Nation drowns its sorrows as England suffer ANOTHER World Cup heartbreak

- Pubs packed as nearly half the nation watched the vital match in Brazil
- Torment as Luis Suárez put boot into England's campaign with two goals

Despair swept once more through tens of thousands of pubs on Thursday as England all but crashed out of the World Cup after just its second match.

As the motorways emptied and the bars filled, England came to a standstill for a do or die clash against Uruguay in Sao Paulo, Brazil -downing an estimated 37million pints.

But if the 25million fans back home were hoping the joy of the weekend would come early, they were sorely disappointed.

Although England were not technically eliminated until Friday morning with Costa Rica's victory over Italy, on Thursday night the mood of the country positively funereal.

After Luis Suarez's late winner there was nothing left for the millions of fans at pubs and bars across the country but to drown their sorrows – and drown them they did, with record sales expected at many bars and pubs across the country.

It is the first time England has ever lost both its opening two matches in a World Cup campaign and the first English qualifying side not to make it through the group stage since 1958.

After losing their first match to Italy, England faced being knocked out of the tournament if they were to be beaten by a much-fancied Uruguay team.

agonizing

As the fateful clash drew towards half time things were not looking good for Roy's boys - with Uruguay leading 1-0 after a 39th-minute header by Luis Suárez.

After an agonising half-hour the lions roared back, with Wayne Rooney bringing the score level to 1-1

But Suarez struck again in the 85th minute, latching onto an errant header from Liverpool teammate Steven Gerrard to power home the decisive goal.

racist

Suarez has proved a controversial figure in England, receiving a long ban for racist abuse and, on another occasion, for biting an opponent.

Now he is sure to be Public Enemy No1 again after breaking English hearts.

After the game, the Uruguay star said: 'I dreamt this. I'm enjoying this moment, because of all I suffered, the criticism I received. So, there you go.'

England manager Roy Hodgson praised Suarez, saying: 'He had two chances and as a top player he took those chances - and ended ours. We're more than disappointed. We're devastated. We fully believed we could do enough to get a result in this game. I don't know what to say at this moment in time.'

The fact it was Suarez who sealed England's defeat was greeted with derision by some England fans on Twitter. Labour MP Ian Austin said: 'Of all the people, it had to be the dirty, cheating violent racist cheat Suarez.'

Many celebrities turned the air blue on Twitter when Suarez scored his late winner.

TV presenter Philip Schofield tweeted: 'ARSE!!!!``Well I'm having a bloody drink!!! Damn damn damn and damn again.'

Chat show host Alan Carr was more concise: 'S, s, s, s.'

pundit Joey Barton tweeted: 'Got bullied tonight. Apart from one or two it's a team of fannies.'

Pop star Rihanna led criticism of England's defending in their World Cup defeat by Uruguay - as former international players likened it to the standard of a Sunday League match.

Despite being from Barbados, the singer gave her backing to England in a running commentary on her Twitter page.

After seeing the sloppy play which allowed Luis Suarez to score his second, she declared: 'Man they know better than to give Suarez that much room bruh!'

'priceless'

Her criticism was echoed by former England striker Gary Lineker, who said: 'Our defending is appalling!'

Earlier in the game, Match Of The Day presenter Lineker feared Wayne Rooney was 'destined never to score' in a World Cup, after a header bounced off the cross bar.

But was forced to eat his words when the Manchester United player broke his duck for the first time to equalise, describing the goal as 'priceless'.

It was at least a good night for England's pubs, with hostelries expecting their biggest night of the year, with an estimated 3.5million people heading to their local bar.

An extra six million pints of beer were expected to poured around the country as pubs cashed in on an extra £25million of trade, according to the British Beer and Pub Association.

Bookies were also looking forward to a huge increase in trade, with £285 million expected to be gambled over the summer - at least £5million of that on Thursday's game.

Britain's leading TV pundits were unforgiving in their assessment of the night's events, branding England's defending "schoolboyish" and something you see in Sunday league football, according to former England captain Rio Ferdinand.

Ferdinand, speaking on BBC's Match of the Day, said: "The defending was nightmarish, especially for Uruguay's second goal. It came from just a straight ball up the pitch from the goalkeeper and it was schoolboyish from England's point of view. You cannot let that happen.

