Queen's Christmas message puts focus on reconciliation

The Queen has used her Christmas Day broadcast to highlight the importance of reconciliation between people.

She spoke of the impact of the Scottish in dependence of ence referendum, and also paid tribute to the moment German and British soldiers put down their weapons and met on Christmas Day 1914.

"Sometimes it seems reconciliation stands little chance... but the Christmas truce reminds us peace and goodwill have lasting power," she said.

In her address, the head of state said Christ's example taught her to "respect and value all people of whatever faith or none".

She said many felt "great disappointment" and others "great relief" after the Scottish vote which rejected independence, and "bridging these differences will take time".

In contrast, the Queen said she was reminded that Northern Ireland had already begun the journey to heal divisions when she visited a Belfast prison turned visitor attraction centre in June.

She began her broadcast by talking about a sculpture of a man and woman embracing by Josefina de Vasconcellos and called Reconciliation.

"While my tour of the set of Game Of Thrones may have gained most attention, my visit to the Crumlin Road Gaol will remain vividly in my mind," she said.

'lasting power'

"What was once a prison during the Troubles is now a place of hope and fresh purpose; a reminder of what is possible when people reach out to one another, rather like the couple in the sculpture."

As the Queen spoke, footage of the visit was shown including the monarch walking through the famous building with Stormont First Minister Peter Robinson and Deputy First Minister Martin McGuinness - both of whom spent time in its cells in the 1970s or 1980s.

The Queen recorded her Christmas message next to an embossed brass box of the type which would have contained Christmas gifts for troops serving in

ANNUAL MESSAGE: the Queen also described sport as "a wonderful way of bringing together people and nations"

World War One in 1914. The boxes were organised by the Sailors and Soldiers Christmas Fund created by Princess Mary, the daughter of King George V

In the message, the Queen said of the first Christmas of the war: "Without any instruction or command, the shooting stopped and German and British soldiers met in No Man's Land. Photographs were taken and gifts exchanged. It was a Christmas truce...

"Sometimes it seems that reconciliation stands little chance in the face of war and discord. But, as the Christmas truce a century ago reminds us, peace and goodwill have lasting power in the hearts of men and women."

She described sport as a "wonderful way of bringing together people and nations" and this year's Commonwealth Games, staged in Glasgow during the summer, was highlighted as an example.

Images of injured servicemen and women and veterans who took part in the Invictus Games, organised by Prince Harry, were shown competing.

The Queen also reflected on the ceramic poppy tribute to World War One casualties and those who are helping to tackle the deadly Ebola outbreak in West Africa.

The hugely popular poppy installation at the Tower of London was "a reminder of the grief of loved ones left behind", she said.

The monarch also revealed how she had been "deeply touched" by those who treated victims of Ebola.

The Queen described how the life of Jesus Christ was an "inspiration and an anchor in my life".

"Christ's example has taught me to seek to respect and value all people, of whatever faith or none," she said.

As the Royal Marines band played to signal the end of the address, the Queen said: "On that chilly Christmas Eve in 1914 many of the German forces sang Silent Night, its haunting melody inching across the line.

"That carol is still much-loved today, a legacy of the Christmas truce, and a reminder to us all that even in the unlikeliest of places hope can still be found.

"A very happy Christmas to you all."

Glasgow mourns as six are killed in bin lorry horror crash

■ Out-of-control truck slammed into holiday shoppers

GLASGOW was a city in mourning this week following an horrific pre-Christmas accident that left six people dead.

A runaway council bin lorry slammed into Christmas shoppers Monday afternoon in the city's busy George Square, mounting a pavement and then crashing into the Millennium Hotel. The crash killed six people and injured at least ten more. The victims were named as Jack Sweeney, 68 and Lorraine Sweeney, 69, both from Dumbarton, and their 18-year-old granddaughter Erin McQuade. The other three victims were Gillian 52, from Ewing, Edinburgh, Stephenie Tait, 29, from Glasgow and Jacqueline Morton, 51, from Glasgow.

Police investigations are continuing as to the cause of the crash but Mr. Sweeney's nephew Marc Gardiner took to Twitter shortly after the disaster to say he does not blame the driver for the deaths.

Writing the day after the horror accident, Marc tweeted: "Been a really emotional and overwhelming day and on behalf of my family I just want to say thank you to everyone around Scotland sending in there condolences and best wishes!

