

Royal Wedding: news 'imminent'

Bookies stop taking bets as Harry and Meghan marriage looks a dead cert

ANOTHER royal wedding looks on the cards as the bookies this week stopped taking bets on the 'imminent' engagement of Prince Harry and Meghan Markle.

A Ladbrokes spokesman was quoted saying the firm are expecting the announcement to be "imminent."

"Meghan has met her Prince Charming and it looks like this fairytale is going to end happy ever after," the spokesman said.

Adding fuel to the rumours, it's also been reported that the actress has now moved out of her rented Toronto home, where she has lived for the past five years, and is in the process of shipping her belongings to London.

It'll be the news millions of royal watchers all around the world have been waiting on for months, with Harry, 33, making it clear from the very start of the relationship just how serious he was about Meghan, 36.

Their pair gave their strongest hint yet that they were headed down the aisle in October, when it was reported that senior members of the Royal Family were asked to check for a shortlist of weekends in 2018 that may serve as an appropriate time for an engagement announcement.

Meghan reportedly won the approval of Queen Elizabeth II, during a private meeting over tea at Buckingham Palace recently with her grandson and his partner.

There's no word yet on when or where the couple will decide to get married - but it's likely, given that Harry is sixth-in-line to the throne, they'll be approved to follow royal tradition and marry at Westminster Abbey.

Newspaper reports at the weekend suggested Harry was ready to ask the Archbishop of Canterbury for his blessing for a church wedding to the US divorcee. And it was understood that Archbishop Justin Welby has 'no objections', meaning a royal wedding could take place at Westminster Abbey in a matter of months.

The Suits actress was previously married to US film and TV producer Trevor Engelson from 2011 to 2013 and it was initially thought religious doctrine would prevent the young couple from marrying in an Anglican church.

But the couple will be able to follow in the footsteps of the Queen and Prince Philip after the church confirmed the American actress's former marriage would not bar her from marrying there.

But the Prince would still require permission from the Queen and it is believed the Archbishop would need to provide a special licence for any potential nuptials.

GOING PUBLIC: Harry and Meghan at their first official appearance together

While it's clear Meghan's acting career will be over - she reportedly quit her hit show Suits last month she's likely about to take on a very significant role as a member of the British royal family.

If she marries the Prince, it's expected she'll officially drop her last name and take up the female version of Harry's title. As he is 'His Royal clear Highness Prince Henry of Wales, Meghan will be 'Her Royal Highness Princess Henry of Wales'. A day before the wedding, Queen Elizabeth will bestow a royal peerage to Harry which Meghan will share as his wife. (Prior to their wedding, Prince William and Kate Middleton were given the titles of Duke and Duchess of Cambridge.)

Many royalists agree that Harry is likely to be given the Dukedom of Sussex, although Oxford, Cumberland and Buckingham are also in the running.

Interestingly, no royal bride has ever been allowed to change their name - and Meghan's actual birth name is Rachel. So unless the Queen decrees it, it's cont. on page 2, col. 4

Chancellor eases off austerity in new Budget

Philip Hammond embarked on a £25 billion giveaway this week in an effort to counter growing political and economic headwinds with extra money for housing, the NHS and Brexit.

The chancellor delighted Conservative MPs by scrapping stamp duty for first-time buyers, handing a tax break worth an average £1,660 to a million mainly younger voters.

He earmarked an extra £3 billion to ready the country to leave the EU, Brexiteers appeasing such as Michael Gove and Boris Johnson, and raising the stakes with Brussels before key talks this week.

Mr Hammond also caved in to pressure for an emergency £2.8 billion bailout for the NHS. He promised to fund a pay deal for nurses and ditched plans for another round of Whitehall cuts.

Alongside other measures — including softening the wait for universal credit, buying land for housing and freezing alcohol and fuel duties — Monday's pledges will cost an extra £25 billion over the next five years.

Even so, the Office for Budget Responsibility (OBR) noted that on current trends Britain would not be back in the black until 2030 — 15 years after the date promised by George Osborne when he was chancellor in 2010.

