Time to Hug A Brit?

As crunch EU vote draws nearer, European expats show the love to their British hosts

MANY UNSUSPECTING BRITONS found themselves of yourself hugging a Brit on the receiving end of unsolicited affection this week - thanks to the rise of the unlikely hashtag #hugabrit and a group of concerned pro-EU Europeans who live and work in Britain.

and send it in.

The fly in the ointment, of course is the traditional British horror of being touched by complete strangers.

"We have encountered long as you ask politely." some difficulties in our attempts to overcome the traditional British reluctance towards physical contact, but we are happy to take up this challenge for a higher cause. In truth, I think the Brits like to get hugged as who need some loving...

So there you have it, if you're a British reader, prepare some unsolicited hugs this week. If you're an anglophile,

The UK is home to more than two million people who are EU citizens but not Brits - and as such are bystanders in the EU referendum debate. They can't vote, and so have no way of influencing what will be for them a crucial decision. Until now.

A collection of pro-remain Europeans has just formed a group called #PleaseDon'tGoUK, and this month they're launching a campaign called#hugabrit. Their intention, according to founding member Tessa Szyszkowitz, a UK correspondent for an Austrian news magazine,

Along with the hashtag, they have a website (pleasedontgouk.com), and a Facebook page. This is a start-up in the truest sense of the word: there is no budget, no marketing campaign, no membership dues. You just have to take a picture

Coming up to a Brit you don't know and moving in for an unsolicited hug could bring an unwelcome response. As one columnist put it this week: "You might get better results from promising to leave him alone, or hugging him and then offering to stop."

Cameron admits receiving funds from father's offshore accounts

THE PANAMA PAPERS revelations which have dominated the world's headlines over the past few days have not escaped Westminster, as the Prime Minister this week admitted that he had a stake in his father's offshore company which he sold for £30,000 shortly before he moved into No. 10.

Mr Cameron sought to end days of questioning about his families tax affairs by insisting that he paid income tax on the dividends in the "normal way".

He insisted that he does not have "anything to hide" and said he is proud of his father's achievements, adding that he "can't bear to see his name being dragged through the mud".

Thursday's admission came after the Prime Minster had faced four days of intense scrutiny over his family's financial arrangements.

Cameron has previously insisted that he does not receive any current benefit from an investment in an offshore trust and will not do so in future.

However the he has now revealed that both he and his wife benefited from the trust in the past. He told ITV News: "Because of course I did own stocks and shares in the past - quite naturally because my father was a stockbroker. I sold them all in 2010, because if I was going to become Prime Minister I didn't want anyone to say you have other agendas, vested interests. Samantha and I had a joint account.

"We owned 5000 units in Blairmore Investment

Trust, which we sold in January 2010. That was worth something like £30,000.

"I paid income tax on the dividends. There was a profit on it but it was less than the capital gains tax allowance so I didn't pay capital gains tax.

"But it was subject to all the UK taxes in all the normal way. So I want to be as clear as I can about the past, present and future.

"Because frankly I don't have anything to hide. I am proud of my dad and what he did, the business he established and all the rest of it. I can't bear to see his name being dragged through the mud. For my own, I chose to take a different path from my father, grandfather and great grandfather, who were all stockbrokers, and I have nothing to hide in my arrangements. "

He also said that he had received a £300,000 inheritance from his father when he died, adding that he could not be sure if it came from an offshore source.

He said he is committed to publishing his tax return: "I think the idea of publishing the information that goes in your tax return, I am very relaxed about that. It didn't happen before the last election. It did not come about.

"I don't think this should be for every MP. It is a very big change in our system. It should be for the prime minister, and the potential prime minister. I am very happy for that to happen."

Farage pledges to allow smoking in pubs and raise Scottish drink-drive limit

Nigel pledged smoking allow in pubs as he launched Ukip's Scottish manifesto, vowing to next month's Holyrood election as a springboard to persuade a majority of Scots to leave the EU and prevent the English being trapped in Europe against their will.

As well as allowing drinkers to light up in pubs, the Ukip leader said he would also raise the drink-drive limit north of the border - putting it back in line with the rest of the UK - and allow 30 minutes of free town centre parking.

He argued that his party getting their first MSPs in the Scottish Parliament would have a "transformative effect" on the political debate about Europe north of the Border, which he said had been smothered by all the mainstream parties supporting the EU.

Nicola Sturgeon has suggested Scotland being dragged out of the EU despite could trigger a second independence referendum, but Mr Farage said he agreed with the premise that a more likely problem was the English wanting to leave but being kept in by the Scots.

Although the Remain campaign has a larger poll lead in Scotland than England, of around 18 points, he argued that the seven weeks between the Holyrood poll on May 5 and the EU referendum on June 23 would be enough for that to erode.

Unveiling Ukip's Holyrood election manifesto in Edinburgh, Mr Farage argued that his was the only real pro-independence party because it would end rule from Brussels and urged Scots to use their second, regional vote to back his party as "an open shot on goal" at the liberal mainstream.

