

Army called in to bring relief in Somerset More misery forecast for the weekend

FOR 100 YEARS!

PART OF Britain have suffered their wettest January in more than a century, with widespread floods causing havoc in some southern counties and record high tides forecast for the weekend.

A large area from East Devon to Kent and inland across parts of the Midlands has already seen twice the average rainfall for the month, and the armed forces have been sent to Somerset to bring relief to cut-off villages, which have seen the most significant flooding for 20 years.

To pile on the misery for Britons already battered by one of the most brutal winters in recent years, warnings were also in place for rain in the South East and ice in Scotland and the North this weekend. with snow in Scotland on Saturday, and wind in the West on Sunday.

The only silver lining weather has been accompanied by milder temperatures - with the average across the UK up to January 28 at 40.8F, - a couple of degrees above average.

South-east and central-southern England have already seen the sixth wettest winter since 1910 and the wettest weather since 1995.

Rainfall of 14.6in was recorded that year. The wettest winter on record was in 1915 with 17.2in of rainfall.

As the British Weekly went to press The Environment Agency had 166 flood alerts and 32 flood warnings in place across England and Wales, with most in the South.

BoE to Scotland: keep the pound, give up power ■ You can't have independence and use our money, bank boss tells Scots

The Bank of England governor has warned an independent Scotland would need to give up some power to make a currency union with the rest of the UK work.

Mark Carney said such a move, proposed by the Scottish government, "requires some ceding of national sovereignty".

He also said the risks of not having a strong agreement had been demonstrated by problems in the Eurozone.

Mr Carney's comments, in Edinburgh, came ahead of the Scottish independence referendum, on September. Scotland's Finance Secretary John Swinney welcomed Mr Carney's speech, saying it had recognised the benefits of a currency union.

Alistair Darling, leader of the Better Together campaign to keep the argued the Union, governor's remarks were "devastating" for the government's Scottish currency plans.

Knox murder charge reinstated

US student Amanda Knox says she is "frightened and saddened" after a court in Italy reinstated her guilty verdict for the 2007 murder of her British flatmate Meredith Kercher.

She said the "unjust" verdict resulted from a 'narrow-minded investigation".

Knox, who is currently in the US, was sentenced to 28 years and six months by the court in Florence.

Her Italian ex-boyfriend, Raffaele Sollecito, also had his guilty verdict reinstated and received 25 years.

Lawyers for both have said they will appeal.

Miss Kercher, 21, from Coulsdon in south London, was stabbed to death in the flat she shared with Knox in the college city of Perugia.

Knox and Sollecito were jailed for her murder in 2009 but the verdicts were overturned in 2011 and the pair were freed.

England, under a formal currency union agreement, was the best option for Scotland and the rest of the UK.

The UK government had said such an agreement would be "unlikely", and the deal would result in Scotland effectively having to hand over control of interest rates and borrowing levels to a foreign country.

In his speech, Mr Carney stressed arrangements for а currency union in the event of independence would be a matter for the Scottish and UK parliaments.

He added: "If such deliberations ever were to happen, they would need to consider carefully what the economics of currency unions suggest are the necessary foundations for durable union, а particularly given the clear risks if these foundations are not in place.

"Those risks have been demonstrated clearly in the euro area over recent years, with sovereign debt crises. financial fragmentation and large divergences in economic

Mr Carney, who was speaking at an event hosted by the Scottish Council for Development

And the Government is already fending off complaints that they were ill-prepared for the latest bout of bad weather, with Environment Secretary Owen Paterson telling reporters: 'The Ministry of Defence and the Department for Local Government are discussing how we could deploy specialist vehicles which could help some of those villages which have been cut off, to help people travel backwards and forwards, to get fuel and food in and out, and to help with transport from dry land.

'And secondly, there will also be help with sandbags which could help prevent further flooding.'

Mr Paterson was met with hostility when he visited Somerset on Monday, with farmers, politicians and church leaders demanding immediate action to alleviate what furious residents described as 'Third World' conditions.

He said on Wednesday the county council had only asked for assistance 'for the first time today'.

spokesman said the authority had been discussing with the military for weeks the possibility of bringing in manpower, sandbags amphibious and vehicles.

John Osman, Conservative leader of Somerset County Council, said military might would give beleaguered residents the chance to repair their battered properties, with the village of Muchelney cut off since the turn of the year because of flooded roads.

He said: 'The council had actually planned to get some amphibious vehicles in, paid for by public money, because this situation really needed to be sorted out. 'People's homes and properties have been under flood water for weeks.

We were due to place an order imminently, but the Government saying the military will be involved has saved the public purse that money.'

Mr Paterson's announcement about Army intervention came after Prime Minister David Cameron pledged rapid action to deal with the crisis, promising that dredging of rivers would start as soon as the present waters could be reduced to a safe level.

Queen of darts! Duchess of Cornwall gets stuck into game while Prince Charles pulls a pint as they enjoy day out at Essex pub

Prince Charles and Camilla fitted in like locals at an Essex pub this week as they played darts and enjoyed a pint.

However their mode of transport to The Bell in Purleigh was not one regulars to the country pub would usually use as they arrived via

The pub stop came as the royal couple spent the day carrying out a number of engagements in Essex.