With Mr Hammond's political future in the balance amid suggestions that he could be sacked by Theresa May in a new year reshuffle, Tory MPs were notably silent at the start of his second budget. By its close — just after the surprise stamp-duty announcement — he sat down to loud cheers.

The statement also declared that "a line" had been "crossed", after Meghan had been the victim of "abuse and harassment".

Oxford grad seeks £1m payout because he didn't get a first class degree

An Oxford graduate is suing the university for £1million because he did not get a first class degree.

Faiz Siddiqui claims he was the "victim of poor teaching" that cost him the chance of a lucrative legal career.

The history graduate alleges the "inadequate" teaching he received on the Indian special subject part of his course resulted in him only getting a low upper second degree when he took his finals in June 2000 instead of a First or high 2:1.

He blames the situation on staff being absent on sabbatical leave and that medical alleges information about him was not submitted to the examiners by a tutor.

Mr Siddiqui, who has put his claim at £1 million, says he would have become an international commercial lawyer if he had gained the top qualification at the end of his time at Brasenose College.

His employment history after Oxford in legal and tax roles was "frankly poor" and he was now unemployed, said Mr Mallalieu.

Oxford University denies negligence and causation and savs the case was brought "massively" outside the legal time limit.

Milford, Julian for Oxford University, told the court that Mr. Siddiqui's claim ignored the fact that he had excellent opportunities at the start, including a training contract with one of the world's leading law firm Clifford Chance which was a "real feather in his cap".

The seven day hearing is concerned only with liability - with damages to be assessed later if Mr Siddiqui succeeds. The case continues.

THE HEYDAY of the Anglo-American special relationship may be long gone - but you'd never guess it from seeing Rory Farquharson sharing an affectionate moment with Barack Obama's daughter this week.

The former President famously said that unlike fathers of most teenage girls he had few qualms about his daughters dating. So presumably he was not as excitable as the tabloid world when pictures emerged of his daughter locked in a clinch with Farquharson, a British public schoolboy studying at Harvard.

The son of an investment banker, Mr Farquharson, 19, a former head of school at Rugby, was shown embracing Malia at a Harvard-Yale social gathering in New Haven, before a football game on Saturday afternoon. Bystanders interrupted the young couple to ask for pictures and selfies.

Mr Farquharson began his undergraduate studies at Harvard last year, with a Facebook post of himself with two fellow students and the words: "So it begins." That letter, published a few years ago in Rugby the School magazine, the Meteor, was addressed to his 16-year-old self, and may now prove somewhat embarrassing. James Bulger's killer back in jail

■ Jon Venables back in prison after he was arrested in a top secret police operation.

ONE of the killers of toddler James Bulger is back in prison after being caught with child abuse images, it emerged this week.

Jon Venables, now 35, was arrested last week in a top secret police operation.

Officials are understood to have found the stash of indecent material on his home computer during a routine visit early last week and swiftly alerted cops.

And the grim haul is thought to include "sickening" child abuse images similar to those that sparked his recall to jail in 2010.

Just hours later Venables was taken under heavy guard to a maximum category A jail, which cannot be identifed for legal reasons.

He is currently being held there for breaching the terms of the life licence handed to him and pal Robert Thompson after the abduction, torture and murder of two-year-old James on Merseyside in 1993.

Venables has not yet been charged with any offence but is now also the subject of a major police investigation.

The "immediate recall" procedure means Venables has been returned to prison twice in the last decade despite vast sums estimated at up to £5 million being spent on his rehabilitation.

After Venables was freed on parole again in July 2013, James' anguished dad Ralph Bulger warned: "It is only a matter of time before he caves in to his lust for young children again."

A source told a British tabloid: "Venables' recall is a huge blow to those who have championed the efforts to reform him over the past 25 years.

"Every expense has been afforded him, every expert opinion offered, every opportunity given. "And yet here we are again and by anyone's standards, the question has now to be asked whether he has finally run out of chances.

"If he is found to have committed a new offence, then why should the public continue to pay through the nose to protect his anonymity any longer?"

Venables is understood to have been living in a secret location in the North of England under a SECOND new identity given to him following his release from prison in 2013.

Venables will now be held indefinitely while the new allegations are probed and a Parole Board assesses him once again.

