You're too weak!

- Gloves come off as Labour edge into two point lead
- Sturgeon and Farage hammer Miliband over austerity and NHS
- Latest poll reveals public's concern over Miliband's leadership

high risk decision to appear with SNP leaer Sturgeon, Ukip's Nigel Farage, Green leader Natalie Bennett and Plaid Cymru's Leanne Wood despite the absence of both David Cameron and Nick Clegg. It left the Labour leader as the only Establishment figure to suffer an onslaught from his smaller rivals, as he was repeatedly urged to adopt a more left-wing, anti-austerity policy programme.

Ms Sturgeon, who is set to win dozens of seats in Scotland and deprive Labour of a majority, told him bluntly: 'The truth is you're not strong enough.' And Mr Farage repeatedly accused him of 'lying' over the NHS,

> It was a disappointing end to what had started as a good day for Miliband, with the release of a new poll which showed that with just three weeks to go until the General Election Labour has edged into a narrow lead over the Tories – despite the fact that only a third of the public see Miliband as a 'capable leader'.

Farage 'insults' debate audience

■ UKiP leader under fire after slamming 'total lack of comprehension' among BBC audience

Nigel Farage was yet again the big talking point at Westminster this week, after claims he "insulted" the audience of the final televised showdown saying they had failed to understand the issues and were too left wing.

During heated debate over the shortage of affordable housing in the UK, the UKIP leader said that "even by the standards of the BBC", the audience was too far left.

He said: "There is a total lack of comprehension amongst this panel and the audience, which is a remarkable audience even by the left-wing standards of the BBC."

'real audience'

The UKIP leader was jeered as he was told by Ed Miliband that it was not a good idea to "insult the audience", who had been selected by an independent polling firm.

Mr Farage responded: "The real audience is sitting at home."

He went on to blame the housing problem on immigration and said: "I just wonder, I'm curious can I get any recognition from any of you that the demand side of this equation is that a rapidly rising population due to open-door immigration, started by Ed Miliband's Labour parties in the 1990s, has directly contributed towards the housing crisis."

Both Ms Sturgeon and Ms Wood rounded on the Conservatives' manifesto pledge to roll out the Right to Buy policy to 1.3m families in Housing Association properties.

Ms Sturgeon said it was "one of the worst ideas I've ever heard" and added it was a "policy that has had its day". She said it had been abolished in Scotland in favour of help to buy policies.

Ms Wood said Right to Buy had also been suspended in Wales and said it would simply increase the levels of homelessness.

Neither Mr Cameron or Nick Clegg took part in the televised showdown, however, Mr Miliband was on the stage for the 90-minute programme.

As the debate closed Mr Miliband issued a challenge to Mr Cameron to debate him head to head on live television - as the Prime Minister has repeatedly refused to do.

Looking directly at the camera, the Labour leader said: "Debate me and let the people decide."

In a veiled warning about a UKIP/Conservative coalition, Ms Sturgeon said Mr Farage was increasingly driving the decisions made in Westminster on immigration.

Ms Sturgeon said: "We need strong controls on immigration, of course we do, and we need to make sure people do not get away with abusing the system the rest of us pay for.

points system

"There are parts of the UK where housing and public services are under strain. I think the answer is to build more houses and invest in public services, not to scapegoat immigrants.

"I fear that the debate at Westminster on immigration is driven far too much by Nigel Farage and UKIP."

COMBATIVE: Farage asked Ed Miliband: "If you become prime minister, will you run a National Health Service, or continue it to be an international health service?

Mr Farage said Britain needed to "take back control of its borders" by leaving the EU and having an Australian-style points system. He said that UKIP was being unfairly abused on the subject of immigration.

He said: "When you lose an argument in politics you resort to abusing your opponent and we have seen quite a bit of this towards UKIP recently."

The most heated exchanges of the night came over the NHS when Mr Miliband demanded Mr Farage came clean over his wish to privatise the NHS

Mr Farage replied: "Ed is trying to defend a record that was all that good, was it? You bought the big five equity boys into the National Health Service and privatised a chunk of it, you saw the growth in MRSA, you presided over the Mid-Staffordshire hospital.

"If you become prime minister, will you run a National Health Service, or continue it to be an international health service? That is what voters want to know."

