

Cameron heading for SNP showdown

David Cameron was scheduled for showdown talks on Friday with the OTHER big winner from last week's General Election: Scottish National Party leader Nicola Sturgeon.

The Prime Minister traveled to Scotland to face his new adversary, whose triumph at the polls has put Scottish independence center stage once more just nine months after the referendum seemed to take the issue off the table.

Cameron is offering Scotland the "the strongest devolved government anywhere in the world", with more powers to set income tax rates and influence welfare spending.

But that is unlikely to satisfy Nicola Sturgeon who wants complete control over tax and spending, and potentially another chance to win the independence Scottish voters rejected last year.

"We want to see devolution of powers over employment policy, including the minimum wage, welfare, business taxes, national insurance

Cameron has offered extensive devolution to Scotland, but Sturgeon (below) says its not enough and equality policy," Sturgeon told the Scottish Parliament in Edinburgh.

She said she wanted Cameron to look again at London's proposals, which were drafted with the agreement of all Britain's traditional parties, with "a with a astonishing 56 of the 59 view to extending devolution even further."

The SNP captured an week's vote, with the Conservatives, Labour influence and the Lib-Dems picking up just one each.

■ Architect of new Labour scathing following election humiliation

New Labour mastermind Lord Mandelson has said Ed Miliband's selection as Labour leader was the result of "trade union abuse" and his election campaign had badly damaged the party.

The former business secretary said Mr Miliband had been a "giant political experiment" that had ended up with the voters "ripping stripes off" the shoulders of the party.

He told the popular BBC1 current affairs programme The Andrew Marr Show the "awful shocking thing about this election is Labour could have won it".

He said: "The reason we lost it and lost it so badly is in 2010 we discarded New rather than Labour. revitalising it and re-energising it and making it relevant for the new times, the new policy challenges that we faced.

"That was a terrible mistake."

He added: "Literally, we were sent out and told to say things and to make an argument - if you can call it an argument - which basically said, we're for the poor, we hate the rich, ignoring completely the vast swathe of the population who exist in between."

UKiP at war over Farage 'coup'

■ Party leader has become "snarling, thin-skinned, aggressive" man turning Ukip into a "personality cult" claims party MEP

Nigel Farage was clinging to his position as Ukip leader on Thursday - insisting he was not facing a "coup" - as a civil war broke out among the party.

Several of Mr Farage's former allies publically questioned his leadership, with eight calling for his resignation.

The party has now split into two factions, with some of the most senior figures now backing Douglas Carswell -Ukip's only MP and the man seen as the obvious replacement for Mr Farage.

'lost his rag'

The row centres on Mr Farage's decision to return as Ukip leader earlier this week just three days after tendering his resignation following defeat in his attempt to become an MP.

The reversal is said to have angered Mr Carswell who "took it extremely badly" and "lost his rag completely" upon hearing Mr Farage was to return, according to a Ukip donor. Mr Carswell denies the claims.

On Thursday night Mr Farage admitted that he is facing a rebellion from members of the party who "wanted to be leader" but were left "sadly disappointed" when the party's ruling council rejected his resignation.

By Thursday night a choreographed operation to shore up Mr Farage's leadership was in full swing, with the party releasing a series of supportive statements from donors.

However, one source within the party claimed that Mr Farage now only has the support of around one-third of the party's representatives in the European Parliament.

weakened

Another said that Ukip officials had attempted to force them to sign a letter pledging support to Mr Farage.

And the Ukip leader appeared to admit he believes he has lost the confidence of his party on Thursday night.

Asked if he had lost the confidence of his party when arriving for tonight's BBC Question Time, Mr Farage told ITV News: "Big time". In an interview with earlier in the day, Mr Farage insisted he will remain as leader, although observers said he would left significantly be weakened by the row.

FARAGE: locked in a bitter power struggle with the party's only MP, Douglas Carswell

He said: "The idea of a coup - there may have been one or two people who would have liked to be Ukip leader but they have been sadlv disappointed by the NEC."

Mr Farage split opinion in his party by reversing his decision to stand down as leader.

A day later He became engaged in a row with Mr Carswell after it emerged that the MP had refused to claim £3m of public funding the party is entitled to, saying he had no use for the cash, against turmoil

Mr O'Flynn said Mr Farage had become a "snarling, thin-skinned, aggressive" man who was turning Ukip into a "personality cult".

