Litvinenko: Putin 'probably' to blame

- Inquiry points finger at Russian President for murder of outspoken critic in London

The murder of ex-Russian spy Alexander Litvinenko in 2006 in London was "probably" approved by President Vladimir Putin, an inquiry has found.

"diplomatic channels", the Russian news agency Interfax was quoted as saying.

Prime Minister David Cameron said the UK would have to go on having "some sort of relationship with them [Russia]" because of the Syria crisis, but it would be done with "clear eyes and a very cold heart".

The long-awaited report into Mr Litvinenko's death found that two Russian men - Andrei Lugovoi and Dmitry Kovtun deliberately poisoned the 43-year-old in London in 2006 by putting the radioactive substance polonium-210 into his drink at a hotel.

Sir Robert Owen, the public inquiry chairman, said he was "sure" Mr Litvinenko's murder had been carried out by the two men and that they were probably acting under the direction of Moscow's FSB intelligence service, and approved by the organisation's chief, Nikolai Patrushev, as well as the Russian president.

He said Mr Litvinenko's British for intelligence agencies, his criticism of the FSB and Mr Putin, and his association with other Russian dissidents were possible motives for his killing.

'Send a message'

There was also "undoubtedly a personal dimension to the antagonism" between Mr Putin and Mr Litvinenko, he said.

use polonium-210 was "at the very least a strong indicator of state involvement" as it had to be made in a nuclear reactor, the report said.

The inquiry heard evidence that Litvinenko may have been consigned to a slow death from radiation to "send a message".

Giving a statement to the House of Commons, Mrs May said Mr Cameron would raise the findings with President Putin at "the next $available\ opportunity''.$

She said the UK would impose asset freezes on Mr Lugovoi and Mr Kovtun and that international arrest warrants for the pair remained in place. They both deny killing Mr Litvinenko.

Both men are wanted in the UK for questioning, but Russia has refused to extradite them.

Speaking earlier outside the High Court, Mr Litvinenko's widow. Marina, said she was "very happy" that "the words my husband spoke on his deathbed when he accused Mr Putin have been proved by an English court".

She urged the UK government to expel all intelligence Russian operatives, impose economic sanctions on Moscow and impose a travel ban on Mr Putin.

For years Moscow rejected allegations of high-level involvement in the murder of Alexander Litvinenko.

The fact President Putin himself is now associated with this assassination has not changed anything.

One Russian Nikolai Kovalev, himself an ex-FSB boss, pointed out relations between Moscow and London would not be harmed by the report as there was no room for making them any worse.

Responding to the report, Mr Lugovoi, who is now a politician in Russia, said accusations against him were "absurd", Russian news agency Interfax was quoted as

"As we expected, there were no surprises," he said.

"The results of the investigation made public today yet again confirm London's anti-Russian position, its blinkeredness and the unwillingness of the English to establish the true reason of Litvinenko's death."

'Harm relations'

Metropolitan London's Police said the investigation into "cold and calculated murder" remained ongoing.

Alexander Yakovenko, the Russian ambassador in the UK, said Russia would not accept any decisions reached in secret and based on evidence not tested in open court.

The length of time taken come conclusions led them to believe it was whitewash of British security services' incompetence", he said.

Mr Yakovenko said these events "can't help but harm our bilateral relations".

But plans to ban the supply of poppers as part of the legislation have caused controversy.

Poppers, the name given to a group of chemicals called alkyl nitrites, are normally sniffed from a bottle producing a short head-rush. They are used recreationally and are often referred to as a "party drug".

"I use poppers. I out myself as a user of poppers. I am astonished to find it (the government) is proposing it to be banned and frankly so would many other gay men."

Mr Blunt, who came out as gay in 2010, said the drug had been used for decades and a ban would "simply serve to bring the whole law into disrepute". He warned that banning it would "drive supply underground into the hands of criminals" and increase the use of Class A and Class B drugs.

He later told BBC Radio 4's PM program that he had not suffered any adverse affects from using the drug and there was no "serious evidence" that it posed such a risk. "I think it was the most powerful argument to make and I didn't want to be a hypocrite," he said of his Commons statement.

Independent review

Personal possession of poppers will not be criminalised as a result of the proposed legislation but there would be a blanket ban on their production, supply and importation, and the police would be authorised to shut down websites selling them.

Critics say this has not been thought through, pointing to a report by the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs which concluded that their misuse is "not seen to be capable of having harmful effects sufficient to constitute a societal problem".

Tragic poppy seller Olive Cooke faced 'uncontrollable' deluge of charity letters

■ Inquiry finds 92-year-old victim was 'distressed and overwhelmed' by volume of begging letters

Olive Cooke, the 92 year-old poppy seller who took her own life last year, was facing an "almost uncontrollable" tide of begging letters from charities, an inquiry by the UK's fundraising watchdog has found.

