#HoldAmysHand: Woman whose battle against cancer inspired thousands dies aged 37

LOCAL EXPAT, Brits in LA member and showbusiness journalist Amy Watts passed away this week, finally succumbing to the colon cancer against which she had battled so bravely.

Amy's valiant fight December was cancelled. against the killer disease following her diagnosis last year has inspired countless others around the globe, and the internet movement Hold Amy's Hand raised more than £100,000 to allow her to fly back to Britain for pioneering treatment. Sadly, Amy's condition worsened before she could have the operation and she passed away in the early hours of Thursday morning.

Amy's death was announced on her fundraising Facebook page. The post read: "We're sorry to announce that our darling Amy passed away peacefully at 2am this morning.

"She was surrounded by her family and a lot of love."

campaign

Amy's cause had looked hopeless last summer when her doctors found the cancer had spread to her liver and she was quickly put course chemotherapy.

But Amy's condition worsened and operation planned for

But while home visiting family in the UK Amy sought a second opinion and was offered a glimmer of hope via a pioneering – and hugely expensive - treatment at a private hospital in Leeds.

Needing to raise £70,000, Amy's friends rallied round and launched an internet campaign using social media and the hashtag #holdamyshand, which quickly went viral and enjoyed endorsements from celebrities including Russell Crowe and Simon Cowell.

'lovely young woman'

With help from friends and well wishers around the globe - and a little help from Virgin Atlantic - Amy was able to get back to England for the operation, while her campaign raised an astonishing £100,000.

In a message on the campaign website, Amy's friends wrote: "Amy Watts - our good friend, journalist, Taconteur, comedienne, wearer of unique fashion, sparkly shoes and many hats, Dr Who, Suede and

"So it's time to give her ours."

Amy truly was stunned by the outpouring of support she received, with stars including Matt Goss, Kylie Minogue, Barry Gibb and a whole host of others tweeting and retweeting about her plight while thousands donated to her fund.

Music and TV mogul Simon Cowell tweeted to his 11.3 million followers: "Amy Watts, a lovely young woman I first met more than 10 years ago needs our support."

Tracey Neville, sister of former Man United footballers Gary and Phil, also tweeted her support as she went to school with Amy in Bury, Greater Manchester.

"Amy Watts a girl who me n Phil Neville went 2 school with has stage 4 cancer & needs £100,000 for a lifesaving op. Please support," she wrote.

Her campaign had more

But sadly Amy's condition deteriorated before she was able to benefit from pioneering surgery.

The post announcing Amy's death concluded: "This may come as a

The former city worker 'smashing' Islamic State

■ "The firefights are very one sided and we've been overrunning their positions quickly" - Macer Gifford

A former Young Conservative who gave up his City job to fight Islamist militants in Iraq has told Sky News he has had "amazing success" in fierce battles with Islamic State.

Speaking to Sky News, 'Macer Gifford', who is operating under an assumed name, left in December to join the Kurdish People's Protection Unit (YPG) in northern Iraq, insisting he would not be taken alive by the enemy.

Speaking of his latest battle he said: "We completely smashed them. We've taken a huge amount of land from ISIS (Islamic State) and had some amazing successes over the past week or so.

"The firefights are very one sided and we've been overrunning their positions quickly because they don't have heavy weaponry. When we ambush them they're not expecting us at all."

The 28-year-old, speaking from the Iraqi town of Tel Hamis, claimed the fear and violence spread by IS was leading to inaction in the West and he felt he had to do something.

"I had a regular job in the City and was watching with horror what was coming out of Iraq as I know everyone else was. I believe in British values and democracy so I made the decision to come here and help in any way I can.

"My family haven't taken my decision very well. I call my mum whenever I can get a signal and she's obviously concerned for my welfare but I have no immediate plans to come back."

Mr Gifford fought alongside 25-year-old former Royal Marine Konstandinos Scurfield who was killed in Iraq's northern province of Hasakah last week, and 28-year-old Australian Ashley Johnson who was killed days earlier.

Mr Scurfield's family said they were devastated to learn of his death , adding they were "reeling" and "struggling to get our heads around everything".

A statement released by the family said: "His flame might have burned briefly but it burned brightly with love, courage, conviction and honour and we are very proud of him."

Mr Gifford said: "I trained with Ash a month ago and on the first day of our last operation we lost 10 people, including him. He was shot twice in the chest just 20 metres from IS fighters.

"K onstandinos collected his body. Every time there was fighting he would go in and pick up the dead bodies.

"I've no idea what would happen if I were captured; but what about the thousands of Yazidi women that have already been captured and used as sex slaves in Raqqa? Isn't that enough to put boots on the ground?"

Mr Gifford's decision to fight IS mirrors that of Britons Jamie Read and James Hughes who claimed to have spent three weeks on the front line alongside Kurdish forces last year.

They were questioned by police on their return but, unlike other Britons that have travelled to fight in the Syrian civil war, they were not arrested.

Jihadi John's mother screamed 'that's my son'

The mother of Mohammed Emwazi knew instantly he was Jihadi John when he first appeared in front of the cameras in the murder of American journalist James Foley after recognising his voice, Kuwaiti investigators have been told.

