Time to move on!

- Scottish politicians urge First Minister to accept referendum result
- Salmond backs away from 'gradual approach' to independence

ALEX Salmond has been told that he must accept the referendum result, as the Scottish assembly met for the first time since the country rejected independence.

The First Minister's opponents in the Scottish parliament urged the SNP to "move on" after last week's vote, saying that the referendum had confirmed that remaining in the United Kingdom was the settled will of the Scottish people.

Scottish Labour leader Johann Lamont, Conservative leader Ruth Davidson and Liberal Democrat leader Willie Rennie made the point after Mr Salmond raised the prospect of Scotland unilaterally declaring independence.

'great opportunity'

During the opening session of a two-day debate to discuss the independence referendum, there was consensus across the chamber that the experiment to extend the vote to 16- and 17-year-olds should be adopted for future elections. And on the same day that all main Holyrood parties had talks with a newly established commission looking at strengthening the Scottish Parliament,

"We need those at the top to respect and accept the result. Because without such acceptance, we cannot move on. And move on we must...."

Mr Salmond said the UK parties' vow for more powers must be delivered.

The SNP said it would "fully participate" with the commission after Mr Salmond said there was a "great opportunity" for the Scottish Parliament to help deliver more powers, arguing that they should create jobs, tackle inequality and give Scotland a stronger voice on the international stage.

The First Minister sought to distance himself from suggestions that Scotland could become independent in the future without the decision being taken in a referendum.

Mr Salmond said he had "no intention" to make a unilateral declaration of independence – a statement which appeared to differ from comments he made at the weekend.

On Sunday, Mr

Salmond suggested there could be a gradual approach to independence, whereby Scotland could declare itself to be independent, because the parliament had gathered so many powers that it became "independent in all but name".

His remarks were referred to by his opponents, who all called on the SNP to accept defeat.

'hurt, loss and grief'

Ms Lamont said: "The constitutional question has hung over this country all of my life, and I give absolute credit to the First Minister for giving the people of Scotland the opportunity to answer it.

"While he might not have got the result he was looking for, we can all agree that the United Kingdom is now the settled will of the Scottish people.

PROMISES: Salmond said the UK parties' vow for more powers must be delivered.

"No longer will the UK be a deal struck by the privileged few. It is now the choice of the many, expressed in a fair and democratic way, in which we can all have confidence."

She added: "We cannot spend the next two years, having moved from, 'If you vote Yes this will happen', to 'If you had voted Yes that would have happened'. We cannot leave the politics of the place in that shape. We need to move on."

Ms Davidson said she understood the "hurt, grief and loss" of those who voted for independence. "But that pain is not healed by people crying foul and that grief is not ministered to by talk of a conspiracy," she said.

"To truly come back together and move on, we need the Scottish Government to acknowledge that the process was not flawed."

She added: "Since Friday, we have had three senior nationalists, including the First Minister himself, saying there are other ways to unilaterally declare independence.

"We need those at the top to respect and accept the result. Because without such acceptance, we cannot move on. And move on we must."

"We need to act now" ...Cameron recalls MPs to vote on ISIS air strikes - Page 2

ISIS: Cameron seeks Commons approval for air strikes

David Cameron has set Britain on the path to war in Iraq again as he announced he was seeking parliamentary approval for a sustained bombing campaign against Islamic extremists who now control large swathes of the country.

In a speech to the United Nations on Wednesday just hours before US warplanes launched a third night of air strikes in Syria, Mr Cameron said the international community must not be "so frozen with fear" by old mistakes that it withdrew into "isolation" and failed to confront the threat of Isis.

The Prime Minister, who himself voted for the last war in Iraq, later told the UN Security Council: "We need to act and we need to act now."

MPs were recalled to Westminster to give their approval for British air strikes on Friday, after the British Weekly went to press. Military action could potentially begin at the weekend.

Mr Cameron discussed the plan with the Labour leader Ed Miliband, who will support the Commons motion. The Cabinet met on Thursday and endorsed the Prime Ministers' plan. The move will mark the first time British combat forces have played an active role in Iraq since they withdrew five years ago. However there will be no UK involvement in air strikes in Syria and no "boots on the ground".

The decision came after an official request was made for British help by the Iraqi Prime Minister, Haider al-Abadi.

Addressing the UN General Assembly, Mr Cameron said that while it was "absolutely right" that Britain and the West should "learn the lessons of the past", those lessons had to be the "right lessons".

"Yes to careful preparation; no to rushing to join a conflict without a clear plan," he said. "But we must not be so frozen with fear that we don't do anything at all. Isolation and withdrawing from a problem like Isis will only make things worse. We must not allow past mistakes to become an excuse for indifference or inaction. The right lesson is that we should act – but act differently."

Mr Cameron said the coalition being put together by the US would be comprehensive, intelligent and inclusive. "We should be comprehensive – defeating the ideology of extremism that is the root cause of this terrorism – so we win the battle of ideas and not just the battle of military might.

"We should be intelligent – supporting representative and accountable governments and working with them at their request, not going in over their heads. We should be inclusive – working with partners in the region who are prepared to be part of the solution."

In a briefing to journalists, Mr Cameron acknowledged that Britain's involvement could jeopardise the prospects of securing the release of the hostage Alan Henning.

