Obama's Welsh wows the locals

PRESIDENT Barack Obama took time out of his busy schedule to visit a small Welsh school on Thursday...where he delighted the pupils by greeting them in Welsh.

And although the children were delighted to greet their famous visitor, there was less enthusiasm outside, where anti-war protesters demonstrated at the cenotaph in the town center, intending to get as close as they could to the Celtic Manor resort, where the NATO summit is being held, to express their distaste at what they see as Nato's global aggression.

The genesis of the visit came when headmaster Stephen Bowen wrote a hopeful letter to the American embassy, asking if the president would care to visit after the NATO meeting was scheduled in the principality.

He was as surprised as anyone when the White

"There are lots of ways of promoting Wales and Welsh businesses and we should look at all of them, but this is one way we can give a real boost to Wales."

"The largest gathering of international leaders ever to take place in the UK is starting in our home country here and now," said Wales' First Minister Carwyn Jones.

"The Nato Wales Summit is an exciting and historic moment for our country and I am confident we will shine on the world stage."

The security effort around the summit, billed as the largest political gathering of world leaders to be held in the UK, is immense. Nearly 10,000 police officers from 43 forces across England and Wales have been duty as part of a major security operation.

Horror as 82-year-old Londoner is beheaded

An 82-year-old woman has been killed in a suspected beheading in the garden of a north London house.

Palmira Silva was found at an address in Nightingale Road, Edmonton, at about 13:00 BST, police said.

Officers found her collapsed in a back garden and she was pronounced dead at the scene.

A 25-year-old man was arrested on suspicion of murder and is in custody. Detectives said there is no suggestion the killing had a terrorist motive.

The man is in hospital being treated for injuries suffered when he was arrested, police said.

A Taser was used during the arrest and a firearms officer is believed to have suffered a broken wrist.

Police said they were initially called to reports of a man armed with a knife and eyewitnesses said he had attacked an animal, possibly a cat or a dog.

Speaking at the scene of the attack, Cdr Simon Letchford said police had distracted the man while they evacuated nearby houses.

"Officers had to do everything they could to make other people safe and evacuate houses and put their lives on the line to make sure this individual did not cause further harm," he said.

He said officers smashed windows to get people out of properties after the man was "cornered" in a house.

GRUESOME DEATH: Police say it is unknown whether Palmira Silva knew her attacker

Police said they had traced the victim's next of kin but were unwilling to speculate on the nature of her injuries or the type of weapon used.

Det Ch Insp John Sandlin said: "I can understand why this may cause people concern, however we are confident that we are not looking for anyone else at this stage.

"Whilst it is too early to speculate on what the motive behind this attack was I am confident, based on the information currently available to me, that it is not terrorist related."

'Jumping gardens'

Neighbour Muhammed Yusuf said police knocked on his door and told him to leave the property immediately.

He said: "They just said 'You've got to get out of the house'. Of course I was worried."

His son Ahmed, 19, said: "At first there were two police cars, then all of a sudden there were 20.

"The police said to drop everything. I said 'What's going on?' and they said there's a guy jumping over gardens."

Another resident Freda Odame, 30, saw a screaming man waving a weapon around.

"I heard shouting and banging and I opened my curtains and saw a guy holding a knife in a back garden a few doors along," she said.

Sir Howard Davies, the chairman of the Commission, said that after a detailed study it had concluded that the proposal for a new four-runway airport –

He said the Commission had concluded that the only sensible options increase airport capacity in the South-east of England were to build a new runway at either Heathrow or Gatwick. A recommendation between the sites will be made after the next election.

But Mr Johnson refused to accept the Commission's findings and predicted that, like the Channel Tunnel, a new airport for London was an idea whose time would come.

"In one myopic stroke the Airports Commission has set the debate back by half a century and consigned their work to the long list of vertically filed reports on aviation expansion that are gathering dust on a shelf in Whitehall," he said.

PM: air strikes coming soon

David Cameron has indicated British involvement in air strikes against jihadists in Syria and Iraq could begin within weeks.

As senior Tories said there was 'overwhelming' support for the UK to join military action, the Prime Minister spoke publicly for the first time about striking Islamist targets in Syria without President Assad's consent.

