ENGLAND 'READY TO HOST THE WORLD CUP'

■ Culture Secretary hopeful over 2022 as FIFA scandal widens

England is ready to host the 2022 World Cup if it is stripped from Qatar in the wake of allegations of corruption and bribery in FIFA, Culture Secretary John Whittingdale has said.

Mr Whittingdale said the country has the facilities and mounted impressive, unsuccessful, bid to host the 2018 World Cup, and so could host the 2022 event if asked by the organisation.

He spoke as MPs asked whether England could step in to host the World Cup if allegations that the bid process for the Qatar tournament was corrupt are found to be true.

Swiss authorities are investigating bidding processes for both the 2018 and 2022 World Cups.

sanctions

Last year, Mr Clegg banned Liberal Democrat ministers from attending the Winter Olympics Sochi in protest at Russia's new anti-gay legislation.

He also responded to the shooting down of a Malaysia Airlines jet in Ukraine Moscow-backed rebels by demanding that Russia be stripped from the right to host the 2018 World Cup.

Among the other names on the visa blacklist are Sir Malcolm Rifkind, the former Conservative Foreign Secretary, and Philip Dunne, the Minister for Defence Procurement.

Sir Malcolm called last for sanctions vear against Russia over its invasion of Crimea.

Sir Malcom told BBC Radio 5 live: "It shows we are making an impact because they wouldn't have reacted unless they felt very sore at what had happened," he told BBC Radio 5 live. Once sanctions were extended, it's had a major impact on the Russian economy."

'unjustified'

The EU has called the ban "totally arbitrary and unjustified" and said no explanation had been provided.

Sir Malcolm added: "This has happened at a time when the oil price collapsed therefore a main source of revenue for Mr Putin has disappeared.

"That's pretty important when it comes to his attempts to build up his military might and to force his neighbours to do what they're told.

PAYBACK: Mr Clegg banned Liberal Democrat ministers from attending the Winter Olympics in Sochi in protest at Russia's new anti-gay legislation.

"I understand that they would like the sanctions removed, I want them removed and want to see good relations with Russia.

"It's very important that Russia, Britain and western Europe as a whole work amicably together but we can't ignore the fact that for the first time since the end of the Second World War, part of the borders of a European territory has been violated by a military attack and that is unacceptable."

Sir Malcolm, who was foreign secretary between 1995 and 1997 when Sir John Major was in Downing Street, added: "If there had to be such a ban I am rather proud to be on it - I'd be rather miffed if I wasn't.

"But I've got no immediate plans to go to Russia and haven't had to change my diary, let's put it that way."

Mr Clegg is descended from Russia's old Tsarist nobility: his paternal grandmother was a Russian baroness. His father is half-Russian and in 2010 a Russian newspaper described him as a genuine "Russian aristocrat".

Tributes flow as former Lib Dem leader Kennedy dies at just 55

■ Colleagues and opponents remember "a principled, decent man who stood up for what he believed."

FORMER Liberal Democratic leader Charles Kennedy died unexpectedly this week at the age of 55.

Colleagues and opponents alike have expressed deep sadness at the news and their tributes have stressed Kennedy's decency, his nature, remarkable gifts as a communicator. his popularity, the courage of his opposition to the war against Iraq and that fact that under his leadership in 2005 the Lib Dems achieved their best general election result since the party was formed in the late 1980s.

'decent human being'

Nick Clegg, who recently stepped down as leader of the Lib Dems, said of his friend: "He spent over 30 years in the House of Commons. yet throughout that time remained a totally decent human being. He was understated, he was not showy, he was always very thoughtful, very funny. He was an internationalist to his core, believed passionately that Britain should remain part of Europe."

Former Labour party deputy leader Harriet Harman said Kennedy: "He was someone who fought for social justice and brought courage, wit and humour to everything he did," while recently departed Labour leader Ed Miliband described Kennedy principled, decent man who stood up for what he believed."

Born in 1959, he was first elected the short-lived Social Democratic party (SDP) in the vast Scottish Highlands constituency of Ross, Cromarty and Skye, in the 1983 general election, and at 23 he was the youngest MP in the Commons. He lost his seat at the general election last month in the Scottish National party landslide.

approachable

Leading the Lib Dems in two general elections, in 2001 and 2005, he was instrumental in achieving the party's best result for 80 years when it won 62 seats in the latter contest, which is likely to remain for the foreseeable future its electoral high-water mark.

