UKIP: ARE THEY UNSTOPPABLE?

- Insurgent party sweeps to second straight by-election win
- Party 'now the third force' in British politics, says Farage

The UK Independence Party continued to upend the British political establishment on Thursday, securing its second elected MP at Westminster after Mark Reckless won the Rochester and Strood by-election by 2,920 votes.

Mr Reckless received 16,867 votes to the Conservative candidate Kelly Tolhurst's 13,947, with Labour's Naushabah Khan third on 6,713.

Turnout was 50.67% in the contest, which was triggered by Mr Reckless's defection to UKIP from the Tories.

Mr Reckless said: "If UKIP can win here, we can win across the country."

In his acceptance speech, Mr Reckless said Rochester and Strood had been UKIP's 271st most winnable seat.

In a message to his constituents, he said: "You remain my boss, do not let me forget it."

Conservative Party Chairman Grant Shapps said he was disappointed with the result but said there were "different circumstances" in a by-election.

"We will fight every single day to win this seat back," he added.

UKIP also beat the Conservatives at last month's Clacton by-election.

The result will further damage the authority of David Cameron, who waged a desperate personal battle to save the seat, visiting it five times in five weeks in a futile attempt to swing it for his candidate, Kelly Tolhurst.

Counting in a large gym in Medway Park, Gillingham continued into the early hours of the morning, with the final result announced just after 4am.

It was also a terrible night for the Liberal Democrats. Party candidate Geoff Juby scraped up just 349 votes - the lowest-ever for the party in a by-election and the lowest too by a party which was in Government.

The LibDems' vote share collapsed by 95 per cent since 2010, from 16.3 per cent to just 0.9 per cent of the vote.

In his victory speech Mr Reckless said: "It is not Ed Miliband but Ukip that represents the concerns of most working men and women.

"As we savour victory, think of this: Rochester and Strood was our 271st most winnable seat. If we can win here we can win across the country."

Mr Reckless said he wanted to see a "block of Ukip MPs at Westminster large enough to hold the balance of power".

Arriving at the count Ukip leader Nigel Farage proclaimed that his party was now the third force in British politics.

He said: "Nick Clegg said he wanted to have a proper three party system in British politics and I suspect that given the LibDems are now on 1 per cent it is three party politics – without the LibDems."

Senior Tories are now braced for more MPs to choose to join Ukip ahead of the election. Mr Reckless has said he has held secret talks in recent weeks with two Tories about joining Mr Farage's party.

Before the vote Mr Farage told reporters that Ukip was overturning the political order in England in the same way as the Scottish National Party has done in Scotland. "We have seen other parts of the United Kingdom where very big political change has happened in the course of the last 20 years, and now it is the turn of England and Wales."

Labour MP quits over Rochester tweet

Senior Labour MP Emily Thornberry has resigned from Ed Miliband's shadow cabinet after being accused of 'snobbery' for tweeting a picture of a house decked in two St George's flags.

The shadow attorney general, who represents Islington South and Finsbury, initially defended having taken the picture while out campaigning in the Rochester and Strood byelection, before apologising if there was any offence caused.

However, within hours, she had stepped down from her role in Labour's top team, after party sources made clear Miliband was furious about the tweet.

'liberal elite'

The media managed to track down the owner of the house and the row was set to create a media furore on the day after the Rochester byelection, at which Nigel Farage's populist insurgents Ukip again triumphed over the Conservatives and the other established political parties.

Thornberry's publication of the picture, which showed a semi-detached house draped in two flags and a white van outside, was criticised by her political rivals but also some within her own party.

Simon Danczuk, Labour MP for Rochdale, suggested it was "derogatory and dismissive of the people". He told the Mail Online it was "like the Labour party has been hijacked by the north London liberal elite and it's comments like that which reinforce that view".

On Twitter, the Ukip leader Nigel Farage said Thornberry had "let Miliband's mask slip" and questioned what she was trying to imply about the area by tweeting the picture of the flag-decked house.

After the first burst of outrage, Thornberry said her critics may have been showing "a somewhat prejudiced attitude towards Islington".

She added: "I've been down in Rochester ... and I've been tweeting one or two quotes that, what people have said to me on the doorstep, and images that I've seen ... and then I came across a house that was covered absolutely from the roof all the way down to the ground with England flags, they couldn't even see out of the window. It was an amazing image so I took a photograph of it and I put it on Twitter."

The Labour MP said she thought there was "a lot of mischief making" going on.

'council estate'

"You know I think the truth is, while the by-election's going on people haven't got a lot to say," she added. "They can say there's people out on doorsteps knocking on doors. And I suspect that those kind of people are trying to promote a somewhat prejudiced attitude towards Islington."

"I was brought up on a council estate and I've never seen a house where people can't see out of the window because of England flags. It was just trying to give, to the people who follow me on Twitter, a kind of picture of what the Rochester by-election is like."

She subsequently tweeted an apology, after receiving a dressing-down from Miliband, for "any offence caused" saying: "People should fly the England flag with pride!"

Just after the polls had closed in Rochester at 10pm, it emerged Thornberry had resigned.

THORNBERRY: blamed 'anti-Islington' prejudice for the fuss

SO NOW YOU KNOW: Tweeting pictures of white vans and the flag of St. George is "derogatory and dismissive of the people"

In a statement released by the party, Thornberry said: "Earlier today I sent a tweet which has caused offence to some people."

"That was never my intention and I have apologised. However I will not let anything distract from Labour's chance to win the coming general election."

"I have therefore tonight told Ed Miliband I will resign from the shadow cabinet."