In a sign of the turmoil in the party, Stuart Wheeler, the party's long-standing former treasurer, then called on Mr Farage to resign.

Roger Knapman, who led Ukip for four years in the last decade, also said that it was time for a leadership election.

Arron Banks, one of the party's biggest donors, attacked Douglas Carswell, Ukip's only MP, describing him as "duplicitous" and said Mr O'Flynn was "hopeless" and "weak".

Mr Banks, who gave £1million to the party last October, took aim at a "little clique that is trying to destabilise" Mr Farage after he reversed a decision this week to resign as leader.

Mr Farage admitted that "one or two" people in his party wanted him out. He said: "It was just natural frustrations - a long campaign. I have been all over the country when the cats away and all that...'

Ceremony at the Abbey caps three days of celebrations to mark the 70th anniversary of VE Day in central London

THE ROYAL FAMILY joined around 1000 veterans at a service of thanksgiving at Westminster Abbey on Sunday, capping three days of celebrations to mark the 70th anniversary of VE Day.

Majesty Her was accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh, Prince of Wales and PM David Cameron at the service to remember those who sacrificed their lives during the Second World War, which took the lives of more than 580,000 members of the UK and Commonwealth forces, as well as 67,073 British civilians.

Joining the royals and leading politicians were many members of the Armed Forces and representatives of the Allied nations and Commonwealth countries that fought alongside Britain.

The Dean of Westminster Dr John Hall, who led the service, said: 'On Victory Day 70 years ago, 25,000 people came to services of thanksgiving held throughout the day and evening here in Westminster Abbey. We today share the spirit of that day of rejoicing.

'We give thanks for the valour and bravery of the sailors, soldiers, airmen and civilians who gave all they had, and for the determination and skill of their leaders.'

Addressing the congregation, Archbishop of Canterbury Justin Welby said: 'We gather again, 70 years on, thankful for victory over the greatest darkness of the 20th century, perhaps of all history.

'Our gratitude is not simply for victory in Europe, but also reconciliation in Europe that followed, neither obviously or automatically.

'ongoing project'

'The peace for which we give thanks today - 70 years of the greatest peace in Western Europe since the departure of the Roman legions - remains an ongoing project of reconciliation, not only for us but as a gift to the world, where conflict and extremism destroy hope, devastate prosperity, vanquish aspiration to a better life."

After entering the abbey, the Queen touched a wreath which was laid at the Grave of the Unknown Warrior before she took her seat with the Duke, Charles and the Duchess of Cornwall.

The Duke of York, Earl of Wessex and the Duke of Kent were also among the congregation, along with Foreign Secretary Philip Hammond, Home Secretary Theresa May and Defence Secretary Michael Fallon.

Sir Winston Churchill's great-great-granddaught er Zoe Churchill read the act of rededication along with VE Day veteran John Wilson.

Scottish National Party leader Nicola Sturgeon and former Ukip leader Nigel Farage attended the service, while Labour was represented by Harriet Harman. The Liberal Democrats were represented by MP Tom Break.

Six men have been arrested in the Republic of Ireland after police discovered bomb making equipment close to where Prince Charles and Camilla, Duchess the Cornwall are due to visit next week.

Explosives and weapons were recovered at various locations as Irish police carried out more than 20 raids aimed at disrupting dissident Republican activity.

Sources in the Garda told the Irish Daily Mirror they believed they had disrupted a dissident IRA plot to kill the royal couple.

The arrests come just days before Prince Charles and Camilla are due to make a four day visit to the Irish Republic, during which they will visit the area where the IRA murdered his uncle, Lord Mountbatten, in a bomb attack on 1979.

The six men arrested, aged between 21 and 62, were being held at various Garda stations across the Republic. It follows a major operation by Irish police involving armed officers who swooped on various locations in a series of coordinated raids.

An area of Courtown, of in Co Wexford, was sealed off while bomb experts deal with a suspect device.

A VERY DES RES: Byfleet Manor is an imposing Grade II listed house on 19 acres

Downton home yours for a cool £3.95m

Fans of Downton Abbey, take note, the Dowager Countess' country abode has been put on the market.

The eight-bedroom manor house, which has been home to the Crawley matriarch since Abbey's Downton inception, is up for sale.

the With recent announcement of the final season of the globally-popular ΤV show, the property's owners are eager to cash in while demand is still high, and expect interest from buyers around the

The imposing Grade II listed manor house, where the Dowager Countess (Maggie Smith) holds forth and delivers many of her searing put-downs, can be yours – just as long as you've got a spare £3.95 million lying around...