The leaders of the smaller parties had been setting out their credentials for coalition in the final televised debate ahead of the election.

With a majority looking unlikely all the small parties could play a crucial part in delivering either David Cameron or Ed Miliband to Number 10.

But Mr Miliband said he was not interested in a coalition with the SNP because she wanted to break up the Union.

He said: "I have f u n d a m e n t a l disagreements with you Nicola. You have not ruled out having a second referendum on independence in the next five years.

"We have very different views. I respect your view that you want to break up the country but that is not my view.

"I think it would be a disaster for the working people of Britain."

U-turn for Top Gear star after urging internet trolls to 'kill themselves'

■ Latest twist in BBC saga sees outgoing presenter defending Clarkson's heir apparent

THE LATEST twist in the Top Gear roadshow has seen James May forced to backtrack for suggesting Top Gear viewers who sent threatening tweets to Sue Perkins should 'kill themselves'.

Perkins, who became a favourite to replace the ousted Jeremy Clarkson after a flurry of bets, recently announced she was leaving Twitter as a result of the horrific abuse

In response, May said: 'If you're one of the people sending death threats to Sue Perkins, could you please do the world a much bigger killing favour yourself.'

The presenter quickly clarified: 'Obviously I don't actually want people to kill themselves but, really, we don't want them as fans.'

'Spend, spend, spend' football pools winner Viv Nicholson dies aged 79

■ Nicholson and her husband lived up to her promise, taking just three years to spend the £152,000 – the equivalent of £3.5m today – they won in 1961

Viv Nicholson, the football pools winner of "spend, spend, spend" fame whose life story became a West End musical, had died aged 79.

Nicholson and her husband, Keith, from Castleford, West Yorkshire, lived up to her pledge, taking just three years to spend the £152,000 jackpot they won in 1961 – the equivalent of £3.5m today.

They splashed out on cars, jewellery, furs, champagne parties and a sprawling ranch-style home, but after her husband was killed in a car crash four years later, a huge tax bill left her bankrupt.

Her son Howard said she had died after being diagnosed with dementia in 2009. In a statement posted on her website, he said: "We are saddened to announce the death of our much loved mum, Viv Nicholson. After suffering with dementia for five years, she died on 11 April at Pinderfields hospital with her sons by her side.

"Viv was a one-off in all ways – a loving and loved mother, a glamorous great grandmother and a friend to many."

After Keith's death, she struggled with alcohol and depression. In the years that followed she moved to Malta but was deported for fighting a policeman.

She once got a job singing Hey Big Spender at a Manchester strip club, but was swiftly fired for refusing to take off her underwear.

She married three more times.

In an interview with the Observer in 2003, she recalled that at the time

■ Pippa in hot water after chowing down on whale meat in Norway jolly

The Duchess of Cambridge's sister, Pippa Middleton, has been criticised by an animal welfare group for admitting to eating whale meat.

Ms Middleton has written about dining on smoked whale carpaccio in a travel review about a Norwegian skiing holiday that appeared on a national newspaper's website.

The International Fund for Animal Welfare (Ifaw) said she was "unwittingly setting a bad example" for other tourists.

In the article which appeared on the Daily Telegraph's website this week, Ms Middleton, writing about day three of the trip, said she and a

She said: "We dined on smoked whale carpaccio (which tastes similar to smoked salmon but looks more like venison carpaccio), followed by a signature rustic Norwegian dish of salted cod in tomato, with of hunks fresh homemade bread to mop up the sauce."

The organisation, Whale and Dolphin Conservation, reports on its website that Norway hunts minke whale under an "objection" to the International Whaling C o m m i s s i o n ' s moratorium on commercial whaling.

International Funnd for Animal Welfare said that in Norway whale meat was eaten by local people but their concern was if people in the public eye consumed the product it may encourage tourists to follow suit.

Philip Mansbridge, UK director of Ifaw, said: "It's likely that Pippa Middleton wasn't aware of the horrific suffering caused by commercial whaling nor the devastating damage that it causes to whale populations.

"By eating whale meat, she is unwittingly setting a bad example that may encourage other tourists to do likewise.

"We would hope she acknowledges her

Earlier she had enjoyed a steam bath and rubbed ice on her body in a 'snow spa' at the upmarket hotel, where she spent the night in a £170-a-night 'designer pod'.