Blades in sharp U-turn over rapist footballer

■ Sheffield United reverse decision to allow Ched Evans to train at Bramall Lane

In a dramatic change of heart, Sheffield United has REVERSED a controversial decision to allow convicted rapist Ched Evans to train at its ground.

The former Sheffield United forward, who had been allowed to train with the club, was found guilty of raping a 19-year-old girl in a hotel room back in 2011.

Three planned Remembrance beheading

Three men arrested three days before Remembrance Sunday had planned to behead a member of public in the UK, a court has been told.

Nadir Ali Sayed, 21, from Hounslow, 19-year-old Yousaf Shah Syed, from High Wycombe, and Haseeb Hamayoon, aged 27, from Hayes, West London, appeared before Westminster magistrates on Thursday afternoon.

They are each "charged with the intention of committing acts of terrorism, or engaged in conduction or preparation of terrorism, contrary to section 5 of the terrorism act".

They were remanded in custody in a 25-minute hearing to appear next at the Old Bailey on 4 December.

None of them made an application for bail.

A fourth man, arrested in Uxbridge, was released on 15 November with no further action.

The 25-year-old is trying to return to the game, to the outrage of many inside and outside of football.

The club had stuck by Evans despite mounting criticism.

But following a string of high profile resignations by club patrons like athlete Jessica Ennis and Beautiful South singer Paul Heaton, the club has changed its mind.

'right direction'

The move has already been welcomed by Deputy Prime Minister Nick Clegg, who had been critical of the decision to allow Evans to train.

Writing on his Twitter profile, Mr Clegg described it as 'a step in the right direction'.

In a lengthy statement posted on the club website on Thursday, a spokesman claimed the reaction to the original ruling 'has been at an intensity that could not have been anticipated when first announced'.

Following 'dispassionate' consultation with supports, staff, sponsors and others, the club will no longer allow Evans back for training.

The statement said: "After ongoing and extensive deliberation, Sheffield United Football Club has decided to retract the opportunity for its former player, Ched Evans, to use the club's facilities for training purposes, as was previously intended.

"We recognise that a number of our supporters will be disappointed with this decision, but would ask that they remember the responsibilities we have not only to a fine and proud Club, whose history stretches back over 125 years, but also to the communities in which Sheffield United is active and to the City we represent.

"The Club initially accepted a request from The PFA for Ched Evans to be able to train. The reaction to this has been at an intensity that could not have been anticipated when first announced.

'inaccurate reporting'

"Members of the Board have consulted dispassionately with the Club's supporters, Vice Presidents, Community Foundation members, executives, staff, sponsors and other relevant stakeholders in order to help it reach this decision.

"Also, the Club has been diligent in communicating with The Football Association, The Football League, The Professional Footballers' Association (The PFA), The Football Association of Wales and The National Probation Service to take further soundings.

"As noted in previous statements from the Club, the legal system of this country provides for both the punishment and the rehabilitation of every person who has been found guilty of a crime.

"Sheffield United will not be used to promote the view that professional footballers should be treated differently, as has been the want of certain sections of the media and various commentators.

"In addition, we remain disappointed at some of the inaccurate reporting, misinformed views and commentary, as well as the actions of a minority of individuals on social media. Professional footballers must be treated as equals before the law.

"The club condemns rape and violence of any kind against women in the strongest possible terms.

"The club is aware that Ched Evans is pursuing legal recourse via the Criminal Cases Review Commission in the determination he has to clear his name.

"We trust that he will be afforded a fair hearing.

"The club will not be making any further comment on this issue."

Evans has yet to respond to the new decision.

Africa to Bob: stop already

■ Band Aid backlash after Geldof blasts Adele
■ Africans condemn 'condescending' song title

SIR BOB GELDOLF was allowed to bask in the limelight for just a day or two this week after corralling the cream of new British musical talent to help fight Ebola with a new recording of his 1984 classic Do They Know It's Christmas?

But then the backlash began.

First Sir Bob was pilloried for criticizing British singer Adele for not participating. Then, in perhaps the most painful blow for the musician, he came under fire from across Africa for both the lyrics of the new song and for his seemingly outdated 'one size fits all' approach to the varied and diverse continent.

"shocked and appalled"

Perhaps the most stinging criticism came from a pro-Africa website and a London-born, Ghanaian-raised singer who had originally signed on to participate in the project. The musician, Fuse ODG, told the Daily Telegraph he withdrew because he was "shocked and appalled" by the song's lyrics.

It is also far from a hit across the continent it is sung for, if iTunes chart figures are any guide.

Do They Know It's Christmas sold over 250,000 copies in its first three days in the United Kingdom and the country's official charts company predicts it will top the singles chart.

It is set to raise funds worldwide too, already making No.1 on the iTunes singles chart in the UK, Australia, New Zealand, Germany, Denmark, Sweden, the Netherlands and Canada and No.8 in the United States.

'million times better'

But the song has created less excitement in Africa, sitting at No.3 in South Africa, No.8 in Ghana, No.15 in Kenya, No.18 in Egypt, No.26 in Uganda and No.31 in Nigeria. Ebola-affected nations Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea do not have iTunes music charts.

Leading African website thisisafrica.me published two items opposing the song, one a biting "open letter to Geldof and Band Aid artists" from "a reader".

Thisisafrica is run from South Africa and Kenya and is "a forum for Africans, by Africans, to reclaim our identity ... heritage and our continent's rightful political, economic and cultural position..."

"Do Africans know it's Christmas? Could you be more condescending?" the reader wrote.

"Most Africans are black and can sing songs themselves," the letter continued, and added: "There is already an Ebola song produced in Africa by Africans which is a million times better than your song you probably didn't know that because you don't really know anything about Africa do you?"