Among the manifesto's pledges were allowing pubs to open smoking rooms, reversing a cut in the drink-drive limit, using Holyrood's new income tax powers to create a new 30p income tax band between £45,300 and £55,000 and a "red line" on further devolution from Westminster.

Mr Farage said: "Ukip getting a breakthrough into Holyrood actually will have quite a transformative effect on the six weeks that follow afterwards when we have the referendum debate on its own.

"I still firmly believe cont. on page 4, col. 5

Life term for schoolgirl sadists

■ Judge blasts 15 year olds for 'cowardly' killing' of helpless local alcoholic

Two 15-year-old girls given have been sentences with minimum terms of 15 years for the torture and murder of a vulnerable woman.

Angela Wrightson, 39, was found seminaked in her living room in Hartlepool with more than 100 injuries including 80 to her face - in December 2014.

The girls, then aged 13 and 14, used weapons including a shovel, a TV and computer printer.

They were found guilty of murder at an eightweek trial at Leeds Crown Court.

The judge Mr Justice Globe has decided to keep a reporting restriction banning the identification of the girls in place despite media requests that it be lifted.

'kind and house proud'

He said identifying the pair would pose a "real and immediate risk" to their lives, having heard how the older girl had repeatedly tried to kill herself after her arrest.

The judge said Ms Wrightson, who was nicknamed Alco Ange, was a lonely alcoholic who did not eat properly, but was "kind and house proud".

He said she would invite anyone in for company, adding: "There lav her fall."

The judge told the girls: "Children such as you would take advantage of

"Nobody expected her to come to any harm, still less in the manner she was attacked by you."

The judge said the alcohol Ms Wrightson had consumed on 8 December 2014, "may have numbed pain, but it won't have taken it away entirely".

He said 14 different items were used to strike heavy blows in a "cowardly" attack which "gratuitous included degradation".

The younger girl's mother broke down in tears as the judge listed the teenager's crimes, while her father stared through the reflective glass separating the public seating area from the lawyers' benches and the dock.

'lacked intelligence'

Both girls were blankfaced as they were told they would serve a minimum of 15 years, although once they had been led away and the door shut behind them, one of them let out a despairing wail.

Angela Wrightson's mother Maureen showed emotion in the public gallery for the first time when the judge enumerated the injuries sustained by Ms Wrightson. As he read out the details, Mrs Wrightson closed her eyes and put her hand over her face.

Jamie Hill QC, defending the older girl, said she "lacked intelligence" about how people could die and only now understood the consequences of her actions, for which she expressed sorrow and remorse.

'Not evil'

Mr Hill said the girl had a "terrible, violent and unstable upbringing" and had "enormous difficulty" in forming relationships due to her inability to control her emotions.

He said: "Cases like this are often portrayed as good versus evil.

"The reality is usually much more complicated than that and here we have two deeply troubled children who found themselves in a sad and unpredictable world which was Angela Wrightson's refuge."

He said the girl was not "necessarily evil" but "damaged" and "maybe wasn't a fully functioning person at that particular time in her life".

John Elvidge QC, representing the younger girl, said her age needed to be taken into account. He said: "She spoke as a child, understood as a child and thought as a child, so when others look for answers to the question as to why this happened, what they should bear in mind, ANGELA WRIGHTSON: known locally as "Alco Ange" was a well known but harmless drunk in Hartlepool. She was murdered in December 2014.

whatever was said and done, it was done by 13-year-old girl."

Hartlepool Borough Council said an independent safeguarding adult review would be carried out by the Teesside Safeguarding Adults Board regarding Ms Wrightson.

The girls, whose friendship had grown in the months before Ms Wrightson's death, went to her home on Stephen Street to get her to buy them alcohol.

They then attacked her with numerous implements over a fivehour period before calling the police for a lift

Ms Wrightson's body was found semi-naked and covered with grit and shards of glass the following day by her landlord when he came by to collect the rent.

Mr Justice Globe said it seemed Ms Wrightson had tried to defend herself judging by injuries including three broken fingers and deflection marks on her hands, wrists and arms.

He said: undoubtedly suffered considerably, both mentally and physically, before she ultimately lost consciousness and died."

Rare Shakespeare First Folio discovered on Scottish island

■ Priceless book will go on display at on Isle of Bute

A copy of Shakespeare's First Folio, one of the most sought-after books in the world, has been discovered in a stately home on a Scottish island.

This copy of the first collected edition of Shakespeare's plays, published in 1623, was found at Mount Stuart House on the Isle of Bute.

Academics who authenticated the book called it a rare and significant find.

About 230 copies of the First Folio are known to exist. A copy owned by Oxford University sold for £3.5m in 2003.

'Astonishing'

Emma Smith, professor of Shakespeare studies at Oxford University, said her first reaction on being told the stately home was claiming to have an original First Folio was: "Like hell they have."

But when she inspected the three-volume book she found it was authentic.