He also signalled that British attacks on Islamic State forces, which have seized large swathes of Iraq, could come as soon as the country agrees a new government.

Its formation is expected on September 11 – the anniversary of the attacks on New York's twin towers in 2001.

But in talks with the Prime Minister at the Nato summit in Newport, south Wales, officials said President Barack Obama made no specific request for the UK to join strikes.

The US has already launched limited action against IS forces in Iraq, but only to prevent advances that threaten minority communities, rather than to destroy the militants' existing positions.

'not ruling anything out'

Mr Cameron set a series of conditions for British involvement in more ambitious military strikes – saying there would need to be a request from a new, representative Iraqi government and that regional powers would have to take the lead. Asked about UK air strikes, the Prime Minister said: 'I'm certainly not ruling anything out.

'I think there's something else as well as moral and legal justification ... in the past sometimes people have seen western intervention as something that goes the regional powers and neighbours.'

He suggested Nato troops could train Iraqi and Kurdish forces to repel IS terrorists – perhaps in a neutral country such as Jordan. It emerged Britain has sent Lieutenant General Sir Simon Mayall, former deputy chief of the defence staff, to Urbil to advise Kurdish authorities on strategy for pushing back IS.

fiasco

In Westminster, Conservative whips, who are in charge of party discipline, were gauging the degree of support among MPs for Britain joining military strikes.

They are understood to be anxious to avoid a repeat of the fiasco last year when the Government lost a Commons vote on proposed action in Syria.

Former attorney general Dominic Grieve suggested most of his Tory colleagues would back military action against IS, saying: 'My colleagues ... take the view that what's happening in Iraq and Syria is a serious violation of human rights ... and that in those circumstances action which can stop it would be justified. But I'm sure there's also understandable wariness ... it's got to be in circumstances that do not aggravate the situation.'

'obligation'

As the Government's former chief adviser on law, he said strikes against IS forces in Iraq and Syria would be legal. Commons Leader William Hague said the Government was not proposing military action 'at the moment', but said if it did, ministers would only seek advance Parliamentary approval if 'there is time to do so'.

Anders Fogh
Rasmussen, Nato
secretary-general, said members had an 'obligation' to stop IS, adding: 'I'm sure that if the Iraqi government were to forward a request for Nato assistance, that would be considered

IN THE HUDDLE: the President and the Prime Minister met with other Nato leaders at Cardiff Castle on Thursday night to discuss the growing threat posed by IS forces seriously by Nato allies.'

Deputy Prime Minister Nick Clegg said air strikes 'would have to be part of a wider approach', warning: 'Air strikes on their own ... don't work.'

Tory MP John Baron, who opposed previous military action in Iraq and Libya, said: 'Any action against IS must be at the invitation of the Iraqi government and be clearly defined. Past errors must not be repeated.'

And in a speech that may sow further division among Western leaders struggling to maintain a united front against the surge in Islamic fundamen also suggested European leaders have fuelled the hostage crisis and financed terror plots against the West by facilitating ransom payments.

In a thinly veiled attack on France, Germany and Italy, David Cameron demanded other world leaders be 'good to their word' and honour an international deal blocking such payments to extremist groups.

'What matters is not your signature on a declaration but not letting money be paid to terrorist kidnappers because that money goes into arms, it goes into weapons, it goes into terror plots it goes into more kidnaps,' Mr Cameron said. 'It is utterly self defeating. It is worse than self defeating, it is actually a risk to us at home."

NHS left red-raced as parents of gravely ill boy are arrested

A YOUNG BOY suffering from a brain tumor has been reunited with his parents after a Europe-wide manhunt for the family prompted a national outcry in Britain, raising fundamental issues of patient's rights in addition to severely embarrassing the National Health Service.

Five year old Ashya King was reunited with his parents Brett and Naghmeh King on Thursday, the first time the child had seen them since they were arrested in Spain on Saturday night, days after the couple had taken him from a Southampton hospital without the consent of doctors, sparking an international manhunt.

Brett King conducted research online into his son's disease and became convinced that the best therapy was a pioneering new treatment called proton radiotherapy – which Aysha's doctors believe is not appropriate for a boy of his age. After relations between the parents and medical staff broke down, Aysha's

Helicopter rescue for Branson's daredevil son

Sir Richard Branson's son has been rescued from the peak of a mountain in the Swiss Alps after a bout of severe altitude sickness.

