"She liked it" Rolf Harris allegedly told mother of teenage assault victim

Rolf Harris told the mother of a teenage girl he groped in Australia that "she liked it", a court has heard.

The woman said she called the artist a "disgusting creature" as he had also rubbed himself against her while they had a photo taken at a 1991 art event.

Southwark Crown Court heard Mr Harris laughed as he groped the woman's daughter, who was 15 or 16 at the time.

Mr Harris, 84, denies 12 indecent assault charges related to four girls aged between seven or eight and 19.

The incidents are alleged to have taken place between 1968 and

Speaking via video link, the mother and daughter, from Australia, described the defendant as a "dirty old man".

The daughter said she was left in shock.

"He put his right hand on my left breast and through my shirt. I had a shirt that was gathered and did not have buttons on the front," she said.

"He put his other hand on my right butt cheek. His hand was over my bra but through my shirt.

"It was very deliberate. I stepped back and he laughed."

The alleged assault does not form part of the formal charges against Mr Harris, of Bray, Berkshire, because it took place outside the UK at a time before foreign incidents could be tried in British courts.

'Very forceful'

The daughter, now 39, told the court there were about 20 people at the art presentation in Hamilton, which she attended with her mother.

He groped her as she tried to shake his hand when she was introduced to him, she said.

The woman's mother told the court Mr Harris was "close enough to be rubbing himself against my buttocks" as she and her daughter posed for a picture with him.

"It was very brief but very forceful," she said.

"I put my foot down on his foot and turned around and told him he was a disgusting creature."

She told the court Mr Harris's expression "went from smiling friend to a sneer".

"He leaned forward right in my face and said, 'She liked it.' It was really sinister," she said.

The woman told the court she knew Mr Harris was referring to her daughter because he looked at her when he spoke.

She said as she and her daughter left the premises, her daughter said Mr Harris was a "creep" and "very handy".

"I asked her what had happened. She was reluctant," the mother said.

"I did suspect he had touched her in the vicinity of her breast."

The case continues.

Ukip headed for big gains in local elections

THE RISE of the UK Independence Party gathered pace this week with both major parties losing seats to the upstart movement in Thursday's local elections.

The anti-EU party is on course to show that last year's breakthrough in town halls was not a one-off, with Labour struggling to make progress and the Tory vote, which has been hit most by UKIP, falling back.

As the British Weekly went to press Thursday night, Labour has gained 39 seats, the Conservatives had lost 75, UKIP had gained 73 and the Lib Dems had lost 43.

Some 11 councils in Northern Ireland are also up for grabs.

The surge in support for UKIP has sent shockwaves through the main parties at Westminster, with just a year to go before the next general election and is even more alarming in the light of widespread media condemnation of the party. But the party's charismatic leader, Nigel Farage, has struck a resonant note with much of Middle Britain which worries the major parties are out of step with their needs and concerns.

Even before the final results were in the finger pointing began, with Labour MP Graham Stringer, who wants an in/out EU referendum, saying it was clear his party was not going to do as well as it expected in the European and local elections, with UKIP eating into its vote in traditional Labour heartlands.

The Blakeley and Broughton MP launched an attack on Ed Miliband's campaign calling it "unforgivably unprofessional".

He told the BBC "we have not done as well as we should have done in both the presentation of our policies and the organisation of the campaign".

Labour's shadow business secretary Chuka Umunna rejected the criticisms, but said it was now clear the UK was in an "era of four-party politics".

Some Conservative backbenchers have called for an electoral pact with UKIP going into the general election, with Jacob-Rees-Mogg warning UKIP could split the "small c Conservative vote" and let Labour in.

Shale oil bonanza may push UK closer to fracking

A report published on Friday is expected to say that there are several billion barrels of oil in shale rocks under large parts of southern England.

But getting the oil out of the ground will involve the controversial process known as fracking.

The study by the British Geological Survey (BGS) covers areas including Sussex, Hampshire, Surrey and Kent.

The government is planning to offer more compensation for towns affected by fracking, according to press reports.

Although the BGS study will say that there are several billion barrels of oil in place, it is not yet clear how much would be economically recoverable.

But the report's estimates could still have implications for the UK's long-term energy security and kick-off a drive to start fracking for oil in the region.

By way of comparison, the equivalent of around 45 billion barrels of oil has been extracted from the North Sea over the past 40 years.

Last year, a BGS study of the North of England suggested there could be as much as 1,300 trillion cubic feet of gas contained in shale rocks.

The fracking process involves pumping water, sand and chemicals into rock at high pressure, and it has sparked demonstrations by environmentalists. Some governments have banned the process.

Critics argue that fracking damages water supplies and can cause earthquakes. There have been strong anti-fracking protests at Balcombe, West Sussex, against test-drilling.

However, a government report published in June 2012 concluded that fracking was safe if adequately monitored.

Prime Minister David Cameron has insisted fracking will be "good for our country" and has blamed a "lack of understanding" of the process for some of the opposition.

Politically sensitive

There were media reports on Friday that the government will release details of additional c o m p e n s a t i o n arrangements for communities affected by fracking, in order to stave off opposition. There have already been promises of one-off payments and a share in the profits.

The fracking issue is also politically sensitive. Tory peer Lord Howell of Guildford - who apologised last year after saying that fracking should take place in the North East because it was "desolate" - recently spoke about the issue again, and said the Conservative Party could lose votes by pursuing plans to frack.

