

BLAIR: send in the troops to beat ISIS

"We shouldn't be in any doubt they need to be taken on on the ground," says former PM

Isis will not be defeated without the deployment of ground forces against them, Tony Blair has said.

Speaking at an event hosted by influential British magazine Prospect this week, the main mover behind of Britain's involvement in 2003 invasion of Iraq reiterated his call for greater military involvement in the conflict.

"If you want to defeat these people, you're going to have to go and wage a proper ground war against them," he said.

The former Labour Prime Minister said it was important that Libya was not ceded to the militant group, and that if they were not dealt with "they will come and attack us here".

"We cannot afford to have Isis govern a large part of Libya – we shouldn't be in any doubt they need to be taken on on the ground," he said.

'military capacity'

Ground forces currently fighting Isis in the Levant are mostly Kurdish, Iraqi government, Syrian government and other militant groups.

In Libya, where the group controls the central port city of Sirte, domestic Libyan forces have contained its advances beyond that area.

The UK is currently involved in a coalition of nations conducting airstrikes against the socalled Islamic State in Syria and Iraq.

Isis has been losing ground in the Levant in recent months, with Iraqi government forces now advancing on the city of Fallujah, which the group holds.

Mr Blair has previously called for Western ground forces to be used against Islamist militant groups. In an article for The Sunday  Times in March he said they were "necessary" to beat Isis.

"We must build military capability able to confront and defeat the terrorists wherever they try to hold territory," he wrote at the time.

"This is not just about local forces. It is a challenge for the West. Ground forces are necessary to win this fight and ours are the most capable."

Mr Blair is reportedly expected to be criticised in the Chilcot Report into the events of Iraq War, which is due out in July after years of preparation and analysis.

Indiscreet Kate reveals her pet name for William...

BABYKINS AND BIG WILLIE: THE DUCHESS of Cambridge gave a bit too much information at the launch of this year's Chelsea Flower Show when she revealed her cute pet name for husband William to Australian TV presenter and landscaper Charlie Albone. Speaking on Australian TV, Mr Albone, revealed the Duke was inquiring about a Buxus shrub and asking what it was, when Kate referred to him by the nickname.

Mr Albone said: "She called him Babe. She said 'Babe we've got loads of those." When William and Kate were dating, he was said to call her by the pet name "Babykins", while her nickname for him was reported to be "Big Willie".

Hosie steps down as SNP deputy leader after affair revelations

Stewart Hosie has stepped down as deputy leader of the Scottish National party a week after revelations emerged about his private life, and will no longer lead a fresh drive for independence.

Hosie apologised to the party leader, Nicola Sturgeon, for the "hurt and upset" he had caused his friends, family and colleagues after having an affair with a journalist, which has led to him separating from his wife, Shona Robison, one of Sturgeon's closest friends.

His resignation letter was released by the SNP on Sunday, the day before Hosie was due to meet Sturgeon in London when she addressed her party's Westminster group in the Commons. Party sources had predicted before resignation his was announced that the meeting was likely to be very frosty.

Sturgeon reappointed Robison last week as cabinet secretary for health and sport, three days after Hosie and Robison announced they had separated.

The SNP had initially shown every sign of trying to tough out the controversy, which marred Sturgeon's highprofile reforms of the published In the his extracts of resignation letter, the text of which had been agreed in advance with Robison, with whom he has a daughter, Hosie announced that he would not seek reelection at this year's party conference, due to be held this autumn.

"I am writing to you firstly to apologise for any hurt and upset I have caused to friends, family and colleagues. That was never my intention," Hosie said. Party sources said Hosie had been left a "broken man" by the scandal.

"As you know I have been admitted to hospital on three occasions in the past few years with very high blood pressure. In that regard, the stress of the intense scrutiny of my private life has been very difficult."

Hosie has long been part of a powerful inner circle of senior SNP figures. He and represented Robison the same coterminous constituencies of Dundee East and Dundee City East in the two parliaments. He was elected as the party's deputy leader at the same time as Sturgeon stood unopposed to be party leader.