Ghania Emwazi screamed "that's my son" as she view last August's footage of the k n i f e - w i e l d i n g executioner making a speech in English while standing behind Mr

Foley moments before beheading him.

But she did not tell the authorities, it is believed.

Mr Foley, 40, was the first of at least five Western hostages of the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant thought to have been executed at the hands of Mohammed Emzawi, who grew up in London.

Western media revealed last week that British and US intelligence had established that the killer was Emwazi, causing widespread shock and dismay in Kuwait, the Arab Gulf kingdom, where he was born.

But it emerged on Monday that Emwazi's parents had been aware of their son's activities for months after realising that his was the voice on the video, according to testimony given to Kuwaiti police by his father, Jassem, 51.

Mr Emwazi Snr was questioned along with one of his sons for most of the day on Sunday after being summoned by police.

Scientists reveal secret of why Indian food is so delicious

■ 'lack of overlapping flavours' makes curry taste so good It was in the 1780s, when curry powder was commercialized, that Indian cuisine first began to make its mark in Britain.

Back then, dainty corseted ladies found curry a little on the spicy side - but our palates have now evolved to adore the rich, savoury, complex melting pot of flavors that is synonymous with Indian food.

But why, exactly?

It turns out that it's because there are so few overlapping flavours in the dishes.

A group of researchers at the Indian Institute of Technology in Jodhpur trawled through a leading Indian recipe database, examining 2500 recipes to find out just what it is that makes Indian food so flavoursome in comparison to Western dishes.

"We found that average flavour sharing in Indian cuisine was significantly lesser than expected," researchers Anupam Jaina, Rakhi NK, and Ganesh Bagler reported.

In typical Western dishes, ingredients that share similar flavours are paired together - for example, beer is often paired with roast beef - which, when combined, give a distinct, unified taste.

Indian dishes however contain, on average, at least seven different ingredients, none of which share any similar qualities. This means each ingredient brings its own unique flavour when incorporated into the final dish.

Little Britain star splits from wife over TV cross dressing

■ Walliams and Stone call it quits because "Lara didn't like David's 'camp' persona"

LEADING British TV funnyman David Walliams has split from his wife because she didn't like talk of the comedian "being camp", it has been reported.

According to The Sun, the 31-year-old disliked the Little Britain star's "camp" persona – including his TV cross-dressing and his flirtations with Simon Cowell on Britain's Got Talent.

A source told the publication: "She didn't really understand the humour of it."

"There were obviously lots of issues within their relationship.

"But it had become clear Lara didn't like the constant talk about David being camp.

"She got tired of it being referenced all the time, especially when David seemed to play up to it in various photoshoots or TV sketches — or by flirting with Simon Cowell on Britain's Got Talent."

It was reported that David, 43, and Lara have agreed a trial separation after almost five years of marriage.

Lara left the family home – which the couple share with their one-year-old son Alfred – on Tuesday, leaving David "devastated".

According to The Sun, Lara took Alfred and the couple's dog Bert with her when she left their North London home.

A source close to the comedian said: "David has been putting on a brave face. But people close to him are very worried because they know he's devastated."

Meanwhile, the Mail Online reported that the split could be down to Lara's raunchy fashion shoots.

The Dutch-beauty currently stars alongside Justin Bieber in the Calvin Klein Jeans campaign in which the pair are pictured in a number of sexy poses including one where Lara has her hand down the 21-year-old's trousers.

A source told the site: "She has been really sexing it up lately, while she and David have not been spending any time together.

"It has made the issues between them very obvious. People are speculating that David is really, really jealous and insecure about her.'

David and Laura began dating in September 2009 before tying the knot at London's Claridge's Hotel in May 2010.

Three years later, in May 2013, the couple welcomed their son Alfred, months after David announced Lara's pregnancy on Twitter.

He wrote: "Some wonderful news. My beautiful wife Lara is pregnant. We are having a baby! It is due next year and we both couldn't be happier. Dx."

Worse than Rwanda!

■ New study reveals shocking disparity of life prospects between Britain's rich and poor

Babies born in the poorest parts of the UK today have worse prospects for a long and healthy life than those born in Rwanda, official figures show.

New estimates of "Healthy Life Expectancy" – the length of time people would normally expect to lead a full and active life in good health – show a gap of more than 18 years between the richest and poorest parts of England.

The figures from the Office for National Statistics also call into the question the assumption that members of the baby boom generation will enjoy a long and carefree retirement, with half of men and 40 per cent of women likely already to be in poor health before they reach pension age.

Based on current health trends and death rates, it is estimated that a baby boy living in a neighbourhood classed as being within the most deprived 10 per cent of England is likely to live 74.1 years but only 52.2 years in generally "good" health.

By contrast a boy born the same day in one of the least deprived 10 per cent of areas would have 83.1 years to live on average and 74 years in good health.

Girls born in the most deprived areas of England are expected to live 52.4 years in "good" health, compared with 71.3 years for those in the richest areas.

most deprived

The gap of more than 18 years in male Healthy Life Expectancy (HLE) at birth mirrors the contrast between the developed and developing worlds.

According to figures from the World Health Organisation, average male HLE in Rwanda currently stands at 55 years, almost three years longer than in the poorest parts of England.