"In that situation, I am either dropping off and making sure there are no opposition players between me and the goalkeeper, or I am going to attack the ball and win it."

And former England winger Chris Waddle, whose rant on BBC's Five Live call-in show following England's exit from the World Cup in 2010 went viral, also weighed in, saying: "The Government to ban 'greedy' council spy cars

The widespread use of static and car-mounted cameras to catch drivers who park illegally in England is to be banned, the government has announced.

It says so-called "spy cars" have been used as a "cash cow" by councils, and it wants to end the "plague" of parking fines being sent in the post.

Instead traffic wardens will have to fix penalty notices to windscreens.

Councils will still be able to use the cameras near schools, in bus lanes and bus stops, and on "red routes".

Currently, some councils can use CCTV cameras or "approved devices" to enforce parking restrictions, under Labour's 2004 Traffic Management Act.

'Fairer deal'

The government says nine million parking fines are now issued every year by local authorities in England and wants to rein-in "over-zealous parking enforcement practices".

The ban follows a three-month consultation.

Announcing the measures, Communities Secretary Eric Pickles said the government was taking "urgently needed action to ban this clear abuse of CCTV".

"CCTV spy cars can be seen lurking on every street raking in cash for greedy councils and breaking the rules that clearly state that fines should not be used to generate profit for town halls.

"Over-zealous parking enforcement and unreasonable stealth fines by post undermine the high street, push up the cost of living and cost local authorities more in the long term," he said.

However, the Local G o v e r n m e n t Association says the cameras stop motorists parking dangerously and protect pedestrians.

Transport Secretary Patrick McLoughlin said the measures would deliver a "fairer deal for motorists, ensuring that parking enforcement is proportionate, that school children are protected and buses can move freely, and that key routes are kept clear".

AT LEAST THEY'RE ON HOLIDAY: two fans fly the flag at the Arena de Saol Paolo simple as that.

most disappointing thing was that it felt like a step backwards after the Italy game. This time, England were a little bit subdued.

"Nothing has changed since England went out of the World Cup four years ago. I don't think we are good enough, it is as "Our defending was atrocious for the Uruguay goals, but, when they pressed us for an hour, we were awful because, when our players were under pressure, they did not want the ball in any area. "Yes, England showed commitment and effort and there will always be the odd moment where they are on top for a while, like in the second half, but I don't think we can have any complaints about being beaten again. Uruguay totally deserved to win."

British jihadist tweets violent message calling for PM David Cameron to be beheaded

A BRITISH jihadist fighting with the savage militant Muslim forces overrunning Iraq has called for David Cameron and Theresa May to be beheaded.

The insurgent, calling himself Abu Rashash Britani, had already threatened to bring terror back to the UK.

Writing on Twitter, the fanatic said: "I think when we establish khilafah (a Muslim state), a battalion of mujahadeen shud head to UK and capture davidcameron & theresamay n behead them both."

In a sickening call to arms he urged his "brothers" to take to the streets and kill.

He also called for revenge for the killing of a female Muslim student in Essex this week – although it is not known yet if her murder was religiously motivated.

Dozens of deeply-disturbing messages from Britani are a chilling echo of the tirade spouted by Michael Adebolajo and Michael Adebowale moments after they butchered helpless soldier Lee Rigby in Woolwich in May of last

In one, Britani says: "Pray a revenge attack takes place in the UK against enemies of Islam and Muslims."

Last night the messages were removed from Twitter along, with his account. But anti-terror officers were monitoring his hate-filled outpouring.

A Home Office spokesman said: "We do not tolerate the existence of online terrorist and extremist propaganda."

Pinter gong for Rushdie

Salman Rushdie is to be given an honorary literary prize for his years of outstanding work, awarded in memory of his friend the late playwright Harold Pinter.

The author, (above) whose works include Midnight's Children and The Moor's Last Sigh, is to be the recipient of the 2014 PEN/Pinter prize.

Rushdie - who spent many years under guard in a secret location after receiving death threats as a result of the publication of his book The Satanic Verses - will be given the prize at a ceremony at the British Library on October 9.

It was established in 2009 by English PEN - the writers' association and CONT:/

Rushdie follows Tony Harrison, Hanif Kureishi, David Hare, Carol Ann Duffy and Tom Stoppard as a recipient.