They met staff and customers at the establishment, which dates back to the 14th century. They were shown a sample of local produce and Charles was even given the chance to go behind the bar and pour himself a drink from the beer pumps.

The prince is patron of the not-for-profit organisation the Pub is the Hub, which supports licensees, rural pubs and community services.

In the paint workshop, the royal couple viewed huge sets and backdrops being created for the world premiere of Christopher Wheeldon's new production for the Royal Ballet, The Winter's Tale, which opens in April.

Four weddings star Hugh fathers third love child'

Hugh Grant is reportedly the father of another love child.

The actor already has two children - Tabitha Xaio Xi, born in September 2011, and Felix Chang, born in September 2012, both with Tinglan Hong.

And now the star allegedly fathered his third child, а 16-month-old son born to Swedish TV producer Anna Elisabet Eberstein in September 2012.

"They were pregnant with Hugh's children at the same time. It's an unusual arrangement," a source told The Sun.

According to the outlet, the third baby was only revealed when Grant was named as father on the birth certificate after it was re-registered in December 2013.

being "Anna is supported by Hugh all the way. She lives in a very comfortable property in West London and knows that Hugh is there for her," the source continued.

"Anna's parents in Sweden know all about the relationship and she has their blessing."

Grant has spoken before about how much he enjoys being a father. According to the 53-year-old, having children has made him rethink his priorities.

"Everyone was right all these years, saying, 'Hugh, why don't you have some children? It changes your life,' " he previously revealed on The Ellen DeGeneres Show.

"Now that I have [a child], it is life changing. I recommend it. Get some! I can't pretend it wasn't a little bit of a surprise. But it's a very nice surprise."

Queen told to rein in spending as she 'reaches final million' need of £50m of repairs.

The boilers at Buckingham Palace are said to be at least 60 years old, some state rooms have not been decorated or rewired since 1952 and one leaking roof requires buckets to be used in wet weather. One report suggests Princess Anne was almost hit by a piece of crumbling masonry in the Iohn Nash quadrangle as she got out of her car.

The accounts committee is demanding that staff "get a much firmer grip" on how they plan to address the backlog, repairs reports The Independent. The report says the Queen is "not being served well by the Royal Household in balancing the books", suggesting that even at 87 she needs to keep a closer eye on how her money is spent. It recommends that Buckingham Palace is longer stretches of the year and is rented out for commercial events.

MPs also noted that royal staffing levels have remained at around 430 for the past seven years, with no apparent cuts.

"The Household needs to get better at planning and managing its budgets for the longer term," said Margaret Hodge, who chairs the committee. "With better commercial expertise in place, we think there is room to do more with less."

Public support boost for Charles

A majority of Britons want Prince Charles to Queen take over Elizabeth II's current roles while she retires and prefer that the crown is passed to him than to William, Prince according to a new poll.

According to the poll for The Sunday Times by YouGov, 42 per cent Britons want the 87-year-old Queen to let Prince Charles take on her duties after 62 years as heir apparent, compared with 36 per cent who want her to continue. For the first time in a decade, opinion has also swung Queen embarked on what is in effect a "job share", with him taking on more of the Queen's duties. Three-quarters (75 per cent) believe this is a good idea with only 13 per cent opposed to it. The public is ready for Charles to take over some of the Queen's core duties.

He and Michael Adebowale, 22, from Greenwich, south-east London, are currently awaiting sentencing.

Corrie's Roache was 'a perfect gent'

Coronation Street's William Roache always behaved impeccably in the company of young women, his co-star Anne Kirkbride has told a court.

The actress, who plays Roache's on-screen wife Deirdre Barlow, said she had known him since joining the soap's cast in 1972.

Roache, of Wilmslow in Cheshire, who has played the role of Ken Barlow since 1960, denies four charges of indecent assault and two of rape and has told the jury he is not sexually attracted to underage girls.

All the offences are alleged to have happened between 1965 and 1971 and all are said to be against girls aged 16 or under.

Kirkbride started giving evidence for the defence by recalling the time when she joined Coronation Street as a "terrified and very nervous" young actress and met Roache for the first time.

"He was friendly...we had a really nice chat and he offered me a cigarette," she said.

"We shared a lot of the same interests in spiritual things. I just found him very easy to talk to."

Asked to describe the defendant in one word she replied: "Lovely."

With Roache smiling from the dock, Kirkbride, 59, went on to say that he behaved "impeccably" towards her.

"He was always the perfect gentleman," she said.

Defence barrister Louise Blackwell QC asked: "Was there anything about his behaviour towards young women which would worry you?"

The actress replied: "Not at all...never. We have obviously had several young actresses playing our daughter.

"He has never been anything other than helpful, supportive. Never a suggestion of anything else in all of the years I have known him."

In a brief appearance in the witness box, Chris Gascoyne, who plays Roache's fictional son Peter Barlow in the soap opera, said the defendant was "kind, warm and open" with a great sense of humour.

He told the jury: "Bill kind of sets the precedent for everybody. Decent, time for everybody, not a 'star'."

He went on to say that Roache was a calm and relaxed man. "He takes every day as a new day which is inspiring to me," Gascoyne said. The trial continues.