The estimate for boys in the most deprived parts of England is on a par with those for Botswana, Gambia, Guyana and Djibouti and only two years more than that for those born in Burkina Faso, one of the poorest countries in the world.

Duncan Exley, director of the Equality Trust think-tank, said: "The UK is one of the most unequal countries in the developed world.

"This is damaging our health, our social bonds and our economy – 82 per cent of Brits think inequality has gone too far.

'huge difference'

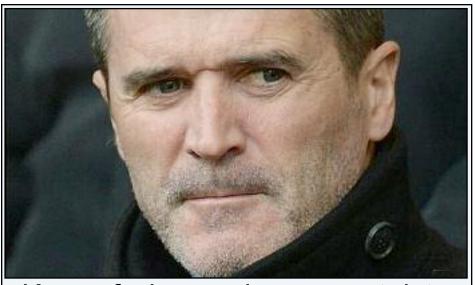

"Unless the government adopts a clear target to reduce inequality, it will have to deal with a country and an economy that are unnecessarily unhealthy".

Janet Morrison, chief executive of Independent Age, the charity working with older people, said: "The huge difference in how long people can expect to live in good health demonstrates why it is meaningless to talk about a generation of wealthy, carefree pensioners.

"The reality is that many older people will be approaching retirement age having already experienced many years of poor health and will have relatively few years ahead of them.

"It demonstrates why it is essential that we focus efforts on measures to help prevent older people from becoming ill in the first place and on having excellent health and social care services for them if they do."

Keano facing road rage court date

Football star Roy Keane has been issued with a court summons over an alleged road rage confrontation with a Greater Manchester taxi driver.

The Republic of Ireland assistant manager and ex-Manchester United captain is said to have confronted the driver in Altrincham on $30\,\mathrm{January}$.

Police were called to Ashley Road to a report a man had "behaved aggressively towards another man".

Keane is due to appear at Trafford Magistrates' Court on 31 March.

Keane, 43, who lives in Hale, has previously managed Sunderland and Ipswich and left the role of assistant manager at Aston Villa in November. His career also saw him play for League of Ireland side Cobh Ramblers, Nottingham Forest, Celtic and the Republic of Ireland.

He has also worked as a football pundit for ITV.

'They don't let me see my grandson George'

- Prince said to be frustrated that he never sees his grandson
 - Charles airs his concern at the 'March of the Middletons'

Following the birth of Prince George, the Prince of Wales described the experience of becoming a first-time grandfather as 'a unique moment in anyone's life'.

But nearly two years after this very public display of affection, Charles is said to have become increasingly perplexed about the peripheral role he occupies in the young Prince's life.

At the heart of the heir-to-the-throne's frustrations is the so-called 'Middletonisation' of his son William's life - specifically the inordinate amount of time he spends with his in-laws Michael and Carole, with whom he recently holidayed in Mustique for Carole's 60th

In fact, so vexed is Charles about the so-called 'March of the Middletons' that he has complained to friends: 'They never let me see my grandson.'

Adds a source: 'Carole has rather taken over, dictating when George naps, when and what he eats. All in all, behaving like she's Queen Carole.'

'excellent relationship'

It is certainly true there have been few, if any, trips to Charles's Gloucestershire home Highgrove over the past year. Some think it's a deliberate move on William's part to protect his young family from suffering the same stiff, and often unhappy, upbringing he endured. Certainly, Carole, who is the granddaughter of a miner and was brought up in a council house, is not thought to enjoy any particularly strong bonds with Charles's wife, Camilla.

Most of William and Kate's time is spent at their Norfolk home, Anmer Hall, on the Queen's Sandringham estate, where the Prince has been busy revising for his Air Transport Pilot's Licence.

The Middletons are frequent visitors and play an active role in the household. They stayed there over Christmas, when William pointedly hosted lunch for them on Christmas Day rather than eat with the Queen, as is traditional.

Last month, it emerged that William's housekeeper and gardener had abruptly quit after just five months at Anmer.

The couple, Amy and Colin Wood, have returned to their previous jobs at Sandringham.

'Staff have complained that Anmer is not run like a proper royal household,' said a source. 'It is too middle class.'

Yesterday, when asked when Charles had last seen little George, a Clarence House spokesman unusually issued a statement: 'We would not comment on the specifics of private arrangements. 'His Royal Highness enjoys an excellent relationship with his grandson.'

SHOVED INTO THE BACKGROUND? Charle has reportedly lamented his lack of access to Prince George

Restaurant brands hen party 'chav cheap trash' after bad web review

A bride-to-be was stunned when an upmarket restaurant responded with a vicious tirade after she and her group complained about the poor attitude from staff in a Facebook review.

M e l i s s a G r o g a n - M o r g a n celebrated her hen night at 47 King Street West in Manchester city with a group of 17 friends and and family.

Although they enjoyed the food, Grogan-Morgan and her party were left dissatisfied with the level of customer service they'd received from staff and took to Facebook to complain about the poor service.

The review complained that her party was split between two tables, fresh starters were not made available for latecomers and the manager had a "terrible attitude" despite the group spending £600 at the venue.

The one-star review prompted a scathing response from an unnamed member of staff who called the group "ugly", "cheap chav trash", "the worst, most vile people to ever grace our restaurant" and added "we pity the groom".