"selfish goal"

The song is called Africa Stop Ebola and is sung by Tiken Jah Fakoly, Amadou & Mariam, Salif Keita, Oumou Sangare.

The reader reserved the harshest criticism for the Do They Know It's Christmas video clip: "Have you no shame? You use a dying (or dead) woman as the opening scene to your music video?

TOO MUCH OF A GOOD THING? Musicians Midge Ure (left) and Bob Geldof attend the recording of the Band Aid 30 charity single in west London on Saturday

"That is somebody's child; that is somebody's mother, somebody's provider, but you have used her as an object to fulfil your selfish goal of bringing attention to yourself."

The website also ran an editorial which pleaded: "Stop already, Sir Bob, and tell Bono to stop with you while you're at it."

Fuse ODG, whose real name is Nana Richard Abiona was approached by Geldof to sing on Do

They Know It's Christmas.

He was "honoured to be asked" and initially agreed to appear - alongside stars including One Direction and Ed Sheeran - but dropped out days before recording because he felt the reworked lyrics incorrectly portrayed Africa.

Fuse was especially troubled by the new lines "where a kiss of love can kill you and there's death in every tear" and "there's no peace and joy in west Africa this Christmas".

"For the past four years I have gone to Ghana at Christmas for the sole purpose of peace and joy," he wrote in an article for British newspaper The Guardian. "So for me to sing these lyrics would simply be a lie."

"I, like many others, am sick of the whole concept of Africa - a resource-rich continent with unbridled potential - always being seen as diseased, infested and poverty-stricken."

'Pickup artist' denied entry to UK

A CONTROVERISAL 'Pick-up artist' named Julien Blanc is to be stopped from entering the UK after more than 150,000 people signed a petition demanding that the UK deny him a visa.

The American's dating seminars, which encourage what campaigners say is abusive behaviour towards women, have sparked international criticism.

The petition says: "To allow this man into the UK legitimises sexual assault and predation, and sends a message that women are playthings or objects without agency."

The 25-year-old instructor, who charges more than £1,000 for sessions, promises to teach men how to manipulate women.

Mr Blanc's website, called Pimping My Game, says that he can teach "emotionally scarring" and "evil" techniques to help men persuade women to have sex with them against their better judgement.

A Canadian woman told Sky News she was verbally abused by Mr Blanc after they were matched on the dating app Tinder.

The woman we are calling "Angie" said the pick-up artist got angry when she stopped chatting with him shortly after he asked her to have sex with him.

"He sent me a pretty nasty message saying I should be thankful he was even talking to me and calling me a whore," she said.

"I would have been in a horrible situation had I actually met up with him..."

Mr Blanc was believed to be planning a series of events in the UK for February.

But the ban drew criticism from one commentator on British television this week - Martin Daubney, former editor of the controversial "lad mag" Loaded.

Speaking on Sky News, Daubney said: "Why not get him into the country and expose him as the moron he is? Don't make a martyr of a moron."

Father-in-law forged signature on 'horrific' pub lease, Gordon Ramsay tells London court

■ Top Chef may be on the hook for £640k annual rent till 2033

Gordon Ramsay has told a court of his "shock and horror" after discovering his father-in-law used a automated signature machine to forge his signature for a deal to rent a pub.

The 'Ghostwriter' machine, which is a favorite tool of authors and celebrities who wish to sign books or pictures without the bother of actually putting pen to paper, was allegedly used without Ramsay's knowledge to sign him up for the £640,000-a-year annual rent for the York and Albany in north London.

The celebrity chef is seeking a declaration that the guarantee does not bind him because his signature "was not lawfully authorized" when the 25-year lease was signed in 2007.

He says for a number of years he worked with his wife Tana's father Christopher Hutcheson, who acted as his business manager for his group of companies.

Ramsay told Chancery judge Mr Justice Morgan his "deep and extensive trust in Hutcheson was entirely misplaced" and his father-in-law defrauded him and the group "of hundreds of thousands of pounds".

SUE CHEF? Gordon Ramsay and father in law Christopher Hutcheson in happier days

In October 2010, Mr Hutcheson was "summarily dismissed from the group".

Ramsay told the High Court judge that discovering the existence of the lease guarantee was "a shock - a devastation".

He said: "The company is still in the hook for the lease, and what was devastating for my wife and I was that we were guaranteeing it until 2033."

He added: "There were many horrific discoveries because I can recognise my signature and pinpoint one forged by machine."

The judge was told a key issue in the case was whether Mr Hutcheson was authorised to use a ghostwriter machine which he had obtained and which was used to sign Ramsay's name on the personal guarantee.

Film director Gary Love, who owns the York and Albany, has described Ramsay's claim as an "absurd" attempt to wriggle out of his rental commitments.

Mr Love is opposing Ramsay's application for a declaration that he is not bound by the guarantee.

During the hearing, Ramsay will give evidence he had agreed to the use of the ghostwriter, which electronically replicates a signature using a fountain pen or ballpoint.

But he had done so "for purposes of merchandising material only".

to TripAdvisor to share their experience.

The couple later found their credit card had been charged £100, with the hotel stating its policy was to charge for "bad" reviews.

The policy, included in a booking document, reportedly says: "Despite the fact that repeat customers and couples love our hotel, your friends and family may not. For every bad review left on any website, the group organiser will be charged a maximum £100 per review".

But Blackpool Council has now said it has reached an arrangement with the hotel, which will refund the couple's money and scrap the policy.