The that continues.

I've been groped by three 'very famous' women, claims DLT

Former Radio One DJ Dave Lee Travis told his trial this week he has been groped by four women, adding three of them were "very, very famous".

The star (above) said the women "stuck their hands down between my legs and squeezed me" but added that he saw each incident as a joke.

Earlier he told jurors it was "absolutely 100 per cent wrong" that he thought it acceptable to grab women's breasts and bottoms during his 1970s and 1980s heyday. Travis, now 68, has repeatedly denied indecently assaulting ten women and sexually assaulting another in incidents dating back to 1976.

Taking to the witness box at London's Southwark Crown Court, he told jurors: "If patting somebody's bottom was a crime in the 1970s, then half the country would be in jail by then, I suppose."

Asked by prosecutor Miranda Moore, QC about comments he made to police and the press that "flirtatious" behaviour was the norm during the period, Travis said although he would have admitted it if he had touched women inappropriately, he had never done so.

He said: "These are things that have happened in the 1970s and 1980s and on that basis I said then, and I'm still saying it, it was just flirtatious behaviour at the time, not that it was just flirtatious at the time and I partook of it, because I still don't like the idea of doing that."

Travis went on to say that he too had been groped.

The triual continues.

I'll get smashed! England women's captain Charlotte Edwards sparks post-Ashes row

ENGLAND'S women cricketers scored a famous victory over Australia this week – then their captain sparked controversy as she announced plans to get "absolutely smashed" to celebrate.

Charlotte Edwards hit 92 not out to help her side succeed where their male counterparts had failed so spectacularly – by retaining the Ashes.

Her magnificent captain's innings was the highlight as England beat Australia by nine wickets in a T20 match in Hobart on Monday to take the multi-format series.

But jubilant Charlotte, 34, sparked a storm of protests after posting a series of tweets referring to her plans for a big celebration and telling the BBC in an interview: "I've told the girls I'm going to get absolutely smashed because this means everything to us as a group."

One caller, a sports coach, told a BBC Radio 5 Live phone-in: "Charlotte Edwards has achieved a great deal but sadly she has created defeat out of success. She should use her position to do the exact opposite of what she has done today. She has made a huge mistake."

'deserves to celebrate'

Another caller said: "You see it every Friday and Saturday night in city centres around the country. We just seem to think it's great fun to down 15 pints in a night and not know what we've done the next day."

Charlotte's defenders hit back, describing critics as sexist and pointing out that male star Andrew Flintoff did not cause outrage when he celebrated England's 2005 Ashes victory with a 24-hour bender.

TV sports presenter Isa Guha, 28, a former England bowler, wrote on Twitter: "You would not question it if it was a bloke!! Unbelievable – that should not be what the story is here!! Ashes heroine Charlotte Edwards is not a big drinker. But she deserves to celebrate tonight. End of."

Charlotte, an MBE, has played for England for 17 years. Ms Guha added: "This is the fifth Ashes she has won for her country. I think it's unbelievable the way people are reacting. We're making a massive mountain out of a mole hill."

HERO: David Walsh delivering the annual Cudlipp lecture at the LCC this week

Crusading journalist tells how he brought down Lance Armstrong

SUNDAY TIMES JOURNALIST David Walsh has revealed how he pursued – and brought down - drug taking cyclist Lance Armstrong at the annual Cudlipp lecture in London which honors those representing the best of British journalism.

In a speech which riveted his audience, Walsh detailed his long-running battle to expose the multiple Tour de France winner and the many setbacks, financial and professional, he suffered on the way.

told Walsh the audience that he first developed a hunch that Armstrong was doping in 1999 following allegations a young French rider, Christophe Bassons, had written in a column for the newspaper Le Parisien in which he suggested that Tour de France riders were taking drugs.

Walsh, who was already dubious about Armstrong, noted how the American treated Bassons. He pulled him up during one of the Tour stages and told him he had no right to be a professional cyclist and what he was writing was bad for cycling.

"If Armstrong was anti-doping, Christophe Bassons would have been his friend not his enemy," said Walsh. "Why bully him?" It confirmed his suspicion that Armstrong, who went on to win that 1999 Tour, was a drug-taker.

This prompted a thirteen year crusade for Walsh. His big breakthrough came two years later when he confirmed a connection between Armstrong and an Italian doctor, Michele Ferrari, who was under investigation for supplying performanceenhancing drugs to cyclists. Walsh discovered that Armstrong's name was in hotel registers in the town where Ferrari lived.

He wrote about it. Nothing happened to Armstrong, but in the following years whistle-blowers came forward to provide him with more evidence, notably Armstrong's masseuse, Emma O'Reilly.

Her accusations were the centrepiece of Walsh's book, L.A. Confidential, written along with French sports journalist Pierre Ballester in 2004. Armstrong, who went on denying taking drugs, dismissed the accusations and then sued the Sunday Times over a related article, leading to the paper paying out £1m in a libel settlement.

But Walsh, who found few friends and supporters among the rest of the journalistic cycling fraternity, would not let go. He obtained more evidence from one of Armstrong's former teammates, Frankie Andreu, and his wife Betsy. He knew Armstrong was lying.