Sam Branson, 29, was close to the summit of the Matterhorn, on the border between Switzerland and Italy, when his team radioed for help.

Dramatic footage showed him heaving at the summit before being taken off the mountain in a rescue helicopter.

Sir Richard Branson said in a phone call to the popular ITV breakfast program Good Morning Britain that his son was "literally dangling from Mountain guide Kenton Cool said Sam began showing symptoms of exhaustion and altitude sickness around 200 metres from the peak.

"By the time we got to the summit he was emotionally quite fragile. It was acute mountain sickness. He was dry heaving, vomiting and I honestly thought he was going to potentially pass out on me," said Cool.

After the rescue, Sam said: "The idea of being winched off a mountain thousands of feet in the air was freaking me out".

He said he was "mentally and physically exhausted" but otherwise well.

Sam Branson was climbing the 14,692 foot mountain as part of the Virgin Strive Challenge, which raises money for young people's charity Big Change.

Hours after an international arrest warrant was issued, the family were detained in Spain and Aysha taken into protective custody.

When asked by a Sky journalist whether he would do the same again, Brett King replied "of course" and added: "My son's worth everything, worth me going to prison, worth everything, because they were going to kill him in England or turn him into a vegetable."

British police dropped the case against them following an outcry against the treatment of the King family, with Prime Minister David Cameron saying that he welcomed the prosecution being dropped and that "it's important this little boy gets treatment and the love of his family".

Earlier Mr King has spoken of the torment at being left languishing in a Spanish prison unable to see his son, with no television and no understanding of why so many journalists were camped outside Soto del Real prison near Madrid waiting for their release.

He later added that he hopes "no other parent has to go through this rubbish.

"I would be happy to spend years in prison rather than my son be given treatment that's going to kill him or disable him for the rest of his life," he said.

treatment plan

Mr King also claimed that he and his wife had advised Southampton hospital that they were taking Ashya out, though the hospital states otherwise.

Southampton General Hospital defended its dealings with the family and denied threatening to take away the Kings' right to decide their son's care. Mr King, 51, claimed he had told doctors that he planned to remove his son from hospital after disagreeing with their treatment plan on the basis of his own research.

It now appears likely that the Kings will secure their goal of having Ashya's brain tumour treated at The Proton Therapy clinic in the Czech Republic, but Dr Peter Wilson, the Southampton hospital's paediatrician, said Ashva would need chemotherapy before any proton-beam therapy could be started.

Dr Jiri Kubes, head of proton therapy at the clinic in Prague, said: "So, Ashya shall go for proton therapy to the Czech Republic. However, prior to this he will need to return to England first."

A fundraising page set up to help pay for the treatment has so far raised more than £21,000, while the charity Kids'n'Cancer UK said it had agreed to pay the £100,000 needed for the treatment, plus living costs, after donors pledged £35,000 in 24 hours.

Mike Hyman, its chief executive, said: "I have spoken to Ashya's brother, Naveed, and he is dead chuffed."

Ukip leader predicts a political 'landslide'

- Polls suggest upstart party is headed for stunning victory at Clacton by-election
- "We could end up holding the balance of power by next May," says confident Farage

Ukip leader Nigel Farage has claimed that a win for his party in the upcoming Clacton by-election would signal a "landslide in British politics" as an opinion poll indicated that the Tories would face a humiliating defeat in the contest, triggered by Douglas Carswell's shock defection last month.

Mr Farage, who said the party was "testing the waters" with other potential turncoats including from Labour predicted Ukip could hold the balance of power in Parliament.

A poll for the Mail on Sunday gave Ukip a massive 44 point lead over David Cameron's party and Mr Farage predicted that a win would result in "more and more people coming over to us".

The Clacton poll put Ukip on 64%, with Mr Carswell's former party on 20%, Labour on 13% and the Lib Dems on 2%.

More than half of those asked favored quitting the European Union, with 54% supporting a British exit and 26% opposed to cutting ties to Brussels.