COURT DATE: Gordon and Tana Ramsay arrive at the High Court this week

However, Mr Hutcheson had "used the ghostwriter far more widely than that, using it to sign various contracts in (Ramsay's) name". Ramsay maintains Mr Hutcheson also used it to sign the York and Albany personal guarantee or loan, even though the chef had not authorised anyone to sign it on his behalf.

The case continues.

Obesity 'bigger threat to UK than terrorism'

Britain is being urged to take immediate action after a new study revealed that obesity is a greater burden on the country than armed violence, war and terrorism.

The study, conducted by the McKinsey Global Institute (MGI), said the UK's "obesity crisis" costs almost £47bn every year.

It comes second only to the £57bn annual toll smoking takes on the economy, it found.

"The global economic impact of obesity is increasing," the study said.

"Today obesity is jostling with armed conflict and smoking in terms of having the greatest human-generated global economic impact."

Estimates on the total annual loss attributed to armed violence, war and terrorism reach £43bn.

The study blamed the growing crisis on an inadequate response from the Government, branding its policy on

HEAVY TOLL: Obesity costs the British taxpayer £47bn annually, new figures reveal obesity as "too fragmented to be effective".

It also warned that investment in obesity prevention was "relatively low given the scale of the problem".

The MGI insists an urgent "co-ordinated response" is needed from the Government, retailers, restaurants and food and drink manufacturers to tackle the issue, recommending a series of new measures.

They include portion controls on fast food packaged goods, the introduction of healthy meals in schools and workplaces and more physical education in school curriculums.

Spending on obesity prevention programmes in the UK is less than £638m a year, the MGI says.

In contrast, the Government spends £6bn annually on treating conditions linked to being overweight or obese.

A further £10bn is spent on diabetes, it claimed.

Over 2.1 billion people worldwide are estimated to be overweight or obese.

The MGI said that figure is on course to rise to almost half the world's adult population by 2030.

Argies up the ante over Falklands

ARGENTINA has further ratcheted up the temperature in the Falkland Islands dispute by passing a new law requiring all the country's train and bus stations to display a sign which reads: "Las Malvinas son Argentinas".

This translates as: "The Falklands are Argentina".

Teresita Luna, the politician who proposed the law, said: "I am certain that this will generate a permanent reflection on our undeniable sovereignty over the Falklands."

"It is directed not only at the foreigner who comes here as a tourist or visits our country, but also at the citizens in general, and will serve to reinforce our history, our culture and our identity."

She said that the regulation would "reaffirm our sense of inalienable sovereignty over the Falkland Islands."

Roger Edwards, chairman of the Falklands Legislative Assembly, was unimpressed by the decision.

He told a leading British broadsheet: "Our relationship with the United Kingdom is one based on mutual respect, something that the government of Argentina has consistently refused to afford the residents of the Falklands Islands."

"I would have thought the government would have better things to spend its money on than putting these signs on all their public transport."

Last year, the Falkland Islands held a referendum in which they voted emphatically to remain a British Overseas Territory.

Argentina considers this decision illegitimate.

Boris brushes off US tax demands

■ London Mayor rejects Uncle Sam's claim to capital gains over property sale in UK

Boris Johnson has revealed that he is refusing to pay a tax demand issued to him by US authorities – despite previously lambasting the US embassy in London over its failure to pay the congestion charge.

The mayor of London, who was born in New York and holds a US passport as well as a British one, visited the country last week to promote his book and said during an interview with NPR (National Public Radio) that he had been hit with a demand for capital gains tax.

He said the US demand related to his first home in the UK, which was not subject to capital gains tax in England.

All US citizens, including those with dual citizenship, are legally obliged to file a tax return and liable to pay US taxes, wherever they are living, even if the income is earned abroad.

Asked whether he would pay the bill, Johnson initially avoided the question. But when it was put to him a second time, he replied: "No is the answer. I think it's absolutely outrageous. Why should I? I think, you know, I'm not a ... I, you know, I haven't lived in the United States for, you know, well, since I was five years old ... I pay the lion's share of my tax, I pay my taxes to the full in the United Kingdom where I live and work."

unpaid fines

Johnson, who is bidding to return to parliament at the next general election and has been tipped to replace David Cameron as leader if the Tories lose power, was then asked why he continued to carry a US passport, to which he responded: "It's very difficult to give up."

Johnson has

RAISING HIS PROFILE: Boris Johnson was in the USA last week promoting his new book, The Churchill Factor continually pressed the US embassy to pay unpaid fines it has incurred for the congestion charge. The embassy has refused to do so, claiming the charge is a tax and therefore its diplomats are immune. During a visit to the UK by Barack Obama in 2011, Johnson reportedly asked him for a £5m cheque for unpaid congestion charges but the US ambassador intervened before the president could answer. By last year the amount the US embassy owed in congestion charge fines had risen to more than £7m, the most of any diplomatic mission in the capital.

Johnson would also be liable to pay US income tax as he earns well above the foreign-earned income exclusion – the level up to which no tax is paid on income earned by US citizens overseas – which was set at $97,600 (£62,000) last year. As mayor, he earns a salary of £144,000 and on top of that he is paid £250,000 a year for his column in the Telegraph. Johnson did not disclose whether he paid US taxes on his income during the interview. The mayor's spokesman said he would not be commenting further on his US tax affairs.

Poo Power: bus runs on gas from human waste

A Bio-Bus which runs entirely on gas generated by human and food waste has carried its first passengers.

The 40-seater has a range of up to 186 miles on one tank of gas, the equivalent of around five people's waste over a year.

It is being used to provide a shuttle service between Bristol Airport and Bath city centre.

Engineers believe the Bio-Bus could provide a sustainable way of fuelling public transport while improving urban air quality.