The disclosure of Hosie's affair with Serena Cowdy, who had previously had an affair with another SNP MP, Angus MacNeil, stunned the party and his colleagues. There were allegations - denied by the party - that the two men had come to blows in a bar over the affair.

Cameron 'lying' to UK voters over Turkey EU bid, claims Farage

NIGEL Farage has housing stock over the accused David Cameron of lying to British voters over Turkey joining the EU as he was mobbed by supporters when he kicked off the Brexit bus nationwide tour in Dagenham this week.

In an impassioned message voters to the Ukip leader put immigration at the heart of the referendum debate saying it was "not about economic, it is about politics".

Dagenham on the border between East London and Essex was chosen specifically because it has the biggest immigration problem in the UK. During a tour of the borough on the purple open top bus Mr Farage pointed out Robert Clack secondary school which he claimed is about to have its intake trebled to cope with immigration.

Farage said: "Here we are in Barking and Dagenham, no borough in the whole of this country has got such threats from massively exploding population as you have got here.

"The idea that the local comprehensive is going to have to go from 1,000 pupils to 3,000 pupils, the idea that the proposed house build here is to increase the next few years by 50 per cent. I wonder where are the GP surgeries? Where are the A&E facilities? Where are the new roads? What is going to happen to people's quality of life in an area like this if you build 50 per cent more houses?"

He added that there was also "a cultural problem" and warned about the effects of schools having pupils where up to 80 per cent do not speak English. And branding his passport he said it was "the most potent symbol" of the campaign, pointing out that "the first two words are European Union."

He said: "508 million people have one of these and they can all come to this country."

Later he joked: "Somebody said to me 'don't lose your passport', well we already have. We have lost our British passports and we want them back."

He said: "I would love to see the Camerons and the Osbornes and the Corbyns to actually to come to the frontlines of British politics and what open borders to the European Union lax attitudes and towards immigration are cont. on page 3, col. 4

Gloomy Treasury forecast amps up latest Brexit controversy

THE INCREASINGLY ACRIMONIOUS debate in the UK about the pivotal EU Remain/ Leave vote was ratcheted up still further this week after the Treasury Department claimed Britain will be plunged into a year-long recession if it votes to leave the European Union on 23 June.

The document warns that, in the worst-case scenario, GDP in two years' time could be 6% lower than currently forecast, unemployment higher, and 820,000 house prices 18% lower. Presenting the report alongside George Osborne, David Cameron said that quitting the EU would be the "selfdestruct" option, and that the "moral" choice was a vote for Remain.

The Treasury's latest intervention infuriated Leave campaigners and intensified the "blueon-blue" attacks within Tory ranks. Priti Patel, the employment minister, accused the PM and his "hvsterical" allies of "concocting Armageddon scenarios". They, in turn, accused the Leave camp of scaremongering, after it claimed that Britain could be inundated with migrants from Turkey and other aspiring EU member states. The PM's former aide Steve Hilton - who called for a Leave vote, saying that EU membership made the UK "literally ungovernable" – said both sides should beware of treating voters as "simpletons".

What the editorials said

"Things are getting a bit silly," said The Independent. Last week, various stars from the acting world weighed into the debate, claiming that Britain's natural creativity would be adversely affected were we to abandon the EU. Meanwhile, Michael Gove - supposedly the sober, intellectual voice of the Leave camp has been issuing dire warnings about five million migrants arriving in the UK by 2030 as Turks, Albanians, Serbs and others all leap on the first bus to London. "The two campaigns are not serving the voting public well."

People aren't stupid, said The Sunday Times: they know that EU membership comes with competing advantages and disadvantages. Yet we keep being assaulted with "ridiculously overthe-top" warnings. The PM even parodied them himself recently, saying he would soon be warning of a plague of locusts. "Is it too much to hope that things can improve over the next month?"

Don't hold your breath, said the Daily Mail. A televised debate between Cameron and, say, Gove, might have allowed the public to see the arguments discussed in a more sensible fashion, and in greater depth, but the PM has refused to take part in such an event. Cameron is clearly afraid of his overheated claims being subjected to a searching examination.