The elegant manor, which boasts 19 acres of land, can be found at the "end of a winding country lane" and is "discreetly positioned for privacy and

The Downton connections aren't even Byfleet Manor's only draw. The history of the building extends back to the 7th century and is first recorded in 1086 in the Domesday Book. Only the best for the Dowager, eh?

Welcome to Bangays Way: Gay couple demand road name is changed for being 'homophobic'

A GAY couple are demanding that a new road name in their village be changed after saying that Bangays Way is homophobic.

Phillip Tucker and husband Ian, who have lived in the village of Borough Green in Kent for more than seven years, say the name is "offensive".

The couple have written to the parish council saying it should be changed, despite the fact it is named after a gas fitter called Frank Bangay, a former parish councillor, historian and school governor.

Mr Bangay died in December 1999 and the road - in a new housing development - was named after him last month as a tribute to his dedication to the village.

Mr Tucker, however, says the road name is "offensive" to homosexuals and should be changed, saying either the letter "s" should be removed to make it Bangay Way or that it should be renamed Frank Bangay Way.

'pretty offensive'

He said: "My husband and I went to look round the new development, as you do.

"Having got over the initial humour, we reflected that this street name was actually pretty offensive.

"Somehow seeing it on the sign made it look even worse. We are pretty sure the sign will be subject to frequent vandalism and possible theft.

"Apparently Frank Bangay was a local historian. Many local roads are named after local families. But only in one instance did an 's' get tacked on the end." He added: "I have contacted our new MP Tom Tugendhat who seems to agree with me and is approaching the council to see if it can be changed to Frank Bangay Way, which at least makes it clear it is a name not a statement of opinion."

The Tory MP has said that there is no reason the name cannot be changed to Frank Bangay Way, adding: "His complaint is not without merit, so I am perfectly happy to support him."

'fine to whinge'

The MP, however, did say that he did not personally find the sign 'homophobic or offensive'.

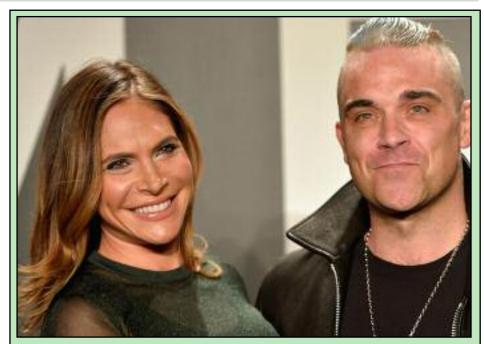

Villager Sarah Casson, the couple 35, said: "Whoever is afraid of complaining about the think that name of the road needs issue cou to take a good look at themselve themselves in the mirror. litigation."

"There is horror all around the world and they think it's fine to whinge about a road being named after a local legend because it sounds a bit odd to them."

Mr Bangay's family, however, are up in arms about the complaint and say they are considering legal action.

His daughter, Marian Smith, said she was "insulted by the remarks", adding: "We are all very proud of our surname and both of my parents were very prominent in the village for many, many years and did so much for the village.

"Our surname has been researched back to the 16th Century by a relative. I too feel that if the couple who are so afraid of what people think that they make an issue could well find themselves in litigation."

cookbook to come out this autumn and the TV chef thing keeps happening so while the opportunities are there I'll keep that going.

What one thing do you miss from home?

It's very small but specific things these days. I've been here a long time and America is my home now to be honest. But I do miss Sunday dinner with my grandparents, never thought I'd say this but the rain! And I've got some great mates back in the UK and now we are all older and married with children its harder to get together and hang out.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus the UK?

I think the first couple of years in LA are the hardest because apart from the language there are very few similarities between LA and the UK and it takes time to find your neighborhood and solid friends. The most obvious difference is the weather because its crap in England and great here!

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us? Its' hard to keep hidden gems hidden these days! But one of my favorite things to do is the Baldwin Hills stairs on a S u n d a y ... s m o g dependent but the views are phenomenal and it's a great workout too.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Your financial situation could be getting a boost as early as midweek. Look for an opportunity to add to your business. It's a good week for catching up with what has not been a priority yet.