The hunting and importation of whale meat is banned in Britain, as it is in most parts of the world, by both the International Whaling Commission and by the international wildlife convention CITES.

But Norway – as well as Japan and Iceland – has exploited legal loopholes that allow it to opt out of regulations. Last year it killed around 730 Minke whales, the highest number since it broke the moratorium on commercial whaling in 1993.

Campaigners have long called for a crackdown, arguing the hunting process is 'unimaginably cruel and inhumane'.'

Developer takes colorful revenge after being denied planning permission

Take a walk down South End in Kensington in London, home to the world's super-rich, and one house will catch your eye.

Painted in bright red stripes, the controversial £15m ($22m) home has been causing quite a stir. It was allegedly painted in protest at a council planning decision and has infuriated neighbours by Z i p p o r a h Lisle-Mainwaring, a wealthy Swiss-based property developer.

Residents surrounding her stripy townhouse in a cobbled cul-de-sac told reporters they are "horrendously unhappy" with the new exterior of the three-storey terraced home in South End, Kensington, and likened it to a "beachside hut".

Saskia Moyle who lives opposite the house with her father described it as an eye sore.

"I think most of us think it's a bit of an eye sore and aren't all that happy about it to be honest. Because especially when it's bright, it's glaring and it's quite distracting. As well as the fact that it's unfinished in the corner, drives me absolutely mad," she said.

The house owner's application to demolish the building and rebuild it with a two storey basement was turned down by Kensington and Chelsea council.

The stripes followed soon after the council's decision, prompting neighbours to speculate that the paint job was intended to make a point.

The plans were initially turned down by Kensington and Chelsea Council but approved on appeal.

However, a neighbour then lodged a legal challenge which means the case will go to the High Court in June where a final decision will be made.

Residents now believe that Mrs
Lisle-Mainwaring, a property developer, ordered the garish paint job - which took place under the cover of

"Yeah I think everyone's view is that it's a kind of childish retaliation against the opposition for not getting her way. It's sort of stamping her foot and 'I'll make your lives hell if I don't get what I want' kind of thing," said Saskia.

Despite their opinions on the bright red stripes, local residents could be powerless to force the owner to redecorate after the council said no planning laws had been broken because it is not a listed building.

Meanwhile, the house is now becoming a tourist attraction.

Farmer loses bid to keep castle

A farmer has been ordered to tear down a mock Tudor castle that he built after losing a seven year-legal battle.

Robert Fidler, (above) 63, says that it will be hard to demolish the four-bedroom castle at Honeycrock Farm, in Salfords, Surrey, but he now accepts: "I don't think I have any choice really."

Mr Fidler, who built the property without permission, has been fighting to save it from demolition since Reigate and Banstead Borough Council ordered it to be knocked down in 2008. The Government backed the council after an appeal last year.

'quite difficult'

Mr Fidler told the BBC: "Obviously it would be quite difficult to demolish something you are very proud of. I don't think I have any choice really.

it within 90 days, they can put me in prison."

In a statement, the council ruled out suggestions that the castle could stay, saying it would set an unacceptable precedent for development in the green belt.

It said: "The construction breached national and local planning rules designed to protect the green belt, which local authorities like ours have a duty to uphold."

Good news for wrinklies!

■ Middle age now lasts until 74 as baby boomers refuse to grow old

Collecting the state pension and bus pass at 65 has traditionally been seen as a watershed moment where middle age ends and the twilight years begin.

But new research suggests that old age now starts at 74, with middle age lasting at least nine years longer than current estimates.

Academics from the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis (IIASA) in Vienna, Austria, argue that old age should be measured not by age, but by how long people have left to live.

In the 1950s a 65-year-old in Britain could expect to live a further 15 years.

But today's baby boomers are expected to live far longer after retirement. A recent estimate by the Office for National Statistics suggests that the average retiree can look forward to drawing their pension for up to 24 years – as much as 50 per cent longer than their parents' generation.

Researchers say that old age should be defined as having 15 or fewer years left to live, which for the baby boomers means that they are still middle aged until their 74th year.