Kennedy, red-haired and round-faced, a cheery and approachable figure, with a soft Highlands accent, will generally remembered less for his political achievements than for the persona he exhibited in numerous television appearances. colleagues Some marvelled at his easy charm and wry sense of humour, which chimed well with the public increasingly wary of dour, cautious and manipulative soundbite, party-line politicians, though it also earned the him nickname "chatshow Charlie".

It did him no harm at all with the electorate, who saw him as a more genuine person than most of those at Westminster and the one they would most like to share a drink with. His popularity with the public did not suffer when he led the party's opposition to the Iraq war when both major parties were supporting it

cracks

Kennedy led the party to an improved showing in the 2001 general election, when it captured more than 18% of the vote and, more importantly, 52 seats His success was repeated in the 2005 election four years later, during which the party announced its

KENNEDY: his career was cut short by a very public drinking problem plan to target marginal Tory seats where Lib Dems held strong second places. By then, however, the cracks in Kennedy's performance beginning to show, with a particularly striking appearance during an early-morning press conference where he was incapable of explaining the details of the party's policy for a local income tax. By then colleagues saw signs of a deeper problem, which had begun to affect his Commons appearances, including not showing up in the house to respond as party leader to a budget speech in 2004.

Within months, the whispers about his drinking surfaced in public for the first time. Senior party MPs were rumoured to have warned him to improve his performance and, in January 2006, he was told that ITN planned to run a story about his having treatment for alcoholism. Kennedy, who had always publicly denied having a drinking problem, called a press conference, confirmed that the story was true and asserted that he had not had a drink for several months.

It was not enough to save his career: the party's MPs, including his closest associates, drifted away from him with several saying they would no longer serve under him. Within a day he had resigned and his fellow Scottish MP Menzies Campbell – nearly 20 years older than him – was made interim leader.

His marriage to Sarah Gurling, a public relations officer, Lib Dem activist and sister of a friend, ended in divorce in 2010. Kennedy is survived by their son.

The Duchess meets the Dame: Camilla chats with Joan Collins as they attend Royal Academy's annual dinner

■ The Duchess of Cornwall met Joan Collins at the lavish annual arts event in London

Dressed in their most glamorous gowns, the Duchess of Cornwall this week came face to face with actress Joan Collins at the Royal Academy's summer exhibition on Wednesday.

The royal introduction was made as the Duchess took her place as guest of honour at the academy's annual dinner at its home, Burlington House in central London. The event is considered by many to mark the beginning of the summer season among London's high society.

Camilla, 68, was her second making appearance of the day, having spent afternoon hosting garden party at Palace Buckingham where introduced to the real-life WI calendar girls.

Looking chic in an appropriately royal blue ensemble, the Duchess, who is a member of the WI herself, spend several minutes chatting to the ladies who became the subject of a film in 2003.

'influenced our lives'

Her busy day continued with the visit to the Royal Academy, where, along with Miss Collins, Camilla won herself more friends with a speech praising the annual summer exhibition.

'There is nothing else in the world like the Royal Academy's Summer Exhibition,' she said.

'Nowhere else can anybody - Royal Academician or not - submit a painting or a sculpture and hope to be exhibited beside some of the greatest living artists.

'But then there is nothing in the world like the Royal Academy! Nowhere else do such spectacular exhibition galleries, which show the finest art of the world, stand beside the schools which teach the artists of the future.

'For nearly 250 years the Royal Academy has influenced our lives and the lives of the nation.'

Since 1769 the institution has held a summer exhibition where works in variety of mediums, from oils to watercolours, by newcomers and e s t a b l i s h e d contemporary artists are put on display.

In the 19th century visitors could have seen works by Gainsborough and Reynolds, Turner and Constable on display.

The exhibition

POWER COUPLE: the star and the royal were introduced as Camilla took her place as the guest of honour at the Royal Academy's gala dinner famously allows artists to 'touch-up' their paintings before the public arrive.