Mrs Cooke, a passionate supporter of good causes, had become "distressed and overwhelmed" after receiving what may have been around 3,200 mailings a year, the report by the Fundraising Standards Board (FRSB) suggests.

The vast majority of the letters were unsolicited, sent by groups which had bought or been given her address from third parties, and around a quarter of them in turn passed her details on, the research indicates.

contact details

And although she did, on occasion, specifically ask to be removed from mailing lists, only about one in seven of the charities which wrote to her offered a box to tick to opt out of future mailings, it shows.

The report concludes that her experience was the "inevitable consequence" of an arrangement where charities traded generous donors' contact details with each other and commercial groups.

Mrs Cooke, from Bristol, who was thought to be Britain's longest-serving poppy seller, fell to her death in the Avon Gorge on May 6 last year.

An inquest later found that she had taken her own life, disclosing that she suffered from depression and had breast cancer.

But the tragedy also shone a spotlight on charity fundraising tactics after it emerged that she had spoken to her local newspaper, the Bristol Post, six months before her death about how she was besieged with begging letters.

'under pressure'

The report makes clear that the charity tactics were not responsible for her death but found that the "cumulative impact" of the growing number of approaches nevertheless caused her distress and that she felt powerless to stop them.

Mrs Cooke, a Methodist and Labour Party activist, dedicated 76 years of her life to raising money for the Royal British Legion and is believed to have sold around 30,000 poppies.

In a foreword to the report, Andrew Hind said: "Her experience is a sad but extremely important case as it sheds light on the way in which fundraising activity could escalate and leave a committed donor feeling under pressure to give.

"Mrs Cooke's experience demonstrates the inevitable consequences of a fundraising regime where charities have been willing to exchange or sell the personal details of donors to each other, and to commercial third parties.

"This created a situation where a donor to a number of charities could find themselves, after a period of time, receiving mail packs and phone calls from an ever-growing, and almost uncontrollable, number of charities."

The inquiry contacted a sample of just over 1,400 charities of which 99 confirmed they possessed Mrs Cooke's details.

Of those, 24 had records of having passed Mrs Cooke's details on to others, almost all of those who did so saying they had believed they had "permission" to share her details.

Yet in virtually all cases this turned out to be "assumed" permission, meaning she had not actively opted out of having her data shared.

In a statement included in the report Mrs Cooke's family said: "We want Olive to be remembered for her incredibly kind, generous and charitable nature.

"Far from being a victim, she was a strong believer in the importance of charities in UK society and local communities.

"She found great comfort in the knowledge that her support could help someone else live a better life."

Father's fury as son is questioned over his 'terrorist house'

■ Critics say dozens of children have been investigated since schools became obliged to report any suspicious activity

The father of a 10-year-old Muslim boy who was visited by police after he wrote "terrorist house" - instead of "terraced house" during a school lesson has branded it a "joke".

Police called at his home in Accrington, Lancashire, the following day and examined the family laptop, according to the BBC.

Speaking to through one of his sons, who acted as translator, the boy's father said: "He [the 10-year-old boy] came from school very sick. When he came back the police arrived and said that the school said the he had been involved in terrorist activity.

"It's because he's a Muslim kid and the parents can't speak much English, they have taken advantage."

"The police just turned up at the door. They were very rude. They took the laptop with them. I was shocked by the policeman's behaviour.

"It's a joke because if a

white kid had said it they would never have acted in this way. It's because he's a Muslim kid and the parents can't speak much English, they have taken advantage.

"After the incident he was so ill that he had to go to an emergency appointment with the doctors. He had bad stress, he was sick and he went to a school nurse.

"He's really worried about going to school. He's stressed. He eats less. It's shocking."

He said they were a "Muslim family which has nothing to do with terrorism".

"It makes me very angry. They [the school] could have asked him first, then asked the parents."

The family want apologies from the school and police.

"You can imagine it happening to a 30-year-old man, but not to a young child," the boy's cousin told the BBC

"If the teacher had any concerns it should have been about his spelling. They shouldn't be putting a child through this. He's now scared of writing, using his imagination."

The incident happened during an English lesson last month. Teachers have been obliged to report any suspicious activity ever since the Counter-Terrorism and Security Act became law last year.

Miqdaad Versi, a s s i s t a n t secretary-general of the Muslim Council of Britain, said he was aware of dozens of similar cases.

"There are huge concerns that individuals going about their daily life are being seen through the lens of security and are being seen as potential terrorists rather than students.

"This is a natural consequence of the extension of the 'Prevent Duty' to schools," he said in reference to the g o v e r n m e n t ' s anti-terrorism strategy.

Nicked 630 times: but still no bird for 'Rogue n' Nosh'

Being in the same career for 40 years is quite an achievement.

But if that career is petty crime, maybe it's not something you'd want to be shouting about.