What the commentators said

The race has entered the "final furlong", said Andrew Rawnsley in The Observer, and the smart money says the Remain side is set for an easy win. The pound is strengthening on rising expectations of that result, and the clients of the spread-betting firm IG are putting its chances at 80%. The pro-EU camp should take nothing for granted, though. The Leavers certainly don't deserve to win, said Nick Cohen in a Spectator blog. Most of these people belong to "an enclosed world on the Right of politics", and they've comprehensively failed to explain to outsiders the "views and prejudices" they take for granted.

But it's wrong to see the Europe issue simply as a Tory obsession, said Larry Elliott in The Guardian. There is also a "left-of-centre" case for Brexit, which is that Europe "doesn't work, is not remotely progressive meaning to the lives of ordinary decent people."

Turning his fire on the Prime Minister he warned voters that Mr Cameron had a and is heading for an existential crisis anyway". The single currency is inherently flawed, yet the one thing that would make it work – moving to a fully integrated union, with an elected European finance minister empowered to raise money in Germany and spend it in Greece – remains politically unviable. Voting to stay in the EU thus means hitching our wagon "to a currency zone unable to go forwards or backwards".

At the start of this campaign, said James Forsyth in The Sun, Boris Johnson likened it to a rugby match in which the opposing sides would "knock seven bells out and was lying about Turkey joining the EU with another 75 million people who would have free access to Britain. Mr Cameron has faced embarrassment this week when one of his junior ministers claimed of each other" and then go for a beer afterwards. But it's hard to see that happening now. Last week, for example, Lord Heseltine savaged Johnson and doubted whether he was fit to be PM. "Right, you're trying to destroy me" was Johnson's reaction, according to a Boris confidant. The idea that this referendum would "clear the air" in the Tory party was "always bunkum", said Bagehot in The Economist. It's now rumoured that, in the event of a Remain win, 100 MPs could endorse a vote of no confidence in the PM. To survive, said Philip Collins in The Times, Cameron will need that Britain did not, in fact, have a veto over the country joining the EU. Cameron branded her assertion "absolutely wrong", adding that her comments "call into question" her judgement and that of the wider Brexit campaign.

"problem with the truth"

a compelling prospectus for his remaining days in office. There wasn't much sign of that in last week's Queen's Speech: aside from prison reform, it was almost empty of substance.

What next?

The official four-week "purdah" period has now begun, says the Daily Mail. Politicians are free to go on campaigning for the referendum, but they can no longer use the civil service machine to help them make their case. Eurosceptic MPs have promised to watch "like hawks" to ensure the rules are adhered to. The first postal ballots were sent out this week.

Why Brexit 'could be good' for the young...

Writing in the Spectator this week, Laura Prendergast proved that not all young Britons are eager to stay in the EU:

"Like many people under 30, I've yet to decide how to vote in the EU referendum. But if George Osborne wants my generation to vote Remain, he's going an odd way about it. A Brexit, he warns, would cause a stock market slump and a sharp fall in house prices. Really? For those of us in our 20s, "this sounds like a pretty good trade-off". We don't own many shares, but we'd love to put a foot on the property ladder. Yet so dramatically have house prices risen since the time David Cameron became Tory leader, most of us can't. A two-bedroom ex-council house in Hackney - where the average salary is about  $\pounds 30,000 - \text{costs}$  around £600,000. It's a similar tale in places such as Manchester and Bristol. "The basic British dream - education, job, house, life - has been smashed generation." for my Osborne's warning may deter older people seeking to downsize from voting to quit the EU, but the message it sends the young is "vote Leave and solve the housing crisis". If Brexit does that, then bring it on.

37 years after his Uncle's murder, Charles meets with former IRA boss

PRINCE Charles has made a historic visit to Northern Ireland to meet former IRA commander Martin McGuinness, despite the Irish terror group's links to his greatuncle's murder.

The Prince of Wales met Northern Ireland's political leaders as he took part in a full day of engagements in the region on Tueasday, including Mr McGuinness as Northern Ireland's Deputy First Minister.

The heir to the throne sat down for a private meeting with McGuinness, a member of the Sinn Féin party, in addition to meeting the Northern Ireland's First Minister, Arlene Foster, on his second day of his visit.