"We've found a First Folio that we didn't know existed," said Prof Smith.

goatskin-bound The book will now go on public display at the stately home for the first time.

Ellis-Jones, Adam director of the Mount Stuart House Trust, said the identification of this original First Folio was "genuinely astonishing".

The discovery comes ahead of the 400th anniversary of playwright's death.

Printers' thumbprints

Folio, The First printed seven years after Shakespeare's death, brought together 36 plays - 18 of which would otherwise not have been recorded.

Without this publication, there would be no copy of plays such Macbeth, Twelfth Night, Julius Caesar, As You Like It and The Tempest.

The book is also the only source of the familiar dome-headed portrait of Shakespeare by Martin Droeshout.

Prof Smith, author of Shakespeare's First Folio: Four Centuries of an Iconic Book, says it is uncertain how many copies were produced although some put the figure at about 750.

About 230 copies are known still to exist. The last copy found was two years ago, in what had been a Jesuit library in St Omer in France.

The Isle of Bute discovery adds another, but there is uncertainty about where this copy had spent much of the four centuries since being printed.

It had been owned by an 18th Century literary editor and then appears in the Bute library collection in 1896.

Alice Martin, Mount Stuart's head of historic collections, believes it was bought by the third Marquess of Bute, an antiquarian and collector, who died in 1900.

The trust, which runs the Gothic revival house, had been researching the collection of books, paintings and historic items and called in Jacobean printers.

Misspellings also appear, sometimes corrected after proofreading.

There is a stage direction in King Lear, which, in the early part of the print run, says rather cryptically "H edis", which is then updated in later copies to "He dis" before it is finally corrected to "He dies".

Prof Smith says there are also many fake copies.

The preservation of much of Shakespeare's work depended on the publishers of the First Folio copying, collating and editing from whatever hand-written scripts and first-hand memories were still available in the 1620s.

Shakespeare's reputation grew, the value of the First Folio increased, with the book becoming highly prized by collectors.

In the 19th Century and early 20th Century many copies were bought by US railway millionaires, financiers and oil tycoons.

Mr Ellis-Jones says identifying a First Folio at Mount Stuart indicates how much remains to be examined in one of the "last great unknown collections".

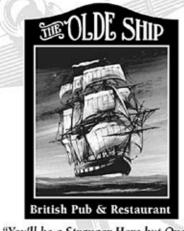

"We knew that we had special things here, but we keep discovering how special - because it's never been researched and never been in the public eye."

Ms Martin says "abundance an of mysteries" "We've got completely unexplored collections."

MP blasts privacy laws after latest gag order

■ Lib Dem who outed Ryan Giggs blasts UK gag order as US tabloid reveals star's identity former Democrat backbencher who made headlines in 2011, breaking a court injunction by naming Ryan Giggs in the House of Commons, is in the news again after another British celebrity gagged the UK press in an attempt to protect his privacy.

John Hemming identified Giggs after the footballer had secured an injunction to hide his identity amid lurid allegations of infidelity, and this week Hemming called for Parliament to look again at the law which, he claimed, "allows the rich and famous to keep sexual matters secret."

The latest injunction involves a celebrity identified only as 'PJS' and his partner 'YMA', who took action to keep their "open relationship" - including a ménage à trois - under wraps.

Although British media is prohibited from naming the celebrity - known court documents by the initals PJS - the National Enquirer in the US has revealed his identity, prompting Hemming to comment: "It's impossible to hold back the tide of internet information like some kind of digital King Canute."

"Judges have created a new type of law not set out by Parliament which allows the rich and famous to keep sexual matters secret.

"I just don't think that is a reasonable use of state power and I think it should be looked at again."

Mark Stephens, an international media lawver with Howard Kennedy LLP, said there was potentially a case for judges to look at the avoid details of his marital infidelity becoming public knowledge injunction afresh in the CD, was "up for a threewake of widespread coverage overseas.

"I confidently predict that this injunction will be looked at again in the light of this international media coverage," he said.

"The court may be slow to do that - because judges want to ensure that their orders have some impact - but the injunction is now starting to look untenable.

"I predict it will now be undone."

social media

Critics said the British court's ruling made "an ass out of the law" as the celebrities' names were revealed scores of times on Twitter and social media.

Last month, Lord Justice Jackson and Lady Justice King ruled that PJS' right to "private and family life" outweighed the Sun on Sunday's right to publish an article about his adultery.

The Court of Appeal said PJS met someone called AB in 2007 or 2008 and had "occasional sexual encounters starting in 2009".

In a text message to AB on December 15, 2011, PJS asked whether AB's partner, known only as way".

"AB said that CD was," Lord Justice Jackson said in his court ruling. "Accordingly, the three met for a three-way sexual encounter which they duly carried out." The sexual relationship between PJS and AB ended but they remained friends.

Lord Justice Jackson said the proposed story about PJS' sex life would be "devastating" for the entertainer and his rights to privacy under Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights outweighed the newspaper's rights to publish under Article 10, the right to freedom of expression.

