Life terms for Righy Killers

RELATIVES of murdered soldier Lee Rigby said 'justice has been done' after the men responsible for his death were given lengthy jail sentences on Thursday.

Michael Adebolajo has been sentenced to a "life means life" prison term for the killing of Army drummer while Michael Adebowale was sentenced to life with a minimum of 45 years.

The defendants greeted the sentences with fury at the Old Bailey this week, and both Adebolajo, 29, and Adebowale, 22, had to be manhandled out of court by security guards after being told by Mr Justice Sweeney that their crime was a "betrayal of Islam".

Adebolajo screamed at the judge as he was manhandled down the dock stairs in the historic Court No 2 but, in scenes lasting several minutes, his co-defendant was held to the floor and cuffed before being carried downstairs head first.

Relatives of Drummer Rigby, who were sitting just three feet away from the dock, stood up and cowered away from the violence.

Eight dock officers wrestled with the killers, who hacked the 25-year-old soldier to death in May last year after running him over near his barracks in Woolwich, south-east London.

minimum term

Angered by the judges' comments about Islam, Adebowale stood up and shouted: "That's a lie. It's not a betrayal of Islam. You don't know what Islam is."

The struggle erupted as the murderer yelled: "I swear by Allah that America and Britain will never have any safety. Allahu Akbar [God is Great]."

After the defendants had been removed Mr Justice Sweeney resumed his sentencing to give Adebolajo a "whole-life" tariff, meaning he will spend the rest of his life in iail Adebowale was given life with a minimum term of 45 years.

The judge said the pair both became extremists and decided to "murder a soldier in public daylight" to advance their extremist cause.

He described the scene of the murder as a "bloodbath" and said they "butchered" Drummer Rigby.

Mr Justice Sweeney said the pair had not shown any regret for the killing, adding: "I'm sure this was a murder done for the purpose of advancing a political, religious or racial cause.

"Your sickening and pitiless conduct was in stark contrast to the compassion and bravery shown by the various women at the scene who tended to Lee Rigby's body and challenged what you had done and said."

Adebolajo, who wanted to be called by the name Mujaahid Abu Hamza, was dressed in a black Islamic robe and had refused to stand up in court.

Another week, another rainfall record....

WITH THE passing of another week in the great miserable British winter another record has fallen, as the Met Office announced this winter has been the wettest for almost 250 years in England and Wales.

Around 17 inches of rain was recorded up to February 24 in England and Wales, making it their wettest winter since 1766.

"New records have been set for many parts of the UK, with southeast and central southern England having seen well over double the rainfall expected in a normal winter," the Met Office said in a statement.

Provisional rainfall figures from December 1, 2013 to February 25, 2014 also show that Britain as a whole experienced its wettest winter since records began in 1910.

Over the past few months, heavy rainfall and storms in Britain, particularly in England and Wales, have resulted in the worst floods for the country in 50 years.

Floods have devastated homes and businesses, disrupted transport and ruined crops. Analysts estimate that the bill for repairs may end up reaching £1 billion.

Big increase in net migration to UK

■ Latest figures likely to heap further pressure on Cameron

THE NUMBER of migrants coming to the UK in the year to September 2013 has reached 212,000 – almost double the Conservatives' target of below 100,000, according to official estimates.

The Office for National Statistics said the net flow - the numbers moving to the UK minus the numbers leaving it - rose from 154,000 in the previous year.

The increase has been driven by a big growth in the number of European Union citizens coming to Britain.

But No 10 said its aim had not changed.

Asked if David Cameron stood by his pledge to reduce net migration to under 100,000 by 2015, the PM's official spokesman said: "That is absolutely the objective and we are going to very much keep working towards that.

"We are putting in place what we believe are the right measures that go towards meeting that objective."

There was a rise in new arrivals from Poland, Spain, Italy and Portugal.

Some 24,000 citizens of Romania and Bulgaria also arrived in the year to September 2013, nearly three times the 9,000 who arrived in the previous year, the Office for National Statistics said in a report. About 70% came to work, while 30% came to study.

Official figures for how many Romanians and Bulgarians have arrived since working restrictions were lifted on 1 January have yet to be released.

'Pull factor'

Some 532,000 people migrated to the UK in the year ending September, up from the 497,000 people who arrived during the previous year, while 320,000 left the country, down from the 343,000 the previous year.

The number of EU citizens arriving in the UK rose to 209,000 from 149,000 the previous year, the ONS said.

But immigration of non-EU citizens saw a statistically significant decrease, to 244,000 from 269,000 the previous year.