It wasn't until June 2012 that Walsh was finally vindicated when United the States Anti-Doping Agency (USADA) banned Armstrong from competitive cycling for life for doping offences and said he had been engaged in "the most sophisticated, professionalised and doping successful program that sport has ever seen."

Walsh told the audience:

"A good story is always worth pursuing" adding that he never worried about being unpopular with his peers. "A good story is always worth pursuing," he said, "no matter how difficult pursuing it might be."

After Walsh's speech, the Daily Mirror editor, Lloyd Embley, called him "an example and inspiration to us all." British theatre company bring classic romantic tale to local stage for brief encounter....

Local News

NEXT MONTH sees a real treat for British theatre fans with the opening of Brief Encounter at the Wallis Playhouse in Beverly Hills.

Readers of a certain age will of course remember the classic David Lean film of the same name starring Trevor Howard and Celia Johnson, which launched a thousand hankies. The story centers on the doomed relationship of Laura. а suburban housewife who discovers passion and falls madly in love with Alec, a married doctor, in a railway station tearoom over a series of stolen afternoons

Remembered as one of the most haunting love stories ever told, the film was based on Noel Coward's 1936 one-act play Still Life and memorably featured in the score Sergei Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto #2."

Switching seamlessly between theater and film using a combination of the play and the film, this new production from the England's Kneehigh Theatre Company takes you back to a bygone age of romance and the silver screen. Hannah Yelland and Tristan Sturrock star as Laura and Alec and the show is adapted and directed by Emma Rice.

The original production toured the UK before opening in 2008 at the Haymarket Cinema in London's West End, which was converted into a theatre for this production.

Meet A Member: Declan-Michael Laird

Meet Declan-Michael Laird from Glasgow, Scotland who moved to LA 2 years ago to study acting and now works full time as a professional actor.

Why did you move to LA?

The reason I moved to LA was because I was offered a 100%

Last chance for medieval masterpieces at the Getty

This weekend is the last chance for visitors to experience two masterpieces of medieval English art: six dazzling, monumental stained glass figures depicting the Ancestors of Christ from England's famed Cathedral Canterbury and the St. Albans Psalter, richly illuminated а manuscript that is a landmark of English Romanesque art at the J. Paul Getty Museum.

Canterbury and St. Albans: Treasures from Church and Cloister is on view at the J. Paul Getty Museum through Sunday, February 2, 2014, and unites monumental glass painting with the intimate art of book illumination to reveal how specific texts, prayers and environments shaped the medieval viewer's understanding of these pictures.

scholarship from the Stella Adler Academy Of Acting in Hollywood. I was the first student to be offered this since Robert De Niro! Previously I was working on BBC show 'River City' so it was a tough decision!

What do you miss most from home?

these bodies of work is possible because of preservation activities. The six glass windows from Canterbury Cathedral have been temporarily removed from the Cathedral's Great South Window for conservation on the architectural framing. The St. Albans Psalter, on loan from the Cathedral Library in Hildesheim, Germany, has been temporarily unbound for documentation and conservation and will soon be permanently rebound.

"It is a unique privilege to be able to exhibit these two masterpieces of medieval English art in Angeles," Los said Timothy Potts, director of Paul Getty the J. Museum.

For opening hours and directions, visit www.getty.edu.

The thing I probably miss most from home is just small. A simple thing like playing 5 asides with my school mate's. And of course, my family.

What is the biggest difference you see between the USA and the UK?

For me, I would say the biggest difference is that the American's have a better attitude in chasing their dreams. However, the sense of humor in the UK and genuine traits of people is far superior.

What hidden gem in LA would you share with us?

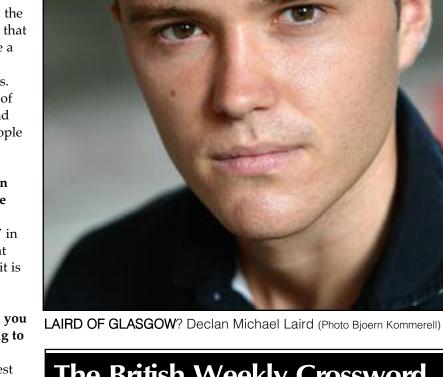

Hmmm...'Aventine' in Hollywood is a great bar/restaurant and it is managed by a Brit!

What advice would you give others planning to make the move?

What I would suggest to others is....come here with you're head up, confidence high in yourself. Get a good group of friends, and don't let anyone tell you that you cant do it.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Please be kind to another who may be feeling sorry for themselves this week. This person is really not having a good experience in life and needs your support and the reward will be knowing you helped.

TAURUS: You need to look long and hard this week ahead at where you are heading. Do you think it is the right direction or do you need to make a detour? Only you can figure this out and you will now that Venus your boss is going forward. GEMINI: What you can achieve this week is up to how willing you are to make the right moves. Holding back for the right time is wasting time and you can always be relied on to think too much. Your rascal ruler Mercury starts to stroll backwards soon. CANCER: It is a month of makeover...either you or your home or (if you can afford it) both. Either way get moving as it's the right time to let the winds of change move swiftly through the old and worn out.