Patrick Ryan, believed to be Britain's most convicted criminal, has been spared jail after committing his 630th offence – eating breakfast without paying for it.

Ryan, 60, has cost the taxpayer around £3million over four decades.

Most of the offences are for crimes involving food and drink particularly at Indian restaurants, earning him the nickname rogue 'n' nosh.

Ryan's list is so long that there is a 'do not print' notice on his file because it is nearly 100 pages long and they don't want to waste paper.

Between the ages of 14 and 50 he spent 23 years in prison.

His 630th conviction was committed came just days after he'd been released from Barlinnie Prison.

He went to a cafe in Clevelys, Lancashire, dressed in a hospital gown and white paper suit where he had breakfast before saying he couldn't pay.

EU turns up the heat on oven gloves

An EU plan to regulate oven gloves "disappointing" and will cause "frustration" in Britain, the Government said this week.

Friends reunited to close its doors

■ Social network pioneer founded in Hertfordshire bedroom in 1999

Friends Reunited - one of the original social network sites - is to close, one of its original founders confirmed.

The site was dreamed up in 1999 by the husband-and-wife team of Steve and Julie Pankhurst in their Hertfordshire bedroom, after Julie found herself wondering how to get in touch with former schoolfriends with whom she had lost touch. It was the first online social network to achieve prominence in Britain, and it weathered the dotcom bust. When it first launched users were charged £7.50 per year for access, although it was later made free of charge.

The site launched in the year 2000, and was bought by ITV for £175m in 2005 - reaching more than 10 million users globally. However, its popularity has suffered due to the rise of Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and other social networks.

'messageboard'

Mr Pankhurst said the decision to shut the site, which he had reacquired from comic publisher DC Thompson, came because it could no longer cover its own costs.

DATED: in its heyday the site boasted 10m global users

"I knew it was near impossible to reboot something that was old and in decline," he said, describing user numbers as "a handful". Facebook meanwhile, currently has around 1.4 billion active users.

According to Pankhurst and business partner Jason Porter, the site had become just a "messageboard" for the few users who remained.

"And I also realised, that of the 10m+ users registered, a lot had done so over a decade ago and hence their contact details were out of date." he said.

"So even if you were coming to the site to find someone and wanted to contact them, how frustrating it must be to see them listed there and try to contact and then get no response.

"Therefore, whilst it's sad, I believe it's time to move on and put Friends Reunited to bed."

Mr Pankhurst added that he now plans to launch a new service Liife, a platform for users to plot the key moments of their lives, but only with those they shared them with rather than a wider audience.

TV has become 'too crude', says comic legend Jason

Jason has slammed today's programmes for being too racy, insisting the reason his Open All Hours show has stood the test of time is because it bucks the trend by being suitable for all the family.

Jason, who is best known for his role as Del Boy in the landmark BBC comedy Only Fools and Horses, first came to the nation's attention in the original 1970s sitcom Open All Hours which starred Ronnie Barker. The series was revived as Still Open All Hours in 2014, written by original writer Clarke and featuring several of the permanent cast members of the original series. including Jason,Lynda Baron, Stephanie Cole and Maggie Ollerenshaw.

Speaking this week in London, Jason attributed the huge interest in the new version of his show because families can 'feel safe watching'.

"There's too much sex and swearing on TV," he said. "The reaction to Still Open All Hours has been amazing. On the recent episode we got seven million viewers which is unbelievable these days."

War and Peace: Andrew Davies strikes gold in Tolstoy's Russia

ON THE TELLY with Nick Stark

NO matter how many years pass we British remain suckers for a good costume drama, with each successive generation learning the jovs of watching star-crossed lovers in corsets and riding boots as they yearn and burn with unrequited love.

From the Forsyte Saga in the 1960s through the original Poldark a decade later and to the Colin Firth Pride and Prejudice two decades ago to the latest chapter in the genre, War and Peace, there is simply nobody who does these civilized bodice-rippers better.

If, like most of us, you have not read Leo Tolstoy's epic saga of love, war and court intrigue in Tsarist Russia during Napoleonic times, then the new BBC miniseries which debuted Sunday night on A&E may yet provide your best crib sheet.

Adapted by Andrew Davies (the man behind the aforementioned Pride Prejudice) and directed by Tom Harper, this new War and Peace is visually ravishing and peopled by a quite superb cast of established heavyweights and talented newcomers alike. It may only contain a fraction of the epic book's narrative of battles, love intellectual awakening, but it remains a fine, fast-moving yarn, and what more could we wish for during an El Nino winter?

In essence, War and Peace is an epic saga which opens with Napoleon moving his Grande Armee eastwards into Mother Russia. As the story unfolds it details the impact of the war and its events on Tsarist society, focusing on five specific Russian aristocratic families. The young men and women – and some of the older ones too – must ponder a future that may bring death or glory, triumph or destruction. And quite possibly a few love affairs in between.