'healthier lives'

"If you don't consider people old just because they reached age 65 but instead take into account how long they have left to live, then the faster the increase expectancy, the aging is actually going on," said Sergei Scherboy, World Population Program Deputy Director,

"Older people in the future will have many characteristics exhibited by younger people today.

"What we think of as old has changed over time, and it will need to continue changing in the future as people live longer, healthier lives. 200 years ago, a 60-year-old would be a very old person.

Someone who is 60 years old today, I would argue is middle aged."

Categorising the point at which 'old age' begins is important for policy makers because it used as an indicator of increased disability, dependence and decreased labour force participation.

It is why the government is predicting a pensions black hole as more and more people retire and dip into savings pots.

'out of date'

Alan Walker, professor of social policy and social gerontology at the University of Sheffield, agreed that old age now begins much later than traditional assessments, but said there was a huge disparity in how long people could expect to live for.

"Our conceptions of 'old age' are hopelessly out of date because of population ageing," he said.

ald be a "For many people, 70 person. is the new 50 and

NOT GOING QUIETLY: baby boomers are expected to stay active into their 70s signifies the quiet revolution that has taken place in longevity.

"However I would not want to pin an arbitrary age, such as 74, because there is such huge diversity in later life. There is a massive nine-year difference in average life expectancy between the poor and the affluent and a shocking 19 year difference in healthy life expectancy.

"But certainly the research is right in pointing to the fact that society has to catch up urgently with the new demographic reality, for example in the labour market."

An average man who retired in 2012 can expect to live until the age of 86.2 years while a woman who turned 65 last year would have 23.9 years still to live on average, the ONS estimates.

Additionally one in seven 65-year-old women and one in 12 newly retired men will live to celebrate their 100th birthday.

Professor Peter Ellwood at Cardiff University said that older people were increasingly fit and healthy well into their 80s.

He has been conducting a ground-breaking 35-year study which shows adopting a healthy lifestyle dramatically cuts the risk of cancer, diabetes, heart-attack, stroke and dementia.

"It is important not just to live longer but to live healthier," he said, "It should not just be about adding years to life, but adding life to years.

"We have found that living a healthy lifestyle is better than any pill and have proved that it is possible to fit and active after the age of 65."

Tiny 5ft wide London house sells for a whopping £750k

■ The cosy dwelling is squeezed between two other properties in Islington, north London

IF FURTHER evidence were needed that London's red-hot property market had reached boiling point, it came this week with the sale of a tiny 5ft-wide house wedged in between two other properties in Islington for a whopping £750,000.

The pint-size north London property has two bedrooms, a living room, a small study, a shower room, cloakroom, kitchen and a garden.

But perhaps the narrow home has a Tardis-like exterior, after it was described by estate agents Foxtons as 'well-proportioned'.

An advert called the home a "stylish two bedroom period house" which "offers beautifully bright living space throughout with characterful touches and a pretty rear garden".

In total the house offer 538 square feet to floorspace over three storeys.

The home met the full £750,000 asking price after being on the market for just five days.

What fun and oh, so educational, and it's FREE for all the family to enjoy. Oh, did I mention Jean, from Middlesbrough in Yorkshire, is there to greet help answer questions? But don't stop there. Be adventurous. The National Park Service and National Marine Sanctuary oversees all the Islands and surrounding ocean up to six nautical miles: San Miguel, Santa Rosa, Santa Cruz, Santa Barbara, and Anacapa.

The islands currently in full bloom. You won't find shops, supermarkets, gas stations, homes, or crowds of people but you WILL find flowers, birds, hiking trails, a very basic campsite and breathtaking views everywhere you look, in every direction. Karen and I have watched schools of whales swimming past the islands on their migration. The islands are also easy to get to. Visit www.nps.gov or call (805) 658-5730, or visit Channel Islands National Park at 1901 Spinnaker Drive in Ventura at the far end of Ventura Harbor.

Next door at Harbor Village you will find the Connally Family, who since 1968 have run Island Packers boats to the islands. Working hand in hand with the Park Service they have one common goal: to protect the environment for future generations. They run full and half day trips, as well as whale watching year round. Quite a Fab show...

- Nationally touring Beatles biography show returns to San Pedro
- "In My Life" performs on April 19 at the Warner Grand Theatre

In My Life - A Musical Theatre Tribute to the Beatles returns to San Pedro this weekend after playing to capacity audiences in 2011 and 2011.