"It's a desperate situation," he admitted. "But let's be clear about two things. One is that we are dealing with psychopathic, murderous, brutal people who will stop at nothing to carry out dreadful acts on these hostages."

UN ADDRESS: Mr Cameron said the international community must not be "so frozen with fear" by old mistakes that it withdrew into "isolation"

Jihadi John 'identified'

The British extremist responsible for the on-screen beheading of hostages has reportedly been identified, as MPs were preparing to vote on whether the UK should join air strikes against Islamic State (IS).

FBI director James Comey is said to have confirmed that the identity of the killer - up to now only known by the nickname "Jihadi John" - has been uncovered. However, he refused to give the individual's name publicly. Speculation has been rife in the British media that Jihadi John is a former aspiring rapper from West London called Abdel Majid Abdel Bary, also known as L Jinny.

Earlier this week Foreign Secretary Philip Hammond said UK and US intelligence services were "getting warm" in the hunt for the jihadi with a London accent, who has so far featured in videos showing the murder of American journalists James Foley, 40, and Steven Sotloff, 31, as well as British aid worker, David Haines, 44. The man is said to lead a small group of British jihadis who became known by hostages as "The Beatles".

Speaking at a briefing with US journalists, Mr Comey is reported to have said: "I believe that we have identified him, I'm not going to tell you who I believe it is." Asked if he would prioritise capturing the jihadist, he said: "We will do, and expend the effort that I think the American people would want us to and expect us to."

Guilty! DLT facing jail after groping woman at BBC

FORMER DJ Dave Lee Travis was found guilty of indecent assault on Tuesday.

The 69-year-old was convicted by a jury at Southwark Crown Court after a three week trial.

The ex-Radio 1 presenter was found guilty of one count of indecent assault dating back to 1995 on a junior production assistant working on a BBC show.

Travis, 69, was found guilty by a majority verdict of ten to two.

Prosecutors claimed Travis was "predatory" who felt he had the "perfect right" to take advantage of young women in their twenties who were working with him.

He was cleared of an alleged indecent assault between December 1990 and January 1991 and the jury were unable to reach a verdict on a third charge of alleged sexual

'Oompa Loompa' sex pest who hired himself out for stag and hen parties is spared jail

A DWARF who hired himself out for stag parties and hen nights has been spared jail after pestering schoolgirls for sex.

Marc Corrieri, who dressed as a £150-an-hour Oompa Loompa from children's favourite Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, harassed the four youngsters online.

The 4ft 2ins performer said he was rich and offered a 13-year-old a job as his face painter before quizzing her about sex.

But he was caught when one girl's mother saw his lewd messages posted on Facebook.

Corrieri, of Motherwell, Lanarkshire, had worked for an events firm called Buff Butlers but is now unemployed.

He appeared at Hamilton Sheriff Court where he was ordered to perform 240 hours of unpaid work and put on the sex offenders' register for three years.

Shamed Corrieri, who earlier admitted sending explicit messages to four girls aged 13 and 16.

The offences took place between May 2011 and August 2012.

Pleading for his client not be jailed defence lawyer Stephen McQuillan said: "This is a very serious matter.

"He is unemployed and lives at home with his parents.

"My submission is to ask you to step back from a custodial sentence and look at other options.

Right royal rumpus for PM after revealing Queen 'purred' down the phone following Scottish vote

DAVID Cameron has made a grovelling apology after revealing the Queen had "purred" down the telephone when he called her to say Scotland had voted No to independence.

The Prime Minister said he was "very embarrassed" by the extraordinary breach of protocol.

He said: "Look, I'm very embarrassed by this. I'm extremely sorry about it. It was a private conversation, but clearly a private conversation that I shouldn't have had and won't have again.

"My office has already been in touch with the Palace to make that clear and I will do so as well."

Mr Cameron made clear his office had already apologized to Her Majesty and he would do so personally in the future.

'emotional'

The PM's indiscreet comments were caught on a microphone talking about a private conversation he held with Her Majesty after Friday's referendum result.

During the dialogue with Michael Bloomberg, former Mayor of New York, he also admitted that the referendum "should never have been that close".

He said that when he rang the Queen to give her the news: "She purred down the line."

He was also overheard saying how emotional she was when he told her of the result, explaining: "I've never heard someone tear-up like that before. It was great."

The Prime Minister, who was meeting business leaders in New York, explained he was dreading having to make the call if Scotland had voted Yes to independence.

He said: "The definition of relief, if you are Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, is ringing up the Queen and saying, 'Your Majesty, it is all right, your kingdom is still united'."

Buckingham Palace refused to be drawn on Mr Cameron's comments.

'very nervous'

Later sections of the recording are inaudible but the PM is heard referring to the referendum result by saying: "But it should never have been that close."

He finishes by commenting: "I've said I want to find these polling companies and I want to sue them for my stomach ulcers because of what they put me through. It was very nervous moments."

In the days before the referendum, it was reported that the Queen was "horrified" by the prospect of Scottish independence. She subsequently said people should "think very carefully" before they voted.

Prince Charles leads tributes to late Dowager Duchess of Devonshire

■ Down-to-earth aristocrat was last of famous Mitford sisters

PRINCE Charles has led tributes to the Dowager Duchess of Devonshire, who has died aged 94.