TAURUS: You will likely be feeling bit blah until midweek, if so keep thinking positive. If anything is not moving in your life get things sorted and you will see the results as soon as next weekend. Have a Happy Birthday.

GEMINI: Be sure to follow through on any promises you have made in the past few weeks. The reason is your boss planet Mercury is preparing to stroll backwards for the next few weeks in your sign.

CANCER: Movement is good for you and this week it's all around you and in the family also.

You crabs don't like to be confronted without warning so it's best to keep those famous verbal nips under control.

LEO: Health and diet is much on your mind as the summer months approach so hats off to you if you make it your priority and work towards this end. A family member will be on your mind - keep watching the situation.

VIRGO: As this month proceeds and the Sun is in Gemini be sure you are ready and willing to get anything in motion that's on your agenda. If it is a change in work or home this will turn out well.

LIBRA: Be prepared to be surprised (and perhaps a little miffed) as you find that all is not in place as you expected. That includes any agreements you made with family or friends. Be ready with a contingency plan. SCORPIO: This is the time of year when you should be (or are) thinking of shedding away what the winter months have left behind. This is a good time to proceed. You may be thinking of a diet or exercise change. Be sure you don't overdo it as is your way sometimes...

SAGITTARIUS: A problem in your work is just a storm in a teacup, so lighten up, especially this weekend when you can relax with family or friends .Be sure you don't play too hard or burn the candle at both ends. CAPRICORN: This week get rid of any surplus stuff in your life and this means in all areas! Start fresh as the next week or so will bring some clearance for you in the financial area. You are getting ready for a climb up whichever ladder you are reaching for.

AQUARIUS: A large project may be on your mind; however do not be in such a hurry to finish it. You are at your best when using that powerful thought process you have and there is more than one way to proceed. The answer will come given time.

PISCES: This week ahead will bring back people or situations you probably thought were no more as Neptune makes his way through your life in some way or another. This is not a bad outcome; it means if you don't figure it out yourself the Universe will!

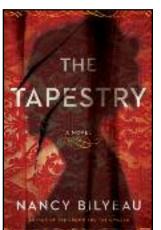

The Tapestry: an admirably woven tale...

■ Exclusive interview with author Nancy Bilyeau and a review of her third novel in the Joanna Stafford series

Rating: $\star \star \star \star$

"My main character, Joanna Stafford, has felt nothing but fear and loathing for Henry VIII and Thomas Cromwell, his chief minister," says The Tapestry author Nancy Bilyeau.

"I thought it would lead to a dramatic and suspenseful story if I propelled Joanna into the court of the king, forcing a confrontation. And the way I thought of to do that is she weaves tapestries...and Henry VIII was obsessed with collecting tapestries."

Bilyeau is masterful in creating details that move the narrative story forward and in creating real dilemmas for Joanna Stafford in this book. Bilyeau's words transport the reader back to the English court at a time when you had to be careful what you said or risk losing your head. The author Bilyeau tries to strike a balance between the politics the King Henry VIII's court and Joanna's personal life. For the third book, you don't have to read the first two books in the series, but it makes more sense if you do.

Joanna Stafford, а novice nun from a disbanded order, wove a brilliant tapestry for Anne of Cleves who gave the tapestry to her husband King Henry VIII. After seeing it Henry wants Joanna to weave another for him. A member of the Stafford family, Joanna is related to Henry and must go to court though she has no love of the place. It was Cromwell, working for the King, who destroyed the nun's order of which Joanna was a member. Joanna must carefully navigate the treacherous rivalries of Henry's inner circle. Will she risk her life for what she values?

Bilyeau likes to plan her books, to write an outline first, but that didn't happen with The Tapestry. "I planned an outline for the novel first," says Bilyeau. "But, as I was writing it, I thought about including a description of painter Hans Holbein the Younger in one passage. Then I decided to give him some words to speak. Then he was taking action and playing an important role. He kept growing and growing. It was the funniest thing, as if he had decided he wanted to be in the book. He ended up becoming one of my favorite characters." Bilyeau keeps a library of books on Tudor England, of the politics, the personalities, the daily life. "For this particular novel, I had to dive deeper into tapestry production, the 16th century occult, life at court during the two very specific months of April and May 1540, and the lives of Catherine Howard. Thomas Culpepper and Walter Hungerford," savs Bilyeau. "I don't look at documents in their original state, there are collections of them that can be read in books For serious now. research, I use the New York Public Library, Schwartzman Branch, on 42nd Street and Fifth Avenue."