Speaking to the Manchester Evening News, Grogan-Morgan said: "I'm just in complete disbelief at how rude and arrogant they have been - it's left a bit of a shadow over the whole occasion."

scathing "It's absolutely om an shocking customer mber of service - if I'd have lled the treated a customer like that at work I'd have been sacked. I can't imagine talking to anyone like that never mind a paying customer. We spent a lot of money to the with them, only to Evening receive a flood of abuse."

Is Rod Stewart the new Ozzy Osbourne?

■ Latest fly-on-the-wall show looks set to make the leathery lothario into a TV star

WRINKLY ROCKER Rod Stewart the following in footsteps of his old mucker Ozzy Osbourne by starring in a reality TV series the E! channel.

The dapper 70-year-old recently began filming for the series in Los Angeles, which will feature the everyday lives and adventures of the singer, with along his 43-year-old model wife Penny Lancastaer, and their two young sons (Alastair, nine, and Aiden, four). Also expected to flit in and out of the show are the leathery lothario's other children - musician Sean, 34, and socialite Kimberly, 35. Their half-brother Ashley Hamilton and his father George will also appear.

celebrity fly-on-the-wall genre was pioneered by Ozzy over a decade ago, with the adventures of the former Black Sabbath singer, his tough-as-nails wife Sharon and his incontinent dogs proving irresistible for watchers worldwide. And then E! really struck gold with Keeping Up With The Kardashians, the show featuring the of adventures the extended Jenner clan which has become a global phenomenon and made a worldwide star out of Kim Kardashian and her prominent derriere.

It's unconfirmed whether Rod's four other children from relationships - Ruby, 27, Renee, 22, Liam, 20, and Sarah Streeter, 52 - will feature in his new show but it promises to be a very 21st century saga about a sprawling extended showbiz family.

A source close to the family, speaking to the Daily Mirror, said: "Rod is very proud of his family and he wants to show everyone that.

"He will star very much as the dad, and it will show he has kept things together.

"Sean has a very prominent role as does Kimberly.

"There will be some ups and downs but they are keen to show that the Stewart's ate close and they enjoy themselves.

"This is huge for them, the family ate hoping this is the start is something big for them."

Given his ease in front of the camera and his famously arch sense of humor, Rod Stewart should make good TV. He certainly doesn't need the money, with reliable estimates putting his fortune in the £140m range.

Rod's main motivation then, would seem to be the vanity of the aging star. As one British columnist put it this week: "Stewart presumably fancies winning over a younger audience who don't remember him croaking hits eye-wateringly tight leopardskin trousers on Top of the Pops. This might also be an attempt to pass on the mantle of fame to his wife and children."

Bumblebrag: robber's posts get him nicked armed robber boasted on Facebook about his plans to raid a supermarket minutes before he was stopped by armed police.

Andrew Hennells, (above) 32, posted a comment on his profile which read: "Doing. Tesco. Over" at 19:25 GMT on 13 February.

Just 15 minutes later, after he had held up the King's Lynn store, police caught Hennells with a knife and £410.

He admitted robbery at Norwich Crown Court.

A member of the public had reported seeing man demanding cash at the Tesco store before he fled to a nearby pub, Norfolk Police said.

Sgt Pete Jessop said Hennells's Facebook confession had made it easier to secure a guilty

"It was a bizarre and unusual case," he said.

"The pictures and posts on Facebook helped us confirm what we already knew.

He is due to be sentenced on 8 April.

Sunderland footballer Adam Johnson arrested over claim of sex with 15-year-old

Sunderland and England footballer Adam Johnson was arrested this week after the father of a 15-year-old girl, who is alleged to have had sex with the midfielder, reported the matter to the police having reportedly found out about it after his daughter boasted about a relationship with Johnson on social media.

The Telegraph reports that the 15-year-old, who cannot be named for legal reasons, spoke about an alleged relationship with the Premier League footballer to friends on social media. 27-year-old Johnson was arrested on Monday after Durham Police raided his £1.85 million house, after reportedly receiving a complaint from the girl's Police confirmed that Johnson was questioned and bailed until 18 March, and he has also been suspended by Sunderland Football Club pending an outcome of investigation.

It is also claimed that Johnson has posed in pictures with the girl, while Durham Police issued a reminder that identifying someone who may or may not be a victim of a sexual offence, including on social media, is against the law.

Johnson's girlfriend, Stacey Flounders, is said to be willing to "stand by" Johnson after his arrest after her family protested his innocence and claimed he "has done nothing wrong".

Flounders reportedly gave birth to the couple's daughter just seven weeks ago, and her mother told the Daily Mirror: "They are still very close and are absolutely still together. He is 100 per cent innocent and we will stand by him. He hasn't been found guilty of anything.

"He is a great lad and has not done anything wrong. This is a horrible situation."

Johnson was absent for Sunderland's 1-1 draw with Hull on Tuesday night after starting his suspension immediately, with his Black Cats team-mate Jack Rodwell cancelling out Dame N'Doye's opener.

After Johnson's arrest on Monday morning, a police spokesman confirmed: "A 27-year-old man was arrested earlier today on suspicion of sexual activity with a girl under 16. He remains in police custody and is helping officers with their inquiries."

