BIRMINGHAM BOMBINGS: new inquests on the way

■ "I have serious concerns that advanced notice of the bombs may have been available to the police and that they failed to take the necessary steps to protect life." - senior coroner for Birmingham

Fresh inquests are to be held into the deaths of 21 people in the Birmingham pub bombings after years of campaigning by victims' relatives.

The senior coroner for Birmingham and Solihull Louise Hunt announced the decision on Thursday after holding several review hearings and receiving "significant" new information about the double bombing on November 21, 1974.

During the recent hearings, families of some of those killed in the blasts in the Mulberry Bush and Tavern in the Town pubs put forward a claim that the British state had knowledge of the attacks planned by the IRA before they were carried out.

potential warnings

Setting out the reasons for her ruling, Ms Hunt said there was evidence that West Midlands Police had missed two potential warnings of the bomb attacks, including a comment made by men linked to IRA that "Birmingham would be hit next week".

That overheard conversation was reported to police on November 10 1974, but Ms Hunt said there was "no indication that the police took any active steps in response to

On the day of the attack, a second tip-off to the police was not followed up, she added.

Ms Hunt went on: "I have serious concerns that advanced notice of the bombs may have been available to the police and that they failed to take the necessary steps to protect Concluding, she said: "This is specifically in respect of the two matters I have identified.

"It is only in respect of that issue that I consider there is sufficient reason to resume an inquest investigate the circumstances of these deaths.

"So I am satisfied that the inquest should be resumed."

'we'll never get justice'

She said claims that police were protecting a mole in the IRA cell were unfounded, and neither did the emergency services response that night contribute to the deaths.

The pub bombings, widely acknowledged to be the work of the IRA, left 222 injured and led to one of Britain's worst miscarriages of justice in the convictions of the Birmingham Six.

Speaking outside the coroner's court, one of the men released in 1991 Paddy Hill welcomed the ruling.

He said: "We'll never get justice but I tell you one thing that we can get and that's the one thing we deserve the most - the truth.

"It's not so much me, I know the truth, I want this for the families.

"They've had their whole worlds collapsed twice, once when we got convicted and they had something to focus on - thought we'd got the guilty people in prison.

"Then we get released and ever since, they've been fighting for this for 20 years."

He went on: "I've known the truth all along. It's about time the British public knew the truth."

But Mr Hill said he was "sceptical" the truth would actually emerge.

In one well publicized case, a pair of Sussex men were charged with smuggling 18 Albanians into the country in a boat they boat on eBay for just £3,000

Gove's claims come as the Home Office has come under fire for not providing enough patrols of the south east England coast as the migrant crisis continues to grip Europe.

He said: 'As Justice Secretary, have experienced the frustration at our inability to refuse entry to those with a criminal record and even some who are suspected of terrorist

The Justice Secretary has vowed to press ahead with 'emergency measures' to rein in the European Court of Justice if Britain backs Brexit on June 23.

'restore control'

Mr Gove has insisted such a vote would 'liberate' David Cameron and allow him to finally make progress on meeting a pledge to reduce immigration to the 'tens of thousands'.

The publication last week of official migration figures revealing net immigration was running at more than 330,000 forced the referendum spotlight onto immigration and away from the economy.

Speaking on campaign trail yesterday, Mr Gove said: 'The only way he can fulfil that pledge is by leaving the

Merkel warns Britain 'you will never get results you want if you leave EU'

Angela Merkel, the German Chancellor, has weighed into the Brexit debate, warning at a press conference in Berlin "'you'll never get the results you want if you're not in the room".

Speaking after her talks with Nato Secretary-General Jens Stoltenberg in Berlin, she said: "You will never get a really good result in negotiations, particularly on very important issues, when you're not in the room and giving input.

"I personally hope and wish that Britain will stay part and parcel of the European Union."

Commenting on the interventions by EU leaders into the UK's referendum debate, Boris Johnson said the bloc's elites had "hit the panic button".

CORBYN: EU exit not the answer

LABOUR LEADER Jeremy Corbyn has appealed to voters "In" back to the upcoming EU referendum, defending immigration rejecting criticism that he is not campaigning hard enough.

Strategists of the In campaign say Corbyn, elected leader of Labour last year on a wave of enthusiasm for change, may help convince thousands of undecided voters in the north of Britain to back remaining in the EU and persuade younger supporters to vote at the referendum on June 23.