The gas, biomethane, produces fewer emissions than traditional diesel engines and is both renewable and sustainable.

It is generated at Bristol sewage treatment works, which is run by GENeco, a subsidiary of Wessex Water.

This week, the company also became the first in the UK to

BOWEL MOVEMENT? the 40-seater currently provides a shuttle service to Bath inject gas generated from human and food waste into the national gas grid network.

Mohammed Saddiq, general manager of GENeco, said: "Gas-powered vehicles have an important role to play in improving air quality in UK cities, but the Bio-Bus goes further than that and is actually powered by people living in the local area, including quite possibly those on the bus itself."

"Using biomethane in this way not only provides a sustainable fuel, but also reduces our reliance on traditional fossil fuels."

The annual waste generated from one bus load of passengers would provide enough power for a return journey from Land's End to John O'Groats.

Rural school denied top grade by inspectors because it's 'too English'

- Report said pupils at Middle Rasen Primary School in Lincolnshire lacked 'first-hand experience' of modern British society
- 'Very few' at the 104-pupil school are from ethnic groups, report says
- Parents criticize 'bizarre' decision because small town is 97% white

A high-performing primary school was marked down by government inspectors this week after being judged too English. Pupils at the rural primary lacked 'first-hand experience of the diverse make-up of modern British society', declared the Office for Standards in Education, Children's Services and Skills, (Ofsted), the government's official education watchdog.

However, around 97 per cent of the population in the town to which the school belongs are white. Ofsted refused it an 'outstanding' rating and graded it 'good' instead.

'British values'

It said the school was failing to do enough to ensure pupils understand the 'cultural diversity of modern British society' and experience 'first-hand interaction with counterparts from different backgrounds'.

But parents complained Middle Rasen Primary in Market Rasen was being punished for factors outside its control and had effectively been told it was 'too English'.

The row is the latest controversy over new rules on teaching 'British values' introduced in the wake of the so-called Trojan Horse scandal, in which Muslim extremists tried to infiltrate schools in Birmingham.

Schools are required to 'actively promote' British values such as democracy, tolerance, mutual respect, individual liberty and the rule of law.

THIS HAPPY BREED: pupils at Middle Rasen Primary School in Lincolnshire

However the rules – and Ofsted's enforcement of them – have brought criticism from some schools and faith groups. A Christian school in Reading says it was warned it could face closure for failing to invite imams and other religious leaders to take assemblies.

high standards

In another case, a Roman Catholic school in East Anglia was marked down for failing to do enough to 'teach students about the dangers of extremism and radicalisation', although the report was later withdrawn.

The 104-pupil Middle Rasen Primary, in the town of Market Rasen on the edge of the Lincolnshire wolds, was inspected last month.

Ofsted praised it for high standards of teaching and leadership and the courteous and enthusiastic behaviour of pupils. But the inspector said: 'The large majority of pupils are White British. Very few are from other ethnic groups, and currently no pupils speak English as an additional language.' It said the school should 'extend pupils' understanding of the cultural diversity of modern British society by creating opportunities for them to have first-hand interaction with their counterparts from different backgrounds'.

Julia Weeks, 47, who has a son of ten at the school, said: 'To mark a school down for something they cannot control is crackers. If there were more people from ethnic minorities around then maybe you could have a complaint, but there just aren't.'

Head teacher Melonie Brunton said the school was now looking to partner with an inner-city school in an effort to comply with Ofsted's recommendation.

She said: 'We would have liked to be 'outstanding' but we were very pleased to have got the very positive comments.

'We all worked really hard - everybody, the staff and the pupils have worked hard.'

Dickens in his own words at the Grove Theater

■ New production of A Christmas Carol uses only the writer's original words. Production runs November 22 to December 20th

LOCAL NEWS

A NEW PRODUCTION of Charles Dickens' classic 1843 tale A Christmas Carol opens this weekend at the Grove Theater in Burbank. The show, of which the great British novelist would undoubtedly approve, features only his original words, and is performed by just three performers.

Scrooge, Bob Cratchit, Tiny Tim, Marley's Ghost, and the Spirits of Christmas Past, Present and Future all make their appearance as the three actors guide us through the story – sometimes as narrators, sometimes as storytellers, and sometimes as characters.

"I wanted to get back to 'A Christmas Carol's' storytelling roots," says GTC Artistic Director Kevin Cochran who adapted the tale. "To give people a sense of what it must have been like to hear Charles Dickens present the story to an audience as he did many times; yet, also keep the excitement of Scrooge's interactions with Marley's Ghost and the Christmas Spirits.

The production runs thru December 20 at the Grove Theater, located at 1111-b West Olive in Burbank. Performances are on Fridays and Saturdays at 8pm, and Sundays at 3pm. Tickets are $34.50 general; $29.50 Burbank residents; $24.50 for seniors and students. No show on November 28; one additional performance on December 18. Pay-what-you-can performances are on November 29 and 30.

For more information and to purchase tickets, go to www.gtc.org or call (800) 838 3006.

Brits in LA

Meet a Member: Adam Beach

Meet Adam Beach, originally from Exeter in Devon, who moved to LA eight years ago

Was there a particular reason you chose LA? I used to visit California at least once a year because I loved the vibe and energy of the city as well as the great surf and sunshine, of course. Once I was offered a job opportunity here about eight years ago, it really sealed the deal. I launched Beach Financial Group shortly after and was lucky enough to build close relationships with Brits in LA members. It can be a bit of a culture shock when settling in so I wanted to help other British expats make the transition a bit easier, especially when it comes to finance and insurance. It can all be a pretty daunting, I wanted to be a resource and really share my knowledge and experience in the industry.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Exeter? It is a huge city compared to the West Country where I grew up. It can be a bit isolating as well as LA is so spread out which is why I think Brits in LA has done such an amazing job of creating a close-knit community that feels like a home away from home.

