him were caught on camera, once in front of their daughter.

At Manchester magistrates court, Mrs Tweedy admitted three charges of common assault by beating and was given a restraining order banning her from contacting her husband, as well as 120 hours of unpaid work.

Prosecutor Robin Lynch said: "The first three years were described by the complainant as 'amazing' but the defendant began to drink in private and there sometimes there was some controlling behavior.

Mr Tweedy later said: "Helen is a fantastic and brilliant teacher and gets to work for 7.30am and doesn't leave till 7.30pm. She's just so hard working.

"The problem was just alcohol, she was admitted to hospital twice in the past year and could have died. Something had to change.

Victims of shamed and imprisoned breast surgeon lan Paterson awarded £37m

■ Disgraced doc, serving 20-year sentence for wounding with intent, victimized hundreds

Hundreds of private patients maimed by disgraced breast surgeon Ian Paterson are to receive compensation payouts totalling £37 million.

Spire Healthcare has agreed to contribute £27.2 million into a fund for 750 patients who endured unnecessary treatment at two private clinics in the West Midlands. A further £10million will be added by the NHS and Paterson's insurers.

Paterson, 59, is serving a 20-year prison sentence for wounding with intent. He is thought to have carried out more than a thousand needless operations, invasive procedures or breast removals on private and NHS patients in the West Midlands over two decades.

financial gain

Nottingham crown court heard how Paterson abused his position as one of Britain's most prolific cancer surgeons to manipulate patients into believing that they needed cancer operations for his own financial gain.

His victims were left disfigured and traumatized. Many of his private patients paid for the unnecessary operations themselves.

The health service has already paid out nearly £18 million to 250 of the Glaswegian-born surgeon's NHS patients who were given an unsanctioned "cleavage sparing mastectomy", which is thought to increase the risk of cancer returning. At least 540 patients may have had this operation.

The Medical Defence Union, which acts as legal representatives and insurers to doctors, operates a discretionary cover policy. It withdrew Paterson's insurance cover when he became the subject of a criminal trial

The civil case involving 750 former Spire patients, which is due to go to court in October, has highlighted flaws with liability laws concerning private health providers, prompting calls for the "grey area" to be addressed.

'battle for justice'

Sallie Booth, from Irwin Mitchell, said: "There are still questions regarding the redress that private healthcare patients have if they are the victims of negligent medical treatment. This is still a grey area and many people wrongly believe they will be better protected under private care than under the NHS.

"We are pleased that Spire has today accepted that 'better' clinical governance might have led to 'action being taken sooner'. But that is little comfort for Paterson's victims."

In April Paterson was found guilty of 17 charges

PATERSON: abused his position as one of Britain's most prolific cancer surgeons of wounding with intent and three of unlawful wounding involving nine women and one man. Last month he had his sentence increased from 15 to 20 years at the Court of Appeal.

Emma Doughty, a medical negligence lawyer from Slater and Gordon, representing more than 100 of Paterson's victims, said: "No financial settlement will ever heal the physical and mental scars inflicted on our clients but they are relieved that they have finally won their battle for justice."

Simon Gordon, interim chief executive officer of Spire, which until now has refused to accept liability for Paterson's patients, said: "Earlier this year a criminal court decided that Ian Paterson must bear responsibility for his actions, finding him guilty of assaulting a number of his patients.

"He behaved with clear criminal intent and abused the trust of those who looked to him for his care and relied upon his expertise."

Theatre colossus Sir Peter Hall dies at 86

■ Director was in many ways the single most influential figure in British theatre in the second half of the 20th Century.

Sir Peter Hall, the founder of the Royal Shakespeare Company and former National Theatre director, has died at the age of 86.

He died on Monday at University College hospital in London, surrounded by his family, the National Theatre said.

During his career he staged the English language premiere of Samuel Beckett's Waiting for Godot and the world premiere of Harold Pinter's Homecoming.

Sir Peter had been diagnosed with dementia in 2011

Sir Peter became director of the National in 1973 and was responsible for the theatre's move from the Old Vic to the purpose-built complex on the South Bank.

He founded the RSC at the age of just 29 in 1960 and led the company until 1968.