Pinter's widow Antonia Fraser, who is on the judging panel, said: "Harold admired Salman Rushdie's work profoundly long before he met him. This award would have meant a great deal to Harold who respected Salman twice over, both for his work and his great personal courage."

Rik Mayall buried in private family service

Adrian Edmonson (front right) helps carry the coffin of Rik Mayall from St George's church in Dittisham, Devon, following his funeral service.

Rik Mayall's funeral took place in Devon on Thursday and was attended by many stars of the comedy and entertainment world.

Dawn French, Jennifer Saunders, Ben Elton and Ruby Wax were among the first famous faces seen arriving at St

George's Church in Dittisham to pay their final respects to the comedian, who died last week at the age of 56.

His widow confirmed the 'Young Ones' star had suffered an "acute cardiac event" after returning from a morning run.

Barbara Mayall said

her family had received "thousands thousands of messages of condolence" from around the world, following the sudden death of the much-loved comedy star. Ahead of the service, she asked his fans to share their "thoughts and prayers" as his family say goodbye to him at the private service.

"Knowing the swell of love you all share with us we would like to let you, the fans, know that we will be having a private family funeral for Rik, as I am sure you will understand," she said.

"We will be burying him at 2pm on Thursday June 19 if you would like to join us in thoughts and prayer at this time.

"Thank you again for all your love and support to all our family, it brings great strength."

Following his sudden death, his World Cup song, 'Noble England', from 2010 made it into the top 10 at the weekend, following a campaign by fans.

Genesis back together after nearly 40 years for the first time in almost 40 years for a BBC documentary about their career.

Five members of the band - Peter Gabriel, Steve Hackett, Mike Rutherford, Phil Collins and Tony Banks - found themselves in the same room for the first time since 1975.

They reunited for Genesis: Together and Apart, a feature-length documentary to be broadcast later this year on BBC Two.

Gabriel left the band in 1975 and and other members later went on to solo projects.

Three of the members

Genesis have reunited - Banks, Rutherford and Collins – played a farewell gig in Rome in 2007, to a crowd of 500,000.

There have been many rumours of the reformed five-piece playing together again.

Gabriel said last year: "It's never been ruled out. I'm trying to picture a time when it would top my priorities list though.

"Actually, I was thinking about that the other day. We're quite lucky. Looking back at other bands of our generation, there's usually one or two missing now. So you do get a sense of the clock."

AFTER THE EXODUS: Messrs: Gabriel, Hacket, Rutherford, Collins and Banks

Hackett has said a full-blown reunion is "possible but unlikely". And Rutherford told the Daily Telegraph earlier this year that there would be no new material from the band.

"Older artists have had their time," he said.

"People who like you have got a bunch of your songs on the iPod and that's enough. If they're going to buy new stuff, they're going to buy something else."

Missing from the line-up is Anthony Phillips, another founder member of the band who left in 1970 after suffering from stage fright.

■ An accidental 999 call led police in Crewe to a cannabis farm

A man with an £18,000 cannabis farm in his front room was arrested after accidentally dialling 999 from the house.

The 42-year-old suspect somehow rang the emergency number from a landline at the property in Hawewater Avenue, Crewe, Cheshire, at around 2pm yesterday.

The call was logged as an abandoned emergency call - and police officers were dispatched to check on the welfare of the

'Epic fail'

But when they knocked on the door and went inside they found 18 mature cannabis plants being grown in the front room - each with an estimated street value of £1,000.

After the unusual drugs bust, Crewe Police tweeted: "Epic fail of the day goes to the man in Crewe who rang 999 by accident. We arrived to check he was safe... and found his cannabis farm!"

Local beat manager Pc Shelley Woods, Cheshire Police, said: "The circumstances around this call being made beggars belief. We don't often find people in position accommodating to police inquiries."

A spokesman for the Cheshire force "Shortly before 2pm yesterday police received an abandoned emergency call originating from the Crewe area.

"As a result, local officers attended an address on Haweswater Avenue to carry out a concern for welfare check on the caller

"On arrival, it emerged that the occupant of the property had dialled in error; however, a large number of suspected cannabis plants were discovered in the front room of the house.

Bruce Forsyth leads the celebs as thousands descend on Royal Ascot ALWAYS one to stand out in a crowd, Bruce Forsyth descended on Royal Ascot on Monday as he joined thousands for the racing event of the year.