The overall increase of 58,000 in the net migration figure will come as a blow to Prime Minister David Cameron and Home Secretary Theresa May's aim of cutting it to the "tens of thousands" by the time of the next election in May 2015.

But the figures are still

INCOMING: Britain's buoyant economy has led to a rise in new arrivals from Poland, Spain, Italy and Portugal.

down on the levels of net migration reached in the early days of the coalition - revised ONS figures suggest it reached 263,000 not seen, in the year to September migration for the property of the property

unintended consequence

Immigration minister James Brokenshire insisted the government had not abandoned its target and its focus "absolutely remains on bringing net migration down to those sustainable levels".

He said the immigration flows that the government had some control over, from outside the EU, were continuing to come down.

He told the BBC: "It is down to levels we have not seen, in terms of net migration from outside the EU, since 1998.

The latest figures show that however successful ministers have been in curbing non-EU immigration, they haven't been able to prevent Poles, Spaniards, Italians and Portuguese coming to the UK principally to work.

It would appear to be the unintended consequence of Britain's economic recovery.

When statistics are published later this year, come on the number of Romanians and and are if it is Bulgarians who entered the have the UK after work of net restrictions were lifted, the net migration target is likely to be even further away.

For Labour, shadow home secretary Yvette Cooper said the government's targets were "in tatters" and its policy was "a mess".

She added: "David Cameron promised, 'No ifs, no buts,' to cut net migration to the tens of thousands, yet these figures show net migration has gone up and is now more than twice that figure.

Former Sun editor tells of sanctioning payments to government officials

Rebekah Brooks, Rupert Murdoch's former British newspaper boss, told a London court on Thursday she had sanctioned payments to public officials "half a dozen times" but denied approving the illegal sums for which she is on trial.

Brooks is accused of authorizing almost £40,000 in illegal payments from a reporter on Murdoch's Sun tabloid to a Ministry of Defence (MoD) official while she was editor of the paper.

She denies a charge of conspiracy to commit misconduct in a public office, and other offences of conspiracy to hack phones and perverting the course of justice.

A national furore over phone-hacking by journalists at the News of the World tabloid, which she also edited, led to the closure of the paper in 2011, rocked Murdoch's media empire and had repercussions across the British political establishment.

However, the offence relating to authorizing illegal payments carries a potentially much lengthier jail sentence.

Giving evidence for a fifth day at London's Old Bailey court, Brooks said "there had to be an overwhelming public interest" to justify payments to officials and only in "very narrow circumstances".

Asked by her defence lawyer if she had ever sanctioned such payments, which is illegal, Brooks replied: "Yes, probably since I was deputy editor of the Sun, 1998 to 2009, a handful of occasions, half a dozen."

Brooks was asked about a series of stories she approved that the prosecution says relate to illegal payments by a Sun journalist, who cannot be named for legal reasons, to an MoD official.

Brooks said she had not known who the reporter's source was, nor that she was a public official. "He probably should have brought it to my attention, absolutely," she said.

"Cheap at the price"

The jury were also shown emails from the reporter asking Brooks to authorise payments to his "number one military contact", to which she replied: "Of course".

"Nothing would have flagged up to me that there was an issue with it," she told the court, adding she would not have been "policing" the reporter for any wrongdoing.

In one email, the reporter described a £4,500 payment for three of his stories as being "cheap at the price".

"I probably thought, yeah that's quite cheap at the price," she said.

Brooks said there was legitimate public interest in many of the stories and, although she had been unaware who the source was at the time, she hypothetically would have sanctioned payments for a few of them.

These related to reports of bullying of army recruits and a "war hero" quitting over the treatment of his troops.

"This was exactly the kind of campaign we were doing," she said. She told the jury there had been no reaction or complaint from the MoD about the stories or their origin, although the paper's campaigns had caused some political disquiet.

The case continues.

Richard Whittam QC, prosecuting, said they should both receive whole life terms because of the severity of their crime and its political motivation. David Gottlieb QC, for Adebolajo, had argued that a whole life tariff would not be appropriate for his client.

'sincere but misguided'

"The first defendant (Adebolajo) is not so depraved and wicked that he is incapable of redemption in the future," he told the court, adding that Adebolajo was a "sincere but misguided person who has committed a wicked act".

Abbas Lakha QC, for Adebowale, argued that a whole life tariff would be "inhuman" because it would "extinguish all hope of release".

The pair were convicted of murder last December but their sentencing was put on hold while the Court of Appeal decided whether judges were free to impose whole life tariffs following a controversial ruling by European judges.