In a sign of Mr Carswell's popularity in the seat, more than a third (34%) of those indicating they would vote Ukip said it was because they their former Conservative MP, while 57% said it was because they liked Ukip and 9% said it would be a protest

The poll of 700 voters smaller than the samples typically used nationwide polling followed Mr Carswell's defection last week.

Mr Farage told the Sun on Sunday the stakes were high in the contest for the Essex seat, which will see Mr Carswell take on his former party.

He said: "This is the moment. If we win the by-election in Clacton, it will create a landslide in British politics.

"If we lose, then selling ourselves as a party that can win a significant number of seats will get a lot harder."

'appetite for change'

Mr Farage added: "If Douglas wins by-election, then there will be more and more people coming over to us. We could end up holding the balance of power by next May."

That was "utterly dependent" on Clacton result, he said, but added: "I'm going to keep playing double or quits until I lose. But if I win three more hands, we'll be out of the EU and a free country again.

"There is a massive appetite out there for change."

Mr Farage's party has made inroads in Labour's northern strongholds in recent elections and he said: "We're going all out for the working class vote

Glossy mag defends Blair award

British GQ magazine is defending its decision to name former U.K. Prime Minister Tony Blair "Philanthropist of the Year" at its 2014 Men of the Year awards.

The event, which took place Tuesday at London's Royal Opera House and recognized a wide range of artists and leaders in various fields, honored Blair for his work heading three charities: The Tony Blair Faith Foundation, which aims to prevent religious conflict and extremism around the world, the Tony Blair Africa Governance Initiative, a nonprofit working with African leaders to build more prosperous futures for their countries, and the Tony Blair Sports Foundation, which promotes health through athletics in northeast England.

But the award was greeted with fury by Blair's critics, who pointed to his support and participation in the war in Iraq, as well as his relationship with a K h a z a k h s t a n president whose government allegedly killed unarmed civilians at a 2011 protest.

As usual Twitter led the field with denunciations, with former England international football player and now Match of the Day Host Gary Lineker tweeting: "Apparently, Tony Blair won GO's philanthropist of the year award. Finally these awards have grasped irony!"

The event's producer Richard Dodgson said selecting controversial winners is part of the magazine's strategy.

"We like to have celebrities at our event who cause a bit of a stir," Dodgson told BBC Radio 5 live. "So having Tony was fantastic. We like to have people who have opinions and are forthright."

British GQ clarified its decision - making regarding Blair on Wednesday, sharing a column in defense of the prime minister on Facebook:

the magazine's rebuttal, Charlie Burton writes: "When Blair went into Iraq he said that history would judge whether it was the right decision. The problem is, we've bought a partial, revisionist history of an entire premiership. Its great myth is that Blair didn't achieve anything in office; the truth is he fundamentally transformed country. It's not just Northern Ireland and the minimum wage: he left a legacy. Civil partnerships. Bank of England independence.

As far as the former prime minister was concerned, he was happy to receive the award in recognition of those helping his foundations around the world.

"I would like to dedicate this award to the people who work with my organizations," Blair said during his acceptance speech, according to the BBC. "I feel the pulse of progress beating a little harder."

A benefits cheat who built up a £1million property empire while claiming to be too ill to work has been jailed.

Dean Ahmed, 49, had a secret luxury property empire while posing as a single, disabled man who deserved state handouts.

While receiving the benefits - income support and disability living allowance - he banked more than £100,000 while also collecting rent from at least ten houses across Europe.

Murdoch's Divine Inspiration

FILM: God Help The Girl is a charming directorial debut from the Belle and Sebastian songwriter, writes Debbie Lynn Elias

With beguiling adorable awkwardness, first time screenwriter/ director Stuart Murdoch puts a song in your heart and a spring in your step with the oh-so-lovely, GOD HELP THE GIRL.

Lead singer-songwriter of the Scottish pop/rock group Belle and Sebastian, Murdoch makes the jump to film with a musical that is truly a musical, with songs and their lyrics built into the story and dialogue. Tapping into the ideal of music as the common denominator of the world, with the scene opening eye-catching number, "Act of the Apostle", Murdoch strikes an easy chord thanks to not only his easy-breezy thematically telling pop tunes (which you will be humming as you leave the theatre) but with a youthful exuberant cast who act, sing, dance and yes, do all their own vocals.