Davies, Philip Conservative MP the who sits on Commons' justice select committee, accused the courts of parading over a "farce".

'quite ridiculous'

Lawyers said case was example of growing of injunctions use the controversial legal orders used to prevent publication of material which news organisations often argue is in the public interest.

Following the couple's outing in American media on Wednesday night, Bob Satchwell, executive director at the Society of Editors, told The Daily Mail: "It is quite ridiculous that people elsewhere can know about the story but people in Britain are not allowed to. It makes a mockery of the system."

Injunctions have been used by the rich and famous to prevent newspapers reporting their activities "super-injunctions" which forbid publications even referring to such legal actions were widely considered to be stifling free speech.

Mr Stephens said PJS and YMA had been left vulnerable by a "shortsighted" legal approach. Lawyers should have foreseen their clients' names were likely to emerge in the US, he added.

"That was a massive mistake," said Mr Stephens.

"The lawyers effectively painted targets on the backs of these two individuals."

"As in the case of Ryan Giggs the lawyers made a disaster out of a crisis."

Acclaimed Beckett show comes to Santa Monica

IRISH ACTRESS Lisa Dwan will present her critically-acclaimed "Beckett Trilogy" Not I/ Footfalls/Rockaby for five performances only, April 7 through 10 at the Broad Stage in Santa Monica.

Dwan's show has become something of a global phenomenon in recent years, with her trilogy of works by the great Irish playwright Samuel Beckett selling out all over the world from London's West End to Hong Kong, Paris, Belfast, Cambridge, and New York, where she was described by Ben Brantley in The New York Times as "an instrument of Beckett, in that way saints and martyrs are said to be instruments of God."

Dwan (pictured, right) had been performing "Not I" since 2005, directed by Natalie Abrahami. The Times of London said Dwan "turned what is commonly regarded as the hardest role an actor can tackle into a tour de force."

Dwan was then specially coached by the late actress Billie Whitelaw into "Not I." Whitelaw, who died last year, was long considered Beckett's own muse and had been coached into the part by Beckett himself.

The program completed with two other Beckett classics "Footfalls" and "Rockaby," directed by Beckett's close friend, assistant. favorite director and long time collaborator Walter Asmus, who suggested that these plays could be performed as a single program.

Dwan said of the trilogy: "This is late

Beckett. He distilled and distilled and pared away all the fat and you are left with something very potent. In these plays, I play womb to tomb, a country, a continent; I travel vast differences of age. I think he gets closer writing a sort of truth about the human condition, our frailty, our humanity. And to an actor, he offers the most expansive landscape you could ever imagine. What other author would ask that much of me? These performances sell out - and I am amazed that a quarter century after his death that there is a great hunger to hear this work."

The very best ten ways to set goals

By Master Trainer Ricky Parcell www. thebodycamp.com

1. Set big goals that challenge you.

It's ok if your goal scares you a little. In fact, if your goal isn't scary and exciting at the same time, your goal is too small.

2. Accept that it's going to be difficult.

If you accept the challenge of setting and pursuing big goals, then you have to accept that it's going to be hard. achievements Great do not come easy. You know deep in your heart that getting in shape and staying in shape is not easy. If it were, everyone would have clearly defined muscles and six-pack abs.

3. Set goals to become better than you used to be.

Let's face it, many people want to win. Many people want to be the best. In sports and in many businesses, winning is the bottom line and will always be pursued. However, sometimes the best strategy is not focusing on winning, but on becoming better. Winning is often the welcome side effect.

4. Set up if-then scenarios that trigger goal pursuit or prepare you for positive action when the going gets difficult.

An environmental trigger might be something like this: "When I see my running shoes on the chair in the morning, I immediately get on my workout clothes, put on my shoes and go for my run, even if I still feel tired. I'll wake up fast once I'm moving and my blood starts flowing.

Or "If I get a craving for sugar, then I will pick some fruit like an apple, some grapes or a banana, which I always leave in my kitchen or carry with me through the day. This way I'll stay on track toward my goal and I won't go hungry either."

5. Set up your environment with triggers to "prime" your unconscious mind for goal pursuit

goal pursuit

It might even seem a little weird at first when you realize how much your behavior is running on autopilot, but you can make this automation work in your favor by intentionally setting up cues in your surroundings that prime your subconscious to pursue what you want. The possibilities are endless, and include sounds, words, people, situations, even smells. Here are a few ideas: Leave healthy foods on the kitchen counter,

tack up motivational posters, signs or vision boards, put a motivating image on your desktop or screen saver, change passwords phrases words and that remind you of include your goals, achievement-related words in your email address, carry a goal card in your pocket, get a vanity license plate with a goalrelated word or phrase, wear hats or t-shirts with positive words or logos, strategically place inspiring books in your home and office, tape a printout of your healthy meal plan onto your refrigerator, put your lifting belt or running shoes where you can see them before workout time, leave fitness magazines in sight around your home and office, imprint your coffee mug with a motivational saying, re-organize your ipod playlist to include the most uplifting songs, change your mobile phone ring tone, change your commuting route to drive past the gym, or even, if you're into tattoos, consider very carefully what the next one says or illustrates.