Last week appeal judges backed existing British laws which say that in "exceptional" cases the most heinous criminals can be sent to jail for the rest of their lives.

Both killers were born into Christian families and converted to Islam.

'Monumental blunder' cheats IRA bomb victims out of justice

Four soldiers murdered in one of Britain's most notorious IRA bombings have been denied justice after a key suspect walked free from court because of a "monumental" police blunder that has granted him effective immunity.

John Downey, 62, had been wanted for more than 30 years for his alleged role in the 1982 Hyde Park bombings, which saw a nail bomb tear through the ranks of ■ Terrorist behind 1982 Hyde Park bombings unlikely to ever be held to account

He was finally caught last year but this week learnt he will never be prosecuted after it emerged he was wrongly given a "get out of jail free" card in a deal brokered as part of the Northern Ireland peace settlement.

The collapse of the case and the passing of more than three decades means it is unlikely that anyone will ever be prosecuted over the atrocity.

Mr Downey was one of almost 200 "on the run" IRA suspects who were sent a so-called "letter of assurance" that effectively protected them from prosecution.

But a senior judge threw out the prosecution after ruling the assurances in the letter had to stand, even if they were sent in error. Mr Downey has spent one year in Britain while on bail and could now sue the UK authorities.

The families of the victims said they had been "devastatingly let down" by the "monumental blunder" and demanded a full review The mistake was made by officers with the Police Service Northern Ireland (PSNI), who knew Mr Downey was wanted over the Hyde Park bomb but failed to notify authorities. #### Minister threatens to quit

Northern Ireland's First Minister has threatened to quit unless there is a judicial inquiry into secret letters given to more than 180 Irish republican paramilitary suspects promising no criminal proceedings would be launched against them.

Peter Robinson made his announcement after a judge threw out the case against John Downey, the man charged with the 1982 Hyde Park bombing.

Mr Robinson told UTV News: "I will not lead an administration where the rule of law does not prevail."

He claimed he was not prepared to remain first minister in a power-sharing administration that was not kept properly informed on such an important matter.

The Democratic Unionist Party leader said he would discuss his stance with the Northern Ireland secretary Theresa Villiers at a meeting later.

Mr Robinson called for all the letters, sent out as part of the Good Friday Agreement peace process, to be declared void.

He said: "I am not prepared to be kept in the dark by Her Majesty's government about matters relevant to Northern Ireland

"I want a full judicial inquiry to find out who knew, when they knew and what they knew. I want to know who they are and what crimes they are believed to have committed."

General later ruled that any extradition bid was unlikely to succeed. He was eventually arrested at Gatwick airport last May while on his way to Greece and charged with the murders. He had believed he was free to enter the UK because he had been sent a letter of assurance in July 2007.

The assurances, agreed between Sinn Fein and the UK government, were sent in the years after the 1998 Good Friday Agreement, as part of the peace process, to suspects who had never been caught for their alleged activities.

Lawyers for Downey argued in a abuse of two-week process hearing at the Bailey that prosecution would be and unfair would threaten the peace settlement. Mr Justice who Sweeney, prosecuted several IRA cases during his career, agreed and threw out the prosecution, allowing the details of the case to be made public for the first time.

He said there had been a "catastrophic failure" in the case and it offended the "court's sense of justice and propriety" to now try the defendant.

Thousands mourn football great Finney

Sir Tom Finney was honoured by the great and the good of British football at his funeral on Thursday.

Thousands of people lined the streets of Preston to see the funeral cortege as it travelled from Deepdale stadium to Preston Minster.

The minster itself was packed with many figures from football and the city to pay tribute to the former England winger, who died aged 91 two weeks ago.

Finney won 76 caps and scored 30 international goals, and played for Preston all his career, making 569 first-class appearances.

'admired and respected'

Sir Trevor Brooking, the former England international who represented the Football Association at the funeral service. told Press Association Sport: "He was one of the most genuine individuals you would ever be likely to meet. Everyone admired and respected him.

"To come to this event today, over 50 years since he played, and see all these people both here in the minster and on the streets, I can't think of many who would get the same reaction.

the match-winner, the crowd-pleaser, the one who could make the difference - I was a youngster in primary school when he was playing, I would watch him on a black and white telly and then go out into the garden with my brother to try to emulate him."

Football League chief executive Shaun Harvey was also among those at the service, and he said: "The great and the good of football have come out to say farewell to Sir Tom Finney - a man who was a genuine legend of our game.

"You only have to mention Preston and Preston North End... the conversation soon turns to Tom Finney and that sums up everything the man did for the club, the city and the game of football."