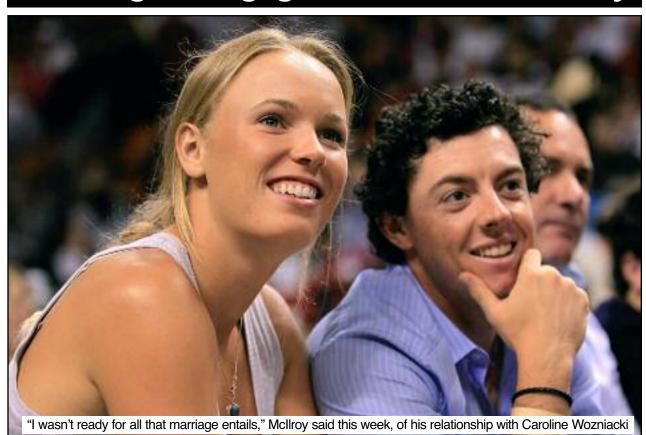

The counties covered by the BGS survey are considered strong Tory territory.

For many years, there been more traditional exploration and development of oil and gas in the region.

Andrew Austin, chief executive of the onshore energy IGAS, said it had long been known that southern England had extensive resources.

He said: "There's been a long history of oil and gas exploration in this area. We as a company produce oil and gas from around 20 sites across that area. Around 40 million barrels have been recovered from that area to date."

It's not her, it's me, says McIlroy after breaking off engagement to tennis beauty

RORY MCILROY was in the news for all the wrong reasons this week after calling off his wedding to Caroline Wozniacki – after sending out wedding invitations.

The golfer said "the problem is mine" after changing his mind about marrying the tennis ace and prompting further speculation on his ability to concentrate on his golf.

"The wedding invitations issued at the weekend made me realise that I wasn't ready for all that marriage entails," McIlroy said in a statement.

"There is no right way to end a relationship that has been so important to two people.

"I wish Caroline all the happiness she deserves and thank her for the great times we've had. I will not be saying anything more about our relationship in any setting."

McIlroy was then asked about the break-up as he prepared for the BMW PGA Championship.

He said: "I think I'm no different than anyone else.

Everyone has been through break-ups and it's obviously very, very difficult.

"I'm not going to lie. It's going to be very difficult. But you know, at least when I get inside the ropes I can just try and concentrate on the shot at hand."

McIlroy, 25, had announced his engagement to the 23-year-old via Twitter on January 1, 2014.

At the time McIlroy tweeted: "I have a feeling it is going to be a great year."

Wozniacki later revealed the golfer asked her parents for permission before popping the question.

She then flaunted her diamond ring - reportedly worth well over £100,000 - at the Australian Open.

There was no hint of trouble in the relationship on Sunday when McIlroy tweeted a picture while the couple were having dinner at Nobu restaurant in Monte Carlo.

Wozniacki, who was born in Denmark to Polish parents, reached world number one in her own sport in 2012 but has yet to win a Grand Slam.

The couple - dubbed Wozzilroy in some circles after he gave her a golf wedge engraved with the moniker - had reportedly been an item for more than two years.

And they were arguably the most successful and richest pair in modern sport.

McIlory has a £12m-a-year contract with Nike, while deals with companies like Turkish Airlines supplemented Wozniacki's tennis earnings.

Abu Hamza faces life sentence after New York terrorism conviction

■ Trial of radical cleric marks the end of a 10-year mission by US authorities to bring him to justice on US soil

Abu Hamza al-Masri, the radical Islamist cleric notorious for hate-filled sermons, was facing life in a top-security US prison on Monday after being convicted of all charges after a five-week terrorism trial in New York.

The Egyptian-born cleric, 56, who was an imam at the Finsbury Park mosque in north London in the 1990s, was found guilty by a jury in a Manhattan federal court near the scene of the 9/11 terror attacks on the World Trade Center.

global reach

The jury of eight men and four women took just 11 hours over two days to reach their verdict on the complex case.

Hamza was accused of being a terrorist of global reach, and was charged with providing material support to terrorist organizations by enabling hostage- takers in the Yemen kidnapping to speak on a satellite phone, by sending men to establish an al-Qaida training camp in Bly, Oregon, and by sending at least one man to training camps in Afghanistan.

His conviction, on all 11 charges, marks the end of a 10-year mission by American authorities to bring him to justice on US soil.

It is the second major terrorist-related conviction for federal prosecutors in two months. It follows that of Sulaiman Abu Ghaith, a son-in-law of Osama Bin Laden, in March. Ghaith, who was also tried in a New York federal court, was found guilty of charges related to his work as chief spokesman for Al Qaida in the days after the 9/11 terror attacks.

'trainer of terrorists'

After the guilty verdict on Monday, officials from the US justice department said it proved that such cases could be tried in civilian courts, rather than sent to military trials at Guantanamo Bay.

"Once again, our civilian system of justice has proven itself up to the task," said the U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York, Preet Bharara. "As we have seen in the Manhattan federal courthouse in trial after trial ... these trials have been difficult, but they have been fair and open and prompt."

Hamza, who was tried under his real name of Mustapha Kamel Mustapha, was finally extradited in 2012 from the UK, where he led the Finsbury Park Mosque, reportedly attended by both 9/11 conspirator Zacarias Moussaoui and shoe bomber Richard Reid. Hamza denied that he ever met them.

Hamza looked straight ahead as the verdict was read.

The jury at Manhattan's federal court agreed with the prosecution claims that Hamza was a "trainer of terrorists" who recruited and indoctrinated young men at the London mosque as part of his global empire.