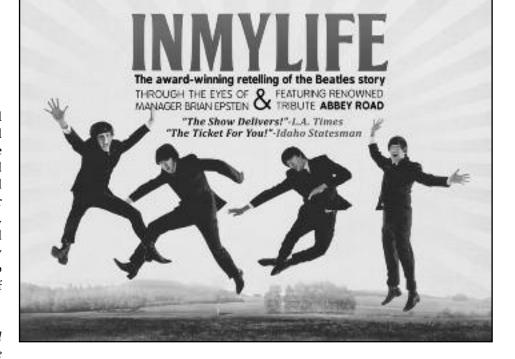

The nationally touring musical biography of the Beatles through the eyes manager Brian Epstein gives the audience a chance to "be there" at pivotal moments in the extraordinary career of the Fab Four: Liverpool's legendary Cavern Club, The Ed Sullivan Show, Shea Stadium,

Abbey Road Studios and final live performance on the rooftop of their Apple offices. With Corp Epstein serving as narrator, In Life allows the audience to get a glimpse inside the world of the Beatles from their point of view, as well as hear some of the greatest songs ever written. Historical settings such as the Cavern Club established on stage with videos and images which play behind the actors and musicians on a video screen.

The band are played by Nate Bott (John), Axel Clarke (Ringo), Jesse Wilder (George) and Chris Paul Overall (Paul), who with their tight harmonies, c u s t o m - t a i l o r e d costumes and cheeky banter, do a sterling job in recreating the magic of the Beatles.

In My Life - A Musical Theatre Tribute to The Beatles plays Sunday, April 19 at 2 pm at the Warner Grand Theatre in San Pedro. Tickets are $20 - $40, plus ticket fees, and may be purchased online with credit or debit cards at www.tix.com and by calling 800 -595 -4849. Tickets purchased at the door will be cash only. The Warner Grand Theater is located at 478 W. 6th Street (at Pacific) in San Pedro, CA 90731. The show is appropriate for all ages.

Meet A Member: Owain Rhys Davies

Meet Owain Rhys Davies from Wales who moved to LA a year ago to pursue acting.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I was touring America with a play a few years back and our last venue was here in LA. It was March and the only weather I was used to at this time of year was the blistering cold with drenched Converse, but here in LA it was scorching and thought it wouldn't be the worst thing to live in the sunshine all year round.

Other than the weather LA is one of the most proactive cities with regards to the industry and so with the help of my manager I took the plunge and made the move and I'm very glad I did.

What one thing do you miss from home?

Something I never thought I'd say; but the London Underground. I would take simply jumping on a train, play a bit of spider solitaire, and partake in some muted musical chairs with some angry commuters over 5pm rush hour traffic any day. Oh, and Jaffa cakes.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus St.Clears?

I'm from a small town in west Wales where the grass is green, unspoiled land as far as the eye can see and the sheep to people ratio is 3:1. So other than clean air and hiking trails that you actually have to hike the biggest difference living here to living in St.Clears is that here I get to eat sushi, and it's goooood.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

Other than sushi, coffee is a bit of a vice of mine. It took me a while and far too many bad cups, but a friend of mine introduced me to Alfred's on Melrose Place. It's a very popular place to grab a coffee and sit outside to work on the old laptop or moan that you've got another parking ticket, but the hidden gem is their smaller branch around the corner that's literally hidden in an alley on Melrose Avenue. You can take your coffee and sit in the alley that's filled with plants and couches and if you need to get rid of the coffee shakes there's a cycle house right next

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

The first thing I would say is come out and visit this sun-filled city before the move. LA isn't for everyone and everyone has a different experience of the place so the best way to truly know if it's for you is to experience it for yourself. If like me you're hell bent on moving over make sure that you have a good amount of dollars behind you as it isn't a cheap city to live in and you will have to buy a bed, no one told me about the bed thing.

If your life was a TV show what would be the theme tune?

The show would be a half hour comedy written by Tina Fey and Ruth Jones, Welsh references are a must, and so the theme tune would have to be Do Your Thing by Basement Jaxx. Not only is it a cracking song, for which I've done many a backflip to, but it pretty much sums up how I was brought up and have lived my strawberry blonde life.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you?