David Moyes, the Manchester United boss who started his coaching career at Preston, attended the service, as did England's record goalscorer Sir Charlton.

It's the end of the Piers show...

The outspoken British journalist succeeded legendary anchor Larry King three years ago however his show, Piers Morgan Live, has had consistently poor ratings.

'taken a bath'

Morgan is a former U.K. tabloid editor who reinvented himself as a TV personality with judge stints as a "Britain's Got Talent" and its U.S. NBC's spinoff. "America's Got Talent," and as a contestant on "Celebrity Apprentice."

He recently stated: "I think I can credibly do news and the ratings reflect that, but it is not really the show that I set to do." also admitted his show had "taken a bath in the ratings" and that it had been a "painful period".

Right-wing delights in skewering Morgan's 'obviously repugnant personality'

PIERS Morgan's staunchly pro-gun control views have made him something of a hate figure for those on America's political right, so it was no surprise that the news of his CNN career's demise was met with joy in some quarters.

One reviewer in the National Review opined that Morgan's low ratings stemmed from his clear sense of superiority to his audience.

'reflexive disdain'

"Suffice it to say that if Morgan takes any succor at all from this peculiar misreading of his fortunes, he will have rather spectacularly missed the mark," wrote Charles W. Cooke. "What distinguished him from successful and beloved British imports such as Alistair Cooke, Christopher Hitchens, and Craig Ferguson was not the voice but the attitude. and he demonstrated a reflexive disdain for his audience that he never quite managed overcome.

"Back in the old country, Morgan's name is synonymous with arrogance and with overreach, and he is known less for his interviewing skills and show-business acumen than for allegedly hacking the telephones celebrities; retaliating against even minor criticism by siccing paparazzi on the speaker; for having published "calculated and malicious" photographs of British soldiers abusing prisoners; and considering nothing whatsoever to be more sacred than his insatiable ambition.

The definition of "countryside," Stephen Fry once quipped on the BBC, is "to kill Piers Morgan."

"Given that Morgan is an obviously repugnant personality, that he willfully fails to grapple with the topics at hand, and that he is physically incapable of allowing a guest to upstage him, he was always going to have his work cut out."

STRONG VOICE: Irish author John Banville can be heard this week in West Hollywood

Meet the new Philip Marlowe...courtesy of Dublin's John Banville

PHILIP MARLOWE remains one of American fiction's most enduring creations, but while creator Raymond Chandler is long gone, his best-known character, down-at-heel and ethically compromised Los Angeles private detective lives on in a series of novels by various writers, few of which approach the genius of the original.

But that may have changed now that Dublin acclaimed writer John Banville is on the case. Banville is a Man Booker Prize winner (for The Sea in 2005), and under the nom de plume of Benjamin Black, has authored the highly-acclaimed Quirke series postwar mysteries set in Dublin. The Quirke novels are wonderful psychologically intense, rich in period and personal detail.

In Black's book, The Black-Eyed Blonde, Philip Marlowe resurfaces so clearly, so visibly, that you can feel his alienation at the wealthy heiress' mansion on the beach. You are dropped straight into old LA's Barney's Beanery. where Marlowe fishes for information about the blonde's missing boyfriend. The story: a guy goes missing. The wealthy blonde girlfriend wants to find him. But of course that's only the very first part of the tale. It's in the complications, nature of the character and the conflict that we realize that Benjamin Black's great Dublin character, Quirke, is not Raymond Chandler's rumpled Los Angeles Marlowe. As one reviewer put it: Black's capable hands, our Marlowe lives and breathes as if Raymond Chandler himself willed him to life. Being Dubliner, Black alludes to Dublin and to Ireland, lending authenticity to his re-creation. Philip Marlowe has finally met his dopelganger."

John Banville will be reading excerpts from The Black-Eyed Blonde at the Sunset/Sundance Five Cinemas, 8000 Sunset Boulevard in West Hollywood on Thursday, March 6th at 7.30pm as part of Bloc Writers non-profit organization that for 18 years has sought to bring great writers to the readers of Los Angeles 'to hear and see how they think,' as the organization's website puts it. # Britten's "Billy Budd" now playing at the LA Opera

THE ENGLISH Opera Billy Budd makes a rare and welcome appearance in Los Angeles this month at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion as the culmination of the city's "Britten 100/LA" festival, last year having been the centenary of composer Sir Benjamin Britten's birth. For those with a hazy knowledge of the art form, Billy Budd proves good opera doesn't always have to focus on lovelorn couples and heaving corsets. Based on a novella by Herman Melville (of Moby Dick fame) this all-man show is set aboard the stifling, enclosed world of HMS Indomitable, a British warship serving in 1797 during the Napoleonic Wars. Our hero, Billy (a spirited Liam Bonner), is handsome and optimistic fellow, upbeat and sunny despite being pressed into service from a merchant ship, (archly-named Rights of Man). But Billy is cursed by a stutter, a legacy of some sort of childhood trauma and which later becomes a key plot device.