The Duchess of Cornwall joined Charles later on Tuesday for a number of visits to local businesses and places of interest.

musical evening

Prince Charles spoke with the pair in two twenty minute sessions - both behind closed doors - at the royal residence in Hillsborough Castle. The Democratic Unionist leader and the Sinn Féin stalwart updated the Duke of Cornwall on the current political and economic situation in Northern Ireland.

The royal couple also hosted a musical evening at the castle, before crosssing the Irish border on Wednesday to visit County Donegal.

Charles and Camilla visited the Republic of Ireland this time last year and the Prince saw the place where his great-uncle, Lord Mountbatten, was murdered by the IRA in

'Stoned' sheep go on 'psychotic rampage' after eating cannabis plants dumped in Welsh village

Sheep are feared to have gone on a "psychotic rampage" after eating cannabis plants dumped in a Welsh village.

The remains of an illegal cannabis factory was fly-tipped and worried locals fear the sheep have been munching the plants.

County councillor Ioan Richard raised the alarm, saying the sheep have been "roaming the village" causing havoc by breaking into homes. Mr Richard

Mr Richard said: "There is already a flock of sheep roaming the village causing a nuisance. They are getting in people's gardens and one even entered a bungalow and left a mess in the bedroom." He warned of the dangers of the rest of the flock discovering the remains of the cannabis plantation dumped at Rhydypandy, in the Swansea valley in South Wales.

He said: "I dread to think what will happen if they eat what could well be cannabis plants - we could have an outbreak of pyschotic sheep rampaging through the village."

The councillor has been waging a crusade against frequent fly-tipping in the countryside in his area.

He said the remains of the cannabis factory, on a

Mr Richard said that there had already been instances of sheep being killed in the village after straying into the road in the neighbouring village. He said: "I told the council officers to make sure it was reported to the police before removing any evidence of what looks like the dumped remains of a cannabis growing establishment."

A Swansea Council spokesman said it acted swiftly to clear the cannabis remains, but could not confirm if any sheep had eaten the plants. He added: "We made the police aware of this incident as soon as it was reported and arranged a site visit together.

"We also investigate all cases of fly-tipping and will take enforcement action if there's sufficient evidence."

Fancy packets a thing of the past for ciggies

Cigarettes must now be sold in plain packets in the UK.

To comply with new Government regulations, the packaging of tobacco products must be olive green, with a standard font, and covered in health warnings including graphic images of diseased lungs and the like. The new packs are expected to reach shops in a few months, when manufacturers have sold off existing stock. A High Court judge last week rejected a case brought by four tobacco firms, who argued that the new rules would make it harder to distinguish between brands. Separate EU rules have also come into effect, requiring packets to contain at least 20 cigarettes, and banning menthol varieties by 2020.

Peanut curry death: reckless restaraunt owner gets six years

■ Judge blasts defendant for "reckless and cavalier attitude to risk" after tragic death of 'careful' curry lover

A "reckless" restaurant owner has been jailed for six years for the manslaughter of a customer who had an allergic reaction to a curry.

Paul Wilson, 38, suffered a severe anaphylactic shock in January 2014 after eating a takeaway containing peanuts from the Indian Garden in Easingwold, North Yorkshire.

Mohammed Zaman, 52, was found guilty at Teesside Crown Court.

The court heard he cut corners by using cheaper ingredients containing peanuts.

In what is thought to be a landmark trial, Zaman, of Aylesham Court, Huntington, denied he was responsible but a jury was told he switched almond powder for a cheaper ground nut mix, which contained peanuts.

Mr Wilson, a bar manager from Helperby, North Yorkshire, specified "no nuts" when he ordered a chicken tikka masala - an instruction which was written on his order and on the lid of his takeaway, the court heard.

'Cavalier attitude'

He died three weeks after a different customer with a peanut allergy bought a meal from one of Mr Zaman's six restaurants and had a reaction requiring hospital treatment.

The restaurateur had a "reckless and cavalier attitude to risk" and "put profit before safety" at all his outlets, the jury was told.

Zaman was almost £300,000 in debt and cut costs by using the cheaper nut powder and by employing untrained, illegal workers, the court heard.