Set in a quiet, cobblestoned, pastoral suburb of Glasgow, we meet Eve as she is sneaking out late at night of what we presume to be boarding school, heading off to see bands at a local club. Appearing to be open mic night, the crowd rocks out to Wobbly Legged Rats and their sexy frontman and lead singer, Anton (who seems to have eyes for Eve), before being less wowed newcomer singer-guitarist James who appears bandless but for the house drummer loudly banging in the background, prompting an all-out barroom brawl. One look at Eve and you know that there's something about James and his music that speaks to her.

On her returning "home", we realize that Eve is not in a boarding school, but in a residential treatment facility/psychiatric hospital for a severe eating disorder. Unable to cope, Eve's one outlet is songwriting and music. Stifled and wanting out of the facility, Eve moves into a room in James' apartment, allowing her to partner up with him to write songs. Although Eve believes she needs James' help, James is convinced that Eve has a God-given talent and he's just there to provide musical support. Joining in the mix is Cassie, a music student of James' for some time. She wants more than practicing methodical scales over and over and over. She wants to write and sing and perform; and inspired by Eve, that's exactly what she starts to do. And so, on one bright summer day, a music group is

As worlds and wants start colliding and longburied truths emerge, not to mention Eve running out of a much needed medication to keep her on an emotionally even keel, can the trio hold things together or will they fall apart just as their career starts to take flight?

Emily Browning is luminous as Eve. Walking the fine line between fragility and a calculating, tough-as-nails persona, Browning soars with a sincerity and beauty. Browning knows how to use the camera with her eyes and it doesn't take much before you find yourself hypnotized by her, drawn ever deeper into Eve's world.

I first took note of Olly Alexander some years back in "Bright Star". He has an understated quality that many audiences are just now discovering thanks to his work in "Penny Dreadful." Here, as the nerdy James, Alexander laces the character with a touch of musically superior arrogance that gives James a duality that is both confident and not. It's an interesting approach that is compelling, serving as a connective thread that balances the contrasting personas of Browning's and Hannah Murray's Cassie. And again, his musical talents are not wasted here.

Hannah Murray delights as Cassie. Free-spirited yet needing to break free of the rigidity of her family's wealth and prominence, Murray adds a touch of ditziness to Cassie that is warm and welcoming and charmingly funny. finds strong footing with a "coming of age" and "finding of self" tone that buoys the dynamic of the three principals.

The real joy of GOD HELP THE GIRL is the music and the story construct as it incorporates the specific songs and lyrics into the plot. This is not a case of songs just being "dropped in" for amusement. Each is staged as part of the script and are poignant, speaking to specific and tonal thematic elements of the moment, yet never feeling heavy or maudlin.

Gorgeous locations throughout Glasgow and its West End just add to the overall experience -Barrowland Ballroom, Glasgow's Central Station, the Botanic Gardens and the Victorian-era Western Baths Club - make a wonderful mini-travelogue Glasgow.

Icing on the cake with GOD HELP THE GIRL is Denise Coombs' costume design. Blending nods to 60's pop, Twiggy and the British invasion with a 50's vibe and even post-WWII London, costuming especially for Emily Browning's Eve - leaps off the screen.

Charming, enchanting, fun and fancy-free you might very well find GOD HELP THE GIRL simply divine.

God Help the Girl. Written and Directed by Stuart Murdoch. Cast: Emily Browning, Olly Alexander, Hannah Murray, Pierre Boulanger Run Time: 111 minutes. Not rated.

Mad World: An Oral History of New Wave Artists and Songs That Defined the 1980s

For some people, the greatest piece of music ever written is Beethoven's Fifth Sympthony.

Others would name The Beatles classic Let It Be. But for me, the finest entry in the history of recorded sound is...Too Shy by Kajagoogooo.

If you can see any degree of sense in that argument then wonderful new book Mad World, about the songs that defined the 1980s, is for you.

It's the essential guide to that amazing era and features exclusive interviews with 35 of the biggest music names of the decade giving the inside story on their biggest hits.