The last of the famous Mitford sisters, who rubbed shoulders with Winston Churchill and John F Kennedy, was painted by Lucian Freud and who amassed a large collection of Elvis Presley memorabilia, "passed away peacefully" Wednesday morning.

The Prince of Wales spoke fondly of the Dowager Duchess and said in a statement: "My wife and I were deeply saddened to learn of the death of The Dowager Duchess of Devonshire, whom both of us adored and admired greatly.

"She was a unique personality with a wonderfully original approach to life, and a memorable turn of phrase to match that originality.

"The joy, pleasure and amusement she gave to so many, particularly through her books, as well as the contribution she made to Derbyshire throughout her time at Chatsworth, will not easily be forgotten and we shall miss her so very much."

Deborah Vivien Cavendish was the youngest member of the siblings who played a prominent role in British society in the Forties.

Born Deborah Mitford, she was one of six sisters who fascinated - and sometimes scandalised - British society in the 1940s.

Unity was a friend of Hitler; Diana, the second wife of British fascist leader Sir Oswald Mosley; Jessica, a left-wing activist, and Nancy, a novelist and historian.

But Deborah, like her

She transformed Chatsworth from a run-down country pile into one of the most successful stately homes in the country after marrying Andrew Cavendish in 1941.

Deborah spent her later years in life living in a cottage on the Chatsworth estate, where she was a much-admired figure.

three children, were deeply involved in the management and planning of the 17th century stately home and its grounds.

Her life seemed a world apart from that of her sisters, some of whom generated sensational headlines with controversial incidents.

Her sister's admiration of Hitler led to Deborah having tea with the German leader in Berlin in 1937.

She later recalled: "If you sat in a room with Churchill, you were aware of this tremendous charisma. Kennedy had it too. But Hitler didn't - not to me anyway."

Long sentence for expat Nurse with cannibal fetish

A nurse with a cannibalism fetish who fantasised about beheading and then eating a teenage girl has been jailed for nine years.

Dale Bolinger, 58, bought an axe the day before he was due to meet a girl he chatted with online.

He was found guilty in July of attempting to meet a girl under the age of 16 following sexual grooming.

During online conversations, Bolinger described sex acts he wanted to perform on her and how he would kill her.

Canterbury Crown Court heard he had online chats with someone he believed to be a 14-year-old Mexican girl called "Eva", who at other times claimed to be 16, with the name Nada.

He arranged to meet her at Ashford International railway station on 18 September 2012 but she did not turn up.

'abhorrent'

He told police he was interested in children as food and that he had a computer disc containing an image of a girl on a serving plate with an apple in her mouth.

Bolinger, formerly of Davidson Road, Canterbury, confessed to having cannibalistic thoughts from the age of six but claimed his interest was all "in

Fairy tale wedding in store for British lawyer who won George Clooney's heart

■ Showbusiness elite flock to Venice as Amal Alamuddin ties the knot with Hollywood heartthrob

THE BRITISH human rights lawyer who has won the heart of perennial bachelor George Clooney is set for a fairy-tale wedding in Venice this weekend.

Amal Alamuddin will be rubbing shoulders with the entertainment world's elite as she ties the knot with the Hollywood actor in at Ca' Farsetti, a stunning 14th century palazzo which lies a stone's throw from the famed Rialto Bridge. The wedding party will then adjourn to the neighboring Hotel Aman, the city's only seven-star hotel, for a glittering reception.

fevered speculation

The guests are expected to include Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie, Matt Damon, Cindy Crawford, Bono from U2, the opera tenor Andrea Bocelli and the singer Lana Del Rey.

The couple will be married by Walter Veltroni, a friend of 53-year-old Clooney and a former mayor of Rome, who has obtained a special license to perform the ceremony.

The Hollywood actor and director is expected to wear an Armani suit, while Ms Alamuddin will wear an Alexander McQueen wedding dress designed by Sarah Burton, who was responsible for Kate Middleton's bridal gown when she married Prince William in 2011.

legal high-flyer

Mr Clooney has lined up as his best man Rande Gerber, the husband of Cindy Crawford, while Ms Alamuddin's chief bridesmaid is expected to be her sister, Tala.

The marriage, which has been the subject of fevered speculation in the lagoon city for weeks, will present a security headache for the Venetian authorities.

The celebrities in their sleek motor launches will be escorted by police boats, an official at Venice City Council has disclosed, while other craft, including gondolas, will be barred from lingering outside the Aman, which occupies a restored canal-front palace, the Palazzo Papadopoli.

The bride was born in Lebanon in 1978 before her family settled in London a few years later at the height of the Lebanese Civil War. Educated at Dr. Challoner's High School in Buckinghamshire and then at St. Hugh's College at Oxford, Amal also studied at NYU's School of Law and clerked in the United States Court of Appeals for justice Sonia Sotomayor – who has since become a member of the US Supreme Court. Before moving to chambers in London and rapidly becoming one of Britain's top civil rights lawyers, Amal has also worked in the Office of the Prosecutor at the

He also pleaded guilty to making indecent pseudo photographs of children and seven counts of publishing an obscene article.

Psychiatrists determined that Bolinger was not suffering from any form of mental illness.

The American national, who was married for 34 years and had three children, was also made the subject of a sexual offences prevention order to stop him using the internet without permission.