Sunderland also issued a brief statement, which read: "Sunderland AFC has confirmed that Adam Johnson has suspended from the club, pending the outcome of a police investigation."

Check right in; this 'Hotel' is as comfy as ever...

Time for rebirth and rejuvenation with another trip to Jaipur, India to visit with "The Dames"(Judi and Maggie, collectively, as they are referred to by screenwriter Ol Parker) and company, all of whom are still happily residing as their respective characters at the Best Exotic Marigold Hotel.

When we last saw our favorite group of British retirees, each had left their native England to head to what was advertised as a luxurious retirement hotel in Jaipur. Unfortunately, the hotel was anything but luxurious, yet as moviegoers and fans of the first film know, the Best Exotic Marigold Hotel was a prime example of making a silk purse from a sow's ear. As the overly- excited hotel owner Sonny Kapoor hilariously tried to woo his girlfriend, stand up to his mother and remodel the hotel, the real story was in the new life, friendships and family being built by the hotel's

By story's end, Evelyn Greenslade was firmly ensconced in the Jaipur workplace and had more than a romantic notion for the shy Douglas Ainslie, especially since he had called it quits with his wife Jean and she had returned to England; Norman was enjoying many a viagra-free night with the lovely Carol; Madge had discovered there was life, romance and sex after 70 and was being courted by multiple wealthy men; and Muriel Donnelly, well, she had stepped in as Sonny's co-manager and turned the hotel into a profitable venture - so profitable and popular in fact that it leads us right into the sequel...

and renovated into a beauteous, reflective refuge amidst the energy and excitement of Jaipur, it's clear to Sonny and Muriel that the solution to their success is to expand. Which is why the film opens in, of all places, California, USA, with Sonny and Muriel speeding along Route 66 towards a meeting with the head of international chain of hotels, hoping to obtain his backing for a second run-down property they've got their eye on.

Following what the hyper-kinetic Sonny sees as a successful meeting, the two return to Jaipur where Sonny is being reluctantly immersed in wedding plans for his upcoming nuptials to long -suffering girlfriend, Sunaina. But Sonny being Sonny, the wedding is on the backburner and he focuses all of his energies, wishes and dreams on obtaining The Second Best Exotic Marigold Hotel. Knowing that an hotel inspector will be coming to Jaipur incognito to check out the business, Sonny leaps into action with fawning exuberance at appearance of Guy Chambers, a novelist from the United States. Certain that Guy is the inspector, Sonny falls all over himself trying to impress the man with obsequious attention. Adding a greater wrinkle for Sonny is that Guy is attracted to Sonny's widowed mother.

Meanwhile, Evelyn and

Douglas grow ever closer, although neither wants to make the "official" first move and they seem to be idling along in neutral with their engines getting ever hotter. Madge is in constant deliberation over which of her wealthy gentleman callers she will say "yes" to when each the pops marriage question she is certain is forthcoming.

Once again directed by John Madden and written by Ol Parker, we have Parker's wife Thandie Newton to thank in large part for this charming sequel as, according to Parker, it was Newton who posed the questions to her husband, "What happens to them? What happens when Evelyn and Douglas ride off on the motorbike at the end of the first movie? The answer to her questions, and mine, are now found in this charming sequel.

Quite pleasing are a few unsuspected twists and turns that the story takes and some of the tacitly poignant visual metaphors that tie the two films together either in a neat little bow or as a kite string for a third film.

Character growth is wonderfully designed while retaining the very traits we fell in love with within each individual character. Nothing, however, is as magical as watching Judi Dench and Bill Nighy together as Evelyn and Douglas. You quickly find yourself tacitly urging them both onward into a more permanent deepening relationship every time they appear on screen. Nighy is simply with charming bumbling schoolboy nervousness and Dench is perfection, capturing the hesitancy of a first love. Their pairing (love interests of each other for the fourth time on screen) is a master class in nuance and performance.

Wonderful it is to see Celia Imrie's Madge find a moral compass beyond money and Imrie plays it with nuanced truth. Equally charming is the casual refinement that Diana Hardcastle brings to Carol. Another light touch and some real comic fun comes courtesy of Penelope Wilton who returns as Douglas' l o n g - s u f f e r i n g, sign-the-divorce papers wife Jean.

Sadly, Richard Gere is so good as Guy Chambers that one wants to see more of him in the film. So affable, so at ease, so matter-of-fact, handsome and sexy. The tentativeness he brings to Guy Chambers in his pursuit of Mrs. Kapoor is perfection. Once again, director John Madden delights with the color and beauty of Jaipur but what I find interesting in this go round, is that there seems to be more hustle and bustle of the area around the hotel as if community revitalization also occurred with the continued residency of our seniors. Nothing is as quiet and calm.

I never wanted to check out of the first "Best Exotic Marigold Hotel". Charming, poignant and touched with romance and whimsy, we all should also be this fortunate in our golden years...

Brits in LA: Meet A Member

Meet a Member: Pippa Hinchley

Meet Pippa Hinchley from London, who moved to LA six years ago to pursue acting and screenwriting

I have been an actor since my teens with lots of TV, theatre and a few film credits, but most people remember me as superbitch Elaine Fenwick in Coronation Street - if they remember me at all, that is.