Gillian Anderson gives us a few tantalizing of her glimpses red-headed magnetism as Anna Pavlovna, and Jim Broadbent is as effective as ever playing Prince Bolkonsky. Then there is Brian Cox as the garrulous General Kutuzov and Stephen Rea, as the treacherous and conniving Prince Kuragin, character for whom the word sniveling might have been coined.

As you would expect from the BBC, the art direction, costumes and are absolutely glorious, providing a level of decadence and finery that even the most ostentatious of money Russian oligarchs would have trouble reaching. It works at its best as a soap opera writ large, a crowded canvas of young actors generating the required sighs for their love stories, hatred for their misdeeds and frustration as they fail to see the challenge a new age is thrusting upon them.

American actor Paul Dano as Pierre is a hard fellow to like given his feeble approach to life, especially when paired with Tuppence Middleton's horrid Helene. Much more to our liking is the pairing of James Norton as Andrei and Downton Abbey's whose Lily James, Natasha makes journey from nervous teen to radiant young adult. Then there's Tom Burke's positively Dolokhov, telegraphing malevolence as he twirls his moustache.

In a recent interview Norton gushed about his experience making the show, and the benefits of shooting on location.

"The BBC executives and producers, they all were really adamant to shoot in Russia because they felt like you can't really re-create Russia," said Norton.

"There were endless [memorable] moments. ... I remember standing on this frozen lake with Jim Broadbent. Actually, we were standing on this sort of walkway of a stately home and we kind of veered off and we were shooting a scene. We didn't realize until we saw these little images in the very far distance that they were ice fishermen....We didn't realize until that point that we were on a frozen lake and even Jim Broadbent, his breath was taken away and said: 'Wow! This is amazing. This couldn't be anywhere else.' And, similarly, when we were filming in Catherine Palace, Lily and I waltzing with 300 extras and a live orchestra in this beautiful, gold, amber room... It's very difficult not to lose yourself in those moments. It's so romantic and magical and it transports you perfectly. It does your job for you as an actor, really."

Bosoms heaving, sabers flashing, moustache twirling, deathbed wrangles, all the old tropes are here compelling fashion. Full marks once more to Andrew Davies, who proves yet again that when it comes to sexing up the classics, he simply has no peer.

ARIES: If life at work is not all it could be look at the positive side of things. As we move into the end of the month your lively boss Mars is in Scorpio, bringing you plenty of energy to get your life flowing well in all areas.

TAURUS: Your emotions are probably in a mess in regards to some area of life. It is more than likely a past situation that has brought things up and this will be resolved soon as friendly Jupiter is in your cousin sign until summer.

GEMINI: Take time out, maybe with a trusted friend and figure out what direction you need to follow in your life for the best long-term outcome. Your rascally boss Mercury is moving backwards, slowing you down and giving you time to relax.

CANCER: Just when you thought all was in order the past can up and bite you. More than likely it's someone you least expected to bite. The fact is that your sign is renowned for holding onto the past, but it's time to let go.

LEO: You may be involved in a family drama that has you tearing around in a huff or anger. Stop! Look at what the problems are causing you to feel, health-wise and then decide to carry on or (better still) let go.

VIRGO: Remember that everything in life is a lesson and so if you are going through a tough spell find a teacher who can guide you through. Look at someone who has stood firm themselves in difficult situations and you won't go far wrong.

LIBRA: Your lovely boss Venus is in your cousin sign and she is preparing you for later in the spring when you will feel ready to tackle anything. In the meantime just enjoy the downtime, sometimes that's all you can do.

SCORPIO: A person of interest to you romantically will more than likely turn up. How you treat this situation is important. You have learned many tough lessons in the past year and you hopefully have learned them well. It's time for you to move on pursuing an important career situation, which is coming up soon.

SAGITTARIUS: Just watch that temper if things don't always go the way you planned, life is an adventure. Please remember that while your boss Jupiter is in practical Virgo for a few months ahead. Think positive and life will get a very nice boost.

CAPRICORN: Listening to your inner voice is the clue to your next move. But whatever area this may be in remember this is your best indicator of stop and go. Lovely Venus is coming to visit you, meaning fun times and romance may be much on your mind.

AQUARIUS: You will always get back what you put out and just be careful you don't say too much to another that can set you back a mile or two. Keep your thoughts or judgments to yourself and you will see that nothing is as bad as it could be.

PISCES: Jupiter is sitting in your opposite sign for a few more months ahead. This can make you melancholy but also lucky. You decide which is better for your health. Learn to live your life in the moment and go out and buy yourself a treat and have a flutter also.