Tributes have been paid to Sir Peter by many in the theatre world.

Speaking to Radio 4's World at One, actress Vanessa Redgrave described Sir Peter as "a very extraordinary, interesting fascinating director".

"He mischievous, very handsome, an extremely attractive man who everyone fell in love with... he was everything really, a kind of Shelley in the theatre."

Actor Sir Michael said Sir Gambon Peter "never stopped working".

Several stars have credited Sir Peter with helping launch their careers, Sir Patrick Stewart being among them.

Rufus Norris, current director of the National Theatre, said: 'We all stand on the shoulders of giants and Peter Hall's shoulders supported the entirety of British theatre as we know it.

'great impresario'

"All of us, including those in the new generation of theatremakers not immediately touched by his influence. are in his debt. His legendary and vision created an or extraordinary and lasting legacy for us all."

Sir Peter Hall was, in many ways, the single most influential figure in British theatre in the second half of the 20th Century. Not just because he was the man who launched Beckett in Britain, or founded the Royal Shakespeare Company, described Sir Peter as "not only a thrilling and penetrating director, he was also the great impresario of the age". And Sir Richard Eyre said Sir Peter "was - and is - the godfather (in both senses) of British theatre".

Greg Doran, director of the RSC, said of his predecessor: "Sir Peter Hall was a colossus, bestriding the British theatre. He was a visionary.

"Not only was he a great director of theatre and opera, he was a politician who fought for the arts... his greatest legacy without doubt will be judged to be the formation of the Royal Shakespeare Company."

Chastened Sir Cliff prepares to leave his beloved Portuguese hideaway

■ Singer seeks life of anonymity in US after prolonged probe into abuse claims

SIR Cliff Richard is preparing to leave his beloved Portuguese home amid plans to downsize and move to America after his two years of hell fighting false allegations of sexual abuse.

The singer, 77 next is looking forward to a life of greater anonymity in the US after revealing the police investigation against him triggered disastrous time emotionally" as he waited to hear whether he would be arrested. He is selling his 300-yearold farmhouse and its surrounding vineyard in the Algarve. They have gone on the market for £6.4million. He said: "I'm trying to be wise in my old age, and much as I've loved it, it's too big to keep running."

Sir Cliff was staying at the farmhouse in Albufeira when he learnt police had a warrant to search his Berkshire home in August 2014. He was also there in June last year when he learned the Crown Prosecution Service had thrown out the case against him. He was never arrested.

"It hurt me so much I don't think I can ever recover personally," he said in an interview published this week. "I'm living my life again and it's all in my past – but when I think of what I tried to build up in my career, I know it's been damaged in places I won't ever go back to."

Spandau seek new frontman

SPANDAU insist they're not ready to throw the towel in quite yet despite frontman Tony Hadley's recent revelation that he was quitting the band. In fact so keen are the Gold hitmakers to carry on they'll be holding auditions later this month to find Tony's replacement.

"Now Tony has decided that he doesn't want to do the band thing. I don't know why but he wants to go solo. We could all think of going solo but I actually think I'd rather be in Spandau Ballet so that's the idea," said drummer John Keeble, 58, at a London screening of the new documentary Through The Barricades, to coincide with a remastered and extended anniversary edition of the album of the same name which comes out on September 22.

And with Tony, 57 having taken to Twitter in July to announce he was leaving the group, remaining members Gary Kemp, Martin Kemp, Steve Norman and John will step up their search for another singer but have ruled out going down the TV show route. Gary, 57, added: "We wouldn't want to do a TV reality show to find a singer. I'd like to take us more seriously.

"At the moment it's all open, it's all up for grabs. We are waiting for the phone calls to come in and we're looking for people."

Dam lucky: British tourist reveals how he swam Hoover Dam during drunken stag do

A British man has told movie look tame! how he cheated death when he jumped into water at the Hoover Dam and swam to the other side in a drunk stag night stunt.

Forklift truck driver Aaron Hughes from Leeds became the first person to survive the daring feat when he dived into the reservoir in just his Lonsdale trainers while on holiday with his friends last month.