I became screenwriter more learner recently, did an MA at fe LCC in London, then muriting for the hit teen a C5 drama Sophia's er Diary and had my short da Breaking Out selected for competition in Cannes - which was nice years.

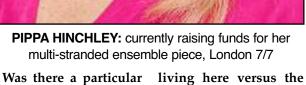

Los Angeles inspired my very silly live and web sketch show Live!Sex!Girls! which has featured several BLA funny women. It has also led to a first foray into feature producing with my film LONDON 7/7 - a multi-stranded ensemble piece set on the day of the London bombings and which will commemorate the 10 year anniversary.

I have a great team on board this very Brit project - CD Jane Deitch, up-and-coming Brit director Rebekah Fortune, and I am co-producing with fellow BLA member Elizabeth Arends and Nevision in the UK who produced all the Ruth Rendell mysteries - so all pretty exciting.

We are raising funds right now - any of you BiLAs still paying UK taxes do visit the website if you have a mind to, there is a fabulous tax break for investors. (And of course we would love to hear from ANY interested peeps...

I'm also collecting personal stories for the end of the film - if you were there, have a memory or story from that day - or just simply where you were when you heard the news, we would love you to share it on the LONDON 7/7 Facebook page, located at: www. facebook.com /london.07.07

Despite this being a UK based film I have found that the contacts made here in the last few years and the 'can do' attitude of LALA has helped tremendously. That conversation you had semi-sloshed in a bar 3 years ago is NEVER wasted! www.london7/7themov ie.com reason you chose LA? I don't speak Hindi so Bollywood was a no-go.

What of you hope to achieve by living in Los Angeles?

More writing, more produced credits and a decent tan.

What one thing do you miss from home?
My mates.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus the UK?

That the 'business we call show' is EVERYWHERE. The plumber just pitched his screenplay to me. Oh and the weather. Don't we all love the weather?

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us? I just moved to Topanga Canyon. It's beautiful, serene and full of fascinating, crusty old hippies. Lovely.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Please keep a low profile this month as the planets are in turmoil and moving swiftly. They will start benefiting you in April. Best thing all round is start nothing till then unless you have to.

TAURUS: What a change in pace you are due for and in order to prepare for this second wind you have to clear all unfinished tasks to make space for the new. By the end of this month you will be able to chill out a little.

GEMINI: Time to plan a trip, either one long or several shorter ones. All of this is happening in the second part of the month. Until then make time to rest as after mid-month your life will be moving swiftly forward.

CANCER: Trees that don't bend in the wind soon come tumbling down. With this in mind it is time you ate some humble pie with someone close to you. If you are not flexible you will be heading for a fall.

LEO: Mars the fire planet in your cousin sign of Aries will bring a seething situation to a head, possibly concerning the finances of someone close to you. The good news is if you take control now of what you can you will be in good shape by April.

VIRGO: Any frustrations you have in any area of life (most likely at work) will not get better by taking your frustrations out on others around you. Mercury your unpredictable boss going forward now is demanding you stay cool and calm.

LIBRA: You are ready to for a very new and much healthier lifestyle and it's right on time for Spring. Once decided, (which is the hardest part) you will be raring to go forward. You can reach out to a close friend who may not be saying much but is not doing too good.

SCORPIO: Some good energy planets are gathered in your cousin sign of Pisces. As these are complimentary to you in several ways expect a person of interest to you romantically to contact you just when you least expect it.

SAGITTARIUS: Just watch that temper if things don't always go the way you planned; life is an adventure and you need to remember that child-like quality which is unique to you. You will be doing much better come the end of March. Love is in the air!

CAPRICORN: This could be the month that it all comes together or you let it go. You started this year with a solar eclipse in your sign which signals endings. Remember when one door closes another will swing open. By now you could be ready for very positive changes.

AQUARIUS: Mid-March starts a new opportunity to travel and change your life in a different way to what you expected but none the less good. You are ready for those changes in a good way career or personally. Keep it all low key in any work situation.

PISCES: You are reputed to be the most romantic soul and also the most sensitive and there are a lot of positive planets in your sign now. This means different things to each Pisces and overall it is a most creative time.

Vanessa and her sister: the darker side of Bloomsbury

Exclusive interview with author Priya Parma and a review of her new novel about the lives of two scandalous sisters, Vanessa Bell and Virginia Woolf

Rating: ★★★★

"Virginia Woolf was not an easy person," says Vanessa and her Sisters author Priya Parma. "Brilliant, gifted, crackerjack fun to watch in action but never easy. So what would it have been like to be the person she loved best in the world? That person was her sister, the painter, Vanessa Bell."

Told through a fictional diary written by Vanessa and in letters and telegrams between the characters, Vanessa and her Sisters is the story of Vanessa, a gifted painter, and her sister Virginia, an even more gifted writer. While reading we forget the story is a novel. It's a story of fierce competitiveness, extending even to lovers, yet close family bonds that endure. As the author, Parma passes undetected. The storyteller invisible, the story is everything. It's as though we really had discovered Venessa's diary. And, there could be sequel.