Undercurrents of lust and sexual repression are brought to the surface as Billy's physical beauty brings him to the attention of the brutish master-at-arms, John Claggart, (Greer Grimsley) whose unrequited lust turns to bitter hatred and results in him framing Billy for fomenting mutiny, forcing a court martial at the hands of the decent and skeptical Captain Vere (Richard Croft).

Billy is infuriated and upset by the charges, and, unable to speak through his stammer, strikes Claggart, killing him, leaving Vere with no choice but to hold a martial immediately, his only option under the Articles of War. Billy pleads with Vere to save him, but he is sentenced to death. The sentence brings the ship to the brink of mutiny, but Billy, just before being hung from the yardarm in a very Christ-like fashion, tells the men that death is his fate and asks them not to revolt. Billy is brought onto the main deck. Just before his execution, he praises his captain one last time, singing, "Starry Vere, God bless you!"

The story is neatly bookended by the ruminations of Vere, who, as an old man long retired from the sea, is still haunted by his memories of the event.

anti-war story and an oblique critique of sexual repression. Britten's music, right from the opening curtain, is full of ambiguity and quiet menace, letting the audience know, long before Billy's tragic end, that there is something very nasty just over the horizon.

Late Coward play coming to Pasadena Playhouse

NOEL COWARD FANS (and aren't we all?) will want to make a beeline to Pasadena this month for a new production of A Song at Twilight at the Pasadena Playhouse, starring Bruce Davison and Sharon Lawrence and directed by Art Manke.

A Song at Twilight was first produced in 1966 and is Cowards's final play, and deals with many issues of contemplation reflection with which the author was struggling at the time. We meet author Hugo Latymer (Davison), who has reached the autumn of his days with everything a man could wish for: wealth, success, fantastic friends, and a life filled with laughter, luxury and travel. But a profound fear of intimacy and public scandal have kept him from embracing the one true love in his life, and now he wonders if he would trade the success for a chance to do it all again.

Perhaps the best estimation of the play's issues and power comes from The New York Times, which said of A Song at Twilight: "In his final theater work Sir Noël Coward's talent to amuse was darkened and deepened by his capacity to reflect."

Bruce Davison is best known to movie audiences for his Oscar-nominated, Golden Globe-winning turn in the groundbreaking AIDS Longtime drama Companion.

Sharon Lawrence is a veteran of stage and the small screen, perhaps best known for her role as Andy Sipowicz's ill-fated wife Sylvia in the ABC-TV show, NYPD Blue.

A Song at Twilight plays at the Playhouse Mainstage from March 18 to April 13. For more information and tickets, visit: www. pasadenaplayhouse.org.

Meet a Member: Ron Jeremy

Meet adult film legend and pop culture icon Ron Jeremy, a big supporter of Brits in LA who starred in the Toscars parody film of American Hustle, called British Hustle.

What do you like about being a member of Brits in LA?

I really enjoy attending their pub trivia nights at The Pikey on Tuesdays. I happen to suck at trivia but the atmosphere is fun, especially when Sandro Monetti is hosting as he's a real fun guy who makes it hilarious. The crowd is great too and very friendly, as they are at the British Breakfasts at Ceconni's. And Toscars are great. Coming from the adult film world, I'm used to parodies of movies but this is something different from that - and PG-13.

What was your experience like acting in Toscars film British Hustle?

It was abysmal and horrifying. Especially when Sandro, who directed it, started beating the actors with a cat o' nine tails. Seriously though, he's a great director who knows what he wants. It was sweet of him to give me the job and as Steven Spielberg and James Cameron hadn't called I happily accepted. It was fun parodying the part played by Christian Bale in American Hustle, not least because I have a credit in Christian's film American Psycho - I provided the adult movie footage that his character watches in that film. I'm just a few degrees of separation from every actor in Hollywood.

You reveal yourself to be a really good dancer both in British Hustle and the accompanying pop video for the film's soundtrack album. Where did that talent come from?

I've been dancing for years. I used to hang out at Studio 54 all the time. In my era that was the way you got to meet girls. It was a good way to break the ice to say 'Would you like to dance?' I was even in the movie Studio 54 with Mike Myers. I've been in a lot of pop videos and shown my dance moves in a few of them.