Sentencing him, Judge Simon Bourne-Arton, the Recorder of Middlesbrough, said Zaman had remained "in complete and utter denial" and ignored warnings from officials after 17-year-old Ruby Scott suffered a reaction to a curry, three weeks before Mr Wilson's death.

He said he had thrown away his successful business and property portfolio worth  $\pounds 2m$  "in pursuit of profit".

"You have done so in such a manner as to bring about the death of another individual", said the judge.

"Paul Wilson was in the prime of his life.

"He, like you, worked in the catering trade. He, unlike you, was a careful man."

But the judge acknowledged Zaman was of "good character" and the sentence would have an impact on his wife and four children.

In a statement read out in court, Mr Wilson's parents, Margaret and Keith, from Sheffield, said they felt "numb, shock and disbelief" over their son's death.

"I feel robbed that I won't share the rest of my life with Paul"," Keith Wilson said.

'Totally avoidable'

Mrs Wilson said her son was "meticulous" about dealing with peanuts after a reaction to a chocolate bar at the age of seven.

She said the smell of peanuts, or accidentally drinking from the same glass as someone who was eating them, could trigger a reaction.

De Insp Shaun Page said Mr Wilson's death was "totally avoidable" and Zaman's "lack of remorse" had been striking.

"And trying to distance himself from any involvement in his death. That had struck me through this investigation. His lack compassion of and understanding about that he's actually done," he said.

He said the case was thought to be a legal first, setting a precedent for the food industry.

Zaman claimed he left managers to run his restaurants and that included ordering stock and hiring staff, telling jurors he was not on the premises when the curry was ordered.

Until his conviction, the restaurateur had "the immigrant story to which everyone should aspire", his barrister Alistair Webster QC had said in court.

Zaman was born in Bangladesh and came to the UK aged 15. He started working for his uncle in the restaurant business, finally owning six himself in York and North Yorkshire.

His restaurants won local business honours and acclaim from the British Catering Association and the British Curry Awards, the jury heard.

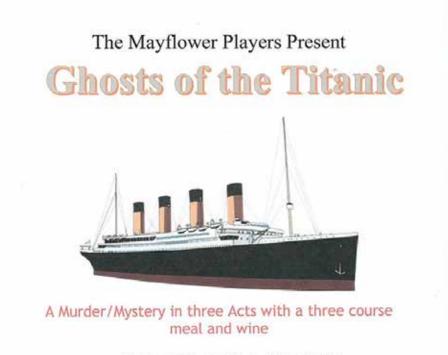

The father-of-four was found guilty of manslaughter by gross negligence and six food safety offences. He was cleared of a charge of perverting the course of justice.

Mohammed Zaman: "in complete and utter denial", said the judge

Sharon blasted for McCanns criticism

Sharon Osbourne has been slammed by a family friend of the McCanns for saying it was 'insane' that they left daughter Madeleine alone on holiday, leading to her kidnapping.

Sharon brought up the case of Maddie's disappearance, while discussing the topic of whether parents should leave children alone and without supervision, on her US chat show The Talk.

'I will tell you a very quick story,' she said. 'There was a husband and wife on holiday in Portugal. They left their baby in the room sleeping, sleeping while they went to dinner in the restaurant.

'While they were in the resort their baby was taken. And it is like, "Oh but we can see everything that is going on" and it is, like, insane.'

Madelaine was about to turn four-years-old when she was taken from a holiday apartment in Praia da Luz, Portugal, back in May 2007, and has never been found.

A family friend of the McCanns slammed Osbourne saying: 'It's very disappointing when someone with such a high profile makes this sort of ignorant, ill-informed comment.

'She should think about the effect it could have on Madeleine's brother and sister, as well as the wider family. Kate and Gerry have never forgiven themselves and this should not have been aired in a random way, as it apparently was,' she told the Daily Mirror.

"Back in the Gilded Age, you weren't anyone unless he painted you, and so I studied his subjects. When I stumbled upon Gladys Deacon, I decided she was too delicious to leave to history. Among many other tales, Gladys disappeared from her palace in the 1930s and turned up in a dilapidated, Grey Gardens-style manse in England, Oxfordshire, forty years later." A manse is the house of a Presbyterian minister.