Kent Police worked closely with the FBI and other law enforcement agencies in America to reveal his true identity.

After sentencing, Det Supt Tim Smith said Bolinger used a number of names to hide his identity on fetish chatrooms. His pseudonyms included "Meatmarketman".

"There is no doubt in my mind Bolinger represents a very real and great danger to the public," he said.

'Phenomenal' power of water, killed three, North Shields court hears

Three members of the same family drowned after their kayaks were swept over a weir on the River Tyne in Northumberland, a coroner has heard.

Brothers Darren Thorpe, 41, and Mark Thorpe, 39, and their cousin Gavin Bradley, 36, were paddling near Hexham in May when they got into difficulties.

An inquest in North Shields heard that on the day of the tragedy the power of the water was "phenomenal".

Coroner Eric Armstrong recorded a verdict of accidental death.

Murray: no regrets over my support for yes vote

■ But British No. 1 says tweet was 'not really in my character'
 ■ Tennis star wants to move on after receiving online abuse

Andy Murray has said he has no regrets about declaring his support for a Yes vote on the eve of the Scottish independence referendum but does have reservations about the way he did it.

The British No1 made a late intervention into the debate by posting a supportive message on Twitter just hours before the polls opened last Thursday.

The 27-year-old Scot told his followers: "Huge day for Scotland today! no campaign negativity last few days totally swayed my view on it. excited to see the outcome. lets do this!" Independence was ultimately rejected by a margin of 55% to 45%.

Asked if he had any regrets about sending the tweet, Murray told the BBC: "I don't regret giving an opinion. I think everyone should be allowed that. The way I did it, yeah, it wasn't something I would do again."

"I think it was a very emotional day for a lot of Scottish people and the whole country and the whole of the UK, it was a big day.

"The way it was worded, the way I sent it, that's not really in my character and I don't normally do stuff like that."

MURRAY: "I don't regret giving an opinion. I think everyone should be allowed that." And (below), the Tweet that prompted online abuse

Murray was subjected to online abuse after posting the message on the social media site.

Someone by the name of Harry S who tweets as @sportingharry wrote: "Wish u had been killed at Dunblane, you miserable anti-British hypocritical little git. Your life will be a misery from now on."

Murray did not have a vote as he does not live in Scotland. The 2013 Wimbledon champion had been quizzed on the issue previously but dodged the question, although in an interview in June he criticised the Scottish first minister Alex Salmond for waving the country's flag at the tournament last year.

In 2006, he courted controversy when he said he would support "anyone but England" in the World Cup.

Corrieri:

understands the serious nature of this offence."

The court earlier heard Corrieri first targeted twin sisters when they were aged 15 on Facebook.

Imran Bashir, prosecuting, said: "He originally asked the sisters to go for a walk with him.

"He sent regular messages but they stopped abruptly for about six months.

"When they turned 16 he messaged them again and they described the messages as being a lot more 'creepy' than before."

"go for it"

Corrieri told one youngster to "wear a mini skirt and tights".

He also asked one of the girls to meet him in woods and touch him inappropriately.

Corrieri met a third 13-year-old victim at an under 16s disco where he worked and later contacted her through Facebook.

He offered her a job face painting and said he would pay her £50 a day.

But later sent her sexual messages and asked about her sex life.

He repeatedly asked another 13-year-old victim what school she attended and offered to collect her.

Corrieri earlier told how loved his entertainment job but laid down strict ground rules to keep his dignity intact.

He said: "It's a different career.

"I wanted to have a laugh and I just thought, "go for it".

"I get paid to go out and party with different lads, we get a lot of attention from the ladies and I get to enjoy myself.

"I dress up for them as Superman or as an Oompa Loompa but I draw the line at dressing up as a woman - that's a no go."

His rules included no picking up or throwing, no tampering with his drink, not using the word "midget" and no police involvement.

Sentencing Corrieri, Sheriff Joyce Powrie said: "I am prepared to make a community payback order and you will be subject to supervision.

"You also have to attend the sex offenders group work programme.

"If you are not compliant then you will be in breach of this order and brought back and I think you know that there will only be one place you will be going."

Corrieri refused to comment as he left court.

Michelin star status for two Scottish restaurants

TWO top Scottish restaurants have been awarded coveted Michelin stars for the first time in the major guide renowned as the UK's "foodie bible".

The Isle of Eriska, in Argyll, and the Three Chimneys in Skye, have each received one Michelin star – joining a small group of elite restaurants singled out in the 2015 Michelin Guide.

The prestigious guide is widely considered to be the pinnacle of restaurant ratings.

While two of Scotland's most famous eateries are celebrating, another two have lost out after years of having the coveted Michelin Star.

Inverloch Castle

FAMED FOR ITS LOCAL PRODUCE: The Michelin-starred Three Chimneys in Skye

Hotel, near Fort William, is a favourite haunt of royalty, celebrities and leading politicians.

But the loss of a star will come as a major blow for the luxury Highland hotel, which has been in the guide continuously from 1998 and for two earlier spells, between 1994-1996 and 1982-1990.

It is joined by Glenapp Castle at Ballantrae in South Ayrshire in losing their one-star status.

The Three Chimneys made headlines a few years ago when it turned away Madonna's repeated efforts to book a table for dinner.