"I hope that the other families that are going through what me and my family are get all the support possible and I hope that the driver of the lorry makes a speedy recovery and understands that it wasn't his fault.

"And a big thanks to all emergency services yesterday for doing everything possible.

"RIP Uncle Jackie, Aunt Lorraine and Erin, love you loads and can't believe your gone, you'll be truly missed."

The 57-year-old bin lorry driver is still being treated for his injuries at the city's Western Infirmary, the Daily Record reports.

A 14-year-old schoolgirl, who was critically ill but is now stable, is also among the four people still in hospital. Two women, aged 18 and 64, are also still undergoing treatment.

Marc's comments came as tributes continue to be paid to the six victims at the floral shrine in nearby Royal Exchange Square, just yards from where the accident took place.

Among those who have turned up to pay their respects next to the Gallery of Modern Art are actor Martin Compston, Celtic chief executive Peter Lawwell and Rangers legend and ex-SFA boss Gordon Smith.

Prayers were also said at church services across Scotland for everyone affected by the horror accident.

On Christmas Day grieving relatives – thought to be from the McQuade family – were part of a group that arrived in Royal Exchange Square together around 12.20pm.

Six lanterns, Christmas wreaths, tea light candles and cuddly toys also form part of the moving memorial.

Overnight, thousands turned off their Christmas lights for two minutes in an act of remembrance for the victims of the crash. A Facebook page asking people to turn off their lights for two minutes was 'liked' by over 70,000 people.

Police Scotland have made a fresh appeal for anyone with footage of the incident to send it to them.

They said a "thorough and exhaustive" investigation is under way and will continue throughout the festive period.

The brother of one of the women who is being treated at Glasgow Royal Infirmary told reporters that she could not remember anything about the incident, which happened when she was Christmas shopping.

John Weatherall - who did not want his sister's name to be made public - said she had broken her left arm and leg in multiple places as well as facial injuries.

Traditional Christmas serviceis resumed at Sandringham,but noisy George stays home

■ Royals turn out in force for service on Norfolk estate

The Queen marked Christmas Day in traditional fashion on Thursday by attending a church service at Sandringham near her royal retreat.

Well-wishers started gathering before dawn in the bitter cold to catch a glimpse of the royals - and by mid-morning thousands of onlookers were present.

Queen Elizabeth was joined by the Duke of Edinburgh for the service at St Mary Magdalene's church on the 20,000 acre Norfolk estate.

But the Duchess of Cornwall did not attend the service on advice from doctors after she "put her back out", Clarence House said.

Camilla "has been in pain and is receiving physiotherapy. The doctors have advised against any travel," a Clarence House spokeswoman said.

Also missing was Prince George, but he is likely to have spent the morning in the care of his nanny. His parents, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, attended.

After the service, the pair and Prince Harry greeted well-wishers outside the church.

Kate apologised to a mother and her young daughter for not bringing her son.

When Maddison Neal, aged eight from nearby

Dersingham, gave Kate a Milky Bar selection box for George, the Duchess reportedly replied: "I'm sorry we didn't bring George but you would have heard him in the Kate, who is around five months pregnant, wore a brown double-breasted coat.

The service took place before the Queen's Christmas Day address was broadcast.

The monarch has used her traditional address to call for reconciliation, citing the Scottish referendum and Northern Ireland.

She has also paid tribute to medical staff who have volunteered to fight Ebola in west Africa.

"I have been deeply touched this year by the selflessness of aid workers and medical volunteers who have gone abroad to help victims of conflict or of diseases like Ebola, often at great personal risk," she said.

DNA advance snares rapist from 1984

A man has been convicted of raping and sexually abusing three teenagers at knife-point in Hertfordshire 30 years ago.

Paul Drinkwater, now 52, of Maidenhead, Berkshire, carried out a campaign of terror over three weeks in Berkhamsted in November and December 1984.

He was found guilty at St Albans Crown Court of seven charges he denied, including rape and possessing a knife.

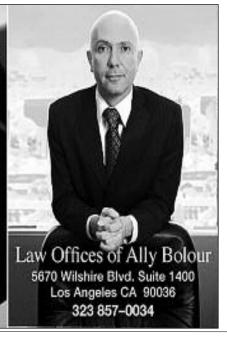

New DNA evidence helped secure the conviction.