Brucie, dressed in top hat and tails, looked debonair as he posed for photographers ahead of the races.

Joined by his wife Wilnelia, 56, who was dressed in a green floating number with matching hat, the 86-year-old entertainer looked better than ever.

Bruce didn't seem to be worried about staying out of the spotlight following his recent decision not to return to Strictly Come Dancing next year.

He was also joined by presenter Eamonn Holmes and Knowles, tennis star Steffi Graff and Clare Balding.

Steffi opted for a dark number matching hat while Clare opted for a red outfit with cream hat

The celebs were joined by thousands of horse racing fans and members of the royal family including the Queen, Duke of Edinburgh and Prince Harry.

Pippa Middleton takes a spin down in Oceanside...

KATE MIDDLETON's much-photographed little sister Pippa made a surprise appearance in California this weekend, helping to launch the 3,000-mile, 12-state Race Across America charity bicycle race in Oceanside.

Pippa sported an eye-catching red, white and blue Union Jack-patterned cycling jacket and tight blue shorts, as she set off on the race's first leg with 27-year-old brother James.

"On 14th June, my brother and I, along with six friends will be setting off on a West to East Coast Race Across America (RAAM)." she said in a statement posted on her fundraising page on Saturday. "This relay cycling event spans 3,000 miles, 12 states and 88 counties. We are aiming to complete this non-stop challenge in eight days, riding between 350 and 500 miles a day."

The two siblings of the Duchess of Cambridge are riding with six other cyclists and are taking part in the challenge to help benefit the British Heart Foundation, of which Pippa serves as an ambassador, and the Michael Matthews Foundation, a children's charity named for youngest-ever Briton to summit Mount Everest, who then died on the way down in 1999. His brother, also named James, is one of the Middletons' team mates.

Participants have a maximum number of nine days to complete the Race Across America and some parts are pretty rough—they will end up climbing more than 100,000 feet during the journey. The route starts in Oceanside, California, and goes through states including Utah, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Ohio and West Virginia before ending in Annapolis, Maryland, located about 30 miles south of Baltimore. Pippa's team reached Congress, Arizona at Sunday, June 15, around noon, according to the officialwebsite.

After completing the Race Across America challenge, Pippa's bike is set to be auctioned on eBay, according to the British Heart Foundation website. Pippa also plans to fly to Istanbul, Turkey, to compete in the 4-mile Bosphorus Cross-Continental Swimming swimming from Europe to Asia, on behalf of the charity.

Great British people, film festivals...and a certain World Cup

Hey Breeps -

I always say to people that it takes a certain kind of British person to pack up, say goodbye and move 6000 miles away to start a new life. Most every Brit ex-pat that I have encountered tends to have a hugely positive outlook on life and embrace the anythingis-possible attitude that is so familiar to LA. We rally around each other, help those in need, and support those that are doing well. Not very often do I earwig on conversations featuring phrases like: "Oh , it's sooooo hard" "Who does he think he is?" "He needs knocking down a peg or two," or "Getting too big for his britches that one."

Now perhaps there are a few naysayers out there, However, I think the good outweighs the bad. And sometimes when people first arrive they are a little put off by the Brits in LA's attitude of offering a helping hand. As though it's not normal, because perhaps back in the UK this doesn't happen too often. Anyway my point is that that I see examples everyday of community helping each other and that warms my heart. I want to dedicate this week's column to all those who have volunteered their time to us as a community, whether hosting our pub quiz, handling check-in, helping us decorate, acting as the mayor of our Breakfast Club, or just providing a great piece of advice for a newcomer. Thank you all so much for being that certain type of Brite you are.... and LA thanks you too. STAY CALM and KEEP HELPING!

I'm now currently on a bit of a festival tour with my short film "Pepper". We have been invited to the Palm Springs ShortFest and San Fransisco Frameline Film Festival. Local film festivals are a great way for you to get your film noticed and if you get to go you can promote your film and pitch upcoming projects, but mainly to be around other film makers is really exciting and encouraging. So many Brits in LA members helped to make our film and I have a complete sense accomplishment, achievement and pride that you all had a hand in helping make it. So thank you so much. I love our community so much, we really are a great and supportive bunch! Keep it up and we'll be buying shares in our little retirement village - Brit Village - Who's in?