As a magazine writer and executive editor of DuJour magazine, Bilyeau has interviewed Laura Bush and Dr. Phil, among others. "It's nothing like being a novelist," says Bilyeau. "I come up with ideas for nonfiction stories, and I edit the stories and manage the production of the magazine. We work in a small team, Stars/Book Review

Jas' and Jude team up in Spy!

I was left shaken (and a little stirred) to discover British hotties Jason Statham and Jude Law will join forces in an upcoming comedy espionage flick – Spy, which sees Melissa McCarthy star as a female James Bond – only she's a little bit inept at it... Oo-er!

The film follows CIA analyst Susan Cooper's (McCarthy) attempt to take on the role of a spy and attempt a secret mission.

But when her partner

The movie also Rose stars Byrne, Morena Baccarin, Allison Janney, Bobby Cannavale, and 50 Cent and promises to combine a mix of comedy and action sequences that will turn the format of a generic spy film on its head.

We caught a teaser clip the film for at empireonline.com this week and if the clip is any guide to the movie, should it be murderously funny. We're also glad for the clarification on the meaning of the word 'twot' in America!

It's hysterical watching Jason do comedy - he totally pulls it off! I can't wait for this one to hit cinemas...

'Posh' Rupert pulls out his sword for BBC costume drama!

BRITISH actor Rupert Everett has finally come out of hiding and is joining the cast of historic drama The Musketeers, it's been confirmed!

The 55-year-old shot to fame in 1981 for his role in the public schoolboy drama Another Country, though he is best known for roles such as My Best Friend's Wedding and voicing Prince Charming in the Shrek films. Rupert will be joining the show's third season as King Louis XVIII's illegitimate brother Philippe Achille, the Marquis de Feron, who rules as a corrupt governor in Paris.

Rupert said of his new role: "I'm very excited to be joining the cast of The Musketeers for the new series. I love the show and am really looking forward to working with the team."

In February, the third season of the period adventure was confirmed to return to the small screen after receiving financial backing from BBC Worldwide and BBC America.

The action-packed drama is a modern-day adaptation of Alexandre Dumas' 1844 tale of The Three Musketeers and follows a group of soldiers – D'Artagnan, Athos, Aramis and Porthos – who are trained to fight for King Louis cont. on page 11, col. 1

Sort out your clutter...and your bod!

Hello Breeps:

I want to start by saying a huge thank you to Ricky Parcell, PT, for leading six weeks of Brit Fit Club.

Many of us had the advantage of meeting him and got the benefit of his training techniques. He's gone back to the UK now for a little while to teach some masterclasses in Europe but will be back in September - so hopefully

Rupert joins the current stars Luke Pasqualino, Tom Burke, Howard Charles and Santiago Cabrera who play the four heroes, as well as Alexandra Dowling, Ryan Gage, Maimie McCoy and Tamla Kari who are also part of the cast.

In recent interview with RadioTimes.com, Rupert spoke about Hollywood's love of "posh" British actors and why other English period dramas such as Downton Abbey have been so successful.

"What the Americans want to see of the English - they don't want to see snaggle-toothed working class people, obviously," he explained.

"They want to see upper class people that's what they want. That's why they love Downton Abbey.'

we'll start Brit Fit club back up then. We're all quite a bit leaner and meaner than we were when this started, and I'm sure that will give us momentum with those warm summer months ahead!

As we are all about community we will be supporting Gay Pride weekend on June 12-14th, hosting a screening of LGBT short films at the Soho House on Saturday June 13th. We are also accepting submissions, so please send any screening links to craig@britsin.la Then on Sunday June 14th, The UKares Foundation and The British Consulate will team up during the actual parade by rolling down Santa Monica Boulevard in a vintage British double decker followed by a great party at Cecconi's restaurant. If you would like to help or get involved in any of the festivities please email fharden@ukares.org

De-clutter, people!

Since Spring has most definitely sprung, its time for a good old cleaning and I'd like to recommend a book that helped me clear out four huge bin-liners full of clothing, "The Life-Changing Magic of Tidying Up" by Marie Kondo, available at bookstores, Amazon and iBooks too. With it's very super-simple easy, approach, it's remarkable how much I got to do in such a short space of time. Papers next!