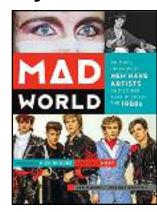

This includes Kajagoogoo's Limahl and Nick Beggs still trading insults at each other all these years after the band's bitter split and Thomas Dolby revealing that Dr Magnus Pyke hated being better known for his appearance in the She Blinded Me With Science video than for his body of academic work.

Queen Victoria: a Life of Contradictions

■ Exclusive interview with author Matthew Dennison and a review of his biography of Queen Victoria

Rating: $\star\star\star$

"I can't remember a time when I haven't wanted to about Queen Victoria," says Queen Victoria: Life а Contradictions author Matthew Dennison. "I had previously written biography of Queen Victoria's youngest daughter, Princess Beatrice. I wanted to write a book which captured the many threads of Victoria's complex character."

A fascinating read for history buffs, Dennison's book is a character study in the contradictions of Queen Victoria. The book focuses on her early years and the people who shaped her. Her mother, her mother's brother King Leopold of Belgium, her governess and then her husband Prince Albert, about whom Victoria was very sentimental. After his early death she went into mourning for the last 40 years of her life. She was a hard parent to her nine children but thanks to Dennison's thorough research, you will understand why Victoria turned out as she did.

Dennison goes beyond the Victoria found in most history books, which is illuminating, but his sentence structure is sometimes fractured and old fashioned.

Growing up, Victoria lives in the shadow of her mother. She is never permitted to walk down stairs without someone holding her hand. She has no privacy and her mother reads her diary ever night. With her mother cautioning her daily about her hedonistic uncles, she becomes a prude. After she becomes queen and moves into Buckingham Palace, Victoria banishes her mother to another part of the palace. Intelligent and fascinated new Victoria technology, watches the rise of the railway and photography and relies heavily on Melbourne and her other ministers.

"I hope this book, which is light in tone but intensively researched, will encourage people to look further into Victoria's life," says Dennison, "particularly at a moment when our present Queen's life offers such interesting parallels with, but also points of divergence from, of great-great-grandmother."

"More than a century after her death, Queen Victoria remains leviathan figure in both British and world history," Dennison. particular I've long been fascinated by Victoria's assiduous control of her sprawling inkblot of a family, dynastic tentacles she stretched across the continent of Europe and beyond. The commission to write a short biography forced me to sharpen my thoughts and arrive at some sort of conclusion about this fascinating an initiative by the Royal Collection the commemorate Jubilee Diamond Elizabeth II. "In 2012, all of Queen Victoria's Journals were digitized and made available online," says Dennison. "I think I am the first biographer to have been able to read Victoria's Journals online in their entirety like this. I pictorial always use material as well as written sources in my research. Victoria commissioned portraiture on a heroic scale. Those paintings and carefully crafted iconography tell us so much about how she viewed herself and her royal role."

In writing this book,

The legacy of Victoria's reign is indelibly stamped on much of modern Britain, but Victoria as a person imperfectly understood both at home and abroad, Dennison's book changes

Dennison lives with his wife North Wales. He was born in the cathedral city of Durham, in the north of England.

RPatz branches out...to dating Twigs!

He's been linked to high-profile several since women break-up with Kristen Stewart last year, but now Robert Pattinson is reported to be in his first serious relationship since KStew.

This week reports have surfaced that 28-year-old star of the Twilight movie saga is dating rising British singer FKA Twigs (real name Tahliah Barnett).

Oo-er!

The hunky actor has been dating 'twigs' for a couple of weeks now a source close to the couple said: "It's the real deal between Rob Tahliah."

"They had been able to keep their relationship secret until recently, but they're already smitten."

"He's been taking her on dates for the last month or so, and has even flown her out to stay with him in New York. He also loves going to her gigs."

Twigs (the FKA stands for 'formerly known as,' added after another artist complained that the name Twigs was already in use) has already created quite a career for herself in music, earning huge praise for her second EP and singles including Water Me.

And the 26-year-old, who was shortlisted for the BBC's Sound of 2014 award, is hoping that she avoids any drama with Rob's ex, as well as dodging being pigeon-holed as just a celeb girlfriend.

Meanwhile, KStew was thousands of miles away in Japan, where she is promoting her new film, Equals, a futuristic utopian thriller in which she stars with British actor Nicholas Hoult Pattinson and Stewart have had an on-off affair for many years, and Kristen's affair with director Rupert Sanders in 2012 appears to have finally put the light out on their Twilight romance.