In the Mike Leigh film Mr Turner about the famous landscape painter JMW Turner there is a scene during the summer exhibition where he paints a dab of red paint onto a seascape, to the amazement of his fellow artists, and turns it into a buoy.

The Prince of Wales is well known for his work as a watercolourist but his wife has also tried her hand at painting and received private tutoring from an artist a number of years ago.

The Duchess went on to tell her guests: 'The magnificent tradition of allowing everybody to submit their work encourages all of us even the most amateur to keep painting and to keep hoping.

'Ladies and Gentlemen, if all of us can one day dream of being artists and exhibitors, every one of us can definitely become a collector. It is one of the great traditions of the Academy that almost everything is for sale.'

During the evening Camilla was given a preview of the summer exhibition which opens on June 8 and runs until August 16.

Woman jailed for loud sex noises

A woman who breached a court order that barred her from making "loud sex noises" has been jailed.

Gemma Wale, of Small Heath, Birmingham, was given a two-week prison sentence on Monday.

A civil court judge concluded she had breached an anti-social behaviour order by "screaming and shouting whilst having sex" at a "level of noise" that annoyed a neighbour.

The details emerged in a written ruling by Judge Emma Kelly following a hearing in Birmingham County Court.

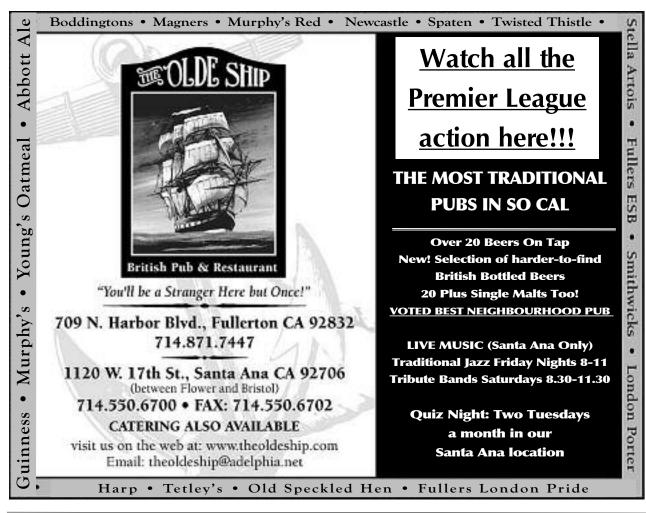

Birmingham City Council took legal action after a neighbour complained.

The judge did not give Miss Wale's age in her ruling but said she had a boyfriend called Wayne. Judge Kelly said she had also breached the order by arguing with her boyfriend, swearing at a neighbour, "banging around the house" and "running around in the property".

She said a neighbour had complained "paragraph 3 of the order" had been breached at about 05:00 on 29 January.

"Gemma started screaming and shouting whilst having sex, which woke us up," said the neighbour. "This lasted 10 minutes."

The judge concluded: "I am satisfied that during the course of the early hours of 29 January 2015, at around 5am, the defendant was guilty of screaming and shouting whilst having sex at a level of noise which caused nuisance or annoyance to (a neighbour)."

£13m lotto winner is off to BUTLINS!

great-grandfather who scooped massive £13.5m lottery jackpot has said he's going to celebrate by going on a family holiday - to BUTLINS.

Peter Congdon, 67, claimed the quadruple rollover prize after realising his numbers had come up in last Wednesday's draw.

despite becoming multi-millionaire, Peter, from Truro, Cornwall, claims he won't be changing his family's holiday plans for a break at the Butlins resort Minehead, Somerset.

He said: "As for the family holiday, we've been going to Butlin's for 40 years so this year won't be any different.

"I've always wanted a Land Rover so my daughter and I headed straight to the local showroom to book ourselves a test drive.

"If it goes well, I'll hopefully buy one for each of us. My other children won't be left out; I'll treat them to new cars as well."

Peter, who is also a councillor at Truro City Council thought he'd won £25 after spotting some of his numbers before realising he'd matched all six balls.

He said: "I thought I might have won £25, then I realised I'd matched six numbers and there was only one jackpot winner so I ran straight down to my daughter's house and asked her double-check.