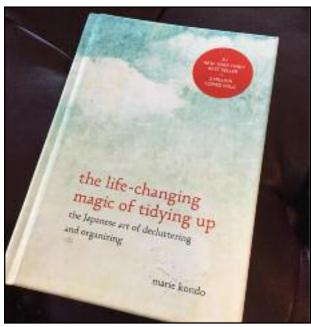

I also managed to catch the documentary Soul boys of the Western World about those old new Spandau romantics. Ballet at The Arena Screening Room in Hollywood. I know Eileen gushed about this documentary last wee, but I have to add my two cents' worth: it was a really well done,

New England boss Strauss shuts door on Pietersen return

CRICKET: KEVIN PIETERSEN was back in the news this week as England's incoming director of cricket Andrew Strauss claimed there was a "massive trust issue" between the two.

Former England captain Strauss was speaking following the departure of coach Peter Moores, who was fired last week following England's dismal recent run that has seen them slip down the world rankings with a string of bad performances in both the Test and one day formats. Strauss was expected to issue a recall to Pietersen, the gifted but controversial batsman who has been in the international wilderness for the past year, but who had been told by the England management to concentrate on the county cricket to bolster his claim for a Test return.

But, in a 40-minute meeting with Strauss on Monday, Pietersen was told he would not be considered until after the summer's home Ashes series against Australia – this despite hitting a career best 355 not out for Surrey last week.

"Now is the time for us to be really open about the Kevin Pietersen situation people have been running away from it for years," said Strauss.

"The truth about Kevin is that he is a phenomenal cricketer. But over months and years, trust has eroded between Kevin Pietersen and the ECB (the England and Wales Cricket Board).

"There is a massive trust issue between me and Kevin.

"While there is no trust between Kevin and the ECB, it is our opinion he cannot feature in our short-term plans. Long-term, who knows?"

Speaking on Monday, before his meeting with Strauss, Pietersen said he was "desperate" to return to the international game, adding: "Personal differences have got nothing to do with what the public wants. The public just wants to see the England team winning.

"What more can I do? All I can do is score runs. I'm incredibly proud of how I played under pressure."

Pietersen reduced his Indian Premier League commitments this year to play for Surrey after incoming ECB chairman Colin Graves suggested an international return might be possible if he were to score runs in domestic cricket.

But Strauss's assertion that the South Africa-born batsman will not be considered for selection could signal the end of a career that took in 8,181 runs and 23 centuries in 104 Tests.

Pietersen last played for England in the final Test of a 5-0 Ashes series defeat in Australia in January 2014.

He was sacked a month later and released an autobiography in October criticising several players, saying there was a "bullying culture" in the squad.

Speaking of the decision to fire Moores, Strauss said: "That was a very tough decision to take. He's a very popular coach and has got some really strong attributes as a coach.

"I personally think he's got some limitations in the international arena around strategy and tactics and I think we saw that in the World Cup to a certain extent."

reportedly going to meet. Sticking with The Metro and United could be 'just days away' from signing Barcelona's Dani Alves after the defender 'reportedly agreed to a move to England'. The paper is following up on an article in Catalan newspaper Sport which claims that the Brazilian will link up with Van Gaal after he offered him a contract that was 'far superior' to the one on the table from Barca.

The 32-year-old is available on a free transfer as his contract at the Nou Camp expires this summer.

And if that were not enough, United can also complete the signing of Christian Benteke this summer - if they offer Aston Villa £32m, claims The Metro newspaper.

Gerrard's regret over lack of title

Outgoing Liverpool captain Steven Gerrard says he regrets never winning the Premier League title.

Gerrard, 34, plays his last game at Anfield on Saturday, against Crystal Palace, before joining Major League Soccer side LA Galaxy in June.

"It is not the only regret, I think it is the biggest," former England skipper Gerrard told the BBC.

"I would love to say that I have got the full collection, it would be the icing on the cake."

Having made more than 700 appearances over 17 seasons, Gerrard ends his association with the Reds this summer, admitting his exit has "happened maybe slightly quicker" than he thought.

Last season, Liverpool could have clinched their first title since 1990 but fell two points short of eventual champions Manchester City, with Gerrard's slip against Chelsea contributing to a 2-0 defeat.

"You are always going to have incredible moments and you are also going to have some cruel lows as well," said Gerrard.

"I also look at other FA Cup finals that I have missed out on and the second Champions League final in 2007.