Pattinson's latest film Life will be released in 2015. He recently told The Guardian that he'd like to appear in "something in a really small theatre".

He added: "I don't think I could do something on But Broadway... ľd like to do something kind of shocking.'

Still repeating on me: Pink's and the 1980s...

Back to school and summer is over - except for those of us who live in 'no season' Los Angeles. Whatever the date we can wear white during, before, and after Labor Day. We are probably one of the only places in the USA that often gets confused as to whether the upcoming holiday weekend is Labor Day or Memorial Day, the rest of the country can use the weather outside to judge the occasion.

Labor Day to me means that LA is due to celebrate a birthday - this year being the ripe old age of 233 on September 4th! Happy Birthday Los Angeles!!

Apparently to the majority of the country it approximately seven billion hot dogs will have been eaten since July 4th! Make that seven billion and one, thanks to the Greek Theatre who have Pink's Hotdog available on site. Between you and me they aren't that great, so don't feel bad if you can't face the extremely long wait. Although, Orson Welles may disagree as he apparently consumed 18 Pink's hotdogs in one sitting. That's nothing to boast about, seeing as he died of a heart attack. LA is a funny place as any association is seen as better than none - Pink's other claim to fame is "Bruce Willis proposed to Demi here", well that worked out well too didn't it? Jokes aside -Pink's are worth a visit just so you too can be in the in-crowd and say 'they aren't that great'.

Back to the 80s

My visit to the Greek Theatre this week wasn't solely for the food - I was lucky enough to snag a ticket for the 80's Retro Futura Tour, featuring China Crisis, Howard Jones, Tom Bailey of the Thompson Twins and the star of the show, Scotsman Midge Ure. I think the Killers may well have got some of their inspiration from him. What a wonder! I was hoping to catch up with him after the show and ask, among other things, if his vote was a YES or a NO in the upcoming Scottish Independence referendum unfortunately he was too busy signing cd's for diehard fans.

The YES vote has jumped up to 47% with only 2 weeks to go - is this another trick question? A bit like when people voted on Gay Marriage here in California in 2008 and for once a Yes meant No? I don't want Scotland to leave the United Kingdom but I am very proud that we can have discussions, referendums and votes on our political future, unlike so much of the world!

On a lighter note, if you are an 80's fan you must check out the book Mad World: An Oral History of New Wave Artists and Songs That Defined the 1980s, a real blast from the (See Sandro Monetti's review on page

No place for Luke Donald in McGinley's Ryder Cup picks

MCGINLEY: "My relationship with Luke is very close."

Debutant Stephen Gallacher, Ian Poulter and Lee Westwood are the three wildcard selections for Paul McGinley's European Ryder Cup team to face the USA.

England's former world number one Luke Donald, who has played in four of the last five Ryder Cup tournaments, misses out with Italy's Francesco Molinari.

Scot Gallacher came within one place of securing an automatic Ryder Cup berth at the Italian Open on Sunday.

The Ryder Cup takes place at Gleneagles in Scotland from 26-28 September.

Donald was part of the Europe team that recorded a 14.5-13.5 victory over the United States at the last Ryder Cup in Medinah in 2012, and has taken 10.5 points from a possible 15 since his 2004 debut in the competition.

The 36-year-old has struggled for form recently, finishing in in the top 35 only once in his past nine tournaments.

"It was a very difficult conversation with him for a number of reasons," McGinley said of his decision to overlook Donald.

"My relationship with Luke is very close. He has played in every Ryder Cup I've been involved in apart from 2008, which we both missed.

"I've partnered Luke twice, in 2004 and 2006, and vice-captained him in 2010 and 2012. I forged a very strong relationship with him.

"His Ryder Cup record is outstanding and he will no doubt go on to many make more appearances in the Ryder Cup. It was a difficult call but one I had to do in the interests of the European team "

EUROPE'S RYDER CUP TEAM:

Automatic Qualifiers: Rory Mcllory (NI), Henrik Stenson (Swe), Victor Dubuisson (Fra), Jamie Donaldson (Wal), Sergio Garcia (Spain), Justin Rose (Eng), Martin Kaymer (Ger), Thomas Bjorn (Den), Graeme McDowell (NI).