In theory, he could now be kept inside for the rest of his life if the Board decides he poses too much of a risk to ever be freed again.

If charged by prosecutors with a new offence, Venables would also face a new Crown Court trial.

But he would be likely to appear via videolink from jail to protect his face and new identity from being exposed in public.

Now back in prison, Venables is thought to be housed in complete isolation from other inmates for his own safety.

During his last recall to jail he was held in a self-contained annex and monitored 24/7 by at least two prison officers.

Venables was last recalled to prison in February 2010 when officials found him hoarding child abuse images of children as young as two.

He was later charged and convicted of downloading and distributing the photos and given a two-year jail term.

It later emerged Venables had persistently flouted strict parole terms by visiting Liverpool to go clubbing and watch football, while drinking heavily and taking cocaine.

A Ministry of Justice spokeswoman said: "We do not comment on individual cases."

In July 2013, James' anguished dad Ralph Bulger darkly warned: "Jon Venables is and always was a predatory sex killer who will never be changed.

"He will always be a danger to children which is why he must be locked up for life."

Likely Lads star Bewes dead at 79

Rodney Bewes has died aged 79, his agent has confirmed.

The actor had a career spanning six decades and is best known for playing Bob Ferris in sitcom The Likely Lads.

His agent issued a statement saying: "It is with great sadness that we confirm that our dear client, the muchloved actor Rodney Bewes, passed away this morning."

The statement paid tribute to the actor, calling him a "true one-off" and a "brilliant storyteller".

"He had a funny anecdote for every occasion. Our thoughts are with his family and friends at this sad time. We will miss him terribly." Bewes was originally from Bingley in Yorkshire but moved to Luton as a child.

Despite childhood asthma keeping him house-bound until the age of 12, he achieved his first role at the age of 14 and went on to study drama at RADA.

He gained fame in the 1960s and 1970s playing Bob Ferris in the BBC sitcom The Likely Lads, and in its sequel, Whatever Happened To The Likely Lads? - which drew audiences of up to 27m.

In 1984, he became a member of the Doctor Who cast during Peter Davison's run as the Time Lord, portraying a humanoid named Stien in Resurrection Of The Daleks.

He died six days before he would have celebrated his 80th birthday.

Bewes is survived by his four children - Billy, Joe, Tom and Daisy - and his two grandchildren, Oscar and Eliza.

On Wednesday, his children released a joint statement saying they "will always remember Dad as full of laughter and fun".

"He will be much missed by his many friends in London, Henley, Edinburgh and Cornwall. We are very touched by all the warm messages people have left."

ICONIC CHARACTERS: Rodney Bewes (right) with James Bolam in Whatever happened to The Likely Lads?

Shane Allen, controller BBC Comedy, said Bewes was "beloved as one half of the great British sitcom partnerships of all time".

He added: "Audiences got to see him go from black and white to colour as the revival was a huge hit with audiences of all ages. It's one of the alltime great BBC sitcoms; timeless in its humour and will be enjoyed for decades to come."

Tributes have also been pouring in for the star on social media.

TV presenters Ant and Dec called Bewes a "fine comic actor".

Brits too busy to remember their manners

BRITONS in this day and age are so busy they are forgetting common courtesy and manners, according to research.

Hectic work schedules and the distraction of smartphones means one in three people no longer remembers to say "please" or "thank you" as often as they should.

Seven in 10 polled by confectionery firm Mentos to celebrate World Hello Day this week admitted they were less polite than 10 years ago – and six in 10 struggle to find time to initiate a conversation or say hello. It also emerged men are more likely than women to forget their manners. Overall the report revealed 31 per cent of us forget to say thank you, while another 34 per cent regularly forget to say please. And about half frequently walk away or end a phone call without saying goodbye.

But the rudeness hurts the feelings of 85 per cent of the nation. Supermarket cashiers were found to say the most hellos, followed by coffee shop workers and receptionists. And people typically exchange 59 goodnatured remarks day, every which includes 10 pleases, 11 thank yous and 10 hellos. A Mentos spokesman said: "When we're busy or engrossed in our phones we can often let our good manners slip. But we should all make the effort to be polite and say hello."