Speaking to the Yorkshire Daily Post newspaper, he said: "It was around 45-50 degrees outside and we were on a stag do in Vegas. You go to Vegas to have fun don't you? We made The Hangover

"We were all just standing there, and I thought, 'f it! I'm going for a swim'. I got to the bottom and thought 'I can make that'

Mr Hughes, 28, was fined $330 (£250) after being arrested as got out of the reservoir, which supplies water electricity to Las Vegas.

He said he could feel the dam sucking him in during the 30 minute swim at the foot of the dam, but is said to have survived because only one of the 10 turbines was in operation.

"My friends all think I'm a legend," Hughes added.

A 13-year-old who died of a brain aneurysm has helped save a record number of lives by donating her organs. Just two weeks before she suddenly collapsed in 2012, Jemima Layzell (pictured, right) from Horton in Somerset, had told her parents that were she to die, she would want to donate her organs. Her organs had eight recipients, five of whom were children. According to the NHS Blood and Transplant Unit, no donor in the UK has helped more people: typically, a donation results in one or two transplants. "Everyone wants their child to be unique," said Jemima's mother, Sophy. "This, among other things, makes us very proud."

Britain's Arctic tern population is booming, thanks to intense conservation efforts. In 2016, only two of the birds that hatched in one of their largest breeding grounds, on Northumberland coast, left their nests: the rest fell victim to high tides, marine pollution and predators. But last year, the National Trust bought a further 200 acres of land, at Tughall Mill. Rangers set up tents on the site, monitored the birds around the clock - and this year, 500 left their nests unscathed.

He is said to have been seen "waving his hands in the air" in desperation before being dragged under water at a lagoon known as Crocodile Rock, located just just minutes from a popular surfing beach.

Fawas Lafeer, owner of Safa Surf School, located up the coast from where the incident happened, said: "This afternoon at around 3.15pm there was an incident involving a tourist at Elephant Rock surf spot, near Aragum Bay.

"A local fisherman witnessed a man being dragged into a river, set back from the beach, by a crocodile. The fisherman was on the opposite side of the river and downstream of the incident location.

"He went surfing at the local surf spot; a trip organised by the hotel he was staying at. He headed away from the beach into the jungle around 900m

Mr Lafeer added: "This is the first known crocodile attack in Sri Lanka. Both tourists and locals surf at Elephant Rock, which is a beautiful secluded beach and very safe.

"Crocodiles in Sri Lanka live only in the fresh, back waters of the jungle. It is almost unheard of for them to come close to the beach. The salt water actually turns them blind

Meet a Member: Beau Fowler

Meet Beau Fowler, a film Angeles? director from London who is halfway through getting the O1 visa process and hoping to make the move to LA by year's end.

What prompted you to move to LA?

This city is the film hub of the world, offering many more opportunities than London. love the positivity, and proactivity. My style as director is more welcomed in LA and the US in general than the UK.

What do you expect to miss when you make the move here?

Other than family, London's public transport. It's so easy to get around without having to drive!

What was your first impression of Los

First impression was the incredible sun and general positivity of the people.

Do you have any gems hidden recommend?

My hidden gems are my friends who already live here.

What would you suggest for anyone who wants to make the move here?

Make sure you are serious, and proactive. And wear sunscreen, lots of sunscreen.

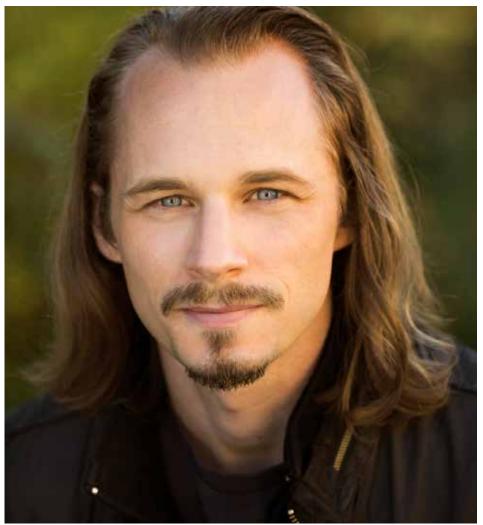

Do you have any words of wisdom you'd like to share with us?

Aspire to Inspire before you expire.