What one thing do you miss from home? Sunday Roasts with my family and friends.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us? The Beach Financial Group office is located in the heart of downtown El Segundo, which is really up-and-coming. Lots of creative office spaces and lofts popping up. There is also an El Segundo Museum of Art (Related to LACMA) and on Richmond Street there are a few hole-in-the-wall dive bars and restaurants. No big chains so it feels a bit like California in the 1960s.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here? Do it! No matter what, it's going to be an interesting experience. And you will never find Indian cuisine that comes close to back home but the Mexican is not a bad tradeoff!

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you on the Internet? Please feel free to call or

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

HAPPY THANKSGIVING TO ALL!!

ARIES: In any relationship situation please understand you cannot control what people think. All you can do is keep an eye on what the other person is doing. A friend from the past is on the way back.

TAURUS: Your priority should be taking care of YOU in any area that requires attention. Start with what you know is well overdue. On the upside you can expect a call for an exciting social event.

GEMINI: The sun in your opposite sign of Sagittarius can bring out a very creative side of you. If you have any unfinished business Mercury moving fast will bring it to the boil. If you are not at your best take time to change what needs attention.

CANCER: You will have to be aware this next week to not speak out of turn or harshly to anyone. The planet in your opposite sign Capricorn will force you to deal with consequences you might not enjoy.

LEO: This week ahead is a roller coaster and if you have responsibilities be sure they are of the highest priority. You cannot just live in your own world at this time of the year. It being the holiday season you will be busier than usual.

VIRGO: It's time for a change of scenery. This can be as simple as a coat of paint on the walls to a trip out of town. Either way it's best to take some action rather than brood. If you have worries about the holidays, relax! You will have a ball.

LIBRA: If you have things you need to be working on in the home area get moving and you can be finished by next week. If you delay then the holidays will be upon you and you'll be sorry you procrastinated.

SCORPIO: This beginning of your new year should be starting with a really good clean out.

This can be furniture or clothes and (on a deeper level) people and emotions. This means in essence if anything that no longer works: get rid! Happy Birthday

SAGITTARIUS: Be ready to have extra guests this month and next for the holidays and even if you are not too happy about this it will end up fine as you have been in a bit of a rut for several weeks now. The fun is just beginning to bubble up.

CAPRICORN: All work and no play makes for a dull life. It's not always this way and by mid-December life is due for an overall boost. Be sure to stand firm in a recent disagreement; just because you feel bad does not mean you are bad.!!

AQUARIUS: A health or diet issue that has bugged you in the recent past will be back if you have not taken care of it. Be sure to finish off that home repair this month. Whatever you do, keep busy...it's good for you right now.

PISCES: You may have been getting some recurring small health issues and it's likely they have not been fixed as soon as they should have been. This week ahead deal with it swiftly and see how much faster you will recover. You don't have to believe everything you think. So think positive!

The Furies: Tragedy, revenge but not much forgiveness

■ Exclusive interview with author Natalie Haynes and a review of her book modernizing the Greek classic Furies

Rating: ★★★

“I started thinking about the worst thing that could happen, and what would happen to someone who refused to forgive the person who caused that,” says The Furies author Natalie Haynes. “I struggle with the idea of forgiving a truly terrible crime. So this book is sort of a study in whether forgiveness is ever possible, and whether revenge is ever appropriate. I hope it asks some questions about blame and guilt and responsibility.”

The Furies is a story told in present and past tense by Alex, a teacher and unwitting instigator of a tragic event. Alex is recovering from the shock of her fiancé's murder. That Alex picks a Greek tragedy with emotionally damaged children is a recipe for disaster. Haynes' writing is engaging. It would have been more fun to see her main character make a positive impact on the children and in turn herself, to show the good instead of the bad.

When we meet Alex Morris she needs a fresh start. She moves to Edinburgh after her fiancée is killed. Through a former professor she gets a job to teach drama therapy to troubled children. These are the very difficult kids who probably should not be put in the same room together. She feels close to them and reveals personal information that she should have kept to herself. The teens take what they're reading in Greek tragedy and act out one of the tragedies in real life. Bad teacher.

Haynes edited The Furies while judging the Man Booker Prize in 2013. “Editing your own novel while reading 151 other novels is maybe not the most relaxing way to do it,” says Haynes. She started working on the book in 2011. She choose the Greek tragedy story angle because the book asks a lot of Greek tragedy questions. The Furies was nominated for Bloody Scotland's Crime Novel of the Year.

Haynes says she had to do loads of research for the book. “One of my characters is deaf, so that took some research. I have a deaf cousin, who helped a lot. The Greek tragedies I knew already, but it still took time to work out what to include. No one in the book is a classicist, so I had to remember they knew and cared less about the Greeks than I do. The Pupil Referral Unit also took some research. What kind of teenagers end up there, and how, and why? And I pounded the streets of London and Edinburgh, the book's two locations.”

Other books by Haynes are The Ancient Guide to Modern Life, a book about ancient history and the modern world, and a children's book called The Great Escape that won a Proggy Award for being the most animal-friendly children's book of that year. Haynes is a journalist for The Guardian, The Independent, The Times and other newspapers.

Haynes appeared at the House of Speakeasy in New York City recently as part of her U.S. promotional tour. “I used to be a comedian, so can rarely resist a cheap laugh, even if I'm talking about tragedy. I told a filthy joke in front of Salman Rushdie...who laughed, which was lucky. That's a moment of immaturity I'm pleased with.”