Based on the real-life story of Gladys Spencer-Churchill, the Duchess of Marlborough, Gable's second novel takes the reader from Virginia to a small town in England and then to Paris. It moves back and forth between 1973 and 2001. Family secrets are revealed the and characters experience emotional growth through mystery and romance rekindled. Past and modern day collide. A great novel about family. If you enjoy reading Kate Morton, you will enjoy this book.

Annie is recently out of college and newly engaged. She doesn't know anything about her mother's past or anything about her father either. Her mother Laurel is a recently retired lawyer. They're traveling to England together where Laurel is trying to sell some property she inherited. Before leaving Virginia, Annie notices a book in her mother's office and borrows it to read on the trip to England. In Oxfordshire, while staying at the Banbury Inn, Annie meets the Earl of Winton, a retired gentleman who tells her stories about the history of the area. As Annie reads the book she discovers it's about Mrs. Spencer, who owned the Grange located far from where not they're staying. Is Mrs. Spencer Gladys Spencer-Churchill, the Duchess of Marlborough? What about the house and the book is she related or connected to the missing Duchess?

"The first seed of I'll See You in Paris was planted while researching my debut novel," says Gable. "I knew the reader must meet Gladys. Besides the 1970s setting, the novel reflects on her glory days and also includes a modern-day storyline. Weaving three time periods together was a challenge. As described in my novel, the Grange had an outbuilding near the edge of its property. The building's actual contents provided an unexpected callback to A Paris Apartment. With I'll See You in Paris, the truth lined up with fiction in so many perfect and surprising ways."

Gable says research is the best part of being a writer. "I love hunting for facts and stories and a sense of atmosphere through methods such as the internet, interviews, out-of-print books, personal collections in libraries, old magazines, and, of course, traveling. I'll even watch television. Much of I'll See You in Paris takes place in England in the 1970s. I saw every episode of The Mary Tyler Moore Show and Fawlty Towers."

Gable is currently writing her third novel, Book of Summer, to launch in May 2017. As with her first two novels, it features multiple time periods. It takes place on Nantucket and is based on the real-life erosion affecting the island, a home that's been in a family for 99 years is in danger of tumbling over the bluff.

Gable lives a few blocks from the beach in Cardiffby-the-Sea, California, near San Diego. "The wife of Cardiff's founder was from Wales, hence the name," says Gable. "Many of the streets in our neighborhood were derived from and inspired by counties or cities in England...

Gable was born in La Jolla, California, and grew up in Del Mar. She went to school in Virginia and lived in Washington, D.C. for many years before returning to California.

'Broody' Becks still a model of fitness!

Soccer legend David Beckham looked in great shape earlier this week as he ran up and down a busy London street.

The football ace – who officially retired in 2013 – has kept fit and healthy ever since calling time on his professional career, and looked at his best during a jog on Wednesday.

Becks smiled for photographers as he was snapped running up and down the street in London as he shot new footage for an upcoming advert for sports brand Adidas.

The star's tattooed arms were on show in a tight grey t-shirt, which he paired with three quarter length shorts and white trainers.

He completed the stylish but casual look with a black beanie.

It comes after reports that Becks may be getting a bit broody, and wants to have another baby with wife Victoria after hearing that Gordon Ramsay is set to welcome his fifth child into the world.

The star, who already has four children with the fashion designer, was allegedly one of the first people Gordon and wife

Tana told when they found out she was expecting.

A source told Heat magazine in the UK: "David and Victoria have known for five weeks and Gordon's been bragging non-stop about how he'll soon have enough for his five-a-side football team. He's told David to get a move on with his."

The 40-year-old hunk has previously revealed

he would love to add to their brood, telling TV chat show host Jonathan Ross: "We might have one or two more, you never know. If it happens, great... It's always a thought."

But Victoria ruled out having more children in an interview last year, telling the leading website femalefirst. co.uk: "No. I've got four. I feel like I've done my bit."

Adele forgets her OWN lyrics during live Show!!!

She's been working way too hard lately - clearly, so let's give Adele a break!

Adele may be one of the most successful recording artists ever, but she isn't afraid to admit that even SHE makes mistakes...