"When she agreed with me, I came home and put my ticket in a book in the kitchen and made myself a cup of tea. Needless to say, I didn't get much sleep that night."

Jail term for Army wife who seduced 14-year-old boy

■ Court martial appeal court finds original sentence given to Caroline Salisbury, wife of British army corporal, was too lenient

The wife of an army corporal has been sent to prison for three years for having sex with a 14-year-old boy after a suspended sentence was ruled to be too lenient.

Salisbury, Caroline who was 25 at the time, met the teenager on a garrison bus in Germany, groomed him via social media and had sexual intercourse with him on several occasions.

She had originally been given a two-year suspended sentence but the attorney general, Jeremy Wright QC, granted permission for an appeal under the unduly lenient sentences provisions.

Although Salisbury is a civilian, the case was originally heard at a court martial Colchester, Essex, in March. Dependents of serving soldiers are subject to military regulations in the service civilian court in overseas garrisons.

She was working as a bus monitor, escorting the children of other soldiers to and from school. She befriended the boy and exchanged messages with him via social media sites.

She told him that he should not tell anyone of their relationship or her children would be taken from her. When their relationship came to light, she tried to delete the messages they had exchanged and told a and investigating police that the victim had raped her.

She pleaded guilty to four offences of sexual activity with a boy under the age of 16 over a three-week period in

The appeal against sentence was heard by

Salisbury: working as a bus monitor when she met the victim in Germany the court martial appeal court sitting at the Royal Courts of Justice in central London.

Sir Brian Leveson, sitting with Mr Justice Kenneth Parker and Mr Justice Stewart, said that Salisbury had previous convictions. She had been estranged time of the offences.

Speaking after the hearing, Wright said: "Caroline Salisbury, [now] a 28-year-old woman, clearly took advantage of a teenager.

"I referred the case to the court martial appeal court as being unduly lenient because original sentence failed from her husband at the to fully reflect the degree of planning and the serious breach of trust in these offences.

> "The fact that court martial appeal court has imposed an immediate prison term on Caroline Salisbury sends out a strong message that teenagers have a right to be protected from sexual abuse."

Charlotte Church: David Cameron is a 'misogynist'

David Cameron is a "misogynist", the singer Charlotte Church has said, as she insisted she would pay 70 per cent income tax if it improved public services.

Miss Church, who voted Labour at the election but said she would now vote Green, made the comments on Thursday as announced her support for a major march against planned Government cuts later this month.

Miss Church said she had only met the Conservative Prime Minister once at a meeting of anti-phone hacking campaigners but found him "gross, really misogynistic".

She said: "It was me and Jacqui Hames sitting next to him, and he was sort of like, anything that me and Jacqui said ... all of the men were sat opposite him - Hugh Grant, Brian Cathcart.

"He was sat opposite them and me and Jacqui Hames were put either side of him for the photo opportunity - I can deal with all of that even though we have along way to go in gender politics.

"But he was dismissive - if either of us said [anything], it really irked me."

Miss Church has been said to be worth £11million but she said her wealth had been exaggerated., also said she would happily pay 70 per cent income tax.

"I have paid all my taxes since I was 12 years old and I would be totally happy it if was raised to 60 per cent or 70 per cent. I would not move away, I would not have an offshore account.

"That would be totally for better infrastructure and public services, and more of the Scandinavian model which I see as far more progressive, than we currently are.

"I would be absolutely fine with that."

Smoking ban set to reach the beach

BRITAIN'S smoking bans are set to reach a new frontier – a Welsh bay will be the first place in the UK to ban smoking on the beach.

Signs ordering people to stub out their cigarettes are to go up at one beach in Pembrokeshire this month with the ban likely to be extended to other beaches along the National Park coastline.

Officials claim the move will help discourage young people from taking up the smoking habit on holiday.

But pro-smoking campaigners branded the plan - as "idiotic and bonkers".

Council environment chief Coun Huw George said: "We want young people to think that smoking isn't the

"There is also the problem of cigarette stubs littering the beaches and being washed out to sea endangering fish and sea birds."

The council is expected to give the ban the go ahead this summer and have it in place for the start of next year's holiday season.

Bay, run by the National Trust, is likely to be the first beach where the ban will be imposed.