Judge Marie Catterson remanded him in custody for sentencing on 30 January.

Elton John marries his long-term partner Furnish

■ Couple officially wed exactly nine years after their civil partnership and post pictures of their big day on social media

Sir Elton John and David Furnish have officially married – nine years to the day after they tied the knot in a civil partnership ceremony.

The happy couple and their sons, Elijah and Zachary, all wore dark blue suits and - as proved by an overnight Instagram photograph of their footwear lined up in front of the fire – very well-polished black shoes. The sons carried the wedding rings, and in Elijah's case a toy white rabbit, as their fathers converted their civil partnership into a wedding at their Windsor estate.

Although friends, including the singer Ed Sheeran and the actors David Walliams and Liz Hurley, attended in person, millions more followed the day as social media guests. Elton John set up an Instagram account specially for the wedding and posted the red rose-festooned invitation with their entwined initials, and the text "Sir Elton and David Furnish request the pleasure of your company to celebrate their wedding".

He followed that with an early-morning snap of a frosty garden captioned "nice day for a wedding", and promised regular updates - and indeed they came: "The tables look stunning! We had red roses at our Civil Partnership 9 years ago and they brought us so much luck." The photograph of the couple's entwined hands with Elijah and rabbit was allegedly taken with Furnish's phone by four-year-old Zachary.

low-key

Further offerings showed the guests taking their seats in a room hung with contemporary art, and the registrar rather alarmingly appearing to be inside one of Damien Hirst's glass tanks – in fact she was merely standing in front of one holding a dove with outstretched wings, a piece called The Incomplete Truth.

David and Victoria Beckham's son Brooklyn obligingly tweeted the menu, which included a beef pie and warm chocolate pudding.

It was more low-key their partnership ceremony in 2005 at Windsor's historic Guildhall, one of the first held after the law changed, which brought the town centre to a standstill. On that occasion hundreds of starry guests including Sarah Ferguson, Cilla Black, Ozzy Osbourne, Lulu and Ringo Starr were caught in a celebrity traffic jam trying to get through the narrow roads to the reception at the couple's home in Old Windsor.

Slimline Fergie! Duchess of York slips into sexy Santa costume

■ Duchess enjoyed festive night out at a pub in Surrey with Prince Andrew

Her slender new figure is the envy of many after she lost four stone on a strict diet.

But the Duchess of York may have been trying a little too hard to show it off at the weekend – when she donned this daring 'sexy Santa' costume for a party.

Sarah Ferguson, 55, was spotted showing off her slim-line legs in the racy outfit as she celebrated Christmas with friends and family.

As well as a fur-trimmed mini-dress and matching hat, she also sported a pair of high-heeled knee-high brown suede boots.

The duchess was at the Fox and Hounds in Englefield Green, Surrey, with ex-husband Prince Andrew, 54, and daughter Princess Beatrice, 26.

She and Andrew, who sat at a table with friends in the pub's restaurant, relaxed as they enjoyed the live show.

A source at the party told a British tabloid: 'No one was expecting royalty to drop in but it was just an incredible night.

'Fergie looked fantastic and it was obvious she has a new-found confidence.

The duchess recently underwent a strict dieting regime and boot camp in Swiss resort Verbier.

The former Weight Watchers spokeswoman has told of her decision to shed the pounds 'before the age of 55' after her weight ballooned to 225lbs.

The source added: 'Andrew and Fergie were singing along to the entertainment and they were dancing to the music. It was a real royal shindig.'

The couple divorced in 1996 but have remained close.

The Prince recently revealed that he remained friends with his former wife 'more for family than anything else'.

The royal spoke about the couple's split and continued friendship in a candid interview with US satellite TV channel CNBC.

Tributes pour in for actress Whitelaw

TRIBUTES flowed for the acclaimed actress Billie Whitelaw, who passed away at a London nursing home week. She was 82.

News of her death prompted a string of messages on Twitter, among them messages from Gary and Martin Kemp of Spandau Ballet Whitelaw (pictured, right) appeared with them in 1990 film The Krays, playing Violet Kray, mother of the criminal Kray twins, to Gary's Ronnie and Martin's Reggie.