Hit me up on twitter @owainRdavies or find me on IMDB.com

The Silver Witch: tales by a Welsh lake

Exclusive interview with author Paula Brackston and a review of her new novel about Welch witches living at Llangorse lake Rating: ★★★

"Llangorse lake has always fascinated me," says The Silver Witch author Paula Brackston, of the principality's largest natural lake, which is set amid the splendor of the Brecon Beacons and is the setting for her latest

"There are lots of legends and stories told about the lake, which is not surprising given that there has been a settlement on its shores for over a thousand years. There is thought to be a mythical creature living in the deep, cold water. The place has always attracted spiritual people and religious foundations. There are several churches and a retreat on its shores to this day. It seemed to me quite plausible that witches would also have been drawn to such a place."

The Silver Witch is two stories in the same book. It moves back-and-forth between the past and the present, which can be confusing until you adapt to the book's rhythm. The story of the past belongs to Seren, a shaman or witch. The modern story is about Tilda, a descendant of Seren who was drawn to the area when she and her husband bought a small home there. Tilda hopes to find solace in the calm surroundings after losing her husband in an accident. She starts seeing visions. Seren lived in the same area in an earlier time. She has visions. She warns a prince there's danger to him in his own house.

"I grew up living on a farm on the hill a few miles to the east of the Lake," says Brackston. "As a child I used to ride my pony across the mountain and look down on it. It was never the same twice. There was either mist, or ice, or sun glinting off it. Some days there were boats, other days a flock of geese, or some seagulls driven inland by storm. Even the colour of the water was ever changing...dark blue in summer, silver under low sun, opaque with ice some months, whipped up into waves at other times. There is medieval record of it turning blood red."

Brackston says she's lucky to live close to the lake again, to make lots of visits for research. "I took heaps of photos, wrote down vital facts, drove about the area drawing maps, went into the church on the far side. studied the wildlife, and walked the paths around the lake. And sometimes I just went and sat by the water and watched and listened."

The Silver Witch is Brackston's fourth historical fantasy featuring witches. The others are The Witch's Daughter, The Winter Witch, and Midnight Witch. Under the name of PJ Brackston she writes a historical, crime fantasy series set in 18th century Bavaria about Gretel (of Hansel and Gretel) who is grown up and working as a private detective.

Brackston was shortlisted in the Crème de la Crime search for new writers. Her early book Nutters, written as PJ Davy, was shortlisted for the Mind Book Award. The Silver Witch has not yet been optioned for film or TV.

Brackston's next book, released being August, is Lamp Black,

Book Corner with Gabrielle Pantera

Wolf Grey, another story with a Welsh setting. She is currently writing the sequel to The Witch's Daughter, her first book. witchy September she's writing book four in the Gretel series.

Victoria Beckham celebrates her Barney's debut in LA!

Victoria Beckham is no stranger to Los Angeles. She once called it home, and in many ways, the private dinner at Freds in Los Angeles on Tuesday night celebrating her debut spring 2015 season Barneys New with York was inauguration of the influence designer's over the fashion landscape, well beyond L.A.

As people took their seats among the long tables adorned with white linens and blooms. Victoria with hubby David Beckham sat beside her raised a glass thanking her dinner guests, who included close friends and supporters, and familiar faces, many of whom were fellow Brits, including Burberry's Christopher Kate Beckinsale, and the most recent L.A. James transplants, Corden with wife, Julia Carey.

The dinner, which was a decidedly spring fare of heirloom tomatoes, halibut with fresh local corn, and truffle fries, took place outside on the terrace.

Other guests such as Gwyneth Paltrow, Eva Longoria, Rose Byrne and Rachel Zoe enjoyed conversations outside in the rather mild April weather. LA Galaxy soccer player Robbie Rogers also caught up with former player, David, about season (soccer that is).

Victoria, dressed in a white long-sleeved sheath from her own collection, of course, has solidified her point of view and aesthetic as a mixture of sophistication and timelessness with attention to construction and quality.

She fondly recalled one of her first-ever shopping memories at Barneys when she came to Los Angeles with the Spice Girls. "One of the first trips that Virgin Records ever took us on was to Los Angeles and it was just five girls, we had never been here; they gave us money, a styling budget, and they sent us out to Barneys to go shopping."