Vanessa is a caring and humble devoted older sister who doesn't realize her real worth. As the years go by Vanessa begins to come into her own. The two sisters are part of a collective called the Bloomsbury Set, a group of famous artists and writers that includes Virginia Woolf and E.M. Forster. The group leads an avant-garde lifestyle living with lovers and open marriages. Uncertain about her own talent as an artist, in reality Vanessa's paintings are wonderful and just as relevant as her more famous sister's writing. Vanessa is told by her family that her art is not as important as Virginia's writing. Unfortunately, Virginia is mentally ill and very manipulative. Vanessa marries Clive Bell in 1907. Virginia is so jealous of anyone who takes Vanessa away from her that she does something that is unforgivable, but in time Vanessa will forgive.

"How trulv revolutionary they were," says Parma. "In 1910, this was a group of friends who threw out all of the social musts of their time. They made their own rules entirely overturned every commonly held idea of femininity, marriage, masculinity, love, friendship and fidelity. But when there are no rules, things can also go very wrong."

"I knew I wanted to write about the sisters but as I swam deeper and deeper into the research, I realized the book was about a forgotten, dark moment that threatened to fracture their relationship," says Parma.

For research, Parma read thousands of letters, postcards and telegrams to build her novel about Vanessa. The book covers about eight years from 1905 to 1912.

"I moved back to London and lived in Bloomsbury," says Parma. "And then I started in on the archives. The most fascinating research came at the end, when I was in editing process. Vanessa Bell's granddaughter, and so Virginia Woolf's great niece, reached out to me. She was extraordinarily generous and took me to Charleston Farmhouse and shared her marvelous Bloomsbury memories. She also read manuscript and gave me extraordinary notes riddled with wonderful details that no one but a member of the family could know."

"I was very lucky as the Tate Britain in London holds much of the B l o o m s b u r y correspondence," says Parma. "The most extraordinary documents I saw were not documents but sketches. Last spring I was able to see many of Vanessa Bell's never before seen sketches which have just been gifted to the Charleston Trust."

Parma is based in London and Hawaii. She was born in Washington D.C.

RIP Amy Watts...

There are so many words, and yet there are none. No words can describe the sadness of the passing of a friend that once important memorable days in one's life with laughter, fantasy and lots of fun.

Amy Watts, who passed away this week after a valiant battle with cancer, did this in my life, and on many occasions back in the day... I was the Doctor and Amy (for a short time) was my assistant. I still have the sonic screwdriver she bought me for my birthday in Though I had known and worked with Amy for many years back in the UK, when she first arrived in Los Angeles I became her "go-to" pal.

I helped Amy find an apartment and even convinced Tom Cruise to pose with her for The Daily Star as we lunched at the Beverly Hills

England's 6 Nations campaign hopes dashed in Dublin drubbing

■ THE Irish produced a rugby masterclass at the Aviva and derailed England's hopes of winning the tournament.

ENGLAND collapsed to an alarming 19-9 defeat by Ireland last weekend as their pursuit of a first RBS 6 Nations title under Stuart Lancaster derailed spectacularly at the Aviva Stadium.

Jonathan Sexton inspired the reigning champions' 10th successive victory by producing a masterclass in game management, while his half-back partner Conor Murray also flourished behind an Irish pack that played with furious intent throughout.

The only surprise at half-time was that they led by just six points despite having been superior in every department, with Sexton directing operations with calm authority.

And the manner in which they ratcheted up the intensity in the third quarter was reminiscent of New Zealand, with

IMPECCABLE EXECUTION: Ireland's Robbie Henshaw celebrates scoring against England during the RBS Six Nations match at the Aviva Stadium, Dublin

Sexton's vision initiating a try for Robbie Henshaw that established a 19-3 lead.

Inside centre Henshaw was named man of the match, but that accolade could easily have gone to Sexton who decorated his display with four penalties and a conversion.

England were over-run for lengthy spells of the second half and apart from a characteristic fightback in the final quarter, there was little to applaud in a chastening afternoon.

They had been out-thought and out-muscled in a loss that has worrying implications for their hopes of mounting a meaningful challenge at the World Cup and reduced their stirring victory over Wales in Cardiff three weeks ago to a distant memory.

In contrast, Ireland have confirmed their position as the dominant force in European rugby and their coronation for a second year in succession surely awaits on March 21, with only Wales and Scotland capable of halting their march to a Grand Slam.

The reputation of their head coach Joe Schmidt continues to soar and the Kiwi will have savoured this result and performance, having stated before the game that the 13th win of his 16 matches at the helm would be his most treasured achievement.

Schmidt may have to plan for the final two rounds without his bulldozing openside Sean O'Brien, however, as the biggest match of the 2015 Six Nations inevitably witnessed a significant concussion incident.

O'Brien was struck when tackled by Billy Vunipola, rising to his feet before lurching back over on to the turf as if drunk. Once regaining composure with the team doctor in attendance, he departed to bring his afternoon to an end.

BOYCOTT ALL OVER AGAIN? the Kevin Pietersen saga continues to drag on for sorry England

England return for wayward son KP?

Kevin Pietersen says he is going to "work" on a possible return to the England side.

The batsman, 34, was sacked in February 2014 but has received encouragement that he might be able to make a comeback by incoming England and Wales Cricket Board chairman Colin Graves.

Graves said the first step back for Pietersen was to play county cricket.

Pietersen, who is currently without a county side, said: "I'm going to try to work this out for sure."