LEO: As this month begins you could find yourself stretched beyond your limits in a couple of areas of life, one is work (or the lack of it) and of course following on is cash flow. It's going to get easier before the end of the month . VIRGO: Any task you take on will be easier to deal with and as this will last until the end of this month make it a priority to complete anything outstanding because new ideas and opportunities will come up next month.

LIBRA: Travel is much on your mind and this can make you stressed or feel limited. The clue is to make an effort to keep busy or to take short trips to visit interesting places. Your lovely boss Venus is helping by moving forward instead of backwards.

SCORPIO: You have been in search of a more peace-filled existence for some time now. This has been difficult in a lot of ways. Be calm and positive in thought and deed and life can be much better from now on. Saturn in your life now will bring rewards long overdue.

SAGITTARIUS: You could be feeling a bit moody or out of sorts due to Jupiter moving into your area of deep feelings. Know that what you reap is what you sow and this would be a good time to start thinking positive in all of life.

CAPRICORN: Your financial situation is still not what you want, however in order to achieve a positive cash flow you have to assume it is already here. This means to not act or think in lack of anything in life.

AQUARIUS: A family member will likely ask for help these next few days. How you handle this situation will decide if they come back for more. It's your decision if you decide to help them out. Either way, have a Happy Birthday.

PISCES: Stop that feeling sorry for yourself as this will not change anytime soon and if you waste time nothing can get it back. Life is to be enjoyed so go for it and know that your boss Neptune in your life now will bring many Karmic rewards.

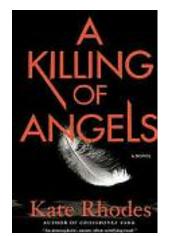

A Killing of Angels: Death on the wing?

■ Exclusive interview with author Kate Rhodes and a review of her latest Alice Ouentin crime novel

Rating ★★★

"The serial killer in A Killing Of Angels believes that all bankers are worthless, and the world would be a purer place without them," savs author Kate Rhodes. "Many people feel that bankers get paid a ridiculously high wage for the work they do, so I decided to let that idea spiral out of control. What if someone grew so angry about bankers' crazy that started bonuses killing the city's top financiers?"

This is the second book by Kate Rhodes featuring psychologist Dr. Alice Quentin, who grudgingly helps the police solve murders. Alice is fantastic at work, but her personal life is a mess. Rhodes uses the city of London as one of the characters. A few more twists and turns in the plot with some questions left unanswered might have added a bit more suspense. You don't have to read the first book to read this one.

In A Killing of Angels, police investigator Don Burns needs Quentin's help with a new case. This time, a banker's death looks like a suicide, but in his pocket are a picture of an angel and a handful of white feathers. There's a killer loose in the financial district killing off people related to Angel Bank. Quentin doesn't want to get involved, but owes Burns a favor. Quentin's cold fish mother and her brother (who's always on drugs) flit in and out of her life.

interviewed Rhodes many successful bankers during her research for A Killing Of Angels. "They were helpful and surprisingly candid," says Rhodes. "But, none of them would let me acknowledge them in my book. Banking continues to be a closed and secretive world, where honesty is often actively discouraged."

"My writing career has followed quite an unusual trajectory, so a lot of weird and wonderful things have happened after each of my books," says Rhodes. She first wrote two poetry collections. Then her husband dared her to try a crime novel. "I've always adored crime fiction, so it seemed like a great challenge," says Rhodes. "For me the loveliest thing to happen is that I've been asked to write four more books in the Alice Quentin series, which was a marvelous confidence boost."

"My most enjoyable prize was a Hawthornden Fellowship," says Rhodes. "It allowed me to live in a Scottish castle for free for an entire month. Bliss! The castle was more than slightly spooky, but it was so remote that I could immerse myself in my writing every day without hearing a sound, apart from birdsong and wind whistling down the glen."

Rhodes first novel was Crossbones Yard, a story about sex workers being targeted by a serial killer. Rhodes is completing writing her fourth crime novel, River Of Souls which she has "just sent.....to my agent, and I'm having a few weeks break before launching into the fifth novel in my series," says Rhodes. "I get twitchy on days when there's no writing to do, so my spare time is being spent brushing up some short stories which will be published in anthologies this year. Short stories make a great change of pace after completing a novel."

Rhodes lives in Cambridge with her husband, Dave Pescod, a

Who looks good? Peter Capaldi's new duds revealed!

In Cardiff this week, actress Ienna Coleman was seen emerging from the TARDIS before an emotional first embrace with telly's new Doctor Who Peter Capaldi during filming.

And after months of only tiny drips of information on Capaldi's incarnation as the 12th Doctor – we've seen pictures of him in Matt Smith's old costume and in a puffy white shirt – the BBC has released the first photo of him in his Time costume with Lord Capaldi wearing a dark blue Crombie coat with red lining, dark blue trousers, a white shirt and black boots.

Like his predecessor, played by Matt Smith, the new Doctor is a pretty slick dresser. He steers short of the half-mast skinny trousers worn by 31-year-old Matt, but the navy chinos show that the cadaverous pin-up definitely still has it at the age of 55.

The classic Dr Martens brogues add to the youthful, hipster edge, suggesting that this Doctor could be a real rebel.