"Deeply saddened that Billie Whitelaw has died," tweeted Gary "I'll always Kemp. remember her as a generous and towering actor, and 'Mum'."

His sentiments were echoed by his brother Martin, who tweeted: ""Desperately sad to hear the news... an honour to get to know you on The Krays."

Whitelaw was well known for her role as Mrs Baylock in horror film The Omen and more recently appeared in the comedy Hot Fuzz.

That film's director Edgar Wright tweeted that he was "very sad to hear that the magnificent Billie Whitelaw passed away" while adding he was "so very happy" to have worked with her.

Born in 1932, Whitelaw made her radio acting debut aged just 11 and made her first stage appearance in Bradford in 1950.

But the Coventry-born star's career really took off thanks to her long collaboration with playwright Samuel Beckett, who described her as a perfect actress.

Whitelaw won two Baftas, in 1969 and 1973, and appeared in a number of TV series, including BBC One's Dixon of Dock Green.

In her autobiography Billie Whitelaw... Who however, she acknowledged it was her work with Beckett that generated the most interest.

Scottish actor Douglas Henshall, US actress Mia Farrow and singer Toyah Wilcox are among others to have paid tribute to Whitelaw on Twitter.

"Thank you Billie for being a role model and an inspiration," tweeted Wilcox, while Henshall who appeared with the actress in 1990s drama Friends Firm remembered her as "lovely".

Mia Farrow, played Whitelaw's Mrs Baylock role in the 2006 remake of The Omen, said she had 'magnificent" "never less than great".

Unbroken: the rise and rise of British actor Jack O'Connell

■ With release of Angelina Jolie's epic, the Derby-born actor braces for worldwide stardom

Ten years ago, English actor Jack O'Connell was sleeping on park benches to attend auditions.

This week he's the talk of Hollywood for his performance in the lead role of Angelina Jolie's World War Two epic, Unbroken.

"I kind of assumed that it would be a longer road than this one," said the Derby-born actor. "Try telling me that at the age of 15 when I was sleeping rough in parks, because I couldn't afford to accommodate myself."

O'Connell is probably best known on these shores for his role in the popular BBC America drama Skins, although he first made a splash with his role in This Is England, the Shane Meadows skinhead drama which was released in 2006.

In Unbroken, O'Connell plays Louis Zamperini - the American athlete who competed at the 1936 Berlin Olympics before becoming a pilot during World War Two. Shot down over the Pacific, he survived 47 days adrift on a raft before being captured by the Japanese and endured two years of mental and physical torture in prisoner-of-war camps.

O'Connell got to meet Zamperini twice in Los Angeles before he started shooting. Their first encounter, which was being filmed, he found "awkward and intrusive" so he asked to meet Zamperini again alone.

'normal human being'

"He was kind enough to agree, he brought me into his family home again, and I could just interact and engage with him. He got his scrap book out and I went through his highlights. He had an incredible sense of humour."

One item of "memorabilia" Zamperini showed O'Connell was a Nazi flag he had stolen from the Berlin Olympics, where he had also received a handshake from Adolf Hitler. "He nearly got himself shot doing that," O'Connell notes.

"He never considered himself superhuman, or extraordinary. He just presented himself as a normal human being that had endured a lot."

The war veteran died in July 2014, aged 97, after the film had wrapped.

O'Connell had met him for a third time by then. "It was quite celebratory, but of course I had no idea at that time that it would be our final meeting, someone like Louis you just assume is going to be around forever."

At the age of 24, O'Connell has made his name in a series of gritty roles in both TV and film.

In addition to his roles in Skins and This is England, O'Connell also impressed in the horror thriller Eden Lake, and opposite Michael Caine in Harry Brown. And he received enthusiastic reviews for prison drama Starred Up, which tells the story of a young offender thrown into an adult prison for being too violent.

ambition

This autumn he was also seen in '71, the debut feature film by French director Yann Demange, as a teenage soldier in Northern Ireland accidentally abandoned by his unit following a riot on the streets of Belfast.

"It's been like an apprenticeship," he told the BBC recently. "Lessons were learnt back then and I'm going to benefit from it now, and I'm going to continue to learn, ideally, because it's an art form, and a vast one at that, and I'm just a drop in the ocean."