The singer had heard rave reviews about the place from her friend Stella McCartney...but reckoned without the restaurant's strictly-enforced three month waiting list for a table.

Elsewhere in Scotland, Andrew Fairlie at Gleneagles retained its two stars, making it the best-rated restaurant north of the border.

Thirteen other fine dining establishments across Scotland retained their coveted one star, with five one-starred restaurants in Edinburgh alone.

Take as much leave as you want, Branson tells staff

The boss of Virgin Group, Sir Richard Branson, is offering his personal staff as much holiday as they want.

On his website, he said that his staff of 170 could "take off whenever they want for as long as they want".

He added that there was no need to ask for approval, nor say when they planned to return, the assumption being that the absence would not damage the firm.

Mr Branson said he was inspired by his daughter, who read about a similar plan at the online TV firm Netflix.

"It is left to the employee alone to decide if and when he or she feels like taking a few hours, a day, a week or a month off," wrote the billionaire.

"The assumption being that they are only going to do it when they feel 100% comfortable that they and their team are up to date on every project and that their absence will not in any way damage the business - or, for that matter, their careers!"

He added that he had introduced the policy in the UK and the US "where vacation policies can be particularly draconian". If it goes well there, Mr Branson said he would encourage subsidiaries to follow suit.

"We should focus on

Branson described vacation policies in the US as 'particularly draconian' what people get done, not on how many hours or days worked. Just as we don't have a nine-to-five policy, we don't need a vacation policy," he wrote.

The blog is an excerpt from a forthcoming book.

Virgin Group employs more than 50,000 people around the world and operates in more than 50 countries.

Mr Branson started the company in 1970 and it has gone from a mail order record company to having businesses in telecoms, travel and financial services.

Travis is the third celebrity to be convicted as a result of Operation Yewtree, the investigation set up after claims of sexual abuse by Jimmy Savile.

The ex-Top of the Pops presenter, from Aylesbury in Buckinghamshire, stared straight ahead stone-faced as the verdicts were read out this afternoon.

'definitely deliberate'

He was found guilty of groping a woman who was working on the spoof chat show the Mrs Merton Show when he was a guest on it during the 1990s.

Travis cornered the victim while she was smoking backstage at the BBC studios in Manchester.

He stroked her rib cage and squeezed her breasts for up to 15 seconds before she escaped his clutches.

She gave evidence at the two-week trial where she said Travis had "pinned" her against a wall after saying:

"Oh you shouldn't be smoking, think about what it is doing to your poor little lungs."

She said: "He started touching me. He started touching from the bottom of my rib cage and without saying anything else slid his hands up, rising over my breasts and left them there and started squeezing them [breasts]."

She continued: "I didn't go to the police but I was confident enough I thought well, if I'm challenged on this I could stand up and defend it because he definitely did it."

"It was definitely deliberate. He held on to my breasts for a very long time and he was staring at me while he did it. "He had some weird sexual thrill from this and felt really like I had been punched, it was a feeling of being violated."

Judge Anthony Leonard QC warned Travis he would consider "all options" including a jail term when he considered his sentence.

The defence's Sophie Wood told the court they would seek a non custodial sentence.

She said: "It's the defence position that a pre-sentence report would assist."

Travis, who was wearing dark grey trousers and a light grey blazer, left court accompanied by his wife Marianne.

Sunday, October 5th sees the welcome return of the long-running Inspector Lewis series to PBS television's popular Masterpiece Mystery!

Kevin Whately and Laurence Fox are back in a seventh mini-season of the beloved British police procedural, featuring three murder mysteries set among the idyllic spires of Oxford.

The season opens at 9pm on October 5th with an episode titled "Entry Wounds", as we see Lewis adjusting to retired life until he's asked to team up with his old colleague, Hathaway, newly promoted to Inspector after an extended break from the force. Their first case back together is a complicated one that bridges the worlds of neurosurgery, blood sports and animal rights.

The following Sunday (October 12th at 9pm), features an episode entitled "The Lions of Nemea", in which the pair's abilities are tested as they investigate the brutal murder of Rose, an American Classics student. Suspicion immediately falls on a young professor who had recently broken off an affair with her, but as the detectives delve further into the case, they only find more secrets and murky motives.

Beyond Good and Evil" (October 19 at 9pm) sees Lewis revisiting his first successful arrest as a Detective Inspector, thirteen years on, as new forensic science calls into question a conviction, leading to the case being re-opened for appeal. Lewis fears the worst - but nothing can prepare him for a new string of murders resembling the original murders with the original weapon.

The Inspector Lewis series began as a 2007 spin-off from the wildly successful and long-running Inspector Morse series, starring John Thaw, which ran from 1987 to 2000 and which saw Whately playing second banana to the opera-loving Morse.

Brits in LA

Meet a Member: Jane Owen

Meet Jane Owen (pictured, right) from Dorset, England who moved to LA 12 years ago to pursue Public Relations

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I had been to Los Angeles when I was seventeen on a trip around the States before I started University in London. I loved everything about Los Angeles from the weather (obviously) to the Hollywood History that seemed to be on every Palm Tree lined street! I've always loved the movie industry and the glitz and glamour of the red carpets and the beautiful movie stars. As a child I had a poster of the Hollywood sign on my bedroom wall.

What one thing do you miss from home?