Just like the announcement that the Thick Of It actor was to become the 12th Time Lord, this outfit is surprising but somehow just works.

Coleman's Clara Oswald, pictured steppin g out of the Doctor's trusty blue box was wearing a navy blue cardigan and short tartan skirt as she hugged the regenerated Time Lord.

Hinting at the dynamic union between the duo, Capaldi's Doctor can be seen responding to Clara's hug bv awkwardly flailing his arms and then clenching his fists.

Speaking about Capaldi taking over from Smith, Coleman said at the recent National Television Awards: "[Peter is] great of course, we all know be he's going to wonderful.

"It's been great to get up on our feet and get started - we just seem to have taken off like a rocket."

Head writer and executive producer Steven Moffat has penned Doctor Who's eighth series premiere, which will be directed by Kill List and A Field in England filmmaker Ben Wheatley.

Earlier this month, Capaldi was pictured on the back of a horse in the dramatic first on-set photographs.

Doctor Who will return to BBC One in late 2014.

Rosie's so posey

reckon Rosie Huntington-Whiteley is obviously a fan of the mantra - the bigger the hair the closer to heaven!

And the stunning supermodel demonstrated iust that as she appeared on the cover of Harper's Bazaar's annual spring fashion edition wearing а particularly voluminous look.

British-born The babe recently returned from а Hawaiian break with her actor beau Jason Statham (yes, they are still together ... just) where she posted several sultry Instagram pictures of herself in bikinis.

Rosie, Karl Lagerfeld and Carine Roitfeld have collaborated on a retro styled "Think Pink" cover for the coveted March issue of Harper's Bazaar, where she takes centre stage on the cover for the special issue of the magazine.

Rosie recently launched her latest lingerie collection for British store Marks & Spencer, showing her stunning figure in a variety of vintage-inspired bras and panties in shops just in time for Valentine's Day.

Our Rosie, in a word, is bloomin' HOT!

Did SuBo apply for £6/hour job at bookies?

I almost fell off my chair at this one when I first heard it; according to the UK's Sun on Sunday singer Susan Boyle has applied for a minimum £6.00 an hour wage job as a cashier at a branch of bookmakers Ladbrokes.

Despite earning an estimated £20 million finishing since as runner-up on 'Britain's Got Talent' in 2009, Boyle reportedly filled out an application for the job in the Blackburn, Lothian branch of the chain.

The paper claims that 'SuBo' saw the advert for the job on Thursday and immediately inquired about taking the role.

Deputy manager David Corr said he was shocked to see the singer in the shop and for her to then speak to him about the iob.

He told the Sun: "Susan Boyle walked into the shop and inquired about the job advertised in our window. We were all in shock. She explained she was really keen on working there and she lives nearby.

Obviously she doesn't need the money so I think she saw it as a way of getting her out of her house and taking her mind off things."

Oo-er!

A spokesperson for Ladbrokes confirmed: "Susan came in to the shop and asked about the part-time She had position. previously applied for a job with us before she was famous. There must be Brits in LA hosted its first-ever Burns night supper at the aptly-named Bedford and Burns in Beverly Hills. (Kindly sponsored by Glenfiddich and The Balvenie).

Guests got to enjoy some very fine whiskeys paired with their meal of Haggis, cock-a-leekie soup and roast beef. It was my first time trying and haggis and I have to say I was pleasantly surprised. Lorne Cousins piped in the haggis, while Skotti Collins blessed and welcomed the majestic dish. TV's own Ross King gave a smashing toast followed by some cracking comedy by member Wendy Wason. Member Ewan "Mc"Chung won the Scottish accent poetry competition and Lorne once again piped us all out. It was very nice to have in presence our own deputy general consulate, Bernie Greene who gave a heartfelt speech validating the Scottish presence in LA. Also in tow was a lot of the staff from the consulate including our very own Caroline Beddie who led us quite the Scottish dance.

Impressive!!!! And Liz Sterling's Mum happened to be in town and had a grand time, saying "How great it is that we have a community that cares so much about each other." Too right!

Still a Starr

The past week also saw the Grammy awards at the Staples Center where our beloved Sir Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr were honored. I myself was very honored along with the artist Keaton Simons to work with the Starkey Foundation's Grammy mission of helping fit over 60 local kids with the gift of hearing. Starkey do such incredible work and I'm so proud of the work they do globally. Their mission is "So the world may hear." And they do just that by going into impoverished countries worldwide and helping these young kids hear with the power of hearing aids. It's pretty remarkable. Check them out to see how you can help: www.starkeyhearing foundation.com.

Key values

Brits in LA key members were treated to special events this week, a private screening of the new Kate Winslet movie 'Labor Day' and Aston Martin's exclusive VIP event with whiskey and nibbles to preview the Bespoke Vanquish Volante VIP Event at Aston Martin Beverly Hills, yet another reason to become a key member.

Pilot season is just about to start which means more Brits descend on the land of opportunity in hopes of getting discovered and landing a coveted TV pilot. We wish you all lots of luck out there and hope you land something.