But O'Connell hopes his higher profile will help create opportunities for people who, as he says, are "from similar backgrounds" to himself.

His long-term ambition is to set up his own production company "so I can, from the bottom up, create roles, create projects, create jobs and opportunities".

Expect to see lots of this talented Brit in the coming year. Apart from Unbroken, he will also be seen in the 17th Century romance Tulip Fever, alongside Alicia Vikander and Christoph Waltz; and Terry Gilliam's fantasy epic The Man Who Killed Don Quixote.

But he's not forgotten roughing it for those early auditions and his first professional gig as an actor in BBC daytime drama Doctors in 2005.

"I had people championing me as a kid, and that made me feel like I wasn't wasting my time

"It's quite a risky business that I've got myself into," he adds. "I'm just very thankful that it's paying off at the minute."

Helena's long-term love gone for a Burton

■ Director and actor are said to have separated amicably

Tim Burton and Helena Bonham Carter have split up while "continuing to be friends and co-parent their children", a spokeswoman has said.

The director and actor, who never married, separated amicably earlier this year and were asking for privacy for themselves and their children, said the spokeswoman.

The pair met in 2001 during filming of Planet Of The Apes, which Burton directed, and have since collaborated on films including Sweeney Todd: The Demon Barber Of Fleet Street, Alice In Wonderland and Dark Shadows.

They famously live in adjoining mews houses in north London and have two children, Billy, 11, and Nell, seven.

In the past Bonham Carter, 48, has described the arrangement with Burton, 56, as "nothing more interesting than two houses knocked together", but in a 2011 interview she revealed that their home featured weird and wonderful items including an oversized chair from the Charlie and the Chocolate Factory set, a baby door and a gypsy caravan.

In 2012 both were given British Film Institute fellowships, the body's highest honour. In an interview at the Words by Maeve Binchy The Irish novelist and author Maeve Binchy once said she had fallen off her chair trying to hear what people were saying at the next table in a restaurant, that she was obsessively interested in the trivia of other people's lives. Binchy was surprised to become a journalist. Her parents sent a newspaper her letters home about her experiences on a kibbutz, which published them. Binchy's writing is witty and engaging human interest touches the heart. She covers the gamut, from life as a waitress and things mundane, to royal weddings, and the lives of playright Samuel Beckett and prime minister Margaret Thatcher. Gain insights into Binchy's personality that shaped her writing. Hardcover: 400 pages Publisher: Knopf 2014), (October 28, Language: English ISBN: 9780385353458 $27.95.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

Wishing All My Readers A Truly Magnificent, Glorious and Bountiful New Year in 2015!

ARIES: It's time for some kind of change in your routine, so what ever works - a short trip out of town or planning a longer one later – get to it. Looking ahead don't be afraid to embrace changes, which will arrive like a tidal wave in May.

TAURUS: On occasion you can pull a rabbit out of the hat and you will have the chance this year to do this. When unexpected situations arise (probably mid May onward), this will be the time to find your courage and go for it. GEMINI: Your ruler Mercury will do his occasional backwards stroll starting in late spring. You will then have had opportunities to make sure a past promise is fulfilled. To listen to your inner voice is very important going forward in life

CANCER: The past year has not been what you hoped or perhaps expected for sure. If you desire changes you best start straight after the holidays. However you have to remember the old saying about 'the greatest plans of mice and men'...and be patient until April.

LEO: Yes, this is a time for the Leo strength to show itself. This past year had its disappointments, however you must go with the flow this New Year and by mid March life will be looking good again. A family reunion will be very welcome in spring.

VIRGO: You are known as the worrier but this year ahead you MUST get the message and live more in the moment.

If you feel misunderstood early in the year this is a clue to examine where you are vulnerable

LIBRA: Beginning in mid-April you will be very much involved in a new project in any area.

Make this the year when you do not procrastinate and just get going without pondering too much about the outcome. In other words make a decision and stick with it.

SCORPIO: Well! Here's a cheer to the end of a long, tough year in some ways. This being said, understand that the lessons, and yes there were a lot, preparing you to begin a more balanced life and times. Let go of what did not work in your life and move into a very exciting new year...all year.

SAGITTARIUS: A new venture will brighten up your life in a few weeks around late March. Finances are a little low currently so you will have to keep a handle on spending. Be dressed to be noticed these few weeks ahead so you catch the eye of whoever is looking for you and your talents.