6. Surround yourself with people who are goal achievers – they're contagious.

Find role models and expose yourself to as many people as possible who are going after goals that you also would like to pursue. For the relief of people who feel they are in a negative social environment at the moment, you don't even have to know the people you are watching. Studies suggest that even reading biographies of successful people can have a positive impact.

7. Build your self-control ("willpower") muscles.

There are many ways to increase it. Conveniently enough, one of the best ways to build your willpower is to exercise regularly. Making the decision to work out and then doing it builds your willpower muscle right along with your physical muscles. On the other hand, if you don't discipline yourself to do that which you don't want to do, your willpower muscle will shrink, just like your physical muscles atrophy when they're not trained.

8. Get feedback and self-monitor.

Achieving a goal requires that you track your progress so you know how you're doing at all times. If you don't "keep score" and self monitor your progress, it's like flying a plane without a navigation system – you could be off course and not even know it.

9. Tap into your intrinsic motivations to maintain your achievement and increase happiness.

Money, prizes, and recognition are external motivators, and while these can be powerful incentives, they only motivate in the short term as long as those rewards are there. Long term motivation and goal achievement requires motivation that comes from within -INTRINSIC.

10. Develop Grit.

Grit is passion and perseverance for your long-term goals, and that means maintaining effort and interest for years even there are difficulties, disappointments and failures. Grit is the type of tenacity and resolve where you clench your teeth and push even harder when the going gets tough.

Conclusion: Write down your own goals, be specific and commit to them 100%.

Think long term. Approach your success like a marathon, not a sprint.

Don't get distracted or change goals. Do not be a dabbler. Commit to it and stick to it until you get there.

Expect obstacles and don't get discouraged by them. Understand that all setbacks are temporary and you can get through them or go around them.

When the going gets tough, you get mentally tougher and renew your effort.

Be willing to make sacrifices and work very hard every day for a very long time. Embrace and appreciate the work. Adopt a growth mindset for life – believe that you can always get better.

We believe strongly at www.thebodycamp. com that unconscious goal pursuits is one of the most fascinating areas of psychology research. Once realize that your brain is a cybernetic mechanism that is always working on some goal and guiding you automatically toward it, whether you set goals or not, this should light a fire under your bum to take responsibility and conscious control over the process. If you don't, then rest assured, you are pursuing someone else's goals....

Brits in LA

Meet A Member: Matthew John

Not all Brits in LA Members live in Los Angeles: in fact a fair number are scattered around the globe. This week's Meet a Member is Matthew John who lives in Studio City (LA) and Cheltenham (UK).

Seeing as you don't live in Los Angeles how did you end up joining Brits in LA?

was recommended via a friend. I do a lot of business in LA, but presently in process of applying for long term visa, so I can stay for a long period of time.

Have you ever visited Los Angeles - if so we would love to hear what your impression of LA is?

I love LA. I love the people. I love the weather. I love the LA Culture. I love the possibilities and projects that you find on Dayton and her family a daily basis in LA.

Do you think you could ever see yourself moving to LA, if not tell us what keeps you in

I am trying to move to America. At the moment, it is the visa application that I am trying to sort out. My last film Hedda Gabler, has an American distributor. We do a lot of events and business in LA. My next film is a USA/ UK Film production. It is merely a visa process at present.

Do you have a hidden gem - special place in the city you want to share with us?

I would not say a place. But a special circle of people. I have been extremely fortunate to have found good friends in the area. Patricia who work in the film industry. Jesse Walsh and his wife Melanie Buttarazzi that work in the film industry. And Lise Romanoff and Sisi Cronin – who have been so great at helping with my last film. Those are the gems.

Why would recommend other overseas readers joining Brits in LA?

Connections with likeminded people. The native LA people have a completely different way of living/thinking. Their personalities/cultures are completely different to the UK. It has also been nice to meet other European people, who can help you though it, or bend their ears when you want to moan about the sometimes flaky behaviour patterns of an LA person. In the UK they are always extremely blunt and too pessimistic. In LA they always say 'yes', even if they have no intention of doing it. And time keeping isn't their strongest attribute, being British this drives me insane. If I hadn't have had like-minded European friends to help me though this difference of culture it would have been a lot harder adjusting to LA lifestyle.

However just to point out some good points to LA people: people are much sexier and easier to hook up with. :-) They just might not turn up to the wedding.

We hear you have been working on an exciting project. Care to tell us more about it?

Iust finished a movie version of Hedda Gabler, starring Rita Ramnani. It is based on Henrik Ibsen's stage play. But is a full movie. Not filming the stage play. It is fairly lavish and

luckily we have a big you've been given? supportive fan base and Pick you close friends wisely. It can be the land people seem to be loving the cast, costumes and of dreams and also broken production values. So dreams. But as long as you keep plugging away. Have fun. Being true to yourself. Don't take Lots of Our members join our group Brits in anything too seriously. LA seeking out words And just roll with the of wisdom - what is madness. Things will the best piece of advice happen.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: With all planets possible lined up in your life there are good (and not-so-good) outcomes in the works. Expect the good stuff to come within the next month. After that things will get a little stormy, but if you keep calm you'll sail through the squalls.