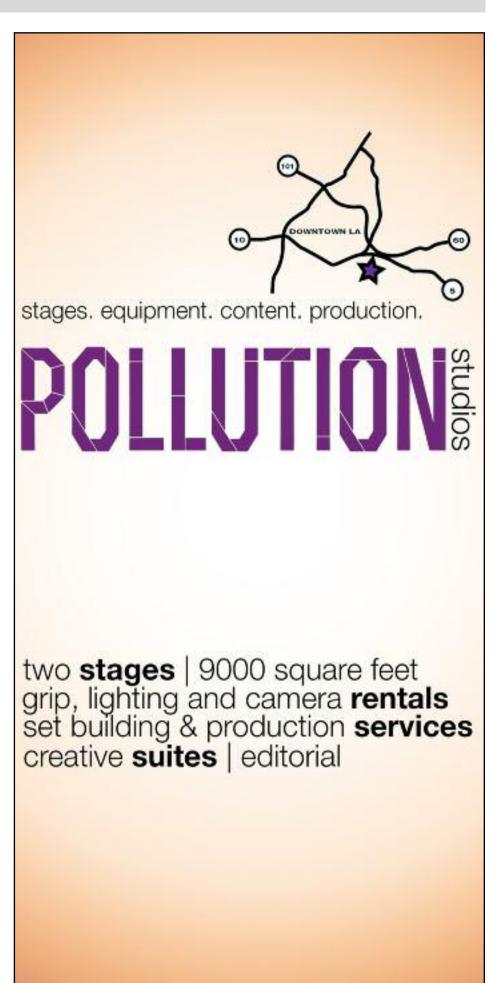

Thank you to lots of sponsors who have come aboard our annual film making event the Toscars Geek Eyewear, Beltran Brito Immigration Services, Upakweship shipping company, Pollution Studios (see advertisement this page) and The Camera House for all your camera needs. We still have some sponsorship opportunities available, contact me at craig@britsin.la for more information. Also tickets go on sale Monday Feb 3rd, 2014. Check out www.thetoscars.com for ticket info.

See you at the Breakfast Club at Cecconi's, sponsored by Next Stop LAX or our weekly Pub !uiz at the Pikey both events happen every Tuesday.

Reds underline top four status with commanding victory in lopsided Merseyside derby

Liverpool maintained their pursuit of a top-four place in magnificent style as Everton were thrashed in the Merseyside derby at Anfield on Tuesday.

Billed as the most crucial league meeting between the sides in 30 years, the contest was all over inside 35 minutes as Liverpool raced into a three-goal lead courtesy of Steven Gerrard's header and two goals in three minutes from striker Daniel Sturridge.

Everton's agony was increased as Romelu Lukaku was taken off on a stretcher with ankle ligament damage after Gareth Barry slipped and slid into the striker as he attempted to block Gerrard's opening goal.

Luis Suarez added a fourth for the hosts when he cashed in on Phil Jagielka's mistake and Sturridge wasted the opportunity to secure a derby hat-trick when he blazed a penalty over the top after Raheem Sterling was fouled by keeper Tim Howard.

This emphatic victory, Liverpool's biggest derby triumph since November 1982, allowed them to open up a four-point gap over their neighbours but the biggest worry for visiting manager Roberto

DYNAMIC DUO: Sturridge and Suarez were again on the scoresheet for Llverpool Tuesday night

Martinez may be the psychological damage inflicted, as well as the worry over the stricken Lukaku.

It left the Toffees still searching for their first win at Anfield since September 1999 - and there was never any serious hope they might alter that miserable record on a night of Reds dominance.

For Liverpool manager Brendan Rodgers, this win will be further evidence that his side can seal a top-four place and maybe achieve even greater things with Arsenal, Chelsea and Manchester City still to come to Anfield this season.

After this moment of optimism it was all downhill for Everton, however, not only in the manner in which they were dismantled by Liverpool's attacks but with the crucial loss of Lukaku.

Howard had already saved from Jordan Henderson, Suarez and Sterling before Liverpool went ahead after 21 minutes in an incident that had short- and long-term consequences for Everton and Martinez.

Barry slipped as he tried to track Gerrard at Suarez's corner, allowing the Anfield captain to head in powerfully but also taking out Lukaku, who was carried off on a stretcher with ankle damage after lengthy treatment.

Everton were at last sparked into action as Jagielka's shot was saved by Mignolet and Kevin Mirallas was just off target - but the home side were a constant threat and swiftly added a second.

Youngster John Stones lost Sturridge and the England forward raced on to Philippe Coutinho's pass to loft a cool finish over Howard, a chance the in-form striker never looked like missing.

The visitors were in defensive disarray and Sturridge added another two minutes later, taking advantage of open spaces to accept Kolo Toure's pass and lob Howard brilliantly.

Martinez sent on Leon Osman for Pienaar at half-time and the veteran had a shot well saved by Mignolet before normal service was resumed.

The normally reliably Jagielka was having an unhappy evening and he was the culprit as Everton fell further behind five minutes after the break, conceding possession to Suarez and never having the pace required to catch the striker as he raced half the length of the field to beat Howard.

Liverpool should have inflicted further punishment on Everton when referee Martin Atkinson awarded a penalty after Howard pulled down Sterling. Sturridge took over penalty duties from Gerrard, presumably in search of his hat-trick, but lashed an awful effort high into the Kop.