Corbyn, who voted "No" to the EU's predecessor, the Economic European Community, in a 1975 referendum, said the blame for problems caused by immigration lay not with the EU, but with the Conservative government employers.

"Let's not turn this into blaming people who travel, work and migrate around Europe," he told Labour members and supporters.

"Let's instead ensure governments respond to the needs of all communities and that unscrupulous employers are grossly exploiting migrant workers and trying to limit their rights need to be dealt with."

Bidding goodbye to the British Home Stores...

YET ANOTHER great business were able to British institution is headed for the knacker's yard with the news this week that department stores group BHS is to be wound down after administrators failed to find a buyer for the 88-year-old chain, threatening over 10,000 jobs and creating huge vacant sites in town centres struggling to cope with changing shopping habits.

The failure to find a buyer will likely increase the focus on previous owner, billionaire Philip Green, who sold the chain to a group of littleknown investors led by a previous bankrupt called Dominic Chappell for one pound in March 2015.

All of BHS's 163 stores will hold closing-down sales over coming weeks and 8,000 staff are likely to be laid off, advisers Duff & Phelps said on Thursday. Another 3,000 workers not directly employed by BHS are also at risk.

The chain, which once targeted a similar mid-market customer as bigger rival Mark Spencer , failed keep pace with changes including the rise of cheaper, more fashionable stores like Primark (part of AB Foods) and online competition.

"The British high street is changing and in these turbulent times for retailers, BHS has fallen as another victim of the seismic shifts we are seeing," Philip administrator Duffy after BHS became the latest casualty of a tough market which already this week claimed tailoring chain Austin Reed.

Its closure, one of the biggest failures in the UK retail sector since Woolworths in 2008, came after none of the multiple offers for the complete a deal due to the working capital required to secure the company's future, administrators added.

Up to 10 bidders were reported to have been interested in rescuing the stores, including Mike Ashley, owner of Sports Direct, who had said he was in talks before administrators called in.

pension deficit

Green had paid £200 million for BHS in 2000, and he took about £400 million in dividends in the early years of ownership, according to company accounts.

But the business had been loss-making for seven years when it was sold and it has a deficit in its pension fund of more than £500 million

"Sir Philip is saddened and disappointed by the news and had hoped that the business would be sold as a going concern," a spokesman said.

The British government said the failure to rescue the business was devastating news for all those that work at BHS.

Minister Business Soubry Anna said the government had already announced an accelerated Insolvency Service investigation into the activity of former BHS directors.

"Any issues misconduct will be taken extremely seriously," Soubry said.

The pensions regulator is also investigating whether Green's Arcadia Group sought to avoid its responsibilities in the deal, and should pursued for contribution to make good BHS's £571 million pension deficit.

Green is also due to be questioned on June 15 by British legislators on the Work & Pensions and Business Committees. "The staff will want answers about how things went so badly wrong on his watch," the opposition Labour party said in a statement.

Bank unveils plastic banknotes

THE BANK OF England unveiled its first plastic banknote on Thursday, and the prominent image of Winston Churchill it displays could not have been more perfectly timed for Brexit campaigners.

The central bank said in 2013 that Churchill would appear on its next £5 note, which will be the first to be made from a very thin plastic. The durable and harder to forge than paper ones.

"By adopting polymer, we're aligning with international practice. alongside Australia, New Zealand, Canada," and BoE Governor Mark Carney

"As Churchill did, we may have to wait a while for the Americans to join up," he said, alluding to the United States after Britain.

Carney was speaking as the Bank showed off its final design for the new note at Churchill's birthplace, the 18thcentury Blenheim Palace, eight miles north of Oxford.

Inevitably, appearance of Churchill on the notes was seized upon by campaigners ahead of the June 23 EU referendum.

Veterans for Britain, a group representing former service personnel which wants a so-called Brexit, pressed its claim that the wartime prime minister saw Britain as friendly towards a developing union in Europe after the war, but separate to it.

Uproar as BBC bonkbuster uncovers the many loves of Louis the Phwoar-teenth

■ Auntie takes a new tack with racy epic 'Versailles'

THE BBC has come under more fire – and some praise – after the debut of its new costume drama Versailles which features some of the raciest scenes ever seen on British TV.