The Violinist of Venice: sweet harmony for the reader

Exclusive interview with author Alyssa Plombo and a review of her novel about the life and loves of Vivaldi and his music

Rating: ★★★★

"Strangely enough, the idea came from a dream I had, almost seven years ago now," says The Violinist of Venice author Alyssa Plombo. "The dream itself was essentially what became the first chapter of the book, where Adriana shows up at Vivaldi's house and asks him to give her music lessons."

Engrossing. The characters in The Violinist of Venice come to life under Plombo's care. Music is the life force of this novel. You may want to listen to Vivaldi's music in the background while reading this book. Adriana's life keeps intersecting with Vivaldi's in poignant ways. Readers will be charmed by the times and music.

Adriana D'Amato is the daughter of a wealthy merchant. Cloistered in her father's house for most of her young life, she loves to play the violin and is very talented. Since her mother's death her father has forbidden her to take lessons or to play. Adriana wants Vivaldi to teach her.

Vivaldi breaks his vows as a priest and they become lovers. Their secret affair continues as her father seeks a suitable husband to marry her off. What does her future hold?

"I had no idea why I would have such a seemingly random dream," says Plombo. "But, it was so powerful and vivid that when I woke up that day I couldn't stop thinking about it. By that night I had the first chapter written as well as a vague outline in my head of what I thought the rest of story would be...though that changed and evolved quite a bit even over the course of the first draft."

Plombo consulted translations of letters Vivaldi had written and read everything she could about him and about Venice. Plombo couldn't research any primary documents firsthand because she's not fluent in Italian. She says she only speaks Italian enough to follow the plot of an Italian opera. So instead she studied Vivaldi's music, the scores that she describes in the book.

"I listened to a ton of Vivaldi's music," says Plombo. "I took violin lessons for a brief time. Turns out I'm a pretty terrible violinist. But, I had fun, and I learned a lot that helped me in writing the novel." Plombo traveled to Venice as well.

"Overall, writing this book has started me on such an incredible journey," says Plombo, "from the writing of it, in which I learned so much about the craft, and about researching; to going to Venice; to the whole publishing process of finding my agent and selling the book and going through all the steps in getting it ready for publication."

The Violinist of Venice is Plombo's first novel. Her short fiction has been published in literary magazines such as Black Lantern and The Great Lakes Review. St. Martin's made a two-book deal with Plombo, so another book is coming.

Vicki Lame at St. Martin's is Plombo's editor. "When I first read this book, I was immediately smitten," says Lame. "You can't help but be swept up into the lives of these very complex, very real characters. Plus, I've always been a sucker for a good forbidden romance on the page. I first met Alyssa at a lunch with her agent."

Plombo is currently working on revisions with her editor for my second novel, historical fiction set in Renaissance Florence. "It's very much about the magnificent artwork of that period," says Plombo.

Plombo lives in her home town of Buffalo, New York.

Oscar uproar: my two cents...

Greetings Britlings!

Do you ever have those moments where you look at things in the media and shake your head at the attention given to certain issues? Hollywood I love you but sometimes you are just so MESSED UP!

Okay, so I have to be careful here expressing my opinions, not to hurt anyone's feelings, nor offend anyone with what I'm about to say. I will start by seeing these are my thoughts, and do not reflect that of Brits in LA as a whole.

I'll start with this hashtag #OscarsSoWhite. repeat it #OscarsSoWhite and more #OscarsSoWhite. And add to it - the uproar of certain individuals in Hollywood, yes I'm talking to you Spike Lee, twice-nominated famed film director of such classics as Do The Right Thing, and Malcolm X who said the following on his instagram he "cannot support" the "lily white" Oscars." which in my opinion is a racist thing to say by the way. And then actress Jada Pinkett-Smith released a video, pretty much inviting other black actors to join her in her non-attendance this year. Is she really that upset that her husband didn't get a nomination? Personally, I didn't get to see 'Concussion', and as a BAFTA member, our rules state you can't vote something you haven't seen. I wasn't sent a screener and it came out on Christmas Day -and I was busy living paddleboarding in Maui. Sorry, not sorry. I'm sure his performance is top notch – was was his Oscar-nominated performance in Ali.

modern day blackface

But truth is there are over 300 feature films released each year and people simply don't have time to watch every single movie. So how can this be fair? Does that make me racist? No because I did watch Straight Out Of Compton and I loved it, And I voted for it in the BAFTAs and also for its actor Jason Mitchell, who portrayed Eazy-E. But I didn't vote for the very white cast of "The Big Short" in any categories because I didn't get to see it in time. Them's the