How can we find out more about you. On what projects are you currently working? My latest short film is 'Express Delivery' directed and starring myself, has five awards, most recently recently 'Bet Action Short Film of the Year' and 'Male Action Performer of the Year' at the Action on Film Festival in Monrovia last month. While we continue the festival run, we're currently developing the screenplay for the feature, and have several other features development in including supernatural revenge thriller called Days of Dark'. Other than that, I've been auditioning, training, and producing various projects through my production company Ki Films. You can find more about me online at beaufowler.com.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: It's time to speak out in a situation that has been in flux for quite some time. While unpredictable Uranus is in your life your intuition will be on high alert. The full picture will be clearer by the end of next week.

TAURUS: You can be sure you are on the right track in any area this week when you listen to your inner knowing. Pay attention to what your wants are rather than what you need. Maybe your life is somewhat hectic lately, so block out anything that is not relevant.

GEM INI: You have a lot of energy at your disposal this next week or so. However, you should be careful not to put others on the defense. You have a lot of different areas you are dealing with currently and you can achieve a lot by taking some time to relax.

CAN CER: Chances are you have been a bit reclusive of late. While this is often a normal thing for you be sure you are seen out and about this next week. Mercury strolling along in your communication area will open up clear channels.

LEO: This is a time for being more understanding about others in your life and the way they conduct their lives. While life has its ups and down always remember the lesson in everything. Happy days and events are about to transpire in your life.

VIR GO: It's time for you to be actively looking for a healthier way to be in your life. This may mean different things for some of you. Whatever area it is, physical or emotional, make it a priority now. This is the beginning of your personal new year. Make it a good one. Happy Birthday!

LIBRA: Jupiter has turned in a positive forward motion to move anything in your life that has been delayed or held up. This is the time of year that you should clear away anything that can impede the beginning of your personal new year.

SCORPIO: You are not usually the kind of person that gets blue or down for long. Usually you have plenty of energy (more than most people), disruption and stress have taken a toll on you for some time now. That was then; take heart you are ready for lift-off in a great way. SAGITTARIUS: Now your boss planet Jupiter is going direct it's time for you to take some chances. This should be outside of your normal comfort zone. This period is absolutely made for you to clear out and start fresh. Just remember not to overdo anything, as time is on your side

CAPRICORN: With Pluto in your house and getting revved up to move forward this month, you would be wise to plan ahead and not leave anything to chance. It is not the best time to start to establish a new stream of income or change jobs.

AQUARIUS: You are on the verge of a brand new cycle and you can actually achieve this week something you have desired Your boss Uranus is very powerful currently in the fire sign of Aries and will not take no for an answer. Go for your goal - it's a good time!

PISCES: Life has been a bit boring of late for some of you, while for others of your sign it may seem normal. Sometimes it is good to take a backseat and chill out. This week starts a fast-moving cycle so put your skates on and get moving!

33 Walks: a quite capital new guide.....

Exclusive interview with author Nicola Perry discussing her London walking book

"When you're born in London, you don't necessarily do the touristy things," says Nicola Perry, author of 33 Walks in London That You Shouldn't Miss.

"That is something outof-towners do, or how we like to look at it. And getting lost is a definite no-no. The real, personal inspiration though goes back ten years, when a Czech friend introduced me to her pocket of West London. My friend and I would wander for hours along the treelined avenues and mews streets of Holland Park and Kensington. In those early days of discovering west London, I loved the feeling of not being the one leading the way and, for the first time, to feel guided to unknown places."

Nicola Perry is a London native who takes us on 33 walks that are different from the well-known attractions. She shares historical anecdotes. tips and unexpected neighborhoods, meandering through alleys, squares, lesser known monuments and markets. There are small charming boutiques to explore, details of places to eat and more than 250 color photographs. This book is part of the 111 Places/111 Shops series published by Emons.

"Attending an event where Emons' publishers were speaking, I was impressed by their vision for their travel series," says Perry. "They wanted to produce regional travel books that spoke to locals and visitors alike. By then, Emons had already published two books on London. I approached them with the idea for a book on walks and a sample chapter. I was delighted when they commissioned me to write the book."

Perry says that two of her favorites are the two interconnected walks between west and southwest London, crossing over unseen borders, The Art Lovers Walk and The French Quarter Walk.