TAURUS: On the upside you can expect a call from someone from your past and this time you need to be open to change. If you didn't take a break at Easter you may be feeling the strain now, but the timing will be better come summer.

CANCER: Life seems to be flowing against you right now, but the reality is that we are as happy as we make up our minds to be, so go with the flow and you'll get there in the end.

LEO: This is a time for the inner artist to show him/herself for those of you who are not participating in life as you know you can. This week ahead could end with you feeling lazy if you don't take action now. It actually the best time while your cousin Aries is lit up.

VIRGO: Now is the perfect time to plan for that summer vacation. That destination you've long planned to visit should be your number one choice. You are starred for happy trails and happy days in the months to come.

LIBRA: You have a lucky star over you lately, so if you are feeling anything other than upbeat its time to change your thoughts. You will end this next week on a positive note, regardless what is happening around you.

SCORPIO: Relax! The worst is over, and to be honest it was not as bad as feared. This is the end of a difficult cycle when you have neither respected yourself nor demanded respect from others. Time to draw a line under it and move SAGITTARIUS: As the song goes: you may be right, you may be crazy. Financial worries will do nothing to change your situation, just keep sticking to good habits and live below your means. The good news is that life will be handing you new opportunities to enjoy.

CAPRICORN: You may be feeling a bit restless lately; this is due to your boss Saturn in the fire sign of Sagittarius. He is letting you know something in your life is out of alignment. But be surethat with or without your permission he will balance you out.

AQUARIUS: Your judgment in a long-term situation is a bit biased. This week if you allow yourself to go the same route as before it will bring the same result. You are in good shape to complete this situation once and for all. PISCES: Your ruler Neptune is in your life for several months ahead and you will be both emotional and angry at times. This can be a blessing in disguise. Everything in life is a lesson, so learn it now and for all time.

The Tsarina's Legacy: from Russia, with love

■ Exclusive interview with author Jennifer Laam and a review of her new novel bringing together romances in Russia's past and present

Rating: ★★★

"While reading about Anastasia, I ran across a story that told of an alternate theory for how a Romanov heir might have survived the Revolution," Russian The Tsarina's says Legacy author Jennifer Laam. "And, I let my imagination go from there."

The Tsarina's Legacy is politics and romance in a historical and contemporary story. Bringing the past and present together in Russia, Laam weaves together romances in two times. It finds a potential heiress to the Romanov family. Overall it works, although some of the plot twists to connect the two time periods don't make perfect sense. Catherine the Great fans may be disappointed the story misses her salacious love life.

Present day Veronica Herrera is the granddaughter of Charlotte, the youngest daughter of Nicholas II. At birth Charlotte was whisked away from Russia to keep her safe. A hundred years ago Catherine Russia. Empress and her husband is dead. She rules with the help of her many lovers, including prince and general Grisha Potemkin. His descendent Dimitry Potemkin wants to help Veronica regain her family's wealth and power. Veronica wants to help the imprisoned artist Reb Volkov, but can she save him from death in Siberia?

"I have been to Russia, but finances and family commitments keep me from traveling as much as I would like to for research," says "My favorite Lamm. historical of research is curling into a comfortable sofa at home and looking through pictures of Russia in the late eighteenth century. I love the palaces and the street scenes, but am most intrigued by the portraiture. My main resources for The Tsarina's Legacy were Simon Sebag Montefiore's Prince of Princes: The Life of Potemkin and Robert Massie's Catherine the Great: Portrait of a Woman."

"I have always been intrigued by Catherine the Great," says Laam. "A close friend lent me a biography of Catherine's most prominent lover and advisor, Prince Potemkin, and I quickly developed a historical crush on him. I wanted concentrate on the time later in his life and the rivalry between Potemkin and Catherine's much younger lover, Platon Zubov. I also decided to explore Potemkin's relationship with the Islamic world."

While writing book, Laam made use of the UC Davis library and their extensive collection of books on imperial Russia and Russian contemporary culture.

"I wanted to focus facing issues on Russia, contemporary particularly free speech and LGBT civil rights," "I was savs Laam.

inspired by the arrest and imprisonment of members of the punk group Pussy Riot."

The Tsarina's Legacy is Laam's second novel. Her first novel, The Secret Daughter of the Tsar, was published in October 2013, also by St. Martin's Press.

Vicki Lame at St. Martin's Press is Laam's editor. "Unfortunately I've still only met Jennifer on the phone," says Lame. "I'm hoping one of these days I'll find myself on her U.S. coast or her on mine. The first time we spoke, what really resonated with me most was her complete understanding of all of her characters, major or minor. Jennifer even made sure to put in the quirky ticks of her characters, quirks they had in real life hundreds of years ago. Even though much of her work is revisionist in terms of the contemporary narrative, every book of hers is also a wonderful history lesson for me."