I miss many things, like the smell of wet grass, proper tea (it's the water), British comedy, proper sausages.... but none more than my Family.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Dorset?

I lived in a few different places throughout my life including Athens, Greece where I went to the British Embassy School. I also lived in Northumberland in the UK. However I'm going to pick my father's home in Dorset for this comparison. I would say that the biggest difference between Los Angeles and Dorset, apart from the weather, is the focus of the people, Los Angeles is full of wonderful people but we are all very much driven by our ambitions and our work, people in Dorset for the most part are more focused on having a good walk and keeping the garden.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

There's an amazing sushi place on the corner of Olympic and La Cienega called Momo Momo Sushi. It's nothing fancy, but it's cheap as chips and its got the freshest, best sushi I've ever had. Also, although its not really hidden, but I strongly recommend the Terrace at the Sunset Tower, it has a spectacular view, delicious food and the best Maitre d' in the world, Dimitri who I am proud to call my friend.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

I would suggest that you take your time to choose where to live. Los Angeles is more like a collection of smaller cities, each with it's completely distinct personality. Where you live will define a huge part of your experience of living here, there is an area suited for everyone. I strongly recommend, if you can, taking somewhere temporarily and visiting each area before choosing where to settle. In addition I would make an effort to meet people as quickly as possible, the Brits In LA Breakfast at Cecconi's on Tuesdays for example is a great place to go, because friends will make all the difference to your life in LA, as anywhere I guess, but I believe very much so here.

Solution to Puzzle #132

SUDOKU by Myles Mellor and Susan Flanagan

Each Sudoku puzzle consists of a 9X9 grid that has been subdivided into nine smaller grids of 3X3 squares. To solve the puzzle each row, column and box must contain each of the numbers 1 to 9. Puzzles come in three grades: easy, medium and difficult.

Level: Medium

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: In any life situation please keep a close eye on a family member as they could cause some kind of commotion. Avoid disagreements and remain calm. Your ruler is slowing life down this month.

TAURUS: Your priority should be taking care of YOU in any area that requires attention. Your ruler Venus is visiting your opposite sign Scorpio, looking at everything you have done or not done in the last few months.

GEMINI: You may feel you need to make a move in a direction that you have been avoiding. However even if you are not sure what the reaction or result, this is the time to do it; your ruler in Scorpio is impatient.

CANCER: You will have to be aware this next week to not speak out of turn or harshly to anyone or the consequences might be dire sometime down the road. Keep a cool, calm attitude

LEO: There is a time to listen to that inner voice that has been saying you are not participating in life as you know you can. Be sure you are listening with your "inner" ear.

VIRGO: Just make sure you have caught up with whatever is unfinished and then make the plans you are ready to make. This month is best as next month is busier in many more areas for you.

LIBRA: The planet of Karma, Saturn, has been sitting in your money house for two years or more and he is getting geared up to move out soon. With this in mind take action wherever you know you need to. Have a grand Happy Birthday!

SCORPIO: You have been in search of a more peace-filled existence for some time now. This has been difficult in a lot of ways. Be calm and positive in thought and deed and life will be much better from now on. Saturn is moving out of your life – leaving rewards long overdue.

SAGITTARIUS: You could be feeling a bit moody or out of sorts due to Jupiter moving in your area of deep feelings. Know that what you reap is what you sow and this would be a good time to start thinking positive in all areas of life.

CAPRICORN: Your financial situation is still not what you want, however in order to achieve a positive flow you have to assume it is already here. This means to not act or think in lack of anything in life.

AQUARIUS: A family member will likely ask for help these next few days. How you handle this situation will decide if they come back for more. It's your decision if you decide to help them out.

PISCES: Stop that feeling sorry for yourself as this will not change any time soon and if you waste time nothing can get it back. Life is to be enjoyed so go for it and know that your boss Neptune in your life now will bring many Karmic rewards.

The Spanish Armada: far from plain sailing...

■ Exclusive interview with author Robert Hutchinson and his book that reads like a novel about the failure of the Spanish Armada
Rating: ★★★★★

"The Spanish Armada campaign was the first conflict fought using the kind of espionage and propaganda techniques we would recognize today in the 21st century," says The Spanish Armada author Robert Hutchinson. "The English fleet did not defeat the Spanish. Only four Armada ships were lost as a result of combat. The Royal Navy was hampered by a lack of gunpowder and munitions by a tight-fisted queen throughout the running fight up the English Channel. Instead, the Armada was defeated by terrible weather, unrealistic planning and logistics, poor tactics and just plain bad luck."

Hutchinson excels at describing military campaigns. There's ambition, drama, military maneuvers and humor. You are right in the action throughout the whole book. Hutchinson uses eyewitness accounts and papers from the National Archives of both England and Spain. There are many accounts of how the Spanish lost the battle and ultimately the war, but this book sheds new light on how ill-prepared the British were for this fight.

In October 1585 King Philip II of Spain, Elizabeth's former brother-in-law, declared he will destroy Protestant England. He began preparing to invade England. Elizabeth I, crowned Queen of England in 1558, put the country once again in religious turmoil by making it a Protestant country. The Catholic countries, especially Spain, became hostile towards England.