Anti-smoking campaigner Jamie Matthews said: "This is the first council in the UK to consider a smoking ban on beaches.

"It is an area where young people are influenced by adults smoking. If they sit around smokers on beaches they are exposed to second hand smoking.

"Anything that stops young people from taking up smoking is a good thing."

Vut Simon Clark, director of pro-smoking group FOREST said: "It is idiotic and bonkers. There is no evidence of health risk from smoking in the open air.

"It is another example of a local authority throwing its weight around on what should be a private matter.

"Youngsters start smoking from peer pressure and family members and not from someone enjoying a smoke on a beach."

Holidaymaker Len Davies, 33, said: "It's ridiculous to ban smoking on beaches where will it all end?"

GOODBYE TO ALL THAT: Kit Harrington and Alicia Vikander star in a new version of the WWI classic

Best of Brittain? Testament of Youth well worth a look

MOVIE REVIEW: LAST YEAR'S centenary of the beginning of World War One brought a flood of books and TV projects re-examining the carnage of those four dreadful years. A late but welcome addition to the canon is Testament of Youth, a new film version of the classic memoir by Vera Brittain, which opened this week in Los Angeles.

Some readers may remember the popular 1979 British TV series of the same name, starring Cheryl Campbell as Brittain, which chronicled the tumultuous life of a forward-thinking young woman immediately before and during the conflict. In this deft retelling we see Brittain (Alicia Vikander) moving from being an ambitious and bright young student winning a place at Oxford against the wishes of her parents (Dominic West and Emily Watson, both excellent), before rapidly making a glittering circle of new friends and falling love with handsome young Roland (Kit Harrington of Game of Thrones fame). But of course soon her golden Edwardian twilight is soon rent asunder by a certain assassination in the Balkans and shortly thereafter the abattoir that was the Western Front.

This adaptation marks the feature debut of documentary-maker James Kent who introduces Vera and the young men in her life during a gorgeous Edwardian summer. She has admirers aplenty among her smart young set but then along comes Roland. Soon swooning, poetry and stolen kisses give way to the more brutal realities of war and her male friends all enlist. Tragedy ensues, of course.

At that point Vera comes into her own, not giving into grief but rather leveraging it into a ferocious response. She quits Oxford and her dreams of a literary life to nurse victims of battle, first at home and then at the front. In the course of the story she loses almost everyone she loves to the conflict but discoveres herself, becoming not just a proto-feminist but a leading voice for a lost generation.

Vikander's provides a compelling portrayal, projecting both beauty and an emotional intelligence that draw us in, charming us with her spirit even as her life gets unbearably dark.

Although the usual costume drama tropes are here - lovers at the railway station, the outsider among the Dreaming Spires, a war to end before Christmas, the corrupted wedding day, - Kent never surrenders to cliché, and the result is an absorbing and sobering look at a cataclysmic time, after which life was never quite the same.

Most voters 'undecided' on EU exit vote

The referendum on Britain's EU membership remains wide open, with fewer than a third of voters having firmly made up their mind which way to vote - and seven out of 10 remaining open to persuasion, according to a new poll.

But a survey of almost 4,000 voters for the think tank British Future suggested that some of the most passionate advocates of the In and Out causes might actually put off more people than they persuade.

Almost six out of 10 (59%) of those questioned by pollsters Survation said that they distrusted the europhile former prime minister Tony Blair when he speaks about the EU, while 56% said they did not trust Ukip leader Nigel Farage on the issue. Just 28% said they trusted Blair and 36% Farage on the issue.

British Future director Sunder Katwala said the poll suggested that the In and Out campaigns should be wary of giving a prominent role to those keenest to lead them.

distrusted

Mr Farage, in particular, "appeals to existing supporters but repels the majority of British citizens who remain undecided about Britain's place in Europe", said the thinktank.

The survey found that Mr Blair - who intervened in the recent general election campaign with a speech warning of the dangers of sleepwalking into "Brexit" - is distrusted by the public whether they are 'in' or 'out', 'decided' or 'undecided' alike.

Some 49% said they trusted Prime Minister David Cameron on the EU, against 41% who did not. European Commission president Jean-Claude Juncker polled badly, distrusted by 51% of the public and trusted by only a quarter (25%).