Now I understand the upset and frustration of all these white folks (disclaimer: I am white!) being nominated time after time and winning all the time, it is not fair. not a representation of today's society. But I will also ask this: Where were the other people of color or the LGBT nominations, and why aren't those 'groups' making noise? Eddie Redmayne gets nominated for doing essentially a modern day black-face playing a struggling transgender. "Such a stretch!" (fine hand acting there by the way, Eds) while the real transgender actor in Tangerine, Kitana Kiki Rodriguez plays Sin-Dee Rella, a transgender sex-worker overlooked for her fine work. Why? Because hardly anybody saw it, or because Hollywood is still homophobic and transphobic? (Disclaimer: I'm gay, by the way). Please do, it's a wonderful film, shot all on the iphone! Genius. But these days Mickey Rooney could never play Asian in 'Breakfast At Tiffany's" Dressing up to portray anyone that is not the same colou as yourself is not acceptable, nor should you, there is a wonderful pool of actors of the same color as the characters from which we can now pick - and rightly so, The West End has currently for the first time cast all Asian roles with Asian actors. But where are all the gay actors and should they only be right for gay

#OscarSoStraight?

Has this all gotten a little out of hand? Acting is acting, pretending to be things you are not. If this theory was to stick, only murderers can play murderers and thieves can play thieves. In drama school you are taught to use your imagination, act with a chair, or tennis ball, pretend to be a tree. Anyway my point is actors should be able to have the freedom to play all sorts of roles and the better actors to win those roles. regardless gender, race, occupation. The job is to make you believe.

Straight people playing gay in Hollywood is seen accomplishment, a push. "Wow, such a brave actor to kiss or touch another member of the same sex.."

Tom Hanks, Denzel, Mark Ruffalo, Cate Blanchett, Paul Rudd and even you, Mr. Will Smith. Listen, you all played your roles very well, and I wonder if these movies would have done so well with (god forbid) real life gay people! - That wouldn't be considered a stretch at all - in fact they probably liked it! I can tell you from experience, any love scene with either man or woman is incredibly difficult. - Wait can I start a new hashtag this point? #OscarSoStraight"

In the end racism and homophobia are bigger than problems the Academy's voters, who usually end up voting for the people they know, friends, peers, people they want to work with. I heard this myself from an academy voter, who even took a screenshot of his ballot to a director and sent it over as proof probably in the hopes of getting a job out of it.

I'm probably gonna get some stick for this article, but I need to let you know that I grew up in a council estate with black, Asian and Indian kids who were my friends. My auntie is married to a black man, my uncle is married to an Indian lady, my niece has just given birth to a beautiful baby whose father happens to be black. I'm gay, my brother is gay. But to us as a family none of this matters, we don't see color or race, we see people. We see love, we see friendships.

Perhaps we should take race and gender out of it for a second and realise this is a stupid people and pats them on the back for all the hard work they've done on a movie, no matter what we think of it. No one is saving lives here, or starving, or dealing with death and despair, so if you really want to make a difference in the world, perhaps think bigger than the Oscars. And in the words of the youth program from yesteryear: "Why don't you switch off your TV set and go out and do something less boring instead?" Like fighting for what's right, gun control, immigration, starvation, homelessness, abuse, animal rights.... the things that really matter in life.

THE BRITISH WEEKLY, SAT. JANUARY 23, 2016

Elts to the rescue!

I hear Lady Gaga is working day and night on her very own Thriller – with help from the "Rocket Man" himself Sir Elton John!

The poor reception for the 2013 album ARTPOP has forced "Lady G" to let go of songwriting control, with the aim of making an all-out pop record using other big name writers. Step forward Sir Elt'!

A source said: "She's recorded with Nile Rodgers, Mark Ronson and Max Martin, so it's pop all the way."

And the latest man to board her collaborative pop space station is the veteran English singer-songwriter.

Elton, 68, said: "I'm writing with Gaga. I've heard two songs, which are killer. They're just great songs. Back to the early stuff of hers. It's all about the song."

Elts, who made Gaga godmother to his kids, last performed a duet with her for the animated film Gnomeo & Juliet.

And he believes she has got her career back on track. "ARTPOP was not a great idea," he told Beats 1 radio.

"It was not a good album and I think she would admit that. Then in the midst of that she did three things which were amazing. She did the album with Tony Bennett, sang the Julie Andrews tribute at the Oscars, and was on American Horror Story."

Friends believe Gaga's new album could deliver as many hits as Michael Jackson's classic Thriller.

But it's Carole King who Elton thinks she should be aspiring to be.

Gaga will give a first taster at the Grammy Awards on February 15... Can't wait!

Could Tilda play Bowie?

DAVID BOWIE may be gone but it seems the great pop chameleon's legacy is set to live on in a new biopic — which could feature his friend and doppelgänger Tilda Swinton.

Oo-er!

"It's remarkable how much Tilda resembles David in his younger days despite the fact she is female," a source told the Daily Express.

"That and the androgyny that he loved to present as part of his image makes Tilda the perfect choice to play David in the inevitable event of a film being made of his incredible life.

"Tilda will have first refusal on playing a true icon."

There has long been similarities drawn between the pair due to their androgynous looks, pale skin and matching hair styles.