The Two bonkbuster shocked viewers with a romp after only TWO minutes of part two on Wednesday night. Dubbed "porn dressed up in a cravat and tights", the hotly anticipated 10-parter had seven sexual scenes in its first episode. The costume drama is set in 17th-century France and tells the story of its womanising Sun King and his court in explicit detail. This week's show saw Louis XIV romp with a series of women including Henriette, played by Swiss actress Noemie Schmidt. The striking brunette had emerged moments earlier in a wet, see-through slip after a swim. French actress Alexia Giordano also bared all as she straddled Louis, played by British actor George Blagden. The steamy scenes also feature British actress Anna Brewster as Madame de Montespan, who had seven children by the King.

Viewers took Twitter to vent both their approval and disgust at the series, which has already proved a hit in France. Blagden's sister Katie said she found the raunchy beginning difficult to watch, tweeting: "Can we have a family and friends screener of #Versailles where I don't have to see my bro naked?"

'fact of life'

M e a n w h i l e Seansheep188 tweeted: "Goodness... I wasn't taught this in school in regards to Louis XIV" Greg Hope said: "You've got to love a bit soft porn on the BBC". But Jamie Johnston tweeted: "Oh dear. Given up on #Versailles already. Quelle rubbish." Another user said: "We're bailing on #Versailles. It is Le Silly."

David Wolstencroft, one of the writers of Versailles, has denied the show is dominated by sex, saying it contained "honest depictions of sexuality" of women in the court of Louis XIV. The king, who died in 1715, married young but was free to bed whoever he chose. Mr Wolstencroft said the sex was integral to the show, which he said was "a sophisticated and elevated piece of drama". He said: "Sex is a fact of life. If you look at the honesty of what the show is doing, the depiction of it as a function of power, the context of it, rather than avoiding the subject entirely, which would be laughable."

The drama was cowritten by Simon Mirren, nephew of Dame Helen Mirren. Mr Wolstencroft said: "It's actually a very carefully organised, much thought about, calculated way by Simon and I of exploring power. "If you want to get titillated and count the nipples, go ahead but that's not the way French audiences have consumed it... and the way I think English audiences will consume it. I think they'll look at it and say, 'What was all that fuss?'"

The show is said to have cost over £20million and another series has already been commissioned. Actor Alexander Vlahos, who plays the French king's brother Philippe I, Duke of Orleans has described the lavish 9.30pm series as "tame" despite the controversy. He said: "Is it raunchy? I don't think it is. It just so happens that life at that time, in that court, was bloody crazy."

But Sam Burnett, of TV standards pressure group Mediawatch UK, said on Wednesday: "Dressing up pornography and violence in a cravat and tights does not make it cultural."

The show is set for its US debut in October on the Ovation channel.

truth. They're rotten," he told reporters.

Julie Hambleton, whose 18-year-old sister Maxine was among the victims, welcomed the decision, saying it was "way beyond our expectations" as she urged the Government to ensure victims' families were given legal aid

Her voice trembling with emotion, Ms Hambleton said: "This is the most seismic day for all of us.

Double Chocolate

"I hope that our fathers, brothers, sisters, mothers are looking down and they're proud."

She added: "Our loved ones did not ask to be murdered that night.

"All we want is to be heard so we can get the truth, justice and accountability." Ms Hambleton also called for the original bombers to "come forward, do the right thing".

Former West Midlands
Police officer Bill Craig, whose 34-year-old brother James died in the attacks, said he believed the pub bombings investigation would be "another Hillsborough".

He said: "It's very complex, and it'll be a long process, but in the end this will end up as another Hillsborough."

West Midlands Police's barristers had objected in principle to the resumption of the inquests, arguing the coroner neither had the powers nor the "evidential basis" to order fresh inquests.

However, speaking after the ruling, Chief Constable Dave Thompson said in a statement: "I hope the new inquest provides answers to families."

Jolly Good's longtime owner hands over the reins of beloved meat business

- Martin Lunt takes well-deserved retirement
- Raul Dorado from King's Head to take over

In what can truly be described as the end of an era, Martin Lunt, founder of Jolly Good Meat Products, who has been bringing British bangers to local expats for more than three decades, is retiring and handing over the reins to Raul Dorado at Ye Olde Kings Head.

Lunt arrived on these shores back in 1979 having made a tidy sum from his family butcher shop in Cheshire and investing in commercial properties. But after being on the wrong end of a real estate swindle he was had to go back into the meat business to make ends meet, first as a meat cutter at the now-defunct FedCo, before investing in a butcher's shop in Sierra Madre. From there he went on to form Jolly Good Meat Products, marketing his bangers, pork pies and other products to local British import shops and pubs, and looking beyond to States including Texas, Florida, Colorado and Oregon.