Just 16% of those questioned said they were definitely in favour of staying in the EU and 12% definitely in favour of leaving. More than half (59%) said they were "leaning" in one direction or the other - 31% towards staying and 28% towards leaving - but would want to know the final conditions of any deal struck by Mr Cameron with Brussels before making their minds up.

Another 13% said they did not know which way they would vote.

'wide open'

Mr Katwala said: "The EU referendum is wide open. With seven out of 10 people wanting to hear more before they make up their minds - the 'Don't Knows' and the 'Leaners' will decide whether Britain stays in Europe.

"Either side could win this referendum. Their problem is that the most prominent and passionate voices could help them to lose.

"Both Nigel Farage and Tony Blair appear to be rather more likely to harm their cause than to help it, when preaching beyond the already converted.

"This research suggests that both sides of the referendum campaign might want to be wary of those who are keenest to lead the charge for them."

Nigel Laskey remembered at Joxer Daly's this weekend

THERE was sad news for local British community last week with the untimely death of Nigel Laskey, a larger-than-life South Londoner who passed away at the early age of Nigel moved to Los Angeles three decades ago and was well known within in the British community. As one local told the BW this week: "Once you met him, you never forgot him." Nigel was a big man with a big personality who frequently turned heads when he walked into a bar – not least because of his cropped platinum blonde hair. Nicknamed 'The Pope of Palms' during his time living in Culver City, he was a regular patron of both Joxer Daly's and The Cozy Inn, a man who loved good food, drink, conversation and music.

He was also a lover of automobiles, and for a while could be seen cruising round town in his beloved Rolls Royce. As one tribute on Facebook said this week: "This funny, crazy, lovable man will be missed by so many people, close and far."

Nigel leaves a mother and sister. A celebration of Nigel's life and fundraiser to help pay for his funeral and hospital bills will be held this Saturday, June 6th, at Joxer Daly's pub in Culver City from 5pm to closing. The event features good food and drink, a raffle with great prizes and music from the tireless DJ Danny. Those who cannot make it but wish to donate can do so at: www.gofundme.com /v7freeg Joxer Daly's is located at 11168 Washington Boulevard in Culver City.

Paradise Lost? More drama at Honeychurch Hall

■ Exclusive interview with Hannah Dennison and a review of her latest mystery novel involving a high speed train line

Rating: ★★★★

"The backdrop of this book revolves around the possibility that high-speed train network, similar to HS2 that is being developed right now in the UK, the might destroy Honeychurch Hall estate," says Deadly Desire at Honeychurch Hall author Hannah Dennison. "As I did the research I became more and more angry the British government's plan to destroy hundreds of listed buildings just to shave fifteen minutes off the travel time from London and Birmingham. My feelings surprised me and of course, now I am an active campaigner."

Deadly Desire is a charming whodunit set in Devon at an English manor house. Our heroine Kat Stanford has been taking care of her mother Iris in the town of Little Dipperton. Kat is ready to return to London but then gets the news that the whole town is in uproar over plans for a high-speed train line that will mean losing forever part of their quaint village. Outraged, Kat decides to stay to help fight to stop the train. Tensions run high at the town meeting. A misfit crew of servants and colorful locals face the possibility of their lifestyle being gone forever. The g o v e r n m e n t ' s compensation disappears and one of the villagers is found dead. Who did it?

Dennison draws us right into the story with the relationship between Kat and her mother Iris especially well-wrought. Dennison laces her mysteries with clues and tidbits to keep you guessing. The characters you're reading about feel as though they could be your friends or neighbors.

You don't have to read the first book in this series (Murder at Honeychurch Hall) before you read this one, but you may want to because the setting is such fun

A typical day for Dennison is to start writing very early in the morning. "I usually wake up before the alarm at 5:30am and, armed with a cup of coffee, go straight to my computer. I got into this habit years ago when I used to 'do' Morning from Julia Pages Cameron's wonderful book, The Artist's Way. If I don't capture that magical early start, I am doomed."

Dennison says deadlines are most challenging part of her work, but that she can't do without them. "If I don't have one, I just faff about. And even when I do, which is always, I seem to leave it to the very last moment and then panic. I have a very patient husband."