Tilda is a huge fan of the singing sensation and has even starred as Bowie's wife in his music video The Stars (Are Out Tonight).

In the actress's 2015 movie A Bigger Splash, in which she plays a rock legend, she revealed her biggest inspiration for the role was Bowie.

But let's not get too excited just yet.

A representative for the actress stated: "I can confirm this is not true."

Even though I too can't see it ever happening (though stranger things have) – I reckon Tilda would make a great David Bowie...Let's keep an open mind!

Cook warns against complacency as England relish Test Series victory

Captain Alastair Cook has challenged his England players to perform well in the fourth and final Test against South Africa to "guarantee" places.

Cook's team beat their hosts in dramatic fashion at the weekend and hold an unassailable 2-0 lead but he does not want his players to let their standards drop.

"This side has a long way to go and there's a huge amount for the guys to play personally," he said.

"As long as our attitude is right and people focus on what they can do to help the side then we should be

Nick Compton, James Taylor and Alex Hales have only played in 12, six and three Tests respectively and Cook wants them to impress before a busy summer that includes three Tests against Sri Lanka and four versus Pakistan.

In an interview with BBC Radio 5 live, Cook added: "Alex Hales got a good 60 in Cape Town and will be desperate to make his mark, as will some others, so they are guaranteed picks for the first Test against Sri Lanka at Headingley.

"Hopefully they can go out and show the world how good they are. What a great stage to do that when you're 2-0 up in the series.

"It has been a really good tour, we haven't lost, and we've played some really good cricket.

"Winning in South is another stepping stone but it is not the end of the road for the guys."

Cook needs 117 more runs to become the first Englishman to score 10,000 in Tests.

As so often in the series England has Stuart Broad to thank as his devastating 6-17 spell on the third day ripped the heart out of the South African batting line up.

The match had been finely balanced after England replied to the hosts' 313 first innings total with 323 of their own in Johannesburg. But then Broad took over to rip apart the hosts with a 5-1 spell in 31 balls with Ben Stokes also claiming 2-24 and James Taylor holding two stunning catches at short leg.

England were taken to their target of 74 by Alastair Cook's 43 for a three-day win.

Cook's men go 2-0 up, with only the fourth Test still to play, for a first overseas series victory

Regardless of the result of the final match in Centurion, South Africa - now without a win in nine Tests - will be replaced by India at the top of the Test rankings.

Broad had taken five wickets in a single spell six previous occasions, the most famous of which were Ashes-winning hauls at Oval 2009, Chester-le-Street in 2013 and Trent Bridge in

This was just as devastating, not least because the match was finely poised, with England holding only a 10-run first-innings lead.

On a pitch offering bounce and movement, and under a grey sky, Broad's hostility and accuracy was too much for a South Africa batting line-up that did little wrong, but had no

Agent demands inquiry as leak proves Bale was world's priciest player

■ Papers reveal Welshman cost Madrid over €100m - even more than Ronaldo

Gareth Bale's agent has called for investigation after a confidential document relating to his client's world record £85m move to Real Madrid from Tottenham was leaked.

The six-page document, released by the website Football Leaks and widely published in Spain, set out details of the full value of the deal, which has always been disputed.

Real have long claimed they paid €91m (£78m) for Bale in 2013 – less than the €96m they paid for Cristiano Ronaldo four years earlier. However, the Spanish newspaper AS reported that the document showed the Bale fee amounted to €100,759,418 (£85m) because Real had opted to pay in instalments – with Tottenham forbidden from disclosing any financial details.

It is widely thought that Real's insistence that Ronaldo was the more expensive of the two players was designed to appease the Portugal forward. Earlier this month the journalist Jonathan Northcroft told the BBC he was asked by Real not to mention the subject when interviewed Bale, Cristiano "because Ronaldo doesn't like to see that someone else cost more than him".

In October 2013 the Real president, Florentino Pérez, implied Ronaldo's fee was higher. Asked by the Spanish TV show Punto Pelota on the channel Intereconomia whether Bale had been insured for €91m, he replied: "Yes, of course."

Bale's agent, Jonathan

HE WON'T BE HAPPY: the report suggests Bale's price was falsified to avoid upsetting the previously most expensive transfer, Cristiano Ronaldo

"outrageous", reporters: "There should be an inquiry and investigation ... I think disgraceful that people can get hold of this independent sort of stuff. It shows complete disregard for both clubs and the player."

mooted by the player's camp.

Pato has already spoken to Willian and third-choice goalkeeper Marco Ameliaabout moving to England and Chelsea, and the 26-year-old is now hopeful the transfer will be finalized.

Corinthians value Pato at around £10million, but Chelsea my try to haggle down that price or even push for a loan with a view to a permanent move.

Pato has not played since November and may require at least a week of full training to get match readv.