But recent years have brought ever-more onerous standards for meat inspection from the FDA, meaning Martin was often more busy with red tape and paperwork than the business of butchering. This year, Martin decided to retire and enjoy his leisure time with his wife Christine. And top of his to-do list is become a tourist in England, visiting all the spots he never got to visit as a young man in England.

But Jolly Good lovers need not fear, the business is being taken over by Raul Dorado from Ye Olde King's Head in Santa Monica, who told us this week that he will be using Martin's ingredients and processes to ensure the high quality and authentic taste that we have all come to love.

"I've had a wonderful 37 years doing this job," Martin told the British Weekly this week. "It's been a great run and I've made a lot of friends. I know the business is in good hands and now it's time to do some traveling and enjoy my family."

The British Weekly will miss the Lunts.

Their company has supported this newspaper magnificently since our founding in 1984, advertising every single week for the past 32 years without taking a break even once. We wish Martin and Christine just what they have given all of us us - The Best of British – in the years to Weigh yourself weekly: stay on track!

To use weigh-ins and body fat tests without the process turning into an emotional roller coaster, you need to understand that strange numbers or results are bound to show up from time to time due to natural bodyweight fluctuations.

There will also be good weeks and bad weeks based on your compliance rate and life circumstances or passing events!

A simple re-frame in your mind helps you handle the ups, the downs and the uncertainties:

If you had a result you didn't want one week, you look at it as feedback, not failure.

Think of your numbers as a navigation system, like one you'd find in an airplane or rocket. When your progress feedback shows that you're not heading in the right direction, that's not a failure, that's simply a signal to make a course correction. If a pilot quit every time a plane was slightly off course, no one would ever get anywhere, so don't get frustrated and angry, just change course.

Successful people don't even worry about one week off course. They simply change their approach, increase their compliance and get back to work. They don't worry about an odd one-week fluctuation in weight or body fat. They focus on their long-term goal and their progress trend over time without obsessing over it!

- 4. Tape measure Using a tape to measure the body at the hips and waist...

At www.thebodycamp. com in ibiza, we use a very accurate and expensive system and scales linked to a laptop for our guests. This then prints off vast amounts of information on fat mass, fat free mass, BMI and bone density etc. This system uses bio-impedence. But we also like using the tape measure too!

After attending our retreat, we recommend guests consider weighing themselves once a week for an "official" progress report. Monday is a good day because it helps keep a lot of people in check over the weekend!

In addition, why not get a measuring tape and measure your waist size (women may also want to measure hips too).

What's more, waist measurement is a scientifically-proven benchmark for metabolic and cardiovascular health risks.

syndrome Metabolic is a cluster of symptoms that are linked to of diabetes and cardiovascular disease. One of the risk factors is abdominal circumference of 35 inches or more for women or 40 inches or more for men. That makes the waist size / abdominal circumference measurement a good one to monitor for both health and body fat tracking

Track these numbers, and combine that feedback with an assessment of how you look in the mirror every week, and you should have no difficulty navigating your way to your goal without a body fat test.

Don't become obsessed with pursuing any specific body fat number, thinking that it's some kind of

"holy grail" achievement. It's true: The body fat percentage number really doesn't matter if you are happy with the way you look. Also keep in mind that two people can look completely different at the same body fat percentage – one visibly much leaner than the other. That is to say, "people wear their body fat differently."

But measuring the change in the numbers and seeing your progress move in the right direction does matter. Use your body fat test results as an educational tool to understand body composition and also as a tracking tool to monitor your personal progress over time and you can't go wrong.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Expect good news in a matter of your feelings in regard to another. This can mean personal or business, however by week's end expect things to be more upbeat than for some time.

TAURUS: By the end of this month you will be able to see your way to having space in your life for new people or projects (or both). What is definite this coming week is that you must lay to rest any outstanding baggage.

GEMINI: Take a deep breath and understand that it's up to you how you want your life to be now. Take time to really smell the roses and spend quality time with friends or family who are good for you. Happy Birthday

CANCER: The anticlimax after the whirlwind of the last month will not be so easy to deal with as it is so completely different. You will make it through as always. You have to face up to what is not finished and disregard the rest.

LEO: If you look at what the current situation unresolved means to you then the faster you will change it. If you only knew what the other side of this was you would act and swiftly...it might just be good news.