Among the top 20 signs of good manners were found to be opening doors for people; listening well; showing patience; putting your phone away in company; not interrupting when someone else is talking; always saying goodbye; and covering your mouth when coughing or sneezing. BAKE Off host Paul Hollywood and his wife Alex have separated after nearly 20 years of marriage, it was confirmed this week.

The announcement comes four years after the couple briefly split following his affair with Marcela Valladolid, a costar on the US version of the hit amateur baking show, The American Baking Competition.

He went on to date her but the relationship fizzled out after a few months when Paul confessed he was still in love with his wife.

In a statement he said: "It is with sadness that we have decided to separate. Our focus continues to be the happiness of our son and we would ask the press and public to allow us privacy as a family during this very difficult time."

Liverpudlian Paul, 51, and Alex, 53, who is also a chef, married in 1998, and have a teenage son. The family live in Kent.

Shortly after her husband's affair with Ms Valladolid, Alex said: "In the space of four weeks my life changed irrevocably. One minute I was happily married and the next I wasn't. It was a complete shock."

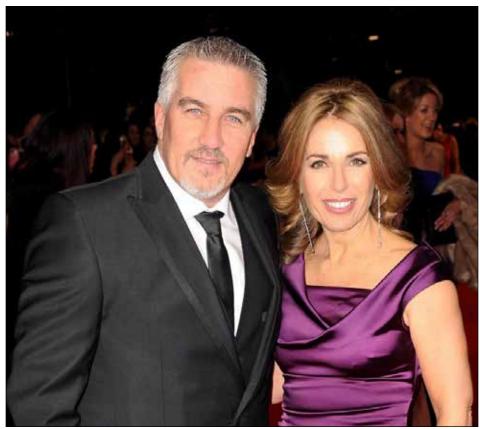

They couple reconciled a few months after their separation in 2013 and Paul later described the incident as "the biggest mistake of my life".

Speaking about his marital woes in 2015 he said: "We went through a very difficult time but we're on top right now."

Earlier this month Paul, who made his name and fortune as an artisan bread maker, was pictured sharing a kiss with recently-engaged former Bake Off winner Candice Brown, 32.

They were spotted at a party after the Pride of Britain Awards but insisted they were just friends.

Before joining Great British Bake Off in 2010 Paul worked as head baker at the world famous Cliveden House Hotel and The Dorchester but is now a multi-millionaire whose Speaking to Radio Times he said: "I stayed with Bake Off. The girls abandoned it but I was the one put under siege. I became the most hated man in the country.

"It's not fun for someone that doesn't like being in the limelight. I didn't set out to be on the telly, I set out to be a good baker and I didn't want this."

He added: "Fame brings its own demons with it and you have to block yourself off and split yourself from the guy off the telly that everybody thinks they know."

Mother calls for Sleeping Beauty to be banned from primary school as it 'promotes inappropriate behaviour'

A MOTHER has asked for Sleeping Beauty to be removed from the classes of younger children at her son's primary school as it promotes "inappropriate" sexual behaviour.

Sarah Hall, from Northumberland Park, near Newcastle, raised the issue after her sixyear-old brought home a children's book version of the fairytale.

The mother-of-two said she was concerned about the message that the story, where a prince kisses Sleeping Beauty to wake her from her cursed slumber, sent younger children.

However she added that she felt the story should not be completely removed from the curriculum and could be used to start a conversation with older children around consent. Speaking to Speaking to the Newcastle Chronicle, Ms Hall said: "I think it's a specific issue in the Sleeping Beauty story about sexual behaviour and consent. It's about saying is this still relevant, is it appropriate?

"In today's society, it isn't appropriate - my son is only six, he absorbs everything he sees, and it isn't as if I can turn it into a constructive conversation.

"I don't think taking Sleeping Beauty books out of circulation completely would be right. I actually think it would be a great resource for older children, you could have a conversation around it, you could talk about consent, and how the Princess might feel.

"But I'm really concerned about it for younger children, [and] would really welcome a conversation about whether this is suitable material."