Do you have a lot of British friends?

Oh yes. Famous ones too. I was on a British reality TV show called The Farm a few years ago and got along really well with the Brits on it, like Lionel Blair, Emma Noble, Emma B and especially ventriloquist Keith Harris. He's a terrific guy and he even let me put my hand up the keester of his puppet Orville the Duck, which I considered a great honor.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

The Rainbow Bar and Grill right in the heart of the Sunset Strip is a favorite place of mine. That bar and that area has got so much rock n'roll history thanks to great bands like Guns n' Roses, Poison, Warrant and The Doors. It's an exciting, atmospheric hangout. Plus there's more girls than guys there and I like those odds.

What would you suggest to others who are #### thinking of making the move out here?

If you're already a big fish in a little pond, there's nothing wrong with that. Coming out to LA can you international star, but you can also get swallowed up by all the other fish. Just be aware that the competition is fierce. Also know that there's a way to behave when you're a Hollywood guy. You get brown stuff on your face from kissing so many keesters.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Your financial situation could be getting a boost as early as next week, so look for an opportunity to add to your bank account, as it's as good a time as any this month. But expect other matters to be slow, as Mars is going backwards!

TAURUS: The sun in your compatible sign of Pisces will bring an unresolved situation to a head. Therefore it's best to not ignore or disregard this as unimportant. Mercury going backwards will bring it into the light.

GEMINI: Time to complete what has not been priority in your life these past few months. You could be feeling confused and maybe cranky; this is due to your boss planet Mercury revving up his engines for a fast walk forward. CANCER: Movement is good for you and this week it's all around you and in the family also. Be strong and all the hard work you put in last month will bear fruit. The sun in your cousin sign of Pisces can make you want to hide away.

LEO: Emotional issues could hold you back from enjoying this weekend and even though you may not want to tackle it, this is the right thing to do and make it your priority. Then try and spend some time relaxing, not stressing.

VIRGO: As this coming month brings the start of a better cycle, be sure you are ready and not stressing out about things in life you cannot change. Since your boss planet is going forward now it's a good time to prepare for spring.

LIBRA: There is a part of your life which you more than likely keep under wraps, except for those you are closest to. This next week or so be prepared to have to defend something you said or did. Mercury going forward now in your friends' area of life could find the truth to your advantage.

SCORPIO: You have had mixed emotions since the New Year. This has been due to Saturn the teacher who is visiting you for another year ahead. He is only sorting out the priorities of your life for you. Good news is there are a lot of other planets positive for you.

SAGITTARIUS: Know this: what you reap is what you sow and this would be a good time to start thinking about what you planted before the end of the last year. This can be in any part of life and when you are sure, don't be so ready to throw them out as they are just beginning to bear fruit!

CAPRICORN: Your financial situation is still not what you want, however in order to achieve a positive flow of money you have to take the situation in hand because Pluto, currently visiting your life, will make the decision for you if not. Expect good news by mid-month.

AQUARIUS: How you handle this current family or relationship situation will decide how the rest of your year will be going forward. With the rascally Mercury going forward now it's time to take the bull by the horns!

PISCES: The planets are all around your life this month and egging you on to make some profound changes. You have some decisions to make, so start by getting the truth straight as not living in the truth brings its own drama. Happy Birthday!

Richard I: Lion-hearted and more...

Exclusive interview with Sharon Kay Penman on her latest novel about Richard the Lionheart and his life during and after his imprisonment

"Although Richard I is probably one of the best known of medieval monarchs...even people who know nothing of history have heard of him...there has never been a serious novel about the man," says A King's Ransom author Sharon Kay Penman. "The closest to it was The Lion in Winter, with its brilliant cast of Peter O'Toole, Katharine Hepburn, and a young Anthony Hopkins as Richard. This is one of all-time favorite films...but it is not historically accurate.

Richard Coeur de Lion (Lion Heart) himself was a great surprise to me, for when writing of a real historical figure, I'd never before discovered such a disconnect between the man and the myth."

P e n m a n ' s long-awaited sequel to her book Lionheart covers the last seven years of Richard's life. There's betrayal, war, illness and intrigue. There were lots of rumors about Richard. Was he gay? Did he have affairs during his travels and his imprisonment? Penman shows the courage and compassion shown by his mother Eleanor, sister Joanna and his wife Berengaria. Penman's writes sweeping historical events that engage and the story moves along at a nice clip. She includes everyday details that get you right into the story. You can read this book without reading Lionheart, but it works better to read them in order. Although Ransom is over 700 pages, once you start reading you won't want to stop. In A King's Ransom, the Pope has decreed all crusaders to the Holy Land are to have safe passage, but the Holy Roman Emperor defies that papal decree. For 15 months, Richard is imprisoned at Trefils, where most men never leave alive. His devoted mother Eleanor of Aquitaine does everything in her power to raise the ransom, which is unreasonably high.