"Starting out early from Ladbroke Grove, I'd recommend sampling the crazy-loud, vibrant market on Portobello Road before commencing the walk," says Perry. "I enjoy juxtaposing walks. Moving from Portobello's international vibrancy to the more rarefied enclaves of the Holland Park area and the park itself.

Where one walk ends, the other begins...The French Walk. Again, it is the residential architecture that attracts me; with a newly discovered row of pastel-painted mews houses to appraise at each cobblestoned turn."

"From south Kensington, I would recommend walking the length of Exhibition Road, dipping into the museums along the way, before crossing over to Hyde Park," says Perry. "And then simply wander. Leaving by any exit, which takes your fancy, and lose yourself for a while."

Perry's advice for anyone wanting to learn more about their neighborhood or exploring while traveling is to house share with people who have lived in the area for years, or Airbnb, speak to local merchants to ask for their recommendations.

"A neighbourhood's people are its local color," says Perry. "So, get speaking with them. One introduction surely leads on to another and another. Immerse yourself. Follow advice. Pay attention. Keep sampling what's put in front of you."

"I went to the best source there is," says Perry. "People. Locals. I asked friends to take me on their favorite walks. An American friend who has lived in London for ten years gave me his tour of Mayfair. A Grenadian friend took me on a tour of the street art of Spitalfields. A local Muswell Hill boy gave me the tour of North London. It was wonderful seeing these places anew, through the lens of other people."

Perry says the list of documents she researched is too long to list. As a professional story liner, Perry has written storylines for dozens of books across the Young Adult, romance and crime genres. She co-wrote a film script optioned by the

BOOK CORNER with Gabrielle Pantera

William Morris Agency. 33 Walks is her only travel book.

Perry is currently working on a collection of novellas, The Imaginary Lessons of Lost Men, and an animation series, The Baffling Shapes of Others.

Perry was born in London and recently moved to Norfolk.

Cheap flights, strong cocktails and great theatre...what more could you want?

Greetings Breeps!

Brits in LA had excellent news this week as we confirmed Air New Zealand will be coming aboard to sponsor Brits in LA breakfast Club for another year. This means we all can still take advantage of the generous discount codes available exclusively to Brits in LA members. On behalf of Eileen and myself I want to say a huge thank you to this fabulous airline for their support and encourage all our readers and friends to think of ANZ first when planning your trip across the Atlantic – or the Pacific, come to that!

To access the best discounts visit our Facebook group and look under files. You can also send an email to ANZcodes@britsin.la

We enjoyed another fun British Breakfast Club at Cecconi's in West Hollywood this week where guests were treated by Focus Features and Allied Advertising to a free screening for two to the new Judi Dench movie "Victoria and Abdul". This fascinating movie is a true story about the unlikely friendship between Queen Victoria and a poor Indian servant. I was lucky enough to attend a screening and I can tell you it's magnificent.

Drink up!

Coming up next week is a really exciting cocktail event with a difference. Cocktails in The City. 30 of LA's best bars all under the same roof serving their best signature cocktails. Brits in LA Members are being offered $20 tickets which included a free cocktail and goodie bag. Visit cocktailsinthecity.com and enter promo code TIPPLE.

Revolutionary show

Don't forget that the Tony-winning musical "Hamilton" is in town at the Pantages theatre in Hollywood. This show has been the hottest ticket on Broadway since it's 2015 debut and it's triumphant sweep of 11 awards at the 2016 Tony Awards. The local production is pretty much sold out, but I managed to snag a pair of tickets on StubHub last week for around $500. It's still a bit pricey but far less than the $2k tickets that scalpers were asking. But it truly is a spectacular show that is well worth seeing..... even without the show's creative genius Lin-Manuel in the lead.

And finally

And for those of you driving to or from Las Vegas in the coming weeks, please don't do what one brave

CATCH IT WHILE YOU CAN: Hamilton is now at the Pantages in Hollywood

(or crazy) Brit did this Yorkshireman week. Aaron Hughes was on vacation in Sin City for a friend's Stag Night and decided it would be fun to swim from one side of the Hoover dam to the other. The only reason he wasn't sucked to the foot of the dam, according to news reports, was because only one of the dam's ten powerful turbines was in operation. So the 28-year-old got safely to the other side, where he arrested and fined $330 for his stunt.