VIRGO: This month coming up there is a lot of stuff which may not end up in the positive place that you are looking for. However no action at all is worse. Best to stand back, review all options and then move through.

LIBRA: You are ready to clear away all the past dead wood which can mean many things to you... keeping healthy and g fit being the most important. Take action to make this a priority for yourself. You will have more energy than usual for a week or so.

SCORPIO: This is the time for you to make some decisions regarding how you will proceed forward. You already are aware that nothing will change without you making the first move. It will get better when you change your direction now.

SAGITTARIUS: A problem in your work situation is just a storm in a teacup, so lighten up, especially this weekend when you can relax with family or friends. Be sure you follow up on that problem bill that is still not complete until you receive the receipt.

CAPRICORN: This week get rid of any excess stuff in your life and this means all areas and start fresh by the end of the week. This next month will bring some clearance for you in the financial area and also an opportunity to spend a little time on your own. You are laying some ghosts to rest.

AQUARIUS: You have learned a lot of new ways to make life more peaceful these last few weeks. One being keeping yourself busy and occupied doing what makes you happy. Just note this month ahead, it's best if you keep your thoughts to yourself.

PISCES: This week ahead will bring you back to what was going on in your life late last year, perhaps a decision not made or a conversation completed with all those involved. The feelings of life not being kind to you are temporary. Holiday destinations are much on your mind.

Billy and Me: not such an odd couple

in 2011, I brainstormed a few different ideas, but this was the obvious one to run with as my debut novel," says Billy and Me author Giovanna Fletcher. "My life has changed dramatically since writing this book. "I've got married, had two children, written three further novels, two novellas and signed deals for even more. Before writing this novel I was writing book reviews for magazines and little entertainment pieces here and there. Plus I already had a deep love of books, especially ones in this genre. That massively helped."

Billy and Me is a charming delight, a fast read. It's sweet and the characters are nice. They have a few flaws. Sophie is insecure and has been her whole life. Her employer Molly helps her come out of her shell. The misunderstandings and details about Sophie's childhood create most of the drama. The romance builds rapidly between

Billy and Me has yet to be optioned for television or film. Fletcher says she may consider Billy and Me for theater. Seeing the darker side of sunny LA

Greetings Britlings!

We all know from the outside people back home can view LA as the place full of sunshine and cocktails, fun, laughter and this easy-breezy lifestyle. God knows most of our Instagram profiles depict this amazing life.

So it's very easy for us to get complacent and drop our protective wits and smarts. Which is why I was saddened to hear of the recent mugging and attack on one of our fellow Brits in LA members Johny Pach, who wrote to me recently to share his horrific ordeal.

"Hey Craig, writing to let you and Brits in LA members know I was involved in a serious mugging on Venice Beach at the weekend. around 2pm, I parked my car near the Marina and was walking down the back houses (in) the heart of Venice Beach. There was a lot of families also walking with me down the same road, it was about 2.30pm and just in-front of me appeared three Hispanic men, one had a knife and just as I saw the knife the closest gang member smashed me in the face, I staggered but stayed on my feet and then another gang member kicked me in the mouth and shoved my head into a wall, I was knocked out but came around quickly to see the three running off with my bag. I then stood up, blood everywhere, a family quick on the scene and the neighbours all coming to see if I was ok. A chap came up to me on his bike and said he tried to chase the robbers who then threatened him with a knife. I have to be thankful for the police and ambulance services who arrived at the scene three minutes after it happened. I filed a report, they quickly took me to the hospital where I was stitched up across both lips and underneath and diagnosed with severe concussion. The police thankfully retrieved my bag with all of my goods in it but later news in the week about my front teeth being cracked, means my LA Adventure is over for now as I have to fly back for two veneers. Whilst my visa renewal is being processed I cannot leave the country, so I will now have to get fixed up and wait in the UK until my visa is processed and I am estimating November."

Now I wish I could tell you this was an isolated incident, but it's not. I have personally been attacked in broad daylight in Santa Monica. Leaving my old place of work, I was attacked from behind, spun around and taken to the floor, where this 6'4" guy started to kick and punch the hell out of me but it scarred me. Literally it took me a good year or two to get over the attack. I also hear of a few friends being held up at gunpoint at cash machines. In these situations it's always best to just give the gunmen want they want, it's not worth playing a hero.