Needless to say her trip has stuck with her over the years, and perhaps there is no better way to celebrate her long history and personal connection with Barneys than selling the Victoria Beckham Collection right here in the very store where she got her very first taste of L.A. shopping the experience!

GOTG2 won't be so hairraising for Karen Gillan!

One of our favorite Scottish exports, the red--headed beauty Karen Gillan, will return for Guardians Of The Galaxy 2...but this time she will be able keep her hair according director James Gunn.

In a recent Twitter-chat. Gunn – the writer and director the first movie confirmed his treatment for GOTG2 has been completed and that filming will begin in February next year.

He said, "I turned in my treatment. I'm going to meet about it on Friday and we will start working on the screenplay next week."

Now the hit-movie maker has taken to social media once again, this time to confirm, among other things, that Inverness-raised Gillan will reprise her role as

Nebula – the adopted daughter Thanos – in the seguel to the smash hit

The former Doctor Who star - who played the bald villainess in the last film – will be pleased to hear that Gunn has come up with a way for her to take on the role without being follicly denuded.

comic-book flick.

Oo-er!

In the announcement made by the 44-year-old director it was also made clear that the villain from the first movie - the recurring villain (in the books least) Ronan, who was played by Lee Pace, will not be returning despite being a prominent figure in the comic-books.

He said: "Ronan is a bad guy, we killed him. Not everything is going to happen in the movies the same as the comics."

Guardians of the Galaxy 2 is slated for release on May 5, 2017.

We all need a good Birch-ing

Ey Up Breeps!

Seems like we have a slew of Midlanders descending on the golden coast recently and being from Nottingham myself, this makes me happy!

Eileen and I took visit to Birch, the new restaurant from star chef and fellow Midlander Brendan Collins which opened recently on Cahuenga just south of Hollywood Boulevard. A step in the right direction to gentrifying the skanky part of town, the restaurant's clean lines and Scandinavian style interior drew us in immediately. We started Hamachi, with the followed by sweetbreads and chicken liver paté and we both shared the succulent pork shank, where the meat just fell off the bone. I should note that all of Birch's food is locally sourced and with a glass kitchen you can watch exactly what is going on. The place has a very mixed crowd from Hollywood hipsters to some serious foodies taking pictures of every well-presented meal. We ended with a delicious rhubarb and custard dessert....must for those with a sweet tooth. The service was impeccable, from a staff that clearly knows a thing or two about food. Ideal for private parties too, or your birthday - ask about their secret garden for private dining. I also

their

reasonably priced happy hour about a week ago. With a great selection of beers and handcrafted cocktails and a few appetizers, Birch is the restaurant where I'll be swinging out more frequently. (1634 Cahuenga Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90028. Website: www. birchlosangeles.com)

I love 99

There is a rumbling currently within the theatre community in Los Angeles due to a referendum proposed by the actors' union Equity. Basically it will abolish the 99-seat theatre contract that has been in place for over 30 years. There is a massive cry from members who rightfully so. I was fortunate enough to be nominated for an award this past week by Stage Raw for best male lead in a play for my role in the Vortex, which we were able to just about afford under the 99-seat plan. If what equity are proposing had already passed our budget size would have to have doubled and there is no way we would've been able to raise the funds to put on our show...and the same is true for other theatre companies aroun d town. 99-seat theatre is where a lot of people get their start, or the seasoned get to try new stuff and exercise their craft. So many of the bigger theatre houses in LA now are full of touring shows, or actors hired from New York. It would be a shame to see such an amazing community and talent fall by the wayside. With backers such as French Stewart, Frances Fisher, Noah Wylie and Tim Robbins, who are all such great supporters, I for one hope the bill doesn't pass and we oppose this bill, and

BIRCH: a spare Scandinavian interior highlights British chef Brendan Collins' new restaurant on Cahuenga Boulevard in Hollywood can come to the table and look at a new plan that suits all and doesn't kill our vibrant community of passionate, dedicated, talented humans. If you equity an member and a participant and avid supporter of intimate theatre houses I urge you to vote no. For all the facts please join Pro99 on Facebook.

Finally, a Happy Birthday Shoutout to my dear friend Victoria Hoffman...

Have a great week!

Cheers Craig

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates with limited authority. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250.