Busy with two radio series and promoting her book, Haynes says she's behind on her next book and looks forward to getting to work writing again. Haynes was born in Birmingham and is now based in London. She has many upcoming book events in the UK. For details visit: www.nataliehaynes.com Twigs goes out on a limb, on music, and dating RPatz!

FKA Twigs holds sold out concerts, has a cool sense of style, and is dating British star Robert Pattinson – and with all that comes an ugly side of fame.

The singer/songwriter, who was born Tahliah Debrete Barnett and hails from Gloucestershire, has been the target of racism and threats since it became apparent that she was romantically involved with Pattinson, best known for his work in the Twilight movies.

In a new interview, Twigs said that she's glad to be dating the actor.

Nonetheless, despite the hordes of paparazzi following her every step and the “14-year-old” haters who “should be in bed”, Twigs says that it’s all “very worth it”.

“I really enjoy the fun of putting something out and people liking it or hating it or talking about it,” she told USA Today, “but vacuous attention, it feels disgusting. It’s like a hangover.”

However, “the positivity that I get from (my relationship) makes the more challenging aspects ... very worth it.”

But dating one of the most beloved actors in the world isn’t easy. Between that and all the attention surrounding her rising fame, Twigs has had to deal with an ugly amount of backlash – including racist remarks and death threats via Twitter.

raw emotions

Twigs said, “Recently, people said horrible things about something I had no control of, which was tough.”

She adds, “I never really saw anything wrong with how I looked, it was more that certain people pointed things out to you about yourself. Either your hair’s different, or the colour of your skin, or your features.”

“Half of my life I’ve had people staring at me because they think I’m funny-looking and ugly. The other half of my life I’ve had people staring at me because they think I’m fascinating.”

On her debut album,

FKA Twigs explores heartbreak and reveals raw emotions, about which she said, “You try to do something, and it makes you feel disgusted in yourself.”

“Whether it’s loving someone, trying to make music or trying to finish something and it’s painful, you’re constantly confronted with your lack of skill level, or you’re trying to love someone and you’re confronted with all the demons you have.”

Oo-er...

Still, Twigs loves fashion—even if not everyone understands her sense of style. “I’ll go shopping and I’ll be like, ‘I want to buy this,’ and they’re like, ‘You don’t really,’ and I’m like, ‘Yeah... Then I’ll wear it, and they’ll be like, ‘Oh, actually, that’s cute. Can I borrow it?’”

So, whether you listen to her music (LP1) or know her because of her sexy ex-vampire boyfriend, FKA Twigs undeniably has the potential of becoming one of 2015’s biggest new artists, and it isn’t down to having RPatz as a boyf’!

So much to be thankful for...

I am not sure whether I am simply getting older or perhaps just becoming more Americanized (after 18 years here!), but for the first time I find myself really looking forward to Thanksgiving.

Don't get me wrong; I have always enjoyed the festivities celebrated on the fourth Thursday in November, but in a sort of forced 'not quite sure why we need this when Christmas is coming up' way.

Community

This year there was a very definite shift for me - rather than researching the best Turkey recipes or creating seating plans, I have truly started thinking about what I am thankful for. I'm proud to say my Thanksgiving list is far longer than my Santa list! At the top is being thankful to all of you and the British Weekly for making the Anglo-American community such a pleasure to be a part of. I think we have really lucked out - I think it would be hard to find such a lovely expat community anywhere else in the world! There is absolutely no excuse for being bored or lonely here. Between our Brits in LA events and that of our members, there is practically something to do every day of the week!

I did get a little lazy and even slightly jaded over the summer, and it was only when I visited London last month I was able to remind myself how amazing Los Angeles is. Whatever you are in the mood for you can usually find it 40 minutes away - whether it be desert, ocean, greenery or skyscrapers. With giving thanks being on my mind these last couple of weeks, I have made a conscious effort to visit my local hiking trail in Runyon Canyon. It's so easy to drive past the very thing that initially drew you to your neighborhood and not give it a second thought. It is time for us all to stop occasionally and smell the roses. Perhaps your local beauty spot is the beach or an old movie theatre - whatever it is make sure to appreciate and utilize it rather than take it for granted. These little moments are food for the soul and really just as necessary as food and water.

Volunteers needed!

And so many of the best things to do in LA are free - even our events don't need to cost you. If you are willing to spend a little time helping us set up we usually offer tickets in exchange (for you and a guest). Craig as you know is currently starring in Noel Cowards 'The Vortex' - they are in need of volunteers and in return you get to see the play. If you are free to give them a hand email vortextheplay@gmail.com. I think we all have to be thankful to Goldenvoice. They have given us a bunch of tickets for various British and Irish acts performing here over the next few weeks - we will be running competitions on our Facebook Page. (www.facebook.com/britsinla) so make sure to check in daily. Johnny Marr, Celtic Woman, Alex Clare and Jamie T tickets are all up for grabs! Before I sign off I have to thank Abraham Lincoln for proclaiming we all have a day to give thanks! Tweet us @BritsinLA and let us know what you are thankful for - we always love to hear from you!

If you want to check details for any of our upcoming events you can always visit our website Britsin.LA

Cheers!
Eileen

If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same Lender may hold more than one mortgage or Deed of Trust on the property. NOTICE OF AMENDED PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF: HUGH MAYNE JOHNSTON CASE NO. BP153750

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the WILL or estate, or both of HUGH MAYNE JOHNSTON.

AN AMENDED PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by KAREN MAHON in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES. THE AMENDED PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that ARNIE SMITH be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE AMENDED PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act . (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 12/16/14 at 8:30AM in Dept. 5 located at 111 N.