The 40-year-old said she was partly prompted to take action over book by the coverage of the recent sexual harassment scandals. When tweeting about the book her son brought home she used the #MeToo hashtag, which

The mother then left a comment in her son's record book and has since contacted the school to ask for the book to be removed from younger classes.

Ms Hall added: "These are indicative of how ingrained that kind of behaviour is in society. All these small things build up, and they make a difference."

Aren't we all secretly addicted...to something?

In this weeks blog from a condition that results www.thebodycamp. com, we are talking about something that concerns us all addiction!

The question I often ask myself is: are we all secretly addicted to something?

"automatic Our choice" comes in many forms - some of the obvious addictions in the press being drugs and alcohol. But there are many other addictions also that we may be not aware of that may already be dictating our lives unconsciously.

what is So an addiction? Addiction is when someone ingests a substance or engages in an activity that can be pleasurable - however continuation the becomes compulsive and begins to interfere with responsibilities and concerns such as work, relationships with others or health. Most people who developed an have addiction may not be CONSCIOUSLY aware that their behavior is out of control and causing problems for •Going to the pub - The comfort of the reward drink after work or to "take the edge off".

•Work - The sense of purpose and drive for distraction from everyday life.

Which addiction from the above list has some form of control over you? Can you become aware of it and reduce the amount of time indulging in this would it benefit your life?

But here's the good news: here's a list of things that may be healthy addictions but again like anything in life, these can be enjoyed too much and also become addictive beware!!!

MAIOR difference with the first and second list? The first list places our reliance on external objects or subjects to feel good. But the second one is about getting addicted to the relationship with yourself internally and inside the body and mind to feel good.

To summarize - we must always remember one thing. We are always at cause in our world. The choice of what you want to become consciously aware of on a day to day basis, your habits and behaviors and what addiction path you choose - is entirely yours!

ARIES: At times your life is full of action and drama. Uranus is currently your house guest and more than likely the problem as he is unpredictable. Helping to fuel the fire is your boss Mars, who is getting a little pushed around. This is not in his nature; he prefers to be in charge so it's best to not overreact.

TAURUS : You need to listen to wiser souls who are directing you to an overall change. This can be in any area, however if it is your health and well being in the spotlight it must be at the top of your priority list. Follow your gut feeling - it never lets you down.

GEMINI: With Mercury going backward next week and Saturn going forward it's very possible you are about to make changes that have been on hold for too long. The key to the dilemma is that change will only come when YOU are ready.

CANCER: Venus the love planet is bringing up memories of happy times spent feeling carefree. You might feel like you have been spinning around without any direction to focus on. This about to change soon, so start the ball rolling by putting your positive face to the world and go for it.

LEO: As the new month begins you could find yourself less restricted in several ways. Your priority should be your own highest good overall. You have been holding onto thoughts and the past for too long. The Sun in your cousin sign of Sagittarius will lighten up your life for the next few weeks. VIRGO: Be on the safe side: make family and friends your priority and the reward will be a sense of pride for bringing a sense of order wherever it is needed. If you are concerned that someone is being less then truthful just let it go for now, chances are there is more to the story then is being told. It will all look better mid-month.

LIBRA: Venus your loving boss is moving slowly; this an opportunity to get some part of your life in order. This could mean many things to you so be sure you are on the right track before you begin making changes. Ask for any assistance that you may require in order to feel ready for the busy week ahead.

SCORPIO: Pressure in several areas may have you feeling worried. This is not surprising, especially in your personal financial area. However, now positive Jupiter is riding by your side and your boss Mars is coming home soon you can expect to be back in the black financially and that is only part of their gift.

SAGITTARIUS: Whatever way you look at your life it's a tad confusing currently. The good news is now your boss Jupiter is moving near to you and is getting ready to bring balance to your life. However, do not take any short cuts as you are still dealing with Saturn keeping an eye on you. Happy Birthday.

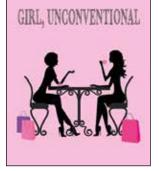

CAPRICORN: It is time to tell the people in your life to back off and give you some space. Whatever is on your mind will not come up to be healed if you allow other people to influence you. With this in mind take some alone time and spend it wisely.