In his opening statement, Edward Kim, assistant district attorney for the southern district of New York, also said that Hamza used the cover of religion to "hide in plain sight" under the noses of the British authorities for years.

Hamza was convicted of 11 counts of criminal conduct related to the taking of 16 hostages in Yemen in 1998 that left three Britons and an Australian dead. He was also found guilty of advocating violent jihad in Afghanistan in 2001 and conspiring to establish a jihad training camp in Oregon between June 2000 and December 2001.

During the trial Hamza's defence team tried to claim that the prosecution case, which included videos of his sermons, was just about "words, not deeds". They described him as an "independent thinker" and "his own man". His defence team argued that the jury may not have liked the views he espoused, but that they did not amount to crimes.

His defence lawyer Joshua Dratel told them: "These are views, not acts. This is expression, not crimes."

9/11 'a good thing'

For much of the past five weeks, jurors watched videotapes and heard audio clips of sermons and interviews in which Hamza ranted at his followers, telling them non-Muslims could be treated like animals "like cows, like pigs" and women and children who were not Muslim could be taken captive.

Hamza, who testified for four days, insisted that he did not take part in acts of terror of support al-Qaida. But he also insisted that, even today, he loved Osama bin Laden and that he thought 9/11 was a good thing.

Racing legend Sir Jack Brabham dead at 88

Sir Jack Brabham, a near legendary racing driver and car designer who was one of the key figures in the development of Formula One, has died at 88.

Brabham was one of motor racing's great practical heroes, a tough Australian who applied a down-to- earth attitude to his craft. Not only did he gain three world championship titles, in 1959, 1960 and 1966, but the third was at the wheel of a car bearing his own name. This was a unique achievement in Formula One history and it was made all the more satisfying by the fact that he was 40 when he took that third title crown and regarded as being over the hill by many motor-racing commentators.

During a Formula One career that ran from 1955 until 1970, Brabham competed in 126 grands prix, winning on 14 occasions. For the first six years he drove for the Cooper team, and then set up as a constructor in his own right. Brabham is recalled by all who worked with him as someone who never wasted words. He was shrewd to the point of cunning, a mechanical improviser in the days when racing drivers still got their hands dirty helping on the mechanical front and an all-rounder prepared to turn his hand to any chore.

highly competitive

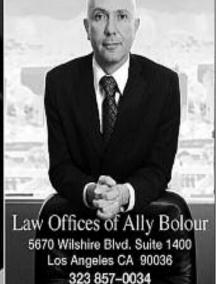

Jack was born in Hurstville, 10 miles south of Sydney and joined the Royal Australian Air Force at the age of 18, very much wanting to fly, but by then it was 1944

Search for missing British sailors may be called off, says US Coast Guard

The search for the four British sailors believed to have abandoned a Southampton-based yacht was set to be suspended if nothing is found by Friday night, the US Coast Guard has said.

Captain Anthony Popiel said he had spoken to the yachtsmen's families to tell them that the search could be suspended.

The Cheeki Rafiki, based in Southampton, was sailing back to the UK from Antigua when it went missing two weeks search The was originally called off on Sunday after the yacht was found capsized by a passing container ship with no sign of the sailors, but resumed again on Tuesday after an internet petition gathered more than 200,000 signatures.

Capt Popiel said: "I

by midnight "If tomorrow [05:00 BST Saturday | there are no further developments to indicate search efforts would locate the crew alive we will suspend the search."

planes and boats

He also said he had "sincere compassion" for the families of the four men, and that his "thoughts and prayers" were with them.

Several leading mariners, including round-the-world veteran Sir Robin Knox-Johnston, said the four crew could survive for 'several weeks' in a properly-provisioned life raft.

The crew members are

Camel, Somerset; skipper Andrew Bridge, 22, from Farnham; Steve Warren, 52, from Bridgwater; and 22-year-old James Male, from Romsey.

The search has so far been focused on an area some 1,000 miles east of Cape Cod, Massachusetts, and about 17,500 square miles of ocean have been covered by planes and boats working on behalf of the US Coast Guard.

Capt Popiel also said that his team's focus remained on "this very active and very dynamic search".

Hopes were briefly raised on Thursday when debris was found in the ocean near to where the Cheeki Rafiki is thought to have gone missing, but the US Coast Guard later confirmed that this debris could not have come from the 40ft yacht.

The decision to resume the initial search followed an official request from the UK government. An online petition, set up to put pressure on the US Coast Guard to resume its search, also attracted more than 200,000 signatures.

gratitude

On Thursday relatives of the sailors visited the US Embassy later and delivered letters addressed to US President Barack Obama, the US Coast Guard and the US ambassador to express their gratitude for the resumption of the search.

At the time of going missing coastguard officials predicted the vacht would have been facing 15ft waves, 50mph winds and sea and air temperatures of 15C (60F).

Earlier in the week the coastguard predicted that the "estimated survival time" of any crew members was about 20 hours after the last distress call was made.

Locator beacons activated by the crew indicated they were in a position 1,000 miles east of Massachusetts on the morning of Friday 16 May.

A yellow and orange 12-person life raft was believed to have been on board the yacht at the time, and it was thought that the men may have inflated it and climbed on board, but this vessel has also yet to be spotted by rescuers.

and such was the progress of the second world war that there was demand mechanics than aircrew. He was demobbed in 1947 and then succumbed to the lure of motor racing.