To spark ideas for plots, Dennison likes to scour the newspapers for odd stories. "I also find that some people love to tell things," Dennison. "I worked at an advertising agency and the plant guy was a mine information. minute he found out I was an author he'd tell me the most bizarre things that he came across during his job, and he always seemed know someone connected to the crime. I suspect he was making a lot of it up. For example, his wife usually worked the killer something equally outlandish, but I didn't mind."

Dennison switches between writing two different mystery series. Before she makes the switch, she re-reads her books. "It helps me capture the voice of my protagonist and the tone of each work," says Dennison, who is currently writing the third book in the Honeychurch Hall Mystery series.

Dennison was born in Hampshire but now in Portland, Oregon which she says reminds her of England.

Cuba, talking 'bout a revolution

Hola Breeps!

Well, I'm just back from a whirlwind trip to Cuba, which we took with the website coolhunting.com and Global Gallop (The latter is a tour company I highly recommend run by Batia Plotch, who knows Cuba like the back of her hand and her great local tour guide Alexis, who knows everybody.

As most of you probably know, the Brits among us (most of you) can legally go into Cuba as tourists. However though the embargo has been lifted, the Americans have to still go through the right channels (like people to people exchanges) and apply for a visa to travel. And most of the trip must be educational and cultural. Although I see this probably changing fairly soon, as Obama has already taken Cuba of the State Department's terrorist list.

To be honest this is the best way to do it anyway. I learned so much, from the history, education politics. We were very fortunate to meet with Cuba's president Raul Castro's daughter, Mariela Castro Espin, who is an advocate for LGBT rights. We also enjoyed a private dinner with Ricardo Alarcón de Quesada who is a Cuban statesman. He served as Cuba's Permanent Representative to the United Nations (UN) for nearly 30 years and later served as Minister of Foreign Affairs from 1992 to 1993. He's very happy the embargo has been lifted, but doesn't want America to think they can come in and start telling the how to run their country. (fair enough!)

STREET LIFE: there is music everywhere in Havana

We were very lucky to meet with tons of artists and came home with quite the collection and because of the lifting of the embargo, we are probably some of the first people allowed to bring cigars that we bought at the factory legally back into the states.

Speaking of cigars, a sign of celebration. I am happy to share news of my engagement. Cuba even though a little run down, is still a world class city of art, culture, music and romance! ;-) I highly recommend it visiting NOW before it becomes a tourist's nightmare, best of all you can take a direct flight out of Miami.

We also bumped into one of Britain's national treasures, comedienne Catherine Tate at the Dancing with Films festival screening of her new film SuperBob in West Hollywood.

WELL CONNECTED: Mariela Castro Espín is the director of the Cuban National Center for Sex Education in Havana and an activist for LGBT rights in Cuba

Cook: we can still win the Ashes

CRICKET: England captain Alastair Cook remained upbeat this despite week morale-sapping loss to New Zealand in the Second Test, telling reporters he has seen enough potential in his side to believe they can regain the Ashes against Australia this summer.

Cook's side, including six players who had played 13 Tests or fewer, were beaten by 199 runs at Headingley on Tuesday to draw the series 1-1 - having been set 455 to win.

"In home conditions, we are comfortable," said Cook.

"But we have to make a step forward as a side and we have to do it quickly."

England, who have not lost a home series to Australia since 2001, were beaten 5-0 down under in 2013-14

Their bid to win the Ashes back begins on 8 July in Cardiff.

Before then, they will want to see batsmen Ian Bell and Gary Ballance return to form. Bell has managed only 55 runs in his last eight innings, while Ballance has 36 in his last four.

"They are fantastic players," said Cook. 'Clearly they haven't scored the runs they would have liked and they have five weeks to get some form in county cricket.

"There will be concern because they haven't scored the runs, but form comes and goes. Two games in isolation does not make you a bad player."

Former England batsman Geoffrey Boycott said the form of Ballance and Bell is a concern because of the lack of alternatives, particularly with Kevin Pietersen being told he will not be considered.

"Who are you going to pick in their place? Does anybody stand out?" Boycott said on the BBC's Test Match Special.

"When people saw Joe Root and he wasn't in the side, we said, 'This kid will play for England." But other players, I don't see England on them."