Stuart Broad 'unharmed' by England's heavy Ashes loss in Australia

England bowler Stuart Broad has described the Test series whitewash in Australia as a "life experience" but says he has come through it unharmed.

The 5-0 Ashes loss only the third in England's history - was followed by a 4-1 defeat in the ODI series.

"If I've got through this tour OK and I feel like it hasn't harmed my personal experience, I can pretty much get through anything," said Broad.

He added England were confident for the Twenty20 series starting on Wednesday.

Broad, 27, will take charge of a new-look England side for three matches against Australia as they look to end the tour on a winning note. "If you look at the

"If you look at the hard facts - we've been here for three months, we've won one game and Australia have outplayed us in pretty much every single game - you'd expect morale to be pretty low," Broad told BBC Radio 5 live.

"But we've had meetings and, coming into training, the guys are really confident. There's a lot of excitement around this group and, as we know in T20 cricket, if you do have confidence and you do enjoy your cricket, you play pretty well, so that's our plan."

He added that the likes of Luke Wright, Michael Lumb and Alex Hales have been performing well in Australia's Big Bash League.

"Their confidence is high and they've brought a lot of confidence into the group," said Broad. "There's a real nice buzz around the changing room."

England's limited-overs tour of the West Indies starts on 28 February.

In the absence of Alastair Cook, Broad is likely to captain the team for the three ODIs. "I'm looking forward to getting to the Caribbean," he said.

objectives in France and in Europe."

The former Lille player joined Newcastle for £4.3m in June 2011 and scored 17 goals in 79 appearances for the North East club.

He refused to play for the Magpies in August after they rejected a £10m offer from Arsenal, but later apologised and in September insisted he was "happy" at the Premier League club.

PSG are three points clear of AS Monaco in Ligue 1, and will face Bayer Leverkusen in the last 16 of the Champions League.

"The transfer of Yohan Cabaye is further proof of the club's capacity to attract the best French and overseas players," president Nasser Al Khelaifi said.

"We are especially delighted to welcome the Paris him to St-Germain family to help it in its upcoming challenges in the second half of the season."

Al Khelaifi heads Qatar Sports Investments, who became PSG's majority shareholders in 2011.

cellar-dwellers, accusing Sam Allardyce's men of playing "19th-Century football".

The Blues had 39 efforts on goal, while the visitors only managed one, having spent most of the match defending.

"This is not the best league in the world, this is football from the 19th Century," said Mourinho. "The only [other] thing I could bring was a Black and Decker [tool] to destroy the wall."

Despite the numerous attempts, the Blues managed only nine on target. Hammers keeper Adrian made three good saves from John Terry, Samuel Eto'o and Frank Lampard.

Brazil midfielder Oscar and substitute striker Demba Ba were also denied by the woodwork.

West Ham's only effort on goal was when James Tomkins's header was comfortably dealt with by Petr Cech. They should have made the Blues keeper work again moments later, but Andy Carroll failed to connect with Stewart Downing's delivery from eight yards out.

"It's very difficult to play a football match where only one team wants to play. It's very difficult," added Mourinho, whose side are now three points behind league leaders Manchester Citv after they won 5-1 at Tottenham.

"A football match is about two teams playing and this match was only one team playing and another team not playing.

"I told Big Sam [West Ham manager Allardyce] and I repeat my words: they need points and, because they need points, to come here and play the way they did, is it acceptable? Maybe, yes."

ALL TOO EASY: Vincent Kompany celebrates Manchester City's fifth goal Wednesday night

Table-toppers 'best team in the Premier League' says Spurs boss after 5-1 midweek rout

Manchester City are playing the best football in the world, according to Tottenham boss Tim Sherwood.

City climbed above Arsenal to the top of the Premier League on Wednesday as they thrashed Spurs, who had Dany Rose sent off, 5-1 at White Hart Lane. The 2011-12 champions remain in the hunt for an unprecedented quadruple.

"They are the best team on the planet, certainly the best team in the Premier League. We've played the champions today," Sherwood told BBC Sport.

"It was difficult with level numbers, but once we were down to 10 it was over as a spectacle."

Match of the Day pundit Alan Hansen agreed with Sherwood's assessment, describing Manuel Pellegrini's team as "mesmeric".

The former Liverpool defender said: "Tottenham were playing against possibly the best team in the world, with some of the greatest players in the world.

"They have gone away from home against a team who have taken 16 points from 18, and are going for the top four, and dismissed them with consummate ease.

"In the first half-hour they could have had five their fluency, passing and movement was just mesmeric."

City have qualified for the last 16 of the Champions League for the first time and are still in contention for four trophies. Next Monday they host third-placed Chelsea in the league before a fifth-round FA Cup tie against Jose Mourinho's side, with a two-legged European tie against Barcelona to follow.

City have already reached the Capital One Cup final, with Sunderland their opponents in the Wembley showpiece in March.

Wednesday's victory was their second of the season against Tottenham after a 6-0 demolition of the Londoners at Etihad Stadium in November.

Top scorer Sergio Aguero scored the opener, his 26th goal of the season, but was replaced after injuring his hamstring.