"When Richard first appeared, very briefly, in my novel Here be Dragons twenty-eight years ago, I saw him as one-dimensional, the ultimate warrior king, drunk on blood and glory, and too easily accepted the verdict of a Victorian historian that he was a bad son, a bad husband, a bad king. Twenty-some years later, I began to do serious research on Richard for Devil's Brood, and what found eye-opening."

"He was indeed hot-tempered and arrogant and so astonishingly reckless in battle that it is a miracle that he managed to live to be forty-one," says Penman. "And he was most certainly a brilliant commander, one of the best generals of the Middle Ages, as well as being a formidable fighter, almost invincible in hand-to-hand combat. He was, however, a bad husband, his infidelities notorious enough to warrant a lecture from the Bishop of Lincoln."

Penman leads tours to England and France in which she follows the paths of Eleanor of Aquitaine and Richard III.

"It is always great fun to visit the places that mattered to the people I write about," says Penman. "Richard III and Eleanor of Aquitaine are especially beguiling ghosts to chase after, and I loved being able to share these experiences with people who are just as fascinated as I am by medieval history. I was delighted by how easily we bonded, probably because we have so much in common. Fourteen from the Eleanor tour signed up for the Richard III tour too, so it was almost like a family reunion."

Tom Hardy set to go Kray-Kray?

Dark Knight Rises star Tom Hardy is in talks to play the infamous Kray twins in a forthcoming film.

British actor (right) says that he would 'absolutely love' to play both Reggie and Ronnie Kray, and looks set to star in the film version of their criminal lives.

Hardy says he has been approached to play BOTH brothers in the film, which will chart the tortured relationship between East End gangster twins. The Krays were feared yet iconic participants in the swinging Sixties as

"All the plans are on table," Hardy told MailOnline."there's a lot of crossing the t's and dotting the i's, and there's a lot of shift and out."

The film offer comes after Hardy confirmed he would be joining the cast of acclaimed BBC period crime drama Peaky Blinders.

Toscars the toast of Hollywood yet again...

Hollywood could do nothing to dampen the spirits of expat Brits gathering at the historic Egyptian Theatre on Wednesday night for the Brits in LA Seventh Annual Toscars ceremony.

Attendees clustered in courtyard pre-ceremony schmoozing, drinks and nibbles - courtesy of event sponsors Angel City Brewery, Patron Tequila, Moreno Champagne, OneHope Wine, Ashton Afters, Coco Cola, Mulberry Love and Ultimat Vodka - and among the faces we spotted mingling and bingling were adult film legend Ron Jeremy, veteran character actor Clement von global Franckenstein, superstar DJ Paul Oakenfold, rising British actress Tehmina Sunny and tireless social media multi-hyphenate Darren Darnborough with his photogenic main squeeze, Mary Tran.

And as if the rain and plentiful booze weren't enough to get us all in a thoroughly British mood, there was a gorgeous Union-Jack painted Jaguar F-type planted

The ceremony itself kicked off with a musical number and some banter from celebrity host Alex Newell (of Glee fame), before getting down to the serious business of watching the ten short movie parodies contention for the coveted Golden Fist award. The unforgettable titles were: Cavity, The Fox of Wolf Street, Dallas Biters Club, Shaving Mr. Hanks, British Knobraska, 12 Days a Stripper, Pheelaweena, Terminate Her Captain Philips and The Horn of Africa. #### Europa heartbreak for Swans

Swansea agonisingly knocked out of the Europa League by Napoli on Thursday as Gonzalo Higuain and Gokhan Inler scored two goals in the last 12 minutes.

After the first leg finished goalless, Rafael Benitez's side took the lead through Lorenzo Insigne's lob.

Ionathan de Guzman equalised with powerful low shot which looked to have put the Swans through on away goals.

But Higuain's hooked team were not going to "crawl into a corner and hide" and backed them start positively against the Ukrainians.

True to their manager's word, Spurs made a high-tempo start as they attempted to make an early breakthrough, pinning back the visitors in their own half.

But their failure to score early, against a Dnipro side content to play with 10 men behind the ball before breaking at pace on the counter attack, created a tense atmosphere.

Even after the home team's comeback, the Ukrainians knew that a second away goal would them progress.