Meet A Member: Claire Cordingley

Meet Claire Cordingley from London, who moved to LA two years ago to pursue acting.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

There is so much opportunity here as an artist and I love the weather and healthy outdoor lifestyle.

What one thing do you miss from home?
My family.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus the UK?

I think the biggest difference is the 'just go for it' mentality. People here seem more willing to take risks and go for their dreams.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us? The Labyrinth and

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Now is the best time to plan ahead for a trip in early August. Get this squared away before month's end to set things in order, even if you are already in holiday mode. TAURUS: Your priority should be taking care of YOU in any area that requires attention as your lifestyle has been somewhat hectic lately and you have been neglecting a couple of areas.

GEMINI: If you feel you need to make a move in settling some kind of emotional situation but are not sure how it will be received right now, it will be easier as the week proceeds. Take care you follow up on any commitments to close family or friends.

CANCER: You will have to be aware this next week not to speak out of turn or harshly to anyone The consequences will be far-reaching for you, especially with close friends or family. The summer solstice on the 21st is good for you. Happy Birthday.

LEO: This is a time for gratitude for all that has transpired in the last weeks. You may have had a difficult journey to this point; however life is smooth and moving ever nearer to more of the same. The summer solstice gives you energy.

VIRGO: It's time for you to let go of helping others at the expense of yourself. If you take this next three weeks ahead and practice this, there is no telling what can happen. You are due for a good surprise by July!

LIBRA: Relationships are highlighted this month as your Ruler Venus is going in for a stroll in this area of life, so make sure you are as charming as you can be and with the right people. SCORPIO: Due to adverse planetary activity affecting the water signs these past few weeks you will be not in as good spirits as you normally are. If you look inside for the answer to what made you feel not so good you will see that it's all in the lessons learned.

SAGITTARIUS: If you want to change anything waiting around for others to make the first move is not a good idea. Your lucky ruler Jupiter is in on the move to Leo soon and will give you the fortitude to hang on until decisions are made for the good.

CAPRICORN: You are the most responsible sign of the Universe usually, however even you are allowed time out and as Jupiter is moving in your opposite sign it's time to play a little. Just be sure you let those that matter know you are only taking a well-deserved break.

AQUARIUS: You are probably feeling a bit frustrated this week. Well, that's life for you so take a break and do not let your duties frustrate you. If you did not have a purpose in life it would be very dull.

PISCES: The planets are really on your side this month ahead, also the summer solstice is going to give you some much-needed energy. You can take the horse to the trough this week ahead however you cannot make it jump over hoops!

Never Look Back: this stalker's a keeper...

■ Exclusive Interview with author Clare Donoghue and a review of her new crime fiction novel

Rating: ★★★

"The surprising part about writing the book was that it became a crime novel at all," says Never Look Back author Clare Donoghue. "It had started out as a psychological thriller. I began by putting together scenes, embellishing scary things that had happened to me or people I knew. In the original plot, Sarah Grainger was the lead character. However, I soon realized I needed a narrator or perspective other than hers: that's when DI Lockyer was homicide on the South London police force. There's a bold killer on the lose. Three young women have been found brutally murdered in his precinct. Their bodies discarded in plain sight, people only yards from where the murders took place. A London photographer Sarah Grainger realizes she has a stalker following her every move and it paralyzes her with fear. Lockyer needs to find the murder. Helping him is DS Jane Bennett. As Lockyer struggles to find the killer, he realizes that his estranged daughter matches the victim profile. Will he find the killer before the killer targets his daughter?

This new series is quite menacing. If you really like to be scared you will enjoy this book. The story is broken down by days as you follow DI Lockyer and his fellow officer Jane. The subplot that collides with the main plot is just as suspenseful as Sarah's life spins out of her control and she becomes more paranoid. Donoghue's writing is clear, precise and disturbing, leaving you asking at the end, what's next?

"I have always been fascinated, puzzled, by stalking and the motivations behind it," says Donoghue. "My own interest became Sarah's fear and developed into something more sinister. The idea for Never Look Back developed over time. I started writing in 2006. I had the basics, but the story was missing something. The rest of the plot came to me while I was walking on the Cornish coast. A killer preying on young women was the element I needed to bring the whole story together."