Wildcards: Stephen Gallagher (Scot), Ian Poulter (Eng), Lee Westwood (Eng)

Radamel Falcao is not guaranteed an immediate first-team place Manchester United. according to Reds' striker Robin van Persie.

Colombia international striker Falcao, 28, joined United in a £6m season-long loan deal on transfer deadline day.

"I welcome his arrival, he makes us better," Van Persie told Fox Sports NL.

"At a top club you should always go for the best, which also fits my philosophy. Falcao must fight for his place, as I also have to."

Falcao scored 11 goals in 20 appearances for French Ligue 1 side Monaco last season.

Strachan expects different Germany after midweek loss

Scotland coach Gordon Strachan expects opponents Sunday's Germany to be a different proposition from the team that lost 4-2 to Argentina in a midweek friendly.

Djoko just too strong - Murray

Britain's Andy Murray said he was disappointed that Novak Djokovic proved physically stronger in Open their US quarter-final.

27-year-old The lost 7-6 (7-1) 6-7 (1-7) 6-2 6-4 over three hours and 32 minutes at Flushing Meadows Wednesday

"I thought physically he was better than me in the end," said Murray, the eighth seed.

"I was a little bit disappointed, to be honest, because I did train very hard."

Murray carried out a training block with his support team in Florida after a disappointing quarter-final defeat at always focus on and it Wimbledon in July.

"You do the work for these matches, so I would have liked to have felt a little bit better towards the end," said Djokovic, 27, also felt he had an advantage when he faces Murray in Grand Slam matches over the best of five sets.

"I get the feeling that if I get to stay with him and work, and not get too loose and too frustrated with points, and not allow him to get into a big lead, I feel like there is a point where I that edge physically," said the paid off tonight."

Murray who underwent back surgery following last year's US Open and missed the final months of the 2013 season, described playing Djokovic as extremely demanding.

The Briton has made at least the quarter-finals of all four Grand Slams this year, but found the world number one a step too far.

"Maybe I haven't played enough matches at that level this year," he said.

"It's obviously different playing at that level, playing against the "That's what I try to number one in the world. And the way that we play against each other, it's just an extremely physical match.

Murray said that in games against other players, for example Roger Federer, the points come quicker and it is not as demanding.

He added: "When me and Novak play against other, obviously see very tight, long rallies. Both of us do a lot of running.

"Maybe I'll gain a lot from playing a match like today, because it doesn't matter how much training you do, when you get on the match court different.

"I can't practise with the best player in the world, so it's tough to practise intensity."

Dreary England fail to impress

Wayne Rooney celebrated his appointment as England captain with the winner against Norway on a night when fans turned their back on the team following their dismal World Cup exit.

Only 40,181 turned out at Wembley for England's first game since they were eliminated after two group-stage defeats by Italy and Uruguay in Brazil.

Rooney's penalty at least enabled manager Roy Hodgson to enjoy the taste of victory after a winless summer in South America but the lowest turn-out for an England international at Wemblev new underlined the extent to which England have lost the public's imagination.

Norway are hardly the glamorous opponents, but on a balmy night such a meagre attendance is a reflection the apathy that currently surrounds the England team after the World Cup.

preparation for Monday's testing Euro 2016 qualifier against Switzerland in Basel and it was an uninspiring affair played out in front of vast swathes of empty seats, with Wembley's top tier deserted and the one below hardly populated.

If there were positives to take from England's display it was the vibrant performance from Liverpool's young attacker Raheem Sterling and Rooney's goal, which was his 41st for his country, taking him to fourth in the all-time listings and only eight behind record-holder Sir Bobby Charlton.

Sterling won 68th-minute penalty that proved decisive when he was fouled by Omar allowing Elabdellaoui, Rooney to comprehensively beat Norway keeper Orjan Haskold Nyland.

Liverpool team-mates Sterling and Daniel Sturridge were lively in partnership in the first half but Norway were given encouragement some when they put England under pressure after the break, keeper Joe Hart saving brilliantly from Joshua King, who also almost took advantage of a slip by Gary Cahill.