CAPRICORN: The changes in 2015 start as soon as now, your birthday month and by the end of April you should have a good plan to carry you through the year ahead. Pluto the planet of deep changes and renewal is with you all year, so take advantage. Happy Birthday!

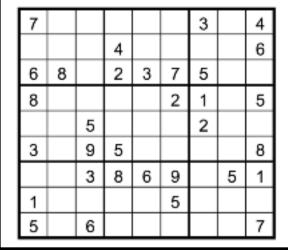

AQUARIUS: It the time of year to celebrate, especially if you have been out of sorts or a little blue and moody in the last year. You may have been a bit of a hermit and not realized it so now it's time to come out from wherever you have been hiding. Spring brings new friends and love is in the air. Especially near your birthday.

PISCES: Be ready for a big change in your life this early spring. You have been coasting along, not always aware of what is next these past couple of years. Now it's time to live your life and not worry what others think. You are on track for travel this coming year, both mentally and psychically, to a better life.

Emma Watson goes topless in new drama!

British actress Watson Emma has graduated from Hogwarts some decidedly more adult roles.

According to The Sun newspaper the "Harry Potter" actress goes topless in the drama "Regression".

The 24-year-old starlet's latest role, however, is anything but sexy. The which drama, co-stars Meryl Ethan Streep and

Hawke is about Angela Gray, the daughter of a man who sexually abuses

"Regression" isn't scheduled to hit theaters until August 2015, but reports say that the movie is being previewed in U.S. theaters, and viewers are expressing concerns over Watson's allegedly revealing scene.

One moviegoer reportedly described the scene as "useless and ineffective" adding:

"You can see her breasts but they are partially obscured. I think she may have been wearing pasties to cover her nipples."

Oo-er...

Watson has recently made some deliberate career choices to move away from her iconic Harry Potter character, the wizard brainy teen Hermione, including starring in the Biblical epic "Noah" and her upcoming political drama "Colonia Dignidad."

Meanwhile, Watson has been named "Feminist Celebrity of 2014" by an online poll conducted by Cosmopolitan in partnership with Ms. Foundation For Women.

Foundation president and CEO, Teresa Younger, said in a statement: "We celebrate all feminists every day, but today we're giving a hat tip to celebrities who helping to promote women's equality."

The actress notably made headlines this year when she delivered a widely acclaimed speech about feminism at a United Nations meeting in September.

Sounds like young Emma is getting rather edgy these days... I like it!

Christmas time in LA can be quite odd to us Brits, for whom the festive usually season means being bundled up in fleece jackets, with scarves barely exposing the face, chattering teeth dealing and with extremely long check-out queues in all the stores.

But spending the holidays in L.A. is a whole different ball game. Although temperatures have dropped a little, we are still in the double digits at night and the days are ripe for shorts and tees. Especially at Christmas, this town seems more transient than ever, with many of us flocking to local airports to getaway to distant lands.

I'm writing this from Mexico right now, Ixtapa to be precise. And the weather is awful, which of course, being British, gives me something to complain people's mood. Well on the bright side, (pun intended) it makes for taking great moody photos.

For those who have stayed in situ, LA becomes lot easier circumnavigate at this time year; of beach IS actually 20 minutes form Hollywood. You CAN get to downtown in under 15. (Which, by the way, at the wrong time of day during the rest of the year can take 45 minutes to travel 5 miles)

New Year's Eve Plans

It's always a funny one, New Year's Eve, it seems most people set their expectations too high to have a good time, and end up disappointed. Trying to spend it with the right people and how many? Which location?

Why not spend it at home and invite everyone you know and watch how all the excuses fly in. It's gray because you don't have to let anyone down and your true friends will probably be the only ones to show! Make a punch bowl and get some nuts, cheese selection crackers and grapes and voila! a good night is had by all.

Holidays are not holidays without a little lubrication. And with that in mind here is my special holiday punch recipe (adjust accordingly)

1 750ml bottle of rum 11 of ginger beer 3 cups of orange juice 3 cups of lemonade 5 orange slices 20 Maraschino cherries plus throw in some juice Cinnamon spices Stir lots and serve.