"I've discovered that writing, crime fiction particularly, is perfectly suited to my personality," says Donoghue. "I am a organized and ordered person which comes in very handy when ľm plotting, keeping all the threads of a story together. I'm also happy in my own company, so hours and hours in my living room writing is a dream come true for me. I'm also somewhat phobic of alarm clocks and early mornings, so being able to make my own schedule is brilliant. And finally, I love a glass of cold white wine so the social occasions, launches and chatting to writers and readers alike is enjoyable too. In essence, I'm very lucky."

Donoghue uses the Internet for much of her research. "Researching, checking the weather, social media, maps, timetables...anything and everything I might need is only a few clicks away. Modern writers certainly very lucky in that respect. You can find pretty much everything without ever leaving the comfort of your writing room."

Donoghue consulted a pathologist, a coroner and several police officers. "My main contact now is a retired Detective Chief Inspector who actually worked in the murder squad in London," says

Donoghue. "I'm able to talk through my plots with him and discuss how the police would react and deal with each situation."

Donoghue was born in the Cotswolds and is based in Somerset.

Harry Potter's Neville Longbottom All Grown Up!

British actor Matthew Lewis hit the red carpet this week looking more grown up than ever!

This isn't the first time he's resurfaced since playing Neville Longbottom in the "Harry Potter" franchise, but every time he does, we can't get over how hot he is!

The 24-year-old joined several of his "Harry Potter" cast-mates in Orlando to celebrate the opening of Diagon Alley at Universal Studios' Wizarding World of Harry Potter.

Lewis told the Daily

I never even saw it, so when I got to the bank today that was the first time and it's pretty special. I don't even know why I'm here," he got to go onto the set.

joked. "I've just come down for a free ride really."

Domhnall Gleeson, Helena Bonham-Carter, Warwick Davis, Robbie Coltrane, Oliver and Jamie Phelps, Bonnie Wright, Tom Felton and Evanna Lynch were also in attendance. Check out the pic!

Diagon Alley will open to the public on July 8.

They're back at it again.

British star Andrew Garfield and girlf' Emma Stone, covered their faces from paparazzi Tuesday in New York City – but for a good cause. The Amazing Spider-Man 2's real-life couple held small, handwritten notes while walking, telling photographers outside of their Manhattan lunch spot to divert their attention to charity websites, and away from them.

Stone's sign read: "Good morning! We were eating and saw a group of guys with cameras outside. And so we thought, let's try this again. We don't need the attention, but these wonderful organizations do —>"

Garfield's sign read: "www.youthmentoring. org, www. autismspeaks .org, (and don't forget) www.wwo.org,www.gil dasclubnyc.org. Here's to the stuff that matters. Have a great day!"

How very American of

Back in September 2012, the couple realized they were being photographed and quickly scribbled down messages advocating for Gilda's Club, which supports those living with cancer, and Worldwide

Orphans Foundation, which provides healthcare and education to orphaned children.

But whether or not you agree with the cute couple's choice of charities, you've got to appreciate that Stone and Garfield have figured out how to make the paparazzi work for them.

Clever stunt!

Brits in LA World Cup viewing party draws a crowd

ALTHOUGH neither of England's games at the World Cup this week went as we had all hoped, local Brits were out in force to support the team, win lose or draw.

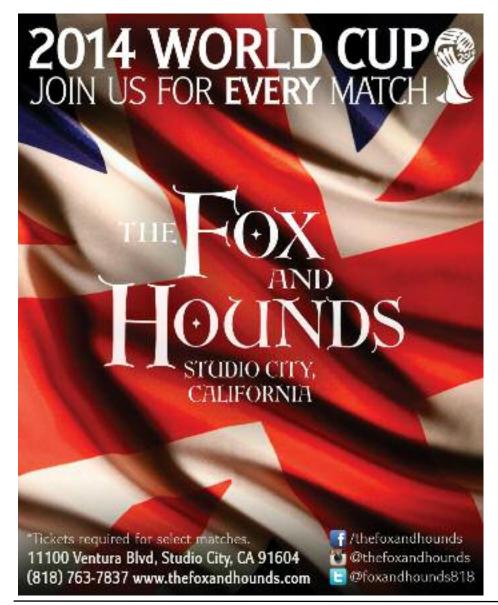

The Brits In LA Facebook group had one of the biggest local events in town at the Planet Dailies/Mixology lounge at the Grove at the junction of Third and Fairfax. Organizers Eileen and Craig put on a great show as always, and the crowd kept smiling during England's narrow 2-1 opening match defeat to Italy on Saturday afternoon. For images from last weekend's game, see page 11.