So I'm not sharing these stories to scare you, but as advice to remember to remain vigilant, because LA isn't always full of airheads and Valley girls. Criminals exist everywhere, so let's all be a little bit street smart and make sure this doesn't happen more frequently...or the very least that we can be a little more prepared.

Cheers Craig Young

Meet a Member: Fraser Precious

Meet Fraser Precious from Newmarket, England who moved to LA 2 years ago to pursue acting and producing.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

Ever since I graduated from Sedbergh School in England I always had a burning desire to see the world and develop my skills as a performer. Growing up as a musician I always felt I was destined for an adventurous life, so it was while gaining my music degree in Sydney 10 years ago that I first developed my passion for acting and creating my own stories. I always aspire for the top in everything I do and right from the second I realized acting was my future, I knew I had to get to Los Angeles. LA is the pinnacle of the entertainment industry and where endless opportunities are available for you to grab and embrace and progress. There is no where else I would rather be. My career and success will always determine my life.

What do you miss most from home?

Strangely, I do miss the rain now and again! I would never complain about the beautiful weather here, but being a very proud Englishman I do like a good old drop of rain! I think that's my nostalgia of Britain kicking in, but the beautiful countryside of the UK is definitely something I do miss. I also miss the history and culture that we have back home, especially the Proms! But most importantly I do miss my family and friends a great deal as they have supported my crazy journey through four countries to Los Angeles.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? If so why?

My first impression and that driving desire of LA is exactly how I have come to find it. Just, awesome. I had formed many images preconceptions of LA over the years and just being here has catapulted my burning desire for success and why I am here. It's like with anything, you get out what you put in. I came here to advance my career as an actor and producer, so that is exactly what I have done and am doing. I'm well aware of Hollywood's perception to the many people who sit from afar and judge, but I have never been one to let others form my opinions. I love Los Angeles. This is a city and industry I am proud to work in...and having a series of beaches, amazing weather and not to mention the other incredible cities in touching distance is to me, a dream come true. The positives always outweigh the negatives if you stay open-minded.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Newmarket?

HA! I love that question. The town of Newmarket I grew up in and am still home to, is far far away from the land of Los Angeles. I think they could quite possibly be the two opposites! Newmarket is a small. family size town that thrives on the horse racing industry. It is a truly unique and charming town that I hold very dear to my heart. There is nothing excessive or over the top about it, just a peaceful collection of humble people going about their daily business week by week. Los Angeles is like a world of its own. Nowhere have I found more ambitious, creative and motivated people with one common goal: to succeed. It is a city that gives you a constant buzz to continuously achieve. I wake up every day thinking how I can better myself and what I can create to make that happen. The resources and opportunities here are there to be taken and if you are aiming for the top, there is no other place that can provide that platform.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

One location springs to mind as a bit of a gem, the 'wisdom tree' at the top of a mountain overlooking the valley in Burbank. Just a glorious spot and view across the whole city. Griffith Park Observatory would be another. The outdoor movies at the Hollywood Cemetery also stand out. But to me, the hidden gem here is in you as person.

would suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here? Prepare! Preparation is key with anything. Being spontaneous and acting on impulses is great with certain moves and countries (having moved to Australia and Sweden spontaneously) auite but moving to LA is a whole different ball game. I spent five years preparing for my move here, both mentally and through research. I intricately studied everything there was to know about Los Angeles; the industry, working as an actor, producing my own work, where best to live, what visa I could get on and maintain, how I could sustain myself financially, what to expect from the career I had chosen, how difficult the opportunities would be, etc. There is never enough preparation you can do for a move to LA, especially if you are moving from a humble town in a land far far away. If you are moving here for acting, you better have the thickest skin possible and be as mentally resilient as a soldier. You HAVE to be incredibly determined, persistent, and hard working to succeed here if you are working in the entertainment industry. Without one of those qualities, you struggle. That is a hard truth for this industry, but also applies to anything in life. Los Angeles just happens to present those opportunities that can literally change your life, so if you came here with that belief, do everything in your power to achieve it. Otherwise, just have a

I am very proud to say that I just produced and was the lead actor in my own short film 'To Feel Human' that just premiered at the Cannes Film Festival last week which I was fortunate to attend! As well as Cannes, the film was nominated several awards at Nice International Film Festival and will be screening at three further film festivals this year. I am also excited to get cracking with my upcoming projects this year. First up I have a lead role in a feature film shooting this month, followed by a major British car commercial! I will then produce and star in a TV series I have created with producing partner Josh Levine called 'Jet Loungin'. The show is about the adventures of two long-lost cousins navigating Hollywood with the most futuristic entertainment vehicle ever made, called the Jet Lounge.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