I'll be back in the chair in the New Year and as always Brits in LA has a plenty of good stuff planned in the coming months. In the meantime please enjoy your time off and don't take the LA weather for granted....

See you in the New Year!

Giroud 'sorry' for headbutt

Arsenal boss Arsene Wenger has admitted Olivier Giroud deserved to be sent off against QPR, but confirmed the striker has apologised for his dismissal.

Giroud, 28, was shown a red card for headbutting Nedum Onuoha in the second half of the Gunners' 2-1 victory on Boxing Day.

"It was a deserved red card," said Wenger, celebrating his 400th Premier League win as Arsenal manager.

"Madness is a strong word - he didn't kill him. But he touched him and should not have done it."

Giroud will begin a three-match suspension, which includes league games against West Ham and Southampton and an FA Cup tie against Stoke.

"Olivier Giroud knows he made a mistake and I know him well enough to think that he will not do it again," added Wenger, whose team are now sixth in the league.

"He told me he was pushed in the back and that projected him into the keeper. Usually he's a guy who's in control of his response."

Former England striker Alan Shearer told Match of the Day: "The reason he gets angry is that Onuoha gives him a nudge, but the reaction is pathetic.

"What on earth is he doing? His team were cruising. He's been out injured for a large part of the season and now he's going to miss three games for something like that. It's just ridiculous."

Arsenal were 1-0 up thanks to Alexis Sanchez's header before

FLASHPOINT: Giroud was dismissed for this encounter with Nedum Onuoha

Giroud's sending-off and, despite playing with 10 men for the majority of the second half, they doubled their advantage through Tomas Rosicky.

Charlie Austin set up a nervy climax, converting from the penalty spot after Mathieu Debuchy brought down Junior Holliett, but the Gunners held on to remain within touching distance of the top four.

Wenger admitted his men were nervous in the closing stages.

He said: "Our game is about psychology and the mental aspect. In the final part of the game when the result is not settled, it's always very important."

Relentless Chelsea roll on

Leaders Chelsea tightened their grip on the Premier League's top spot with a commanding victory over West Ham on Boxing Day.

The Blues had already come close through Oscar and Gary Cahill when John Terry turned in Diego Costa's header from close range.

After a tame first half, West Ham offered more in the second, but their hopes were snuffed out by Costa's drilled finish just after the hour.

Morgan Amalfitano hit the post late on but Chelsea racked up 28 shots at goal.

Chelsea look set to finish 2014 at the top of the table - and the quality of their performance suggested they may well still be there in May.

Their manager Jose Mourinho accused West Ham of playing "19th century football" after the teams' goalless draw at Stamford Bridge in January, but this Blues side, with the attacking threat Costa and Cesc Fabregas, never looked like being denied.

The visitors' style has taken a quantum leap forward since - with 29 goals in their first 17 league games this season compared to 14 over the same period in 2013-14 but it was clear as soon as the team sheets were published that Sam Allardyce intended a performance defensive similar to 11 months ago.

The West Ham manager dropped Alex Song and Diafra Sakho to the bench ahead of Sunday's meeting with Arsenal and told television before kick-off that "we have to stop Chelsea - it's as simple as that".

His ambitions were almost undermined by Carl Jenkinson's lapse inside the first five minutes.

The right-back, on loan from Arsenal, allowed Oscar to dart in behind him and was relieved to see the Brazilian blaze over from six yards out after latching onto Willian's floated ball in.

But it was only a temporary reprieve.

Gary Cahill thumped a shot straight at Adrian and the seemingly inevitable Chelsea opener arrived after Eden Hazard almost wriggled his way in on goal.

James Collins' last-ditch tackle had denied the Belgian on that occasion, but from the resulting corner the defender lost Terry, who was free to poke in as Costa flicked on.

The Blues did not let up and Costa punted over when well placed before Branislav Ivanovic appealed in vain for a penalty as he went down under Andy Carroll's challenge.

For West Ham, with only 27% of possession, Chelsea's slim scoreboard advantage was the only positive to take from the first half.

The away side briefly flickered into life after the break and Terry had to be alert to cover across and block Valencia's route to goal.

Sakho and Song were introduced for the Hammers but, just as a few concerns could be felt around Stamford Bridge, Costa's dead-eyed finish ensured the home fans could enjoy the final half hour in comfort.