Laam is currently writing a novel set in the early nineteenth century told from the point of view of the wife of a famous Russian poet.

Laam graduated from Sacramento's University of the Pacific, and still lives in the California state capital.

Seeking the wisdom of crowds...

Greetings from England!

We are always being told what a wonderful resource Brits in LA is and most of the credit must go to our brilliant members who are willing to share their knowledge and recommendations at the drop of a hat.

I fully realized that we had created something special back in 2008, when I met a fellow member who gave Brits in LA credit for getting him a job, an apartment, a car and a girlfriend!

I could have really done with a Brits in LA database (in Britain) this week, as I have been given the task of helping my mum get settled into her new home, which is in a neighborhood that is unfamiliar to us both. We needed referrals up the wahzoo; from rental cars to moving men, to upholsterers everything in between. The Brits don't seem to be as active on review websites like Yelp, and often seem to (lazily?) opt for the well-known names for any services they require. It was such a comfort booking my trip with BLA sponsor Air New Zealand then using Beach Financial Group for Travel & Auto and was guaranteed a great service. Rental cars stumped me too, as there is far too much choice and variation in price - but I ended up using Europear in Richmond. (Simon who works there was really helpful) upon BLA member Laura M's advice, but made sure to take out an independent insurance policy. I spent far too many hours reading vehicle specs as I had no idea what the difference was between an Opel, Astra or Leon - I opted for a brand call Seat in the end which is apparently made by Volkswagen - as a Jetta owner I am already familiar with the VW controls, which made driving on the 'wrong' side of the road much more relaxing. On the flight over I was mentally practicing changing gears on a manual vehicle (stick shift and clutch control!), but I am ashamed to say I chickened out and leapt at the chance of upgrading to an automatic for an extra $7 a day... I have been reliant on a fantastic map app called Map.Me which doesn't require an internet connection - but make sure to download the region you are exploring in advance of your journey. And talking of mobile...I have also finally learned the difference between add-ons and top-ups when purchasing a local pay-as-you-go plan - not sure I can explain it well enough but look into add-ons for better deals. I went with 'Three' or is it '3'? Anyway, all this research trying to get half decent deals has been exhausting and very time consuming - which brings me to an idea I want to test out...

I would love to put together an ongoing list of your recommendations - whether it be a plumber in Whitstable, a B&B in the Orkney Islands or a taxi firm in Belfast. Even your favorite tourist attraction or pub or club. I think a good ones to share, email me at eileen@Britsin.LA and I will try and come up with the best way to categorize them and make accessible for us all. Please put UK Database in the Subject matter - as will make it a little easier for me. All I ask is that you have actually tried them yourselves or know someone who has. No spam/referral/sign up links please:)

Next week recommend you join us either for our weekly Breakfast Club Cecconi's or our bimonthly Pub Quiz at the Pikey with guest host Sandro Monetti- both on Tuesday. Full details can be found on our Facebook page. Email us at BritsinLA@gmail.com if you need us to find you a team to join. Everyone welcome including non Brits!

Looking forward to hearing your recommendations...

Cheers! Eileen

Oo-er!

The soccer legend's oldest child showed that athleticism runs in the family as he captured the moment he accomplished an impressive pull up.

Α keen round sportsman, he's also taken up skateboarding cycling. As an aspiring photographer, Brooklyn often posts artsy black and white photos on his social media pages.

However. the monochrome filter on one of his latest posts was applied not to draw attention to his artistic prowess, but to his rippling muscles.

The 17-year-old documented grueling work out on Monday night with an image "Hitting captioned: the gym."

Keen to prove that his sporting prowess is as great as his father's, the teen went topless to perform pull ups a notoriously difficult move.

He strains as he holds the bar, making his muscles appear particularly defined.

The youngster already has his foot firmly in the fashion world, having been asked to shoot Burberry's latest social media campaign, so it's no surprise that he ensured he stayed stylish whilst working

You gotta admit: out of control!

The "Potter" themed park has taken five years to build and recreates the magic world of the hit children's books and movies.

The big attraction is the Harry Potter And The Forbidden Journey ride into Hogwarts itself. Guests will don Quidditch-inspired 3D goggles as they join in with the adventures of wannabe wizard Harry and his friends.

Fans will also discover numerous props from the films, including Hermione's Yule Ball gown in a display cabinet in Gladrags Wizardwear and the actual desks that Harry, Ron and Hermione sat at during their lessons in the Defence Against the Dark Arts classroom.

Demand for attraction was so great this week that the theme park has even had to restrict sales

As for visitors who are lucky enough to be admitted through the turnstiles in the near future, they should expect the theme park to be, well, a zoo for quite some time.

Not even a recent price hike that increased the cost of a one-day adult ticket by $20 to $115, or a shift to "surge pricing" that makes it more expensive to visit the park on peak days (kind of like how airlines price their tickets), have deterred demand.