After proving highly competitive on the Australian national racing scene, Brabham left for Britain in 1955 and became involved with the father-and-son racing-car builders Charles and John Cooper, making his Formula One debut in the 1955 British grand prix at Aintree in a central-seater Cooper sports car. Thereafter Brabham rode the crest of the Formula One wave as Cooper rewrote parameters contemporary performance, their rear-engined models superseding all their traditionally front-engined rivals.

world championships

Although Stirling Moss won the first Cooper victory in the 1958 Argentine Grand Prix, once Brabham hit his stride in the summer of 1959 there was no stopping him. With their rivals Vanwall and Maserati having dropped out of the scene, Ferrari still wrestling with their outdated front-engined Dino 246 and Colin Chapman's Lotus team yet to come to full flower, Cooper enjoyed spectacular two-year run of success, winning seven races and two world championships.

Brabham left Cooper at the end of the 1961 season, by which time their star was fading, and gave the first Brabham Formula One car its race debut in the following year's German grand prix. With the advent of the new three-litre Formula One engine regulations at the start of 1966, Brabham pulled another masterstroke by arranging for the Australian Repco company to build him a Formula One V8 engine to power his car.

calling time

Brabham scored his first victory at the wheel of his own vehicle in the 1966 French Grand Prix at Reims and followed this up with wins in the British, Dutch and German races. Although a taciturn personality,

PIONEER: Australian expat Brabham was the first Formula One driver to set up as a constructor in his own right when he left the Cooper works team in 1961 memorably Brabham projected some dry humour just before the Dutch race at Zandvoort by hobbling out on to the grid wearing a false beard and leaning on a stick. It was the wry Australian's reply to those who thought he was past it.

Brabham switched to the newly-dominant Ford Cosworth V8 engine in 1968, and won his final grand prix victory in South Africa at the start of 1970 and at the end of it called time on his career.

In that final year Brabham's chief mechanic was a 22-year-old from Surrey - Ron Dennis today multi-millionaire chairman of McLaren, one of Formula One's most successful racing teams.

Prince Rupert, Bavarian toff and longtime financial advistor to the Rolling Stones, fades away at 80

Loewenstein, the man credited with making the Rolling Stones rich, has died.

The Bavarian aristocrat, who was 80 when he passed away on Tuesday, was the financial advisor and manager of the band for almost 40 years from 1968 until 2007.

He was dubbed "the human calculator" and turned the near-bankrupt billion-pound machine before parting company on good terms, in 2007.

His unlikely alliance Jagger arguably shaped the band just as much as the singer's partnership with Keith Richards.

Without his guiding hand, it is believed the Stones may have folded years ago instead of being multi millionaires.

In his memoir, A Prince Stones, Loewenstein revealed how the band used to receive paper bags stuffed with cash at their gigs; how they became tax exiles in France, and how they became embroiled in a long legal battle with their ex-manager.

Explaining how he got the job in his book, Prince Rupert explained how he met with Mick Jagger and clicked at a time when he was bored working for a merchant bank.

He said: "At the end of our conversation it was clear to me that Mick and I had clicked on a personal level. I certainly felt that Mick was a sensible, honest person. And I was equally certain that I represented a chance for him to find a way out of a difficult situation. I was intrigued.

"So far as the Stones' music was concerned, however, I was not in tune with them, far from it. Rock and pop music was not something in which I was interested. I had heard some of The Beatles' music. Their music was sufficiently harmonic to be acceptable to people such as me. I only really took against rock 'n' roll when I heard the Stones.

"But the offer to look at the Stones' financial situation had come at a very good time for me both professionally and psychologically."

Prince Rupert's funeral is thought to be next week and could be attended by members of the band.

Prince Rupert is also credited with introducing

Keith Richards, is credited with transforming the fortunes of the Rolling Stones the Stones to promoter Michael Cohl who manufactured the lucrative Steel Wheels tour in 1989.

"Prince Rupert was my mentor and was uniquely responsible for my having the privilege of serving as Rolling Stones' business manager for more than 30 years," Joseph Rascoff, now COO of SFX Entertainment, and a former colleague.

"He was one of the most generous, insightful collaborative individuals I have ever met. He will be deeply missed."

Police probe Moyes assault claim following wine bar scuffle

Police are investigating an allegation that ex-Manchester United manager David Moves assaulted a man at a wine bar.

Officers were called to the upmarket Emporium bar in the rural market town of Clitheroe, Lancashire, Wednesday night following a report that Moyes was involved in an altercation with a 23-year-old local man.

It is understood Moyes, 51, had been socialising with his friend, Blackburn Rovers managing director Derek Shaw, local businessman in the Ribble Valley who was on the board at Preston North when Scotsman was in charge at Deepdale.

Police

23-year-old man did not hospital require treatment following the incident at about 10pm.

A spokesman said: "Inquiries are ongoing and we are speaking to a number of people to try establish circumstances.

'differing accounts'

"There are a number of differing accounts which we need to work through to try to establish exactly what has happened. No-one has been arrested at this stage."

It is believed that police will also view any available CCTV footage to try and shed further light on the incident.

But several newspaper reports suggested the man had been heckling Moyes repeatedly and abusing him for his failed tenure at Old Trafford.

A spokesman for the Emporium said: "There was an incident outside the building. However, it did not affect any of our customers or staff and has been dealt with by the police."

mediocre season

The fashionable town centre bar in Moor Lane bills itself as "half coffee shop, wine bar and brasserie; half interior design superstore", which offers "an unique, intoxicating lifestyle experience".