HOSTS WITH THE MOST: Sandro Monetti and Eileen Lee

And finally....big congratulations to Tony Moogan and all the crew down the Cock & Bull on Lincoln Boulevard in Santa Monica, which was named this week by Buzzfeed.com as the best bar in California to watch the World Cup. Tony was one of the first local publicans to recognize the sport's potential to local expats, getting in big screens and the indispensible English commentary shortly after buying the bar just in time for Italia '90. 24 years on, it's still great place to watch England, win, lose or draw...

Hodgson 'not resigning'

England manager Roy Hodgson insists he will not resign, despite his side being eliminated from the World Cup at the group stage.

Luis Suarez's double for Uruguay condemned England to their second successive defeat in Group D and Costa Rica's 1-0 win over Italy on Friday means a humiliating early exit.

"I don't have any intention to resign," he said. "I've been really happy with the way the players have responded to the work we've tried to do."

Hodgson took over shortly before Euro 2012, where England were eliminated on penalties by Italy in the quarter-finals, while they qualified unbeaten for this World Cup in Brazil.

"I'm bitterly disappointed, of course, but I don't feel I need to resign, no," he added.

"On the other hand, if the FA think I'm not the right man to do the job, that will be their decision not mine."

"I'm really bitterly disappointed," added Hodgson. "We came with such high hopes and have not been able to deliver. It is a major sadness for me."

He added: "I'm numb really - numb with disappointment and sadness that so many hopes and dreams and so much work has been blown away.

Hodgson bemoaned the stop-start manner of a contest that was decided by Suarez's 84th-minute winner.

"Uruguay are very different to Italy. They allow you more chance to play, the game is broken up less," he said.

"There were a few challenges that went unpunished; the referee allowed the game to flow but sometimes to our detriment.

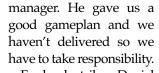

"Although I don't think anyone could question the players' desire, we haven't been good enough to win the two games.

"We thought after the equaliser if anyone would get a winner it would be us but, unfortunately, one kick down the field and a flick on came through to Luis Suarez and he doesn't miss those chances."

A desperately disappointed England captain Steven Gerrard paid tribute to his Liverpool teammate Suarez after the game:

"Luis Suarez is deadly in front of goal. He is very clever and cute. He nearly scored off two corners and he hasn't played for five weeks but everyone was very aware of his ability.

He added: "Roy Hodgson is a fantastic

England striker Daniel Sturridge tweeted: "I feel sick right now. Heartbroken. Sorry to the fans and everyone back home."

England centra

defender Phil Jagielka added: "It is a similar story to Italy: we played pretty well but not good enough.

"We are very

England were looking nervous at the back and were fortunate to survive when Phil Jagielka's sliced clearance fell to Cristian Rodriguez, whose rising drive from the angle just cleared the bar with goalkeeper Joe Hart beaten.

Uruguay were the more ordered side and the goal arrived from the most inevitable source seven minutes before half-time as Suarez marked his return in style.

Gerrard conceded possession in midfield when Edinson Cavani delivered the perfect cross, Suarez pulled away from Jagielka to head across Hart before running to with the celebrate Uruguayan medical team who have nursed him back to fitness.

England, as they did against Italy, responded strongly and Uruguay keeper Fernando Muslera needed to be alert to block Sturridge at his near post.

In a chaotic start to the second half, Suarez was wasteful as England appealed for offside and Cavani was guilty of a bad miss as he ran through on Hart.

Rooney was almost the beneficiary of that escape when he found room in the area only eight yards out, but his shot was straight at Muslera.

Hodgson, knowing what defeat would mean, made his first change after 64 minutes by sending on Ross Barkley for Sterling, who had struggled to impose himself on Uruguay as he had against the Italians.

England were moving into desperate times as the clock ran down - and it was Rooney who produced the goods with the equaliser 15 minutes from time, tapping in from close range from Johnson's perfect cross.