HILL ST., LOS ANGELES, CA 90012 IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Whelan seeks to defuse race row

Wigan owner Dave Whelan has apologised for comments made in a controversial newspaper interview.

In defending new manager Malky Mackay, Whelan made comments about Jewish and Chinese people described as “offensive” by West Ham owner David Gold.

“If I have upset one person I apologise,” Whelan said on Thursday.

Attempting to explain the appointment of Mackay, who is being investigated by the Football Association over allegations he sent offensive text messages while he was Cardiff manager, Whelan is reported to have said there was not a lot wrong with the content of the Scot’s message.

In one of the messages for which Mackay is being investigated, he referred to the Jewish football agent, Phil Smith, saying: “Nothing like a Jew that sees money slipping through his fingers.”

Whelan is reported in the Guardian saying: “Jewish people chase money more than everybody else.”

But he later insisted he was misquoted and did not intend any racial slight.

“All I was trying to say was that Jewish people are very similar to the English people in the desire to work hard and get money,” he said.

“I didn’t think that I did anything wrong in that.”

He also claimed that while he would not use the word personally, he did not believe that the term “chink” - used in one of the text messages revealed to have been sent by Mackay - was necessarily offensive to Chinese people.

“There are all kinds of names given to people, given to the English, to the Scottish, to the Welsh, to the Irish, to the Chinese,” Whelan said.

“People use these words a lot in common conversations - a lot of this talk goes on all around the world and people accept it and take because I don’t think that there is an insult meant.”

The FA confirmed on 19 November that its investigation into Mackay was still ongoing.

Lewis Hamilton insists he is feeling no pressure ahead of the title-deciding Abu Dhabi Grand Prix this weekend.

Hamilton leads Mercedes team-mate Nico Rosberg by 17 points and needs to finish second if Rosberg wins to secure the title.

“I come into the weekend trying to win the race, like always. So nothing changes there,” Hamilton said.

“In terms of the pressure, I don’t really feel anything. I have been racing for 20 years to prepare for it.”

FORWARD GARETH BALE believes Wales’ goalless draw in Belgium was proof of their new-found team spirit.

The result, which Chris Coleman described as his “favourite” as manager, maintained Wales’ unbeaten start to their Euro 2016 qualifying campaign.

“I think in previous years we would have definitely caved towards the end,” Bale said.

“But we showed what we’re made of and what true team spirit we’ve got.”

Despite entering the match as Group B leaders, Wales were underdogs against a Belgium side who had reached the quarter-finals of the 2014 World Cup.

Wales, ranked 34th in the world, had to withstand heavy pressure at the King Baudouin Stadium in Brussels, and Bale was delighted with his side’s resolute performance.

“I’m massively proud. To come to a team ranked fourth in the world away from home [and draw] is a good achievement,” he said.

Hammer of the Scots!

■ Rooney brace sees off the Auld Enemy

Wayne Rooney closed in on Sir Bobby Charlton's all-time England record of 49 goals as his side gained a comfortable 3-1 victory against Scotland at a passionate Celtic Park Tuesday night.

Scotland were hoping to inflict defeat on the Auld Enemy and build on confidence gained from the pivotal Euro 2016 qualifying win against the Republic of Ireland on Friday.

Rooney, however, had other ideas with two second-half goals to add to Alex Oxlade-Chamberlain's opener as England secured a fully deserved win on their first visit to Glasgow since 1999.

The England captain now has 46 international goals, his second coming late on to snuff out brief hopes of an unlikely Scotland revival after Andrew Robertson had pulled one back.

For Scotland, who looked jaded following their exertions against the Republic last Friday, consolation can come with the knowledge that their main business in this international period was winning that qualifier, which they achieved successfully.

England's own qualifiers have proved routine, but this was billed as a more serious test of their resolve and credentials in the stirring surroundings of Parkhead - and Hodgson will feel this was a test they passed emphatically.

Scotland had only two Premier League players in their starting line-up, Hull City's Robertson and Everton's Steven Naismith and at times that gulf in experience, competitive edge and class was all too obvious.

Hodgson's side made the more assured start and Danny Welbeck, so reliable in front of goal for England recently, should have done better than shoot straight at Scotland keeper David Marshall when played in by Rooney.

Scotland were getting some encouragement from the pace of Watford's Ikechi Anya, but looked somewhat leg-weary and lacking in inspiration and when England went ahead after 32 minutes, it was an advantage they deserved.

Jack Wilshere created the opportunity with a long, driven pass which found Oxlade-Chamberlain, who applied a thin but decisive touch with his head to beat Marshall.

Strachan introduced Darren Fletcher and James Morrison for Chris Martin and Scott Brown, as well as Craig Gordon for Marshall in goal, in an attempt to give his team fresh impetus at the start of the second half, but it was England who struck again two minutes after the restart.

Scotland failed to clear a free-kick and when Robertson could only divert Wilshere's shot into the path of Rooney, he reacted swiftly to divert a smart header past Gordon.

As the clock ran down and substitutes arrived on a regular basis, Robertson gave Scotland hope with a close-range finish with seven minutes left.

Rooney responded almost instantly by crowning another good passing move with a powerful finish and a somersault of celebration in front of England's elated supporters.

After the match more than one Scottish player admitted they had been second best on the night.

"I don't think we did ourselves justice," said Derby County's Chris Martin, who made his first Scotland start.

"On the night the better team won. We weren't able to raise our game again after Friday [the win over the Republic of Ireland], which is disappointing."

Watford's Ikechi Anya echoed Martin's sentiments:

"England were a lot better than us on the night in every aspect. They deserved their win," he said.