"The most surprising thing that happened while writing this book was the realization that Elizabeth I really had only one card to play, the 38 ships of her Royal Navy," says Hutchinson. "No wonder she vetoed plans for them to be stationed off the Spanish coast to fight the Armada as it departed its home ports. She would have lost everything if they had suffered a defeat. Queen Elizabeth did not have a standing army to defend her shores." Elizabeth would have to rely on the militia.

Almost half Elizabeth's subjects were Catholic. "Her ministers and King Philip of Spain firmly believed they would rise up in support of the Spanish invaders," says Hutchinson. "In the event, they did not and we see the first signs of English patriotism and a sense of national identity emerge after the Armada was chased away."

Besides The Spanish Armada and Elizabeth's Spymaster (a fascinating account of Tudor espionage pioneered by leading courtier, Francis Walsingham), Hutchinson has also written The Last Days of Henry VIII; Young Henry, Thomas Cromwell and House of Treason (the story of the Tudor dukes of Norfolk). He just completed the manuscript of The Atrocious Crimes of Colonel Blood, to be published in the United Kingdom in April 2015. This is the thrilling story of a seventeenth-century Irish adventurer who stole the Crown Jewels and was involved in innumerable attempts to assassinate King Charles II, before becoming a double agent and a spy for the king.

Hutchinson says his goal is making history accessible to a wider audience. "English history is so dramatic. A Hollywood scriptwriter could not dream up more compelling drama than the twists and turns of true history. It's also so entertaining with great characters, good or evil, and strong story lines. One reviewer wrote that she could not believe that she was kept up to 2am reading my biography of Thomas Cromwell."

BY

Hutchinson lives in a sixteenth century thatched house in the countryside near Arundel, West Sussex with his wife.

Good theatre and good neighbors....

Thank goodness that heatwave seems to have almost passed - even though I have lived here 18 years I don't think I have ever experienced temperatures like that in LA before. I'm sure it is lovely if you are on vacation, but no fun at all if you have stuff to do. I tried to be good with electricity, as I know from the past that power outages occur when everyone cranks up the air conditioning on the same grid - but even so, I didn't escape and had a blackout for at least six hours.

Fortunately I had saved the DWP phone number to my address book - a good tip for you all as there is no chance of looking it up on the internet. Your provider could be Edison or DWP so check your bill then save their emergency number.

The temporary dark cloud had a silver lining - as I met one of my neighbors who turned out to be absolutely lovely.

Yvette who is 89 has lived on the street for approximately 60 years but for one reason or another we had never met. The lack of electricity set her burglar alarm off and in a panic she pressed the emergency button - the local fireman came up to her rescue but of course there was nothing they could do. I happened to be outside when they arrived and they asked me if I knew Yvette; to which I replied no. Poor Yvette, was scared and alone and had no family or friends locally, so city protocol dictates that her only option was to be transported to hospital if she wasn't comfortable in the darkness. Sorry if this seems a little long-winded - but the outcome was that we all made sure she was okay. She didn't have to get carted off to hospital unnecessarily as I said I would keep an eye on here: and we both made a new friend to boot! The point of this story is to remind us all to get to know our neighbors - I just assumed the 'elderly lady across the street' had plenty of friends and now feel slightly ashamed that I never bothered to check.

"Neighbors" is a bit of a theme this week as

fortunately for England our friends to the north opted to stay part of the United Kingdom. I do ultimately believe we are all "better together" but on the other side, think that every country should be independently run. Perhaps even every American state should consider going solo... however, the world is quite chaotic at the moment so I think it is probably wise for all to stay united until everything settles down.

I hear there may be another referendum in New Zealand in 2015: it must be contagious!

I am sure it isn't the first time we have said it but there is some great theatre to be had in LA. It wasn't always the case but now it is time to put that image to bed. I have seen some fantastic performances over the last few months. At the top of my list has to be Erin Gavin as Marilyn Monroe in "Marilyn My Secret" which has sadly to come to the end of its run - however watch this space as it gets revived every now and then. Was also delighted to hear that Noel Coward's 'The Vortex' will be coming to Hollywood - however they need your help to make this happen. Since website links don't translate great into print, please visit our Brits in LA column on our website - www.british-weekly.com - to show you how to donate.

If you can help - not only are you supporting the arts, but you are also showing your love to Brits in LA founder, Craig Bobby Young, who is the star of the show.

BACK BY POPULAR DEMAND: BiLA's very own Craig Young (above) will be appearing in The Vortex in Hollywood, while (below) our annual Hallowe'en party is not far away...

DEAD BRITISH

Goodbye Marilyn was another play I got to see recently - it runs through mid October and is written and directed by last week's featured Meet A Member, Michael Phillips! Sundays are 'pay what you can' so if whether it is a penny or $100 that you have to spare you will be welcomed with open arms.

We have our Dead British Halloween party on October 31st - tickets go on sale this week so make sure to grab yours whilst you can. If you miss out you'll be...erm...dead sorry.

Have a great week!

Cheers!

TV host Terri has baby on the way!

Expat celeb Terri Seymour will soon have an extra special someone in her life.

The Extra host is expecting a baby with her boyfriend of three years, British model Clark Mallon, she announced earlier this week.

"I'm extremely excited and really happy to say I'm pregnant," Seymour, who is four months along, told Extra. "Clark and I are going to be a mummy and daddy."

And one of the first to jump on board the congratulation bandwagon was ex-boyfriend and close pal, Simon Cowell.