Just as the momentum looked to be shifting towards England, Suarez was the tormentor again, latching on to a long punt from Muslera after Gerrard had inadvertently headed into his path. He then steadied himself before rifling an unstoppable finish high past Hart.

It was the final word on this game – and on England's World Cup hopes. For Roy Hodgson and those not-so-wise men in the England set-up, it's very much a case of back to the drawing board.

Yet again.

Suarez snaps back at his critics

MAGNAMITY was in short supply from Luis Suarez after he guided his team to a 2-1 World Cup win over England, claiming the win brought him retribution against his critics in England.

The Liverpool striker, 27, scored in both halves to condemn England to their second successive loss in Group D and leave them close to a World Cup exit.

"Before the game too many people in England laughed about my attitude over the last few years.

"This is a very good time for me. I want to see what they think now."

Suarez, who missed Uruguay's opening World Cup defeat by Costa Ricaafter a month out following knee surgery, has been subjected to heavy criticism since signing for Liverpool from Ajax in 2011.

He was banned for 10 matches after biting the arm of Chelsea's Branislav Ivanovic in a Premier League match in April 2013 and was given an eight-match suspension for racially abusing Manchester United's Patrice Evrain October 2011.

'amazing moment'

"It has been like a dream. It is something I have dreamt about very often," he said. "It was one of the best games I've played. It's an amazing moment for me"

"Maybe a few days ago I thought this wouldn't be possible."

Suarez's late winning goal, a powerful strike after Liverpool team-mate Steven Gerrard had miscued a header, came just nine minutes after Wayne Rooney had cancelled out the Uruguayan striker's headed opener.

It took the striker's tally to five goals in seven World Cup matches.

'one of the best'

"I had to keep calm, keep my cool and when I got the ball I just kicked it with my whole heart thinking of all those who have supported me.

"I would like to say thank you to my wife and my two children, my physiotherapist Walter Ferreira and my team-mates."

Amid his job, Suarez had some sympathy for Gerrard.

"I told him to keep going," he said of his Liverpool team-mate. "He's the best player I've played with." Page 20 7 DAY WONDERS...

- Another World Cup fiasco as England tumble out in less than a week
- Suarez the assassin with sublime brace in 2-1 defeat for Roy's boys

ENGLAND.....1 URUGUAY.....2

SEVEN DAYS. That's how long it took England's World Cup dreams to evaporate in the unrelenting heat of their Brazilian campaign.

But it wasn't the weather that did for England, but rather the team's inability both to find the net at one end and to keep a clean sheet at the other.

Ahead of their do-or-die showdown with Uruguay on Thursday Roy Hodgson's men were in buoyant mood, despite losing their opening match 2-1 to Italy at the weekend.

But as so often has been the case in major tournaments in recent decades, English optimism soon gave way to despair, with Luis Suarez striking twice to give Uruguay a gut-wrenching 2-1 win in Sao Paolo, and on Friday those soccer giants Costa Rica put the nation of out of its collective misery, delivering a gentle coup de grace by dispatching Italy 1-0 to ensure their date with England in Belo Horizonte next week will be rendered meaningless for those wearing the Three Lions on their shirt.

Liverpool striker Suarez was making his return after a month out following knee surgery - and it proved to be bad timing for England and manager Roy Hodgson as his brilliance was the difference in a fiercely-fought encounter.

Suarez put Uruguay ahead with a first-half header then scored a superb winner six minutes from time after Wayne Rooney's first goal at a World Cup gave England hope of avoiding a second successive Group D loss.

Uruguay coach Oscar Tabarez claimed Suarez would not be fully fit after missing their opening defeat against Costa Rica and he did not look it, but he still possessed too much guile and menace for an England team who never built on the promise they showed even in losing to Italy.

Rooney struck the bar and was England's main threat but Uruguay - or to be more precise Suarez produced the quality and clinical finishing that decides games such as this.

As expected, Hodgson played Rooney in a more central role and moved Raheem Sterling wide -but England struggled to find the same energy levels that fuelled such a positive performance against Italy.

Daniel Sturridge and Sterling could not pose the same threat as they had in Manaus and it was Rooney who came closest with a free-kick just inches wide and then a header against the bar at the far post from Steven Gerrard's free-kick.