Dam silly, some might say...

Have a great week! Craig Young

Zayn and Harry: totally different directions!

Singer ZAYN Malik has admitted what many music insiders have long known...that he and former One Direction bandmate HarryStyles were never pals, even back in the group's heyday.

Oo-er!

Clearly not moving in One Direction but rather opposite paths, Gigi Hadid's beau revealed all to Us Magazine this week.

"To be honest, I never really spoke to Harry – even when I was in the band.

"So I didn't really expect that much of a relationship with him."

Zayn, who previously had a Twitter spat with former bezzie Louis Tomlison, also shared his relationship status on Niall Horan and Liam Payne.

And safe to say, 'It's complicated'.

He continued: "We're in touch. Everything is on a civil level.

"It's not the way it used to be, obviously.

"We were spending 24 hours a day in the band, now we're growing as individual men but we still check in."

However, despite his somewhat frosty feeling towards his old bandmates, Zayn wouldn't completely rule out a 1D reunion – much to the delight of One Directioners everywhere.

"If I wanted to come back in 10, 15 years time, then yeah, why not?" added Malik.

"I don't know. If I didn't want to [be in the band] then I might not. It just depends on how I'm feeling at the time."

The band's fierce fandom perhaps should not hold their breath for One Direction: The Comeback Tour however, as Z is loving the more sedate pace of being a solo artist.

"We were basically going at, like, 500 miles per hour. We did everything to an extreme in the band.

"[Now] it's not as full on, it's not as extreme, it's not as in-your-face. It's at my own pace.

"So this way, it feels 100 times more manageable. It's just easier. It's a lot less work."

In the meantime, Mailk is prepping for the release of his sophmore solo effort, which he recently kicked off with "Dusk til Dawn'.

And Zayn insists he won't be sticking to just one genre going forward:

"There's a lot of different kinds of music on it," he said. "I like to do whatever I'm feeling that day, whatever's feeling good. There's still a lot of soulful R&B tunes on there, there's some club tunes on there, there's some more obvious pop songs as well."

Vic and Nik just click!

Girls just wanna have fun...but since when have THESE TWO been party pals?

4 0 - y e a r - o l d British socialite and model Lady Victoria Hervey was spotted messing around and taking selfies with friend and top fashion designer Nikki Lund in Los Angeles earlier this week.

The luscious pair were on their way to a birthday party for Courtney Sixx, the wife of American musician Nikki Sixx, when they captured were rolling around the lawn sharing a laugh.

The two blondes arrived styled in rock'n'roll chic. Lady Victoria wore an all-in-one black jumpsuit finished off with a silver sequined jacket, designed by 'Custom' Nikki Lund, finishing off the slim-fitting outfit with a black top hat.

US fashion designer Nikki looked in fantastic shape after welcoming her precious bouncing baby boy Hendrix into the world only six months ago. 35-year-old Lund (who grew up in Calabasas with best friend Kim Kardashian) chose a more eclectic look, with alphabet tights and a black dress combo, topped off with a cowboy-style hat.

Both women were keen to pose for selfies as they headed to the bash.

Victoria has long been a gossip column staple in the UK and has never been one to shy away from the cameras. And she recently hit the small screen in the reality TV series Living with Lady Victoria.

And Nikki really put herself on the fashion map when she partnered with entrepreneur/ consultant Greg Writer; Bernt Ullman, who co-founded Star Branding with fashion designer Tommy Hilfiger and Joe the Simpson, father of pop star Jessica Simpson.

BRITISH WEEKLY SPORT

Rampant Anderson joins the 500 club

ENGLAND scored a convincing win in the Third Test over West Indies at the weekend, but the headlines rightfully belonged to swing bowler Jimmy Anderson, who capped a sensational summer by taking seven wickets for 42 runs, and in doing so joined the exclusive band of bowlers who have taken 500 Test wickets.