After only becoming a father himself this year, The X Factor judge knows only too well how exciting the news is for his former flame.

However, Lauren Silverman's man couldn't help but make the exciting baby news all about him. Naturally.

Simon tweeted: "Congratulations @TerriSeymour and Clark. Me and Lauren are very excited for you both. If it's a boy you can call him Simon."

All things considered, that name might be a bit weird though, dontchafink?

The couple - who will likely find out the baby's sex soon - will welcome their first child next year. And although it's all finally "sinking in now ... in a good way," Mallon says, the pair were shocked when they received the news.

Congrats, to Terri and Clark ... You are an awesome couple and your baby will be gorgeous!

Allardyce fears United backlash

West Ham United manager Sam Allardyce fears his side could be on the receiving end of a Manchester United backlash at Old Trafford on Saturday.

Liverpool face FFP probe

Liverpool are one of seven clubs being investigated for possible Financial Fair Play breaches, Uefa has confirmed.

Manchester City and Paris St-Germain were fined in May and had a limit put on their spending and squad size after breaking FFP rules.

A Uefa statement read: "The Club Financial Control Body has opened formal investigations into seven clubs as they disclosed a break-even deficit on the basis of their down about that performance," said Allardyce (right). "But they'll be really fired up to make sure that they try and perform like they did against QPR and beat us."

Last season West Ham went down 3-1 at Old Trafford before losing 2-0 at home, with Wayne Rooney scoring both goals, the first a brilliant lob from just inside the Hammers' half. Allardyce knows the likes of Rooney, Radamel Falcao and Angel Di Maria will be desperate to atone last weekend's defeat when United lost after squandering a 3-1 lead to newly-promoted Leicester.

Asked if it was a good time to face Van Gaal's side, the Hammers boss added: "No. I'm thinking a backlash.

"They will be hurting the field and punish us and they know the only way they can put that right is to get out on to the field and punish us for it. "We will have to be careful about that."

American investment company Cain Hoy has said it is no longer considering making an offer to buy Tottenham. In September, the firm confirmed it was in the early stages of assessing an offer for the Premier League club. But in a statement issued to the London Stock Exchange, the company said it had "terminated" its interest in a takeover bid and was "no longer considering making an offer".

Let battle commence!

■ Defending champions Europe slightly favored as Ryder Cup opens at Gleneagles

ONE OF SPORT's most enthralling spectacles will take place this weekend as the United States and Europe again do battle in golf's Ryder Cup.

The defending champions and hosts will start start as favourites to extend a remarkable winning streak against the United States, having won seven of the last nine matchplay contests following a spectacular comeback at Medinah two years ago, while the USA are chasing a first away win since 1993.

Captain Paul McGinley's team contains world number one Rory McIlroy and the hero of that fightback in Chicago, Ian Poulter.

The USA, captained by golf icon Tom Watson, are without Tiger Woods and a number of other top stars but, with an average world ranking of 16 compared to Europe's 19, will present a formidable challenge in the biennial event.

"Just as Scotland is the heart and soul of the game of golf, so the Ryder Cup is the pinnacle of team play in the sport," said 65-year-old Watson, an eight-time major champion and the captain of the victorious US team in 1993.

"You might say the next 72 hours are a date with destiny for the 24 players. In many ways, this is their own crowning moment."

Two years ago, Europe were staring at a heavy deficit going into the final 12 singles matches before Poulter, playing alongside McIlroy, birdied the last five holes of his Saturday fourball round for victory.

The Englishman's charge gave Europe "a pulse", as he put it, but they still trailed 10-6 before winning eight singles matches to retain the trophy on a thrilling final day.

Watson has spoken this week of how his team are seeking "redemption" for Medinah, and said they will be looking to "target" Europe's talisman.

Poulter has struggled for form this season and needed a captain's wildcard pick to make the side, but, as Europe's leading points scorer in the last three Ryder Cups and with a win ratio of 80%, he is likely once again to prove a thorn in the US side.

Northern Irishman McIlroy has surged back to the top of the world rankings after a spectacular summer in which he won the Open and US PGA to take his tally to four majors.

"They can try and target us all they want, but there's guys alongside us that can do just as good a job," said McIlroy, 25, who was delighted to hear the inspirational words from former Manchester

United boss Sir Alex Ferguson at Gleneagles earlier this week.

"We're slight favourites for a reason. We deserve to be. We've played well this year. It's not something that we should shy away from. It's something that we should embrace."

Spain's Sergio Garcia, the world number three, makes his seventh Ryder Cup appearance in an experienced side which also includes England's former US Open champion Justin Rose, Germany's two-time major champion Martin Kaymer, Northern Ireland's 2010 US Open winner Graeme McDowell, eight-time Cup veteran Lee Westwood of England and Dane Thomas Bjorn. Europe also have three Ryder Cup rookies on their team - Scotland's Stephen Gallacher, Wales' Jamie Donaldson and Frenchman Victor Dubuisson.

"We may come from diverse and different cultural backgrounds but together we stand as one," said McGinley in his opening ceremony speech.

For the US, former world number one and 14-time major champion Woods is out with a back injury, while the big-hitting

Johnson is on a break from the game and former US

PGA champion Jason Dustin Dufner is also injured.