"Nobody's journey ever goes smoothly, mine certainly hasn't, but I am certainly proud of it and I wouldn't change it for anything."

Gerrard, who has signed an 18-month deal to play in the USA, leaves Liverpool having won the Champions League, Uefa Cup, two FA Cups and three League Cups.

"I think it will be emotional. I think it will be worst at the end of the game," added Gerrard, who is scheduled to play his final game for Liverpool at Stoke on Sunday, 24 May.

•Swansea City manager Garry has Monk defended his side's tactics after Arsenal boss Arsene Wenger accused them of "refusing to play" in their 1-0 Premier League win Monday night.

Bafetimbi Gomis's late header secured victory for the visitors at Emirates Stadium after they withstood long periods of Arsenal pressure.

"We were unlucky against a team who just defended," said Wenger. Monk said: "If we didn't play, I'm not sure how we got the three points." He added: "Three points - that's the pleasing bit, whether we deserved it or not.

"We could have come here and gone toe-to-toe but, with the individual quality Arsenal have, they could have hurt us, so we set up very well with a game plan.

"We've done it all season. We've played games where we've dominated and won and we've played games like this where we've set up differently."

The Swans defended stoically to secure a win which lifted them into eighth in the table and closer to a European place. Arsenal's first defeat in 11 league games left them three points behind s e c o n d - p l a c e d Manchester City.

•Tottenham boss Mauricio Pochettino has warned nobody is safe at the club as he looks to build a side capable of finishing in the top four of the Premier League next season.

Spurs have missed out on Champions League qualification as they sit sixth, 10 points off fourth with two games remaining.

"Always you need to analyse the last season," said Pochettino.

"Nobody is sure that they are staying at the club."

After Gareth Bale's £85m move to Real Madrid two years ago, Tottenham brought in Roberto Soldado, Paulinho, Vlad Chiriches and Etienne Capoue, but they have struggled to make a significant impact.

Defenders Federico Fazio and Ben Davies, as well as midfielder Benjamin Stambouli have been unable to make much of an impression since being signed by Pochettino after he became Spurs boss last summer.

Bale to United 'a done deal'

■ £80m move for Welsh star may kick off summer spree to include Begovic and Cavani

GARETH Bale's Real Madrid misery may be coming to an end with a shock move to Manchester United, according to reports.

Sunday Express journalist John Richardson claimed on MUTV ahead of Real Madrid's Champions League clash with Juventus this week that the transfer is all but completed.

"I think it's almost a done deal to be honest," he said. "I know somebody very close to Gareth Bale and the public are not hearing the real thing. He's very unhappy there and he's unhappy with his treatment."

Bale has become the focal point for the fans' fury after a season of under-achievement that has seen the La Liga title slip out of their grasp. Earlier this week Real manager Carlo Ancelotti gave a very public dressing down to Bale's agent for suggesting the Welsh star was struggling at Real because his teammates didn't pass to him enough. And with this week's exit from the Champions League at the hands of Juventus, Ancelotti will be under huge pressure to find a sacrificial lamb to appease the club's rabid fans.

Another report has claimed that any deal for Bale would likely cost at least £80 million, but that fee - and his £300,000-a-week salary - is within United's reach as they prepare to reap the financial benefits of their record-breaking kit deal with Adidas.

United are also considering a shock cut-price swoop for Stoke goalkeeperAsmir Begovic.

United fear they will lose David de Gea to Real this summer, with the Spaniard out of contract in a year and yet to commit to a new deal.

The Mirror reports that although United have made Hugo Lloris their top target, should De Gea decide to leave, they feel he is overpriced by Tottenham at £25m.

That has seen United turn their attentions to Begovic, who is out of contract in 12 months and so could be available for around £8m.

United have not given up on De Gea, though,

GARETH BALE: the world's most expensive footballer has become the target of fan anger at Real Madrid as their La Liga and Champions League challenge has faded and have supposedly upped their contract offer to £200,000-a-week, which would make him the Premier League's best-paid goalkeeper.

Meanwhile, continue to be linked with the transfer of Paris Saint-Germain's Edinson Cavani.

Cavani, 28, is tied into a contract with PSG until 2018, but United are lining up a bid for him, according to The Metro. It is believed the striker is demanding a

£5.75m-a-year salary, which Louis van Gaal is cont. on page 19, col. 3