At the end of his first season as captain, Joe Root managed to avoid an upset, and could take pride in a pair of series triumphs following the 2-1 win over South Africa earlier in the summer. And Root owed much of that success to Anderson, whose 39 Test wickets this summer – a tally beaten by only one England cricketer, Jim Laker in 1956 – put him back on top of the world rankings, and proved that he is arguably the greatest swing bowler the game has known.

The commentators were gushing in their praise for Anderson. By their mid-30s, most cricketers are in decline, said Scyld Berry in The Sunday Telegraph. Not Anderson: he just "keeps on getting better and better". He has always been an astonishingly reliable bowler, taking at least 40 Test wickets in eight of the last ten years. Yet he has been at his most deadly this summer, conceding just 15 runs per wicket. What's the secret to Anderson's "glorious longevity", asked Ed Smith in The Sunday Times. Having settled, early in his career, on a technique "he could trust", he has resisted the urge to meddle with it unnecesarily, relying on a smooth action that "takes relatively little out of him" physically. And he has avoided the mistakes of those bowlers who "bulk up in the gym with mindless weights training", taking years off their careers; instead, he makes the most of his "lean, athletic" physique, and understands that "rest and recovery matter just as much as sweat and tears".

Peerless Froome doubles his triumph in Spain

CYCLIST CHRIS
FROOME underlined
his position as perhaps Britain's greatest – and underappreciated – sportsman this week
as he became the first
Brit to win the Vuelta a España.

In doing so he also became only the third cyclist in history to win the double of the Tour de France and its Spanish counterpart in the same year. Froome bagged his fourth Tour in the summer. Froome's triumph required monumental physical and mental exertion: across the two Tours he raced for more than 4,200 miles, through six countries, in blazing heat and pouring rain.

The Vuelta might not be as prestigious as the Tour de France, but the climbs are steeper and more frequent and competitors must ascend dusty dirt roads better suited to four legs than two wheels. For all his success, however, he remains unloved in Britain, said Matt

Dickinson in The Times. That's partly down to his "mixed nationality": he grew up in Kenya and South Africa, and lives in Monaco. Cycling for Team Sky doesn't help either: In France and Spain, the team fielded two almost completely different line-ups of riders, both "virtually equal strength" – ensuring that in the Vuelta, at a time when many rival teams were "racing on fumes", Froome could constantly rely on fresh back-ups.

Honors even at Anfield

Liverpool's first game in the Champions League since 2014 ended in a draw with Sevilla at Anfield Wednesday night.

In a repeat of the 2016 Europa League final, which the Spaniards won in Basel, Argentine midfielder Joaquin Correa cut through the Liverpool defence and curled home a cool finish to clinch a point.

It had taken Sevilla just five minutes to take the lead as Wissam Ben Yedder tapped in from close range after home defender Dejan Lovren fell over while trying to clear the ball.

Sadio Mane tested visiting goalkeeper Sergio Rico with a low drive as Liverpool looked to get back into the game, and they managed to do so when Roberto Firmino finished off a fine team move from close range.

The five-time winners continued to push forward and were rewarded as Mohamed Salah's strike looped in via a huge deflection off Simon Kjaer, but then Firmino, presented with the chance to give the home side breathing space, struck a penalty against the post.

Luis Muriel could have won it for Sevilla in injury time, but shot wide from inside the box, before Reds defender Joe Gomez was dismissed for a second bookable offence.

Sergio Aguero doubled the lead after 10 minutes, latching on to Kyle Walker's cross and volleying into the roof of the net to claim his 23rd goal in 41 Champions League games for the club.

Gabriel Jesus netted on his Champions League debut as City went 3-0 up after 25 minutes, the Brazilian calmly slotting into an empty net after Benjamin Mendy's shot had been palmed out by Brad Jones.

Feyenoord improved after the break but City still had too much for them, Stones adding his second with another header from a corner to wrap up a one-sided 4-0 win for the Premier League side.

In the other game in Group F, Shakhtar Donetsk beat Napoli 2-1 in Ukraine.

Bookmakers have installed City favourites for the Premier League title and also the most likely of the five English teams in the Champions League this season to win it.

Those odds, coupled with a record £215m spend in the summer, the biggest by any club in any transfer window, has increased expectations.