Its website states all its wines are selected by local fine wine merchants D. Byrne & Co.

adds: "Our descriptions are in plain English and reassuringly free of pretentious waffle. We hope there is something for everyone on the wine list. Some of the selections are a little obscure but they certainly reward the adventurous with their quality and value."

Moves was hired to replace Sir Alex Ferguson at the end of the 2012-13 season, but was sacked just 10 months later following a disastrous spell in charge at Old Trafford.

Moyes' final game in charge was a 2-0 defeat to former club Everton.

United finished seventh in the league after being crowned champions the previous season and knocked out of Europe by defending champions Bayern Munich in the last 16.

The Scot has kept a low profile since leaving United and recently took a holiday to Florida with his wife Pamela.

At first annoyed by the situation, it's not until Richard explains, "no pension, no houses, no college, no retirement" that Kate jumps into action with the two developing an outrageous plan. Having just seen the news that Kruger bought his fiancé Manon a $10.8 million diamond, the solution to recovering everyone's retirement money is simple - steal the diamond and sell it on the Black Market. And with Manon announcing she'll be wearing it at her upcoming nuptials on the Cote d'Azur, it seems the perfect time and place for Richard and Kate to make their move.

charmingly funny

Calling on Penelope and Jerry for assistance, who leap at the chance for adventure, the four come up with a plan that requires disguises, perfect timing, gate crashing and, uh, scuba gear.

At this stage of his career. Brosnan uses the wealth of his life experience both on and off screen to develop textured, flawed, very human and this case, charmingly funny characters. And while Brosnan stands tall on his own as Richard, it's when he and Emma Thompson get in the ring together where emotions heighten, barbs get wittier and timing is rapier. Thompson is a firecracker. As Kate, she's bright, funny an dazzling. No matter with whom she shares the screen, it's Thompson commands center stage.

Spall and Imrie are more than fitting second bananas as Jerry and Penelope with Spall stealing the show every chance he gets thanks to matter-of-fact non-expressive delivery of surprising tidbits of Jerry's past. Fueling the funny is Celia Imrie's wifely kvetching and bumbling burbling at the most inopportune moments.

Written and directed by Joel Hopkins, the premise is smart and antics are fun. One of the most successful gags comes with Timothy Spall's seemingly bumbling Jerry who keeps surprising everyone with paramilitary super-spy skills, serving as a means to poke fun at one of Brosnan's most famous characters. Bond Although predictable, the romantic sub-plot of the rekindling of feelings for Kate and Richard, while enjoyable to watch the chemistry and physical antics of Brosnan and Thompson, falls short with some of the dialogue which often feels hackneyed or not in keeping with either character.

While it doesn't land every punch, The Love Punch is a winner by decision. It comes out swinging with laughter, love and Pierce Brosnan and Emma Thompson. And that's tough to top.

THE LOVE PUNCH

BBC America original comedy debuts next month

BBC America is dipping its toe into original comedy with "Almost Royal" a new series launching next month. The show features the adventures of posh siblings Georgie (Ed Gamble) and Poppy Carlton (Amy Hoggart), who were born into a life of privilege, splendor and royalty...almost.

In classic fish-out-of-water tale, the young toffs venture outside the palace and across the pond on their first trip to the U.S., where they interact with real-life, unsuspecting everyday Americans. The show premieres with back-toepisodes Saturday, June 21, at 10pm ET following the Orphan Black season two finale.

Solution to Puzzle #115

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: In any relationship situation of any kind please understand you can't control everything that people think, so all you can do is keep your own counsel and be personally responsible in always doing the best you can.

TAURUS: Your priority should be taking care of YOU in any area that requires attention, and start with what you know is well overdue. On the upside you can expect a call for work that could be lucrative.

GEMINI: The sun in your sign now is the beginning of your new year and it can bring out a very creative side of you and it also favors getting a handle on any part of life that is causing you some emotional upset. Happy Birthday.

CANCER: You will be at your worst and best this week, on one hand you want to hide out in that quiet shell on the other you can be looking to 'nip' like your namesake crab – it's best to do nothing at all right now.

LEO: Yes, this is a time for the inner crank to show itself for some of you who are not participating in life as you know you can. If you have any health issues make sure you are not stressing out, as this can be the cause.

VIRGO: It's time for a change of scenery; this can be as simple as a coat of paint on the walls to a trip out of town. Either way it's best to take some action rather then brood.

LIBRA: If you have things you need to be working on in the home area get moving and you can be finished by next week. Mars is moving in an opposite direction now, so expect happy days with much more to be achieved SCORPIO: Your boss Mars is finally on the move and looking for opportunities in many parts of life. Be ready for past love interests to appear unexpectedly and many other delights. It is a time for better day and ways now. SAGITTARIUS: If you are worried about finances and are not doing anything to change the situation then it will make you crazy, or worse others close to you that have no clue what is up with you. On the positive side this is a great week ahead to make new business contacts.

CAPRICORN: You may be feeling a bit restless or not in balance. This due to your "boss" Saturn in the sign of Scorpio. He is only nudging you to make some kind of decision but he is letting you know something in your life is out of alignment.

AQUARIUS: Your judgment in a long-term situation is way out and this week if you allow yourself to go the same route as before it will be a waste of time. Be cool, wait and see if you can change your mind and change the outcome!