AQUARIUS: There will be the much on your work agenda these next few days or so. Be open to whatever you hear from others regarding your situation currently. However, it will be much to your advantage to listen and do exactly what is your decision... nobody else's. Know this: that they only have your best interests at heart.

PISCES: This month ahead be ready to take a trip at short notice. It may bring up your past in some way, however on another level you will asked for this so go forward knowing it's the right time to put the past to rest. Hope should be your word of the week ahead.

Girl, Unconventional: re-thinking the ideal life

Exclusive interview with author Sasha Lane discussing her new novel about a thirty-something woman deciding what she wants in life

"I wanted to write about everyday women that readers could associate with," says Girl Unconventional author Sasha Lane. "And, in the era of people posting idyllic lifestyles on social media, I wanted to show that a not-so-perfect life was okay too. We perhaps all feel pressure to be doing certain things in our lives. I wanted a to write about a character that people could fall in love with as much as I have while writing about her.'

Emma is 34 and trying to figure out her life. Emma's best friend Sophie is pregnant. Emma's in a relationship with Joe, but where is it really going? Will thev get married? And what about children? Does she even want what used to be called the picture perfect life? The more she examines her life, the more she realizes she's not the only one who is feeling the pressure. Is she ready to do what is right for her?

Girl, Unconventional is third and final book in Lane's Girl trilogy. It follows Girl, Conflicted and Girl, Unhinged.

"I always wanted to write a trilogy," says Lane. "I hate it when you get attached to a character in a book and then it ends. It feels like you lost a friend. I wanted to show what happens after that last page. I guess I decided three was the right amount. I didn't want people to get bored with the character, plus I've shown what I wanted to with this character at the moment, although that's not to say that won't change in the future. I've had several requests from readers for a fourth book."

Lane says her life is her research. "My characters are influenced by my own life experience, plus television shows and films, and books that I've read, but the stories and the characters are completely fictional."

Charlie Wilson at The Book Specialist is Lane's editor.

"I have self-published, which has been an amazing journey for me," says Lane. "I love the fact that I get to create every aspect of my book, the title, the cover, and so on, and see my vision through from start to finish. It was very important to me to have physical books as well as ebooks. All of my books are available in paperback format as well as e-books."

Lane found The Book Specialist through research online.

"I was impressed with Charlie's CV and liked her approach to editing," says Lane. "She gave me the option to send through a short amount of my book for free to enable her to show me how she edits before I committed to sending the full book. Charlie gives detailed feedback and editing comments which encourage as well as develop me."

"I'm always delighted to meet authors like Sasha who are passionate about their work and professional in their approach," says Wilson.

"Over time, as she has continued to write, I've admired her energy and her commitment. There is a sense of pride for an editor when a client blossoms as Sasha has and so enjoys her writing journey. Three books into Emma's story, and I've been rooting for this heroine all along. Really, Emma is an editor's dream: a heroine who is flawed but likeable, who is absolutely believable."

Lane is currently working on a crime novel in the chick-lit genre, a "girl turns detective" story rather than a traditional crime novel.

Lane is based in South Yorkshire, and has lived in Barnsley for seven years. She was born in Nottinghamshire in a small village outside Worksop. For more on SYDNEY: THE muchanticipated First Test of England's winter Ashes tour was finely poised as the British Weekly went to press Friday night.

On day three (of five) Australia were 287-8, 15 runs short of England's first innings total of 302 with two wickets remaining.

The tourists certainly had the better of the first day and a half, with Stoneman, Vince, Malan and Moeen all contributing decent knocks to a respectable total with Starc and Cummins the stars for the Aussies, both picking up three wickets apiece. The disappointing aspect for skipper Joe Root was familiar middle to late order batting collapse, with the last six wickets going down for just 56 runs.

England started strongly in the field, reducing Australia to 76-4 with Broad, Ball, Moeen and Anderson picking up a wicket apiece as Root's field placement and canny curled finish wrapped up the win late on.

It was a much-needed result and performance for Tottenham after the disappointment of their north London derby defeat to Arsenal at the weekend.

They can now look forward to a potentially more favourable draw in the last 16 against a side that finishes runner up in their group.