A lesser artist may have panicked, but the British star styled it out like the pro she is when she forgot the words to her own song during a live show – quickly owning the mistake with some laughter and profanity.

That, at least, is the takeaway from reports that she sang the wrong words while performing her track Million Years Ago during a concert in Lisbon, Portugal on Thursday night.

Fans looked on open mouthed as they watched Adele accidentally start singing the chorus lyrics instead of the first verse, telling the audience "s***, wrong words...I started singing the verse."

She then joked: "I forgot the words! Oh my god, I've never forgotten the words to that song!" However, the diehards appeared to take it well and even laughed, clapped and ultimately basked in the revelation that Adele — though superior to just about everything — is still human.

From the brief soundbite I heard the singer still rocked and covered her mistake ever so well... She still sounded amazing.

Got to love Adele, no matter what!

Meet a Member: Waleed Elgadi

Meet Waleed Elgadi from London who moved to LA 4 months ago to pursue acting.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I came out to LA in 2013 to dip my toe and see if me and the city got along. I was seduced by its charms very quickly, especially after meeting industry folk who where encouraging and said I should get my working papers and make the move. I set about getting here much earlier but work in the UK kept me busy on that side of the Atlantic which I was grateful for. I then had a run of jobs which were all US productions so it seemed to make sense that I should be in the US. Last year I finally buckled down to getting my papers and here I am.

What do you miss most from home?

The usual, family, friends, and I never thought I'd say this but the underground! I was in NY recently with I've learned a lot about work and it was so nice to be able to get anywhere in the city so quickly on the subway. Although I uber/ lyft everywhere here and it's nice to be able to take in the sights of this beautiful city rather than having to worry about missing your turning on the 101! Also the theatre, I miss the theatre back home a lot.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since ? If so why?

Opportunities seem to be endless here - that hasn't changed. The industry will take you at your face value rather than your pedigree. If you can do the job and you are a fit for what they are looking for, vou will book it. That's refreshing. Also I really believe in kismet and I'm constantly astounded by the randomness of this city and how it seems like there is a certain energy that's pushing it. I feel like myself and the industry over here already but I also realise I'm only just scratching the surface. Also my first impressions where that this was a place that you had to work hard at, that hasn't changed, but I'm also learning to have fun and enjoy the ride a little more rather than just being a workhorse. A colleague once told me 'LA is not so much a city but a big office where everyday is casual Friday." I think that's so true, learning to strike the balance is key.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus London?

Everything is different. The weather, the people, architecture, the the sense of humour. Mostly I'm glad for it although sometimes I miss Sunday Roasts by a pub fireplace and then wrapping myself in a coat before going out. The grass is always

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

Not sure I'm an authority since I've been here for such a short while, or whether any of these will be particularly hidden but if you haven't been to the Broad Museum yet, go. It's like the Tate Modern on steroids. Then go to Grand Central Market after for foodie delights. That's a nice day out downtown. I live in Silverlake and I'm a bit of a foodie, so wonderful discoveries have been Pine and Crane for out of this world delicious Chinese/ Taiwanese (get the Dan Dan noodles - you'll thank me). Musso and Franks in Hollywood has the best Spaghetti Meatballs and Lemondrop Cocktails I've ever tasted - its also apparently the oldest restaurant in LA and is full of history and old Hollywood glamour. The sunsets at Venice to the soundtrack of the drums circle is a pretty special experience too.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

Do your research well. Decide why it is exactly you want to come here and then do it. LA is an unforgettable experience.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've

"The things that we say to ourselves in the mirror we wouldn't dare say to our worst enemy" Be kind to yourself. In LA especially it's really important to remember that."

Rafa happy to stay in Toon

Rafael Benitez is staying as Newcastle United manager after signing a new threeyear contract following their relegation from the Premier League.

56-year-old The Spaniard was appointed in March following Steve McClaren's sacking but failed to keep the Magpies in the top flight.

He had a break clause in his contract if Newcastle were relegated and was widely expected to leave the club.

"The love I could feel from the fans was a big influence for me," he said.