They almost stunned Spurs when Yevhen Konoplyanka, who was a January transfer target for Liverpool, forced alert Spurs keeper Hugo Lloris into a crucial injury-time save.

But the hosts held on deny Dnipro's ex-Spurs boss Juande Ramos on his return to his former club.

shot and Inler's tap-in at the death sent Napoli through.

It was a bitter blow to Swansea who looked threatening more throughout the second leg and showed plenty of character after going behind.

West Bromwich Albion have suspended striker Nicolas Anelka after he was banned for five matches and fined £80,000 for his "quenelle" gesture.

He has also been ordered to complete a compulsory education course, following a two-day Football Association hearing.

Anelka, 34, denied his use of the sign during a draw with West Ham on 28 December and described as an "inverted Nazi salute", was anti-Semitic.

■ Manny rescues Spurs again in pulsating Europa Cup tie

TOTTENHAM H......3 FC DINIPRO.....1 (agg: 3-2)

Tottenham produced a stunning comeback to beat Ukrainian visitors FC Dnipro and reach the Europa League last-16 on a dramatic Thursday night at White Hart Lane.

Trailing 1-0 from the first leg, Spurs' task became tougher when Dnipro's Roman Zozulya headed in a vital away goal.

Spurs, needing at least three goals to progress, were handed a lifeline by Christian Eriksen's precise free-kick.

But, after Zozulya was sent off for a headbutt, Emmanuel Adebayor's two close-range finishes saw Spurs advance.

Tottenham will now face Portuguese leaders Benfica, beaten Europa League finalists against Chelsea last season, in the next stage.

However, with almost an hour gone of the second leg at White Hart Lane, Tim Sherwood's side looked set to become the latest Premier League team to suffer in European competition.

None of their English top-flight rivals won their Champions League last-16 first legs, while Swansea were eliminated from the Europa League earlier on Thursday.

Spurs appeared on course to continue the negative trend - until their fortunes dramatically changed in a manic second-half spell. Tottenham scored all three goals inside 13 minutes, with Zozulya's moment of madness sandwiched between.

Dnipro's Roman Zozulya was incredulous at the red card shown by referee Antony Gautier Inexplicably, the Ukraine forward headbutted Spurs defender Jan after a Vertonghen, number of previous confrontations between the pair, as Dnipro defended а home free-kick while still leading 2-1 in the tie.

Zozulya was instantly dismissed by referee Antony Gautier in the middle of a furious exchange between both sets of players in the Ukrainian penalty area.

More importantly, it stoked up the Spurs crowd and swung the momentum in their team's favour.

The home side instantly took advantage of the numerical advantage as Eriksen whipped in a dangerous cross from the left which allowed Adebayor to poke in.

Four minutes later, the Togo striker put Spurs ahead in the tie for the first time by controlling Zeki Fryers' long ball on his chest and calmly stroking past Dnipro keeper Denys Boyko.

The manner in which Spurs celebrated, with a jubilant Sherwood fist-pumping the air as he raced down the touchline, showed the relief that had been lifted inside White Hart Lane.

All the drama came after a frustrating first half, where Tottenham dominated possession without testing the Dnipro goalkeeper.

Sherwood's side went into the match on the back of two successive defeats following their loss in Ukraine and a disappointing reverseat Premier League strugglers Norwich on Sunday.

World Cup: Hodgson 'not afraid' to leave out big names

England manager Roy Hodgson says he is prepared to leave experienced players out of his World Cup squad.

Hodgson must decide on his 23 names for the tournament in Brazil by 2 June.

Younger players including Southampton's Luke Shaw and Liverpool's Raheem Sterling are in his squad for Tuesday's friendly with Denmark.

"I am very conscious that I could have to leave a big name out," he said. "It wasn't easy before the Euros, this time it will be even harder."

Ashley Cole, England's most-capped left-back with 106 appearances, has not played regularly for Chelsea this season and faces competition from Everton's Leighton Baines and the uncapped Shaw from the list for the Denmark friendly.

"Before the Euros at least I was choosing names of players I knew and players I had seen play but had never really worked with," said former West Brom manager Hodgson, who was appointed England manager in May 2012.

"This time I will have to disappoint some people I have worked with who have maybe done a good job for me and the team."

The 30 players Hodgson will consider for the meeting with Denmark on Tuesday include several who have been given first caps this season, including Southampton striker Rickie Lambert and Everton midfielder Ross Barkley.

More experienced names omitted include Gareth Barry, who has impressed on loan from Cont. on page 19, Col. 2 Happy Hour Now Available in the pub AND on the patio. Mon-Fri. 4-7pm