Summer signings Walker (£45m), Bernardo Silva (£43m), Ederson (£35m) and Mendy (£52m) all featured in the match, with Guardiola acknowledging the role they will play in Europe.

"We have made a huge effort to buy players to make that step forward in Europe, like all the big teams have done," said Guardiola, who has reached the semi-finals in seven of his eight Champions League campaigns as a manager but has not made the final since 2011.

Blues ease past Qarabag

Davide Zappacosta scored a spectacular goal and Michy Batshuayi netted twice as Chelsea equalled their biggest Champions League win with a thrashing of competition debutants Qarabag in midweek.

The Blues - making their return to European competition having failed to qualify last season rested several first-team players for the visit of the Azerbaijani champions, but still won with ease.

Pedro opened the scoring with a 20-yard curler from Willian's layoff before Italy right-back Zappacosta ran 50 yards down the right wing, before sending over a cross that flew past Ibrahim Sehic.

Cesar Azpilicueta headed home a third after the break from Cesc Fabregas' cross.

and substitute Tiemoue Bakayoko scored his first Blues goal with a deflected shot from close range.

Roy in at Palace

Former England boss Roy Hodgson been named as Crystal Palace's new manager on a two-year deal.

Hodgson replaces Frank de Boer, who was sacked on Monday after 77 days and five matches in charge.

The 70-year-old has been out of management since resigning as England boss after their defeat by Iceland at the last-16 stage of Euro 2016.

He will take charge for Palace's Premier League game against Southampton on Saturday at Selhurst Park.

Ray Lewington, who worked with Hodgson at England and Fulham, has been named as his assistant.

"I keep saying the same about Fellaini. He is a player with special qualities and he gives me multiple areas of action," said Mourinho after Tuesday's game. "He is one of my most important players."

Fellaini's two kev contributions to the game came either side of another United goal for Lukaku.

He now has six for the Red Devils in all competitions since his arrival from Everton, and 10 in eight appearances for club and country this season.

Star striker grabs a brace as Spurs banish Wembley hoodoo

Harry scored Kane twice as Tottenham beat Borussia Dortmund 3-1 on Wednesday night to get their Champions League campaign off to a positive start and end their winless run at Wembley.

Kane's instinct in front of goal was the difference as Spurs were largely forced on the back foot by an impressive German side who dominated territory and possession.

His first goal - a rising angled finish following a determined run down the left - capped a frantic opening 15 minutes in which Son Heungmin's opener from an angle was cancelled out by a superb curling finish from Dortmund's Andriy Yarmolenko.

The England forward's second was a low finish inside the far post on the hour mark to give his side the edge they needed as they overcame the threat of their dangerous and relentless opponent.

However, the home side ended the game with 10 men as defender Jan Vertonghen was shown a second yellow card for catching Dortmund substitute Mario Gotze with a swinging arm.

The visitors can point an accusing finger at the officials, who ruled out a perfectly good goal Pierre-Emerick from Aubameyang for offside.

This is just the second Tottenham's at Wembley, which includes all of League Champions group stage games and two Premier League matches this campaign. It leaves the North London side second in Group H behind Real Madrid, who beat Apoel Nicosia 3-0 in Spain.

Mou blasts "PlayStation football"

United Manchester manager Jose Mourinho accused his players of jeopardising Champions League victory over Basel by playing "Playstation football".

United marked their return to the competition Tuesday with a 3-0 win at Old Trafford, but Mourinho was unimpressed with their play in the second half.

"Until 2-0 we were stable, we played with confidence," he told BT

HARE

Sport.

"After 2-0 everything changed, we stopped playing seriously and stopped making right decisions."

Goals from Marouane Fellaini, Romelu Lukaku and Marcus Rashford gave United an ultimately comfortable victory.

But Mourinho said: "We could have put ourselves in trouble.

"We were playing fantasy football. Playstation football. don't like it - flicks and

"We gambled and you have to respect your opponent. I don't know if goal difference will play a

"We lost position, our shape, we lost balls in easy situations. I didn't like it the players relaxed too much."

Mourinho again full of praise for midfielder Fellaini, who came on in the 19thminute for the injured Paul Pogba, scored United's first goal cont. on page 19, col. 6