Former Liverpool, Chelsea, and Real Madrid boss Benitez will have control over "all football-related matters" at the club, Newcastle said.

predecessor His McClaren was named as head coach last summer. working alongside chief scout Graham Carr.

Benitez's decision also hinged on the amount of funds he is given to strengthen the squad.

"This is a huge club and I wanted to be part of the great future I can see for Newcastle United," added Benitez, who has also managed Valencia, Inter Milan and Napoli.

"The main thing for me is that I have assurances that we will have a strong team - a winning team.

German 'keeper reunites with Klopp at Anfield

Liverpool have confirmed the £4.7m signing of Germany Under-21 goalkeeper Loris Karius from Jurgen Klopp's former club Mainz.

Karius, 22, completed a medical on Tuesday and will officially begin a five-year contract on 1 July.

He said that speaking to Liverpool boss and fellow German Klopp "convinced" him the move was the right decision.

sheets in 34 league games last season as Mainz finished sixth in the Bundesliga.

"I spoke to the manager and I had a good feeling afterwards because he told me what he wants to do with the club and with the players," he added.

The former Manchester City youth team player will provide competition for Belgium international Simon Mignolet, who was first choice last season.

Mignolet, 28, signed a new five-year contract at Anfield in January.

Wenger hopes Granit will toughen up Gunners...

Arsenal signed midfielder Xhaka from Borussia Monchengladbach. The 23-year-old, who has won 41 international

Papers hail hero Anderson as England demolish Sri Lanka

It was one of the swiftest "kills" in recent history, said Mike Atherton in The Times.

In the first Test at Headingley, England needed less than three days to demolish Sri Lanka, winning by an innings and 88 runs. The visitors scored a sorry 210 runs in their two innings; they were effectively bowled out in less than a day's cricket. The Sri Lankans can fall back on all sorts of excuses, however. Amid the "glut of international cricket", visiting teams can no longer give matches the necessary preparation – so home advantage counts for more than ever before. And the groundsmen stretched that advantage farther still by preparing a pitch that played to strengths. the hosts' But that shouldn't detract from England's achievement, said George Dobell on ESPN Cricinfo. James Anderson, in particular, was magnificent. The its own right," added the former Liverpool manager.

"I've been a Celtic supporter all my life," said Rodgers, who left Anfield in October after more than three years in charge.

"I've been very lucky to have been given an opportunity to step out the stands and manage the team."

In addition to extending Celtic's run of five domestic league titles and making progress in the Champions League, Rodgers cited creating sufficient excitement among the support to regularly fill Celtic Park again as one of his objectives.

SLICK JIMMY: Anderson took 10 wickets for 45 runs great bowler took a "ridiculous" ten wickets for 45 runs. Only eight times in the sport's history has a bowler taken that many Test wickets and conceded fewer runs. You wouldn't have known Headingley is actually Anderson's bogey stadium: until last week, he had such a strong aversion to the place that when he reached the gates, he said, he just wanted "to turn round and go home". But last week, he demonstrated yet again his "mastery of swing, his control, his ability to find movement off the seam". England were less impressive

"Myself, my staff and players will be doing everything we possibly can to meet the challenges set for us - dominate Scotland, and to qualify for the Champions League," the former Swansea boss said.

"My idea is to get the stands filled again. I think in the last few years the top tier of the Lisbon Lions Stand has been closed or empty.

"It's my job to get over 60,000-odd people in here again and inspire the supporters to come back and watch a game of football that excites them, that's about scoring goals and is about winning."

One of Rodgers' first tasks is likely to be trimming a squad that numbers 31 - including nine players out on loan from last season - given he stated he prefers to work with a "tighter squad" of around two players for each position as well as at the crease, said Vic Marks in The Guardian. Jonny Bairstow was the one exception. Fresh from a run of "princely form" for Yorkshire, the 26-year-old hit his first Test century, scoring 140. Since his recall to the national side last summer, after a year in the wilderness, Bairstow has appeared a more "complete" batsman: he plays with a newfound ease and confidence. And his presence lightens the load on Joe Root and Alastair Cook, upon whom England were becoming overly reliant. Bairstow is now "an integral part" of the team.

He expects to confirm the makeup of his backroom staff "over the course of the next couple of weeks".