Pato must also hope that a more attractive option is not presented to Chelsea while he waits to move, as the club have not vet dismissed a series of alternatives.

Chelsea are interested in Leicester City's Jamie Vardy and AC Milan's Carlos Bacca, and have been kept informed about Saido Berahino's at West situation Bromwich Albion.

Loic Remy is still hoping the arrival of Pato would allow him to leave Stamford Bridge this month, but Chelsea would prefer the former AC Milan star to replace Falcao.

Monaco appeared to rule out taking Falcao back from Chelsea this month, but there is still hope an agreement can be reached for the Colombian's season-long loan to be cut short.

Interim manager Guus Hiddink has claimed that Falcao has a "very, very serious" thigh injury, but the 29-year-old posted pictures of himself working out Instagram with message saying he hopes everything will 'return to normal' soon.

Right-back Branislav Ivanovic has also agreed a one-year contract extension at Chelsea.

Teixeira as Jurgen Klopp attempts to secure his first major signing since becoming manager at Anfield.

BW Sport

The Reds are willing to pay about £24.5m for the 26-year-old, but, the Ukrainian club value Teixeira, who has also been linked with Chelsea, at closer to £39m. Klopp is looking to boost his striking options, with Danny Ings, Divock Origi and Daniel Sturridge injured. With £32.5m summer signing Christian Benteke out of sorts, Liverpool have only scored 25 goals in 22 Premier League games this season.

Shakhtar, who are at a winter training camp in Florida, value Teixeira highly. He has scored 22 goals in 15 league games and four goals in 10 Champions League appearances this season.

Klopp has brought in defender Steven Caulker on loan from QPR and completed a £5.1m deal for Red Star Belgrade's 19-year-old midfielder Marko Grujic, who has returned to the Serb club on loan until the summer. But signing Teixeira would represent his first significant move in the transfer market

Tottenham have opened talks with Fulham over the potential signing of 19-year-old French striker Moussa Dembele, according to the London Evening Standard. If the player joins the North London side it will cause confusion among commentators and the public given that the club already have Belgian star Mousa (with one 's') Dembele on their books. The other forward who is apparently on the radar of the White Hart Lane club is Javier Hernandez. Several outlets reporting that the former Manchester United striker could leave German club Bayer Leverkusen in the summer.

FA Cup 3rd Round Replay LEICESTER CITY...0 TOTTENHAM H.....2

Son Heung-min scored a stunning goal and set up another as Tottenham booked their place in the FA Cup fourth round at the expense of Leicester Wednesday night.

With both sides flying high in the Premier League, it promised to be a closely fought replay after the sides drew the first match.

But Spurs were barely troubled and took the lead in the 39th minute when Son's 18-yard strike beat Kasper Schmeichel.

Nacer Chadli made it 2-0 when he converted Son's precise through ball.

The north London side travel to League One strugglers Colchester United in the fourth round.

It was probably the best 83 minutes of Son's Tottenham career so far.

The £22m summer signing from Bayer Leverkusen was the one bright spark in attack on a night when both sides lacked bite up front With Tottenham pairing Harry Kane and Dele Alli and the Foxes' Jamie Vardy and Riyad Mahrez starting on the bench, it was up to the 'cup players' to prove they were also worthy of a place in their Premier League starting XIs.

For Tottenham, who made eight changes, Son's claim was the strongest. He did what his team-mates struggled to do for almost 40 minutespenetrate the Leicester backline when he shifted past defender Ben Chilwell before scoring with a ferocious dipping strike.

And his assist for the second was also a thing of beauty. After collecting substitute Kane's pass from the left, Son nutmegged Yohan Benalouane with his ball for Chadli, who fired beyond Schmeichel.

'Tinkerman' Claudio Ranieri repeated much of what he had done before the first match by making nine changes from the previous league match.

As in the first game, his side were content to let Tottenham dominate possession seemingly in the hope of catching them on the break.

However, the plan failed. The Spurs midfield quelled the threat of wingers Demarai Gray and Nathan Dyer, and in doing so cut off the supply line for lone striker Leonardo Ulloa.

Shinji Okazaki and Marc Albrighton were brought on after the break, as in the match at White Hart Lane, and improved matters. Albrighton had the Foxes best chance of the match when he forced a good low save from the otherwise redundant Michel Vorm.

In defence, Chilwell should perhaps have closed down Son for the opener, but he was Leicester's best player. The youngster was exceptional as an attacking full-back - the highlight a mazy first-half run that won his side a free-kick.

Tottenham manager Pochettino Mauricio declared himself 'very happy' with his side's performance, telling reporters: "We have also the Premier League and Europa League and I think it is very important to keep the squad fit and working hard, and the FA Cup is very important for this. We are having a fantastic season, we are at a fantastic level.

"It is difficult to be fair to players but there is fantastic spirit in the changing room and in the training ground."