The South African-born batsman was excluded from the England set-up after the 2013-14 Ashes series, which Australia won 5-0.

Talk of a Pietersen return has constantly reared its head, but ECB managing director Paul Downton appeared to end any hopes of a comeback following the release of the player's in f l a m m a t o r y autobiography in October, which was critical of many key ECB figures.

National selector James Whitaker also said at the time that there was "no way" Pietersen would ever get back into an England team.

But Graves refused to rule out a return for Pietersen during an interview with BBC Radio 5 Live's flagship Sportsweek program.

England could certainly do with Pietersen's talents at the current Cricket World Cup. The team have performed shambolically in the group stages and are facing the very likely prospect of not qualifying out of the group stage.

Eoin Morgan's team have failed to find form with either the bat and the ball and were beaten comfortably by Australia (by 111 runs) in their opening match, before absolutely hammered by New Zealand, losing 8 wickets with an astonishing 226 balls remaining. They finally grabbed a victory by beating the lowly Scots by 119 runs, before normal service was resumed on Sunday as they went down by nine wickets to Sri Lanka.

Kompany dropped to 'refresh' City - Pellegrini

Manchester Vincent captain Kompany was dropped to freshen up the side after their damaging loss at Liverpool, says manager Manuel Pellegrini.

Centre-back Kompany, 28, was an unused substitute for the 2-0 midweek win over bottom club Leicester City following a run of poor form.

Pellegrini, who made five changes, said: "He took it very well and without any problems. It was to refresh the team as it was for all those players."

Defender Pablo Zabaleta, midfielders Nasri Samir and Fernandinho. and forward Edin Dzeko also made way from the side that lost 2-1 Liverpool on 1 March.

Kompany has appeared in 19 of City's 28 games this season.

The £6m signing from Hamburg in 2008 was a key figure behind both of City's title triumphs in 2011-12 and 2013-14.

But his indifferent form lately has coincided with City falling off the pace in the title race.

Pellegrini's side had an identical record with Chelsea at the top of the Premier League on 1 January.

But they are currently five points behind Jose Mourinho's side with 10 games remaining.

Pellegrini refused to confirm if Kompany would return for the game against Demichelis and Eliaquim Mangala helped keep a clean sheet.

Chelsea edge closer to title

■ Hazard strike is the difference for ruthless Blues

Chelsea stayed five points clear at the top of the Premier League as a hard-fought win at West Ham on Wednesday night kept them on course for a first title in five years.

Eden Hazard headed the visitors ahead from Ramires's right-wing cross.

Ramires shot against the post for the visitors after the break before having a header brilliantly saved by Adrian.

West Ham troubled Chelsea throughout but wayward finishing ensured the visitors survived a nervy second half to hold on to another crucial victory.

Manchester City's win at home to Leicester means there is no change at the top of the Premier League and, with a game in hand, the title is Chelsea's to lose.

They were made to fight all the way for the three points, especially in a frenetic second half that saw the Hammers squander a host of WEST HAM UTD.....0 CHELSEA.....1 opportunities.

Chelsea's League Cup final win over Tottenham on Sunday was their first trophy since Jose Mourinho's return as manager in 2013, and they will hope there are more to come this campaign.

With only one defeat in their last 11 Premier League games, they looked on track again as, after dominating possession for 20 minutes, Hazard headed home Ramires's pinpoint cross, although the Chelsea star can consider himself lucky for not drawing an offside flag.

Mourinho's men have not had everything their own way in recent months, including an FA Cup exit to Bradford and a league draw with Burnley, but only a brilliant last-ditch tackle from Carl Jenkinson stopped Diego Costa from doubling the lead soon after.

Chelsea's minor slips are nothing compared to West Ham's league slump, having won only once in 10 league games before kick-off, falling from fourth to ninth.

Manager Sam Allardyce will point to the fact his side went into the match eight points better off than they were last season but they are in danger of their European hopes disappearing.

They had no shortage of chances at an atmospheric Upton Park though and, with better finishing from Sakho and Enner Valencia, they could easily have been level as they raised the tempo to rattle a below-par Chelsea.

In the second half, Ramires was denied by the post and Adrian before Willian had a shot cleared off the line, while Sakho was kept out by the impressive Thibaut Courtois as the Hammers put their visitors under heavy pressure.

Chelsea's big celebrations at the final whistle showed how hard

SPIT SPAT: Cissé accepts charge

Newcastle United's Papiss Cisse has accepted a Football Association charge of spitting at Manchester United defender Jonny Evans.

The striker, 29, faces a possible seven-game ban for his part in the incident, which happened during Manchester United's 1-0 win at Newcastle on Wednesday.

At press time Evans, 27, had yet to respond to the FA after being charged on Thursday.

However, he has denied deliberately spitting at Cisse.

Senegal international Cisse had earlier issued a statement apologising for his actions.

After the striker accepted the charge, Newcastle managing director Lee Charnley said: "Both ourselves and Papiss agree that this kind of behaviour is not acceptable.

"When you do something wrong you have to front up, admit your mistakes and accept the punishment.

"Papiss was proactive this morning in making a full and heartfelt apology, which he did in advance of any notification from the FA regarding this charge.

"This was something he felt strongly about and we fully support him in quickly accepting the charge."