The best thing I can say is to take in every bit of advice that comes your way and shape it into one big umbrella that you can pull from and use with everything you do. I am highly motivated and determined to succeed in the path I have chosen... so all I can say is to develop that same type of hunger for whatever you are here to do or achieve and never give

CAPTAIN FANTASTIC: Alastair Cook milks the applause after reaching 10,000 runs

Cook reaches run milestone as England beat Sri Lanka

England captain Alastair Cook has become the youngest player to score 10,000 Test runs.

Aged 31, five months and five days, he achieved the landmark by reaching five on the fourth day of the second Test against Sri Lanka at Chester-le-Street earlier this week.

He brought up the milestone with a leg-side clip for four off Nuwan Pradeep and saluted the England balcony.

"It's a very special moment for me," Cook said. "You forget about all the hard times you have as a cricketer."

He beat India legend Sachin Tendulkar's record of 31 years, 10 months and 20 days, which has stood since Cook went on to make 47 not out as England won the Test by nine wickets.

Speaking after the match the Essex batsman said of reaching the landmark: "It's certainly driven me personally. To score 10,000 runs was one of those goals.

"It's those seven o'clock nets with Goochy [his mentor Graham Gooch], the hard yards away from today that you put in to get here."

England coach Trevor Bayliss praised Cook as a "phenomenal batsman".

England's leading Test run-scorer with a batting average of 46.49, Cook is the12th player in history to 10,000 runs, and only the second opener.

Brian Lara, Kumar Sangakkara, Ricky Ponting, Rahul Dravid, Mahela Jayawardene, Sunil Gavaskar, Jacques Kallis, Allan Border, Shivnarine Chanderpaul and Steve Waugh are the other batsmen to reach the milestone.

Bellew grabs cruiserweight title

BRITISH BOXING has a new world champion this week after Tony Bellew knocked out Ilunga Makabu in the third round to claim the WBC cruiserweight title at Goodison Park. Bellew became the UK's thirteenth current world champion and described his victory as a "miracle win" after suffering damaged hands and a fractured rib in training camp.

'It was the worst camp I've ever had," revealed Bellew on Monday.

"Boxers will always say how they had a brilliant camp and whatever. But this was awful. I was in a hyperbaric chamber on oxygen four weeks ago. I had detached a rib. I was f*. I was travelling back and forth to Sheffield after two hours of treatment every morning and then sparring."

Dave Coldwell, Bellew's unheralded trainer who deserves great credit for his calmness in the corner, also revealed that the cruiserweight had had problems with his hands coming into the world title fight.

Bellew also called out David Haye, the former unified cruiserweight champion, demanding that the Londoner drop back down from heavyweight to the 2001b weight limit to face him. It would mean Haye losing a stone and a half, which may be very unlikely at this stage in his career.

"You've gone long enough fighting those clowns," Bellew said after his victory. Come and fight me and I'll smash through you."

No Pep vendetta this time, insists Mourinho

Jose Mourinho insists he has no plans to reignite his personal rivalry with Pep Guardiola as it could affect Manchester United's chances of winning the Premier League.

Guardiola Mourinho will face each other for the first time in English football when they take charge of Manchester City and United respectively next season.

The two managers share a history animosity stemming from their time in charge of Spanish giants Barcelona and Madrid.

However, Mourinho says he cannot afford to focus on Guardiola next year, as he admits he did at times in Spain, as United face a greater number of rivals in England.

"[What has happened in the past] does not allow me to be innocent. For two years Pep and I were in a league where the champion would be either me or him, Real Madrid or Barcelona," Mourinho told a group of football coaches in Lisbon on Tuesday.

"In a situation like this, individual fights make sense because they can influence things. But in the Premier League, if I focus on him and Manchester City, and he on me and Manchester United, someone else is going to win the league."

Mourinho began his duties as United's new manager on Monday and was given a guided tour of the club's training facilities by Sir Bobby Charlton and executive vice-chairman Ed Woodward.

The Portuguese has already secured the longterm signings of young talents Marcus Rashford and Cameron BorthwickJackson but remained cov when questioned on the possible signing of Sweden striker Zlatan Ibrahimovic.

good friends "My always rave about me," Mourinho responding said. Ibrahimovic's complimentary comments earlier this month.