Falcao catches the eye as United pick up steam

Manchester United made it 11 Boxing Day wins in a row, with a 3-1 victory against Newcastle at Old Trafford on Friday.

Wayne Rooney put United in front from a fine Radamel Falcao cross.

Excelling in central midfield, Rooney added his 12th Premier League goal against Newcastle and then provided the cross for Robin van Persie's header.

Papiss Cisse netted a late consolation from the spot for Newcastle but Louis van Gaal's team are now unbeaten in eight Premier League matches.

reflect on referee Mike Jones' failure to spot Juan Mata clipping Yoan Gouffran's heels inside the box when the contest was still goalless.

But once Rooney had completed a sensational move to nudge United ahead, there was no way back for the visitors.

Falcao has made a limited impact since joining the Red Devils on loan from Monaco on transfer deadline day.

But his slide to reach Mata's cross-field pass and first-time cross provided Rooney with a tap-in that brought Old Trafford to its feet.

Falcao was a key could figure in the second too, nipping in to win possession inside the Newcastle half.

Phil Jones quickly found Mata, whose pass provided Rooney with the opportunity to heap even more misery on the team he has scored against in the league more often than any other.

Rooney came close to a hat-trick when he floated a free-kick onto the roof of Jak Alnwick's goal.

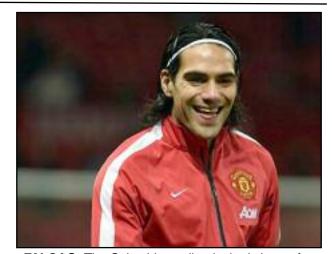

Instead, he had to make do with an assist, providing an excellent cross-field ball for Van Persie, who fired home from close range.

It was not a day for Newcastle's 17-year-old Adam Armstrong to shine on his first league start. The youngster had one early run at the United defence but it was soon snuffed out.

And while Cisse at least provided some cheer near the end, the Magpies suffered their fourth successive defeat in all competitions.

Newcastle manager Alan Pardew: "The difference between the two sides was the cutting edge of United. They were really good going forward.

"When we over committed they were clinical. They didn't have a raft of chances today, our goalie only made one save from (Antonio) Valencia and other than that, he didn't have too much to do.

"We would have liked to have put more pressure on them and got more out of the game.

"We've got two home games now and we need to try and take four points from those games to stabilise our position and then get some players back.

"We've got nine senior players not involved today and it is too many. I've had that for a good two and a half months now." Page 20 THE BRITISH WEEKLY, SAT. NOVEMBER 29, 2014

Battling City keep up the pressure

Manchester City scored three first-half goals survived snowstorm as they beat West Brom to stay three points behind Premier League leaders Chelsea on Boxing Day.

City were helped on their way by a mistake by West Brom keeper Ben Foster, who spilled a deflected Navas cross and allowed Fernando to swivel and score his first goal for City.

Five minutes later it was 2-0. Joleon Lescott cut out a Silva pass, but fouled the Spaniard as he pounced on to the loose ball in the area and Toure converted the resulting penalty with West Brom could not live with the speed at City which were attacking, but fared much better when they themselves.

Only poor finishing let them down, with Saido Berahino twice dragging the ball wide with only Joe Hart to beat.

James Morrison finally forced Hart into a stop of note with a fierce effort before half-time, but by then City were out of sight thanks to Silva's deft curling shot.

The weather meant the changed completely in the second half, with snow swirling around the ground and making visibility difficult.

'individual errors'

West Brom fared rather better but their finishing did improve, with Silvestre Varela wasting another good opening when he fired wide at the far post.

Alan Irvine's side had won just one of their previous seven matches and they never looked capable of the kind of comeback that would have allowed them to improve that record.

They did at least end the game on a high note, with Hart's attempted punch eventually bouncing over the line off an unwitting Ideye, to give the £10m striker

"We looked as if we were very much in the game but we made individual errors that when you make them in the Premier League are costly, and when you make them against Manchester City they are extremely costly."

When asked about speculation over his future, Irvine added:

"The chairman will make a decision as far as that is concerned. I can't control it.

"Can I be confident about it? necessarily, because I don't know what the thinking is.

"All I can do is work as hard as I do and keep on trying to get the right kind of performances and results."