PISCES: Venus is not currently visiting a compatible sign to you for romance. However it's a very lucky time to have a flutter and it could assist you with a pending financial matter that has not been fully resolved. Have a fun weekend!

Venetian Bargain: a plague on their houses?

■ Exclusive interview with author Marina Fiorato and a review of her novel about fighting the plague in sixteenth century Venice
Rating: ★★★

"The whole book was inspired by Palladio's church of the Redentore, which was built in Venice to thank God for saving the city from the plague," says The Venetian Bargain author Marina Fiorato. "I hadn't realized that there had been such a massive outbreak in Venice in the sixteenth century. I knew about the plagues in Europe in 1348 and 1666 but did not know that Venice had been so badly hit between those times. Once I had Palladio and his church as the 'stone spine' of the book, I hit on the idea of having the two doctors, one eastern and one western, one male and one female, fighting the plague too in their very different ways."

The book opens in 1576, five years after the defeat of the Ottoman Empire at the Battle of Lepanto, as a ship slips unnoticed into Venice. A very ill man staggers off the ship more dead than alive. This deadly gift from the Turkish Sultan carries the bubonic plague. Feyra is fleeing Constantinople to becoming concubine of the Sultan. She becomes very ill and barely manages to stay alive on the voyage. The Doge, concerned about the people of Venice, commissions architect Andrea Palladio to build a church to save Venetians from the plague. Palladio falls ill. Feyra becomes a member of Palladio's household and under his protection, but can she save him?

"I was allowed access to the plague island in Venice, the Lazzaretto Novo, a truly evocative place," says Fiorato. "The inside of the hospital is covered with amazing and detailed artwork drawn by the plague victims. It's as if these men and women thought they would never see home again, so they drew and wrote about things that meant something to them. They created their own vistas, as they had no view from the hospital. It's very moving, but strangely hopeful and peaceful."

"I had a wonderful time researching this book, because as well as the plague island of Venice I got to go to Istanbul and visit the harems of the Topkapi palace. The harems had a remarkable, all female society, presided over by the Sultana. A strange dichotomy existed. Although the women could be seen subjugated prisoners, they were also emancipated, because the absence of men meant that they had a certain amount freedom embrace masculine roles. For example, there were women there who were well practiced medicine. One of these women, a harem doctor called Feyra, became my heroine."

what used to be the plague hospital on the Lazzaretto Novo, Fiorato discovered some very interesting artifacts. "I was able to view some primary documents, such as letters from Venice's council of health. The paper was very sepia colored, with white bars cutting across the text. I asked what the markings were and was told that all the mail was smoked using tongs before it was allowed to enter the city. So many methods of dealing with pestilence were quite sophisticated, but others, such as wearing a dead frog about your neck, were very primitive."

In a tiny museum in

The Venetian Bargain is Fiorato's fifth book. Her other works are The Glassblower of Murano, The Madonna of the Almonds, The Botticelli Secret and Daughter of Siena. Since The Venetian Bargain she has written a sixth book, Beatrice and Benedick, a prequel to Shakespeare's play Much Ado About Nothing.

Fiorato was born in Manchester and lives in London.

Who's in a space suit?!

Doctor Who is already a spaceman... But here we see the telly Time Lord swap his dapper black coat and shoes for an orange space suit and moon boots.

Who's new star Scots actor Peter Capaldi, was snapped filming a forthcoming episode of the BBC sci-fi show, which is back this on our screen this coming fall. It's rumoured that the Doctor and his sidekick Clara, played by Jenna Coleman, land on a new planet to explore some grisly goings-on.

But instead heading into space, the producers had to make do with a small seaside town called Port Talbot in south Wales... Er, not so exciting!

The new series will feature a host of adventures including a take on Robin Hood called "The Robots Of Sherwood" with Ben Miller, playing the Sheriff of Nottingham as well as a story about an Egyptian mummy on the Orient Express.

Ooh, sounds rather interesting. Can't wait for the new season to start, I'm sure Capaldi won't disappoint the show's loyal fans!

More Godzilla would suit British star Aaron Taylor-Johnson to a tee!

Godzilla isn't just King of there's some disaster the Monsters; he's King of the Box Office too... And while Warner Bros. has vet to officially greenlight a sequel to "Godzilla," the film's leading actor, British Aaron star Taylor-Johnson, has already let slip that he would love to appear Though Taylor-Johnson admitted that he hasn't seen all the classic "Godzilla" features yet, but knows that Mothra is the likely foe that the beast will face in a follow-up. Still, the star would like the sequel to go in a different direction.

in Godzilla 2.

"It would be really interesting to see it take place somewhere else, like somewhere else in the world,"Taylor-Johnson said.

"And if I'm involved then, you know, I'm in the military, so there is a chance of being called out somewhere in the Middle East or something. That could be kind interesting, I suppose."

Taylor-Johnson's character's family, the Brodys, seem to have a connection to Godzilla that is reminiscent of the one between protagonists and antagonist the Jaws series, and the actor said that something along those lines could play out in future films including one plot point the site says draws directly from Jaws: The Revenge.

"[It's] sort of a happy coincidence in a way, but I don't know. I mean, I don't know where they'll go it, to be honest," Taylor-Johnson said of the "Jaws" connection.

"If anything, you know, it would be sort of cooler if it was ten years down the line and my son is somehow involved, you know what I mean? You never really know."

The fact that the reboot scored a monster $93 million at the domestic box office on its opening weekend certainly bodes well for the film's chances at a follow-up, wouldn't you agree!?