Murray books semi berth

Andy Murray booked a French Open semi-final date with Stan Wawrinka after finally finding his best form against home favourite Richard Gasquet in Paris.

Murray lost the first set from 5-2 up and let a similar lead slip in the second before taking the tie-break, and going on to win 5-7 7-6 (7-3) 6-0 6-2.

Third seed Wawrinka beat Spain's Albert Ramos-Vinolas 6-2 6-1 7-6 (9-7).

Murray has now won his last 10 matches, having won the Italian Open last month, and is through to his fourth French Open and 19th Grand Slam semi-final.

Murray had won all four previous Grand Slam meetings with Gasquet but gave the Frenchman every opportunity to improve on that record.

The Briton earned a 5-2 lead before his early success with drop shots disappeared, and double faults at key times helped Gasquet run through five straight games. similar followed in the second set, as Murray again failed to serve out from 5-2 and fell 3-1 down in the tie-break, but he gathered himself to finally take control with six straight points.

The Parisian crowd had been hoping their man could emulate Yannick Noah's title-winning run of 1983, but Gasquet's challenge faded dramatically in the third set.

After the first two sets took well over two hours, Murray raced through the third in 27 minutes, and a sharp forehand volley gave him the decisive breakthrough early in the

"Stop it!" shouted Murray after his fourth double fault of the afternoon but it did not signal another collapse, and the world number two reeled off 13 of the last 15 games to win in three hours and 23 minutes.

SMALL JOY FOR ENGLAND

Late winner from defender does little to hide English failings

A LATE HEADED goal from Chris Smalling provided the scantest of positive signs for England as Roy Hodgson's men labored to a 1-0 victory over ten-man Portugal at Wembley on Thursday night.

English Any fans hoping for a comprehensive victory following the team's heroics against Germany to send their boys into Euro 2016 flying high they were in for a disappointing night, as an experimental formation featuring both Jamie Vardy and Harry Kane largely failed to trouble a disciplined Portuguese backline

Not even with the early sending off of Bruno Alves for a ridiculous head high kick on Harry Kane were England able to fashion an advantage, with Kane laboring to find any penetration or space and Vardy never targeted by the sort of through balls on which he feasted last term for Leicester City.

Only Kyle Walker distinguished himself although Raheem Sterling and Jack Wilshere both provided lively cameos off the bench late on.

The main positive for Hodgson was that there were no fresh injury concerns as he now turns his attention to the Euro 2016 opener against Russia in Marseille on 11 June.

England's team sheet looked packed with positive attacking intentbut once they lined up the system looked ill-suited to the team Hodgson had selected.

The biggest victim was Tottenham's Dele Alli, who looked so outstanding playing in an advanced central role in the 3-2 win against Germany in March, but was out of sorts and shunted to the margins by England's formation.

Alli was restricted to the left to allow Wayne Rooney to play through the middle, while Jamie Vardy and Kane, with 49 Premier League goals between them this season, barely got within sight of each other all night.

Vardy and Kane were seemingly handed the responsibility of providing width but instead they were stretched so far apart as to be rendered completely ineffective.

The pair have all the makings of a potent partnership but not when they are virtual strangers. It is something Hodgson must work on before England face Russia.

Rooney was as industrious as ever but the muddled manner in which this formation performed will again raise questions about his role in England's team.

Rooney, 30, brings much to the side but is he really a better bet in the number 10 role than Alli?

The game's only goal came four minutes from time, headed in by Chris Smalling to give England their third straight victory in Euro 2016 warm-up matches although it would be fair to say that of all their friendlies this final one was the most unusual. It took them 30 minutes with a one-man advantage finally to pick off the opposition with a goal from a centre-back, although perhaps the home support should be grateful for small mercies.

If the performance was off-key it was equally hard to figure out what it was Roy Hodgson was trying to achieve at times other than shoehorn as many of his five strikers for Euro 2016 into one forward line. He started the game with three of them – Wayne Rooney, Harry Kane and Jamie Vardy – none of whom seemed quite able to interpret the role being asked of them, and with two simply out of position.

By the end of the game he had Daniel Sturridge as the centre-forward with Raheem Sterling and Adam Lallana either side of him, all three of them second half substitutes but unable to break the deadlock against the ten men of Portugal until Smalling intervened. Hodgson might have five strikers at his disposal but his attacking department did not look like the sum of their parts for most of the night.