With Tottenham already through to the knockout round this was not a game they needed to win. However, Pochettino nevertheless picked a strong side, perhaps underlining his desire for his side to show that the lacklustre display against Arsenal was a one-off.

Klopp: mentality 'not a problem'

Liverpool manager Jurgen Klopp said he has no problem with the mentality of his players after Sevilla fought back from 3-0 down at halftime to take a point from a dramatic Champions League game Tuesday night.

The Reds looked to be coasting into the knockout stage for the first time since 2009 as two goals from Roberto Firmino and one from Sadio Mane put them in total control

Alberto after Yet needlessly Moreno conceded a free-kick against his former club Wissam Ben Yedder's header made it 3-1.

Moreno then conceded a penalty by clipping Ben Yedder, and the French striker scored after being ordered to retake a successful spot-kick because of encroachment.

Guido Pizarro poked home in the third minute of added time as the hosts snatched a draw.

"I don't doubt the mentality of the boys, not a bit," said Klopp, whose side must avoid defeat when they host Spartak Moscow on 6 December to ensure they advance from Group E.

"We showed already a fantastic mentality. We showed it in a lot of other games."

PSG brush Hoops aside

Celtic were swept aside by rampant Paris St-Germain, who hit seven in the Champions League at Parc de Princes Wednesday night.

Brendan Rodgers' side opened the scoring in the first minute through Moussa Dembele, but were then swamped.

Neymar scored twice, then created the third for Edinson Cavani, before Kylian Mbappe struck before half-time.

Marco Verratti, Cavani and Dani Alves scored in a five-minute secondhalf blitz as Rodgers' Celtic side conceded seven goals for the second time.

The victory was PSG's biggest win in the Champions League, and a chastening night for the visitors, who lost 5-0 to the French side at home earlier in the group.

However the Scottish champions still have the advantage in the fight to finish third in Group B and qualify for the Europa League after bottom-placed Anderlecht lost their fifth game in a row, this time 2-1 to Bayern Munich.

PSG have scored 24 goals in their five matches - a Champions League group stage record, with one game still to play.

JOSE MOURINHO was left fuming Wednesday night as his Manchester United side failed to turn dominance into goals and were hit by a late sucker punch in their Champions League defeat by Basel.

United dominated the first half of their penultimate group game, with Marouane Fellaini and Marcos Rojo hitting the woodwork.

But, on the brink of securing the point they needed to reach the knockout stage, the visitors were undone by Michael Lang's 89thminute goal.

"The first half was the perfect half - without the goals. I cannot complain. cannot blame the players," said Mourinho. "I think if we play a match like this 10 times, nine we win comfortably. In one we lose - and the one was now."

Renato Steffen and Dimitri Oberlin had already gone close for the hosts in the second half before Lang turned in Raoul Petretta's cross at the back post.

Anything better than a seven-goal defeat by CSKA Moscow in their final group game on 5 December would still guarantee United their place in the last 16.

Basel emerged before kick-off to the backdrop of a huge banner promising the sort of atmosphere that has spooked the likes of Liverpool, Chelsea, Spurs and United in recent years.

It appeared an empty gesture in a first half during which United enjoyed 74% possession and the hosts failed to have a shot on target.

But United could not translate that dominance to the scoresheet and were stretched out of shape from the start of

Harry blasts the doubters

Striker Harry Kane says Tottenham have proved the doubters wrong by finishing top of one of the toughest groups in this season's Champions League.

Spurs won at Borussia Dortmund on Tuesday to secure their place at the head of the group with a game to spare.

That followed a 3-1 win against Real Madrid at the start of November which ensured their place in the last 16.

"The group we had, a lot of people doubted us and we wanted to prove them wrong," said Kane.

"Hopefully we can build on this now for the rest of the campaign." It is an impressive achievement for Tottenham, especially after they failed to progress from what could be perceived as an easier group last season.

"The season before, we were watching the draw and we thought: 'Oh Monaco, Leverkusen and CSKA' and we thought we had a chance to go to the next stage," manager Mauricio Pochettino said.

"Then this draw we looked between us and thought: 'OK we are