"Godzilla" is in theaters

Farewell to The Vortex, hello to an English garden..

Hello Breeps!

Well that's it for the play! "The Vortex" finished its brief run in Malibu at the weekend and it was a personal high for me. Back when I was ten years old growing up on a council estate in Nottingham I would never have thought that one day I would be on stage in California starring in a Noel Coward play reciting The Master's words. Thank you to director Gene Franklin Smith for believing in me and giving me this incredible experience. Thank you to the outpouring of support also from so many Brits in LA members who came to support is. Work surely begets work as I've also been busy shooting a guest episode on a new series called "Hit The Floor" for VH1 which starts airing on Memorial Day. I just wrapped five commercials for a Tier One brand that I can't mention yet and my film Return to The Hiding Place has just been released in eight cities around the country. Not LA yet I'm afraid! - They are planning on September sometime. Stay tuned...

Bloomin' lovely

Spring is a great time for all things new, so we decided to redo our garden in Hollywood. I've always wanted something of an English country garden and luckily we have quite a bit of shade so are able to grow roses and apple trees and it complete with cobblestone pathways we managed to get started. Ι′m also planting some herbs growing strawberries tomatoes. I discovered this great invention while at Soho House in West Hollywood called Wooly Pockets. You basically fill each pocket with soil, visit your local farmers market or Home Depot and ask advice on what best to plant to fit your area - shady, direct sunlight, morning sun, etc... and start planting. It makes for a great view outside a dull window - who wants to stare at a fence or the side of the next door building anyhow?

Caveat emptor

We had a very serious situation within the Brits in LA community this past week. For legal reasons cannot name names but verv charming individual took it upon himself to start swindling people out money bv pretending to be an immigration lawyer and taking deposits up front. Pretending he had apartments to rent to Brits coming over, taking their money and days before people were due to travel canceled and claimed that he had refunded them, blaming banks, deaths in his family, black widow spiders infestation, the lies got worse and bigger and bigger. He ended up getting caught by credit card fraud, allegedly using a credit card to impress a girl up in Santa Barbara. People trusted this man in our community, lending him their cars, phones, money, and even letting him stay in their homes, all the while he was stealing. His past came back to bite him this week and everyone who has been cheated by banded together to share our stories.

FRUITY SUMMER AHEAD: thanks to those clever Wooly Pockets

It is still shocking to me that this con-man pulled the wool over so many of our eyes and for so long. However because we are so tight-knit we were able stop gentleman's from traveling any further. I was saddened to hear story after story about his deceit once I had raised the issue on our Facebook page. Moral of my story: be careful whom you trust, whom you let into your home and your life because they may not be all they are cracked up to be. Stay aware and vigilant and free to ask updated 6pm 05/22/14 questions and share vour stories. someone is doing you wrong they probably doing it to others too. So always share information. However perpetrator has been removed from all groups and has been reported to all the correct authorities. But the beauty of social networks is that bad eggs are usually quickly revealed for all to see. Even if they leave a bad smell behind them...

And we'll end with a bit of good news - We have teamed up with BAFTA/LA and will be launching our World Cup Headquarters at Mixology at The Grove. All details are on our Facebook page (www.facebook.com/b ritslovela) events. It's hard to believe 1966 was the last time we won -Come on England, surely we can do it this year (here's hoping!)

ennon exits Celtic, Larsson tipped to take over

NEIL LENNON has left Celtic, clearing the way for club-legend Henrik Larsson to replace him the Scottish champions.

It is thought Lennon feels he has taken the club as far as he can and now looks set to head south of the border with West Brom reporedly his most likely destination.

Larsson is the man in the driving seat to take the vacant position at Celtic Park and it is an appointment that would be universally greeted with delight in the green half of Glasgow.

Lennon's agent Martin Reilly said that the former club captain had decided he wanted something new.

"Four years is a good spell to be manager of a club like Celtic but now Neil wants to look ahead to the next chapter of his career," Riley said.

Reilly insists his client has not agreed to any job offer yet while Lennon himself wouldn't rule out a return to Celtic at some in the future.

Reilly added: "He has nothing lined up. He just feels now is the time to move on to the next challenge."

In a statement, Lennon said: "I can't thank Peter Lawwell and the board enough for their backing and support during my time as manager.

"The club are in a very strong position and I wish the fans and the club all the very best for the future."

Craig Bellamy hangs up his boots

Cardiff City forward Craig Bellamy has announced retirement as a player, saying that his body "couldn't take it any more".

The 34-year-old former Wales captain played his final game in the Bluebirds' 2-1 Premier League defeat by Chelsea.

Bellamy won 78 caps his country before retiring from international football in October 2013.

The Cardiff-born forward told Wales Online: "I've had to listen to my body."

Bellamy played for seven clubs in the Premier League including Liverpool, Manchester City and Newcastle United.

He says he will now prepare to move into management and managing Wales is one of his ambitions.

In an interview given Wales Online. Bellamy says he has been thinking about retiring for quite some

"I'm not sure my body will think that's a wise thing in due course, but it kept me playing for that period. However, the time has come to stand aside and say enough. My body can't take anymore."

Canaries hand job to Adams

Norwich caretaker manager Neil Adams has been handed the job on a permanent basis, signing three-year-deal.

Adams, 48, took charge of the Canaries for the last five games of the season, following the of Chris Hughton, but could not prevent their relegation.

"He is a very talented coach who is hungry to succeed, playing the kind of football we want to see," said chief executive David McNally.