Observers have noted that broad price hikes have been instituted not simply as money grabs but also as crowd control measures, with the idea that some portion of guests would avoid the higher prices that go along with peakdemand periods. But c=ertainly in the case of the new Potter park, higher prices have done nothing to ease demand.

Visitors to the park can also dine in the "Three Broomsticks" restaurant and the "Hog's Head" pub, as well as sampling wares from the "Magic Neep" and "Butterbeer carts".

Launch Shops include Honeydukes, Ollivanders, Owl Zonko's Post, Joke Wiseacre's Shop, Wizarding Equipment, Dervish and Banges and Filch's Emporium of Confiscated Goods.

Visitors at a launch preview of the park this week included ex-Disney star Vanessa Hudgens, and British actor Warwick Davis, who played Prof Flitwick and goblin Griphook in the Potter films.

I can't wait to try this

On Sat. April 9th, join family and friends in celebrating the life of Martin Devane. A wonderful man who touched many lives and was loved by so many. There will be a Mass at St. Victor's Church, 8634 Holloway Drive in West Hollywood at 11.30am and then a celebration of his life at Boardners, 1652 N. Cherokee Avenue in Hollywood from 2-5pm.

In lieu of flowers, please donate to www.motherteresa.org.

Heartbreak is Twenty/20 for England

ENGLAND SUFFERED a heartbreaking loss in the final of the World Twenty20 tournament on Sunday when Carlos Brathwaite hit the first four balls of the final over for six as West Indies clinched an unlikely victory.

Chasing Englands 155-9, the Windies were reduced to 11-3 early on before fighting their way back into the match, with Marlon Samuels' 85 not out keeping them in contention before Brathwaite's matchwinning blitz off Ben Stokes.

Joe Root scored 54 for England but nothing could stop the Windies joining their women as World T20 champions.

In the process, the West Indies also became the first two-time winners of the men's World Twenty20.

Despite the devastating loss, England can take a lot of encouragement from their performance in this tournament, which has showcased an attacking philosophy and resilience that was completely lacking during their groupstage exit of last year's 50-over World Cup.

But for Brathwaite and Samuels, it would have been Eoin Morgan's side capping their rapid improvement with their own World T20 title.

Brathwaite came in at number eight, joining Samuels at the crease in the 16th over with the West Indies on 107-6 and needing 49 from 27 balls.

The tall bowler had only batted twice in the competition prior to the final, scoring 10 not out against South Africa and 13 against Afghanistan in the group stages.

But, with 19 needed off Stokes' last over, he seized

Stokes was left distraught as the Windies celebrated, but Test captain Alastair Cook has backed the young star to recover from the setback.

"He is an outstanding talent and an outstanding cricketer," said Cook.

Europa League 1/4 Final Borussia Dortmund...1 Liverpool.....1

Divock Origi gave Liverpool a potentially crucial away goal in their Europa League quarterfinal tie with Borussia Dortmund as the first leg in Germany ended in a draw Thursday night.

The Belgium striker struck on Reds boss Jurgen Klopp's return to his former club with a low finish across goal.

Dortmund goalkeeper Roman Weidenfeller then denied Origi oneon-one.

 $Mats\, Hummels\, headed$ in an equaliser and the hosts pressed in search of a winner, but Liverpool kept them at bay.

Some eyebrows were raised before kick-off when Klopp decided to start Origi instead of England international Daniel Sturridge.

Origi had not scored since 14 February, while Sturridge appeared to be finding his form after returning from injury with three goals in nine games.

spectator in the opening stages as Liverpool soaked up some early pressure, but Klopp said before the game that he had given him the nod because of his pace and power - and both were on show when the visitors took the lead.

He controlled captain Henderson's Jordan slightly awkward ball superbly before turning towards goal and steering a low strike into the far corner, albeit with vital deflection.

then From on, Origi held up the ball excellently to relieve some pressure on a defence that unsurprisingly came under some heavy pressure at times.

Pierre-Emerick Aubameyang, Dortmund possess one of the most lethal finishers in Europe, but Dejan Lovren and Mamadou Sakho stood up to the task of nullifying the 33goal Gabon striker.

He was limited to one real chance, an effort from close range that was blocked by Lovren, while Sakho threw his body in the way of Henrikh Mkhitaryan to deny what was an almost certain goal.

Interest in Klopp's return to Dortmund was huge in the build-up.

The 48-year-old German fondly remembered for his achievements at club he managed for seven years from 2008, having led them to two Bundesliga titles as well the final of the Champions League in

When Klopp emerged before the match, his name was chanted by the home fans but the Liverpool boss was evidently keen to make sure he was not the centre of attention.

After acknowledging the home fans with a clap, he switched focus firmly to his own players warming up and there was no doubt about where his allegiances lie when he thumped his chest and roared in delight after Origi's goal.

Despite the away goal, the tie is far from over. Dortmund have scored in each of their previous six away games, including two goals at Tottenham in the previous round of the competition.