Cook also said that off-spinner Moeen Ali, who averages 41 with the ball in his last four Tests, find must some consistency before the Australians arrive.

"Mo hasn't bowled as well as he bowled last summer, so he's got some work to do to get that consistency back," said opener Cook.

"He does spin the ball hard, so if he can get that control back we know he can be a threat."

Cook also highlighted England's fielding as an that needs improvement, with four catches dropped in New Zealand's second innings at Headingley alone.

"That's disappointing," said Cook, who led England to Ashes success in 2013. "We were taking wonderful catches last summer against India.

"We have to make sure nail our positions and do a hell of a lot of catching practice. Taking your chances is so important, having to create 13 or 14 chances to bowl a side out is not helpful."

Falcao linked with Blues move

Chelsea are in advanced talks to sign Radamel Falcao from Monaco, according to The Star.

The Colombian striker (right) developed a reputation fearsome while at Atletico Madrid, but his stock has fallen after a disappointing season at Old Trafford.

Yet despite scoring just four goals in 29 games for Manchester United, Jose Mourinho is still a big fan of the player, and believes he can get the best out of him.

A Chelsea source said: "Talks have been going well and Jose is still a big fan of Falcao, despite the difficult time he had at United.

"It looks like the deal is going to happen."

Mourinho also shares the same agent as Falcao in Jorge Mendes and is believed to be confident a deal can be struck this week.

Elsewhere, the Express reports that Chelsea are keen on signing Gonzalo Higuain from Napoli.

The Blues are also weighing up a move for Aston Villa striker Christian Benteke.

ESPN claims meanwhile that Raheem Sterling could snub Chelsea join to Manchester United instead.

London 24 reports that Paul Pogba will turn Chelsea and down Manchester United to join Barcelona summer.

Milner confirms Reds switch

THE FOOTBALL season is barely over but the transfer rumor mill is in full swing with James Milner the first big name to agree a move.

The Manchester City and England midfielder has agreed to join Liverpool on a free transfer this summer.

The England midfielder rejected a £165,000-a-week offer from City and will finalise his switch when the transfer window re-opens.

However it is not all good news for the Reds, with defender Martin Skrtel slamming his new contract offer, with just one year left on his current deal.

"We felt we had a legal case against Fifa because of how the World Cup play-off hadn't worked out for us with the Henry handball," he said in a radio interview with striking a loan deal.

Meanwhile Leicester City striker Jamie Vardy says his call-up to the England squad "doesn't feel real".

"It doesn't feel real. But there's been a lot of hard work put into it. I've been given the chance now and hopefully I can take it."

Vardy is joined in the England squad for the friendly against the Republic of Ireland on Sunday and the Euro 2016 qualifier in Slovenia a week later by QPR forward Charlie Austin, another player who has risen from non-league football to receive a national call-up.

Fifa 'paid FAI to stop legal action over Henry's handball'

Fifa paid the Football Association of Ireland 5m euros (£3.6m) to stop legal action after France controversially beat Ireland in a World Cup play-off, a leading Irish football figure said on Thursday.

British Weekly Sport

FAI chief executive John Delaney said he believed they had a case against Fifa after French striker Thierry Henry's handball in the 2009 match.

Delaney said "legitimate agreement" was made to drop the claim after Ireland missed the 2010 World

Fifa president Sepp Blatter is quitting with the organisation in crisis.

Delaney's claim comes after a turbulent nine days for football's world governing body amid claims of "systemic and deep-rooted" corruption.

The Republic of Ireland were 16 minutes away from a penalty shootout for a place in the 2010 finals in South Africa before Henry handled in the build-up William Gallas's extra-time equaliser in the second leg of the play-off in Paris.

The 2-1 aggregate win sent France to the 2010 tournament, where they were knocked out of the group stages amid a player strike.

A Fifa spokesman confirmed the payment, but said it was a $5m loan and was granted for "the construction of a stadium in Ireland".

The spokesman added that the FAI was to repay the money if Ireland qualified for the 2014 World Cup in Brazil, which they failed to do. Fifa wrote off the loan on 31 December 2014. The Aviva Stadium was the only major ground redeveloped during that