Adams added: "It is a huge honour and I am immensely proud."

McNally continued: "Neil impressed us when he stepped up to the plate for the last five games of the season in the most trying of circumstances and he's continued to impress us during a very rigorous round of talks about the full-time managerial position.

"We have the nucleus of an excellent squad and Neil will be given funds to refresh and strengthen squad required.

"It's now time for everyone connected with the club to give their full support to Neil as we focus on the future of this great club and prepare for the vital weeks and months ahead."

Adams was a surprise appointment when he replaced Hughton in April, and he failed to turn around results, overseeing four defeats and one goalless draw, against Chelsea Stamford Bridge.

joined Adams Norwich City from Oldham Athletic in February 1994 and went on to make appearances for the Canaries, scoring 30 goals. He rejoined Oldham before returning to Carrow Road initially as coach the Canaries' Academy Under-14s side.

He later became the Under-18 Academy coach and led the Canaries to FA Youth Cup victory in 2013, beating Chelsea in both home and away legs of the final.

Wilshere handed No. 7 shirt

England midfielder Jack Wilshere could be set for a key role at the World Cup, despite an injury-hit season, after being handed the number seven shirt.

The Football Association announced England's squad numbers for the finals in Brazil on Thursday.

Wilshere, 22, has only twice played for Arsenal since March, but could be in line to start England's World Cup opener against Italy on 14 June.

There were few other surprises, with Daniel Sturridge taking number nine.

The 24-year-old striker has rewarded for his fine season with Liverpool and could start along with Manchester United striker Wayne Rooney, who has been handed the number 10 shirt as expected.

Fellow United forward Danny Welbeck will wear number 11, hinting at a three-man attack for England manager Roy Hodgson.

Liverpool midfielder and England captain Steven Gerrard retains his number four shirt and veteran Chelsea midfielder Frank Lampard takes number eight.

Wilshere, who is coming back to fitness after suffering a hairline fracture in his foot playing for England on 5 March, could make up a three-man central midfield, according to the squad numbers.

Hodgson confirmed Everton's Phil Jagielka and Chelsea's Gary Cahill as his likely first-choice centre-half pairing, with number five and six shirts respectively.

Wenger promised £100m war chest

Arsene to cash in on FA Cup glory with bumper summer transfer kitty

ARSENE WENGER has been told to spend £100m this summer to dominate domestically and in Europe next season.

The Arsenal boss guided his side to their first trophy in nine years last weekend when they defeated Hull 3-2 in a dramatic FA Cup Final.

He will now be handed a bumper transfer war chest to ensure the Gunners can keep up with Manchester City, Chelsea and Liverpool.

Toulouse right-back Serge Aurier and Real Sociedad winger Antoine Griezmann are both on Wenger's radar, as are former Gunners Carlos Vela and Cesc Fabregas.

Long-term Emirates
Stadium director Lord
Harris of Peckham reckons three or four signings will ensure honours.

"We want to win the Premier League and the Champions League. If we buy two or three players then I think we can," Lord Harris said in the London Evening Standard.

"We want to win. We don't want to be second, we don't want to be third and we don't want to be fourth.

Arsene Wenger said the FA Cup final comeback against Hull City on Saturday can be a turning point towards a successful new era for the club.

"It was an important moment in the life of this team," said Wenger, who confirmed he will sign a new contract.

"To lose would have been a major setback but to win will be a good platform to build on."

Wenger's contract is due to expire at the end of the season but he has repeatedly expressed his desire to continue in the role he has held since 1996.

Asked whether he would now sign a new deal, he said: "That should normally happen yes, and we are in very normal circumstances. It was never a question of leaving. It was a question of doing the right job for this football club."

James Chester and Curtis Davies put Hull two up inside eight minutes but Santi Cazorla pulled a goal back before half-time. Laurent Koscielny equalised to send the game into extra time, when Aaron Ramsey scored the winner.

Wenger, who won the FA Cup for the fifth time in his Arsenal career, said: "It was more important today than all the others. Twice we had won the double, so we had already won something and were not under the pressure we were under here.

"It is a feeling of relief and happiness as we were under severe pressure to win and we didn't start well of course. Hull started stronger and you could see we were hesitant. We demonstrated how to respond to being 2-0 down but we also demonstrated how not to start an FA Cup final."

Van Gaal ready to dump £27m flop Fellani

Manchester United are keen to offload flop signing Marouane Fellaini - if they find someone willing to splash out £15m to buy him.

The Belgian man mountain (right) was brought in as David Moyes' first big signing as United boss.

However, he has endured a torrid eight months at Old Trafford.

New boss Louis Van Gaal is not a fan of the midfielder and sees him as surplus to requirements, according to the Daily Express.

United spent £27.5m on prising Fellaini away from Everton last season.

But despite his decent goalscoring record for the Toffees, he's failed to score in his 16 appearances in all competitions for the Red Devils.

His Old Trafford career has been blighted by a wrist injury, which kept him out for three months of the season.

Van Gaal has told reporters he is keen to replicate his feats at Barcelona and Bayern Munich by winning the league in his first season.

The Dutchman won the 1997-98 La Liga title at Barcelona before securing the 2009-10 Bundesliga with Bayern Munich.

Three managers have won the Premier League at the first go - Chelsea duo Jose Mourinho and Carlo Ancelotti and Manuel Pellegrini at Manchester City.

"I would be proud if it works right away," said 62-year-old Van Gaal.
