Harry's 'regret' over Princess Di's death

"It is OK to suffer...as long as you talk it," says Prince as he hosts event for mental health charity Heads Together

Prince Harry has spoken of his regret that he did not talk about how the death of his mother, Princess Diana, affected him until three years ago.

The Princess of Wales was killed in a car crash in 1997, when he was just 12.

Prince Harry, 31, was speaking as he hosted an event for the mental health charity, Heads Together, which was attended by a number of sports stars.

He told reporters the event was an opportunity to highlight that anyone can suffer from mental health issues.

Footballer Rio Ferdinand, athletes Dame Kelly Holmes and Iwan Thomas, and cyclist Victoria Pendleton - some of whom have spoken publicly about dealing with depression - were at the event.

Prince Harry formed Heads Together with the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge to bring together leading mental health charities.

The prince told BBC Breakfast: "It is OK to suffer, but as long as you talk about it. It is not a weakness. Weakness is having a problem and not recognising it and not solving that problem."

He said the event was an opportunity to show that "unflappable" sporting personalities can suffer from mental health problems like everyone else, including members of the Royal Family.

"A lot of people think if you've got a job, if you've got financial security, if you've got a family, you've got a house, all that sort of stuff, everyone seems to think that is all you need and you are absolutely fine to deal with stuff," he said.

Prince Harry made his comments about his mother's death as he talked to Ferdinand, saying: "You know, I really regret not ever talking about it."

Father-of-three Ferdinand - whose wife Rebecca Ellison died from cancer last year also spoke to the prince about dealing with the death of a parent.

The former England and Manchester United footballer said: "He's gone through different stages in his life that my kids are going to be going towards.

"So to get some of his experiences is very rewarding for me and very educational in many ways."

Prince Harry told the BBC: "It is very easy for someone to look at someone like Rio Ferdinand and say, 'You get paid all the money in the world, you are a successful footballer, you have fast cars.' But at the end of the day his wife was snatched from him at an early stage of his life with her.

"So of course he is going to suffer, it doesn't matter if he has an amazing job."

Former European sprint champion Thomas told the prince how he suffered when his career

And Harry also spoke to Dame Kelly, who told him of the mental issues she fought after suffering injuries before the 2004 Olympics, where she won gold in the 800 metres and 1,500 metres.

She said: "I had depression going through my athletics career, no-one knew at all what I was going through. I was having treatment and they thought I was crying because the treatment was so hard."

Revenge for Brexit? Dover travellers face days of misery - and blame it on sore-loser French

HOLIDAYMAKERS' heat. Those drivers lucky dreams of a sunshine break in France turned into a nightmare this week as they were forced to wait up to 18 HOURS traveling from Dover to Calais amid claims that petty French officials were delaying the process as part of a "Brexit payback".

With just a single French border guard on duty over the weekend, a queue of 250,000 drivers quickly developed at the British port town - with families including young children and the elderly forced to spend the night sleeping in their cars in punishingly hot and humid conditions.

misery for thousands

Police told drivers they faced 10 hours of delays on the A20 on MOnday with 12 mile tailbacks, and the congestion continued until late Monday afternoon when the French border guards finally resumed working in their regular numbers.

The delays brought misery for thousands, with temperatures on the tarmac soaring to close to 100F and numerous families running out of fluids, prompting Kent County Council to hand out 12,000 bottles of waters Sunday in an emergency measure as drivers reported fainting and collapsing in the enough to still have phone battery took to social media overnight to vent their fury - and point the finger of blame squarely at churlish French border officials.

'payback'

One person said on Twitter: "Are the French punishing use or proving a point in Dover for the Brexit vote?"

Another said: "Huge queues at Dover - is this French Brexit payback? What would be the effect on GDP of France if British tourists boycott country?"

Others still accused French officials of "trying to be awkward", "giving UK a hard time" and of carrying out a "Brexit hate crime".

Renata Roslak said: "It's absolutely horrendous. We have maybe moved half a mile in the last eight hours. There isn't even somewhere to turn around and head home.

"I even phoned the police to find out what was happening - we were told that there weren't enough staff to cope with the extra security checks, so ferries are leaving but they aren't full."

Aga Soja said: "We have been stuck in a queue at Dover for seven hours now, travelling with kids. No food, no toilet, can anyone do anything?"

A government official in Calais said "the maximum number of officers" were assisting at the border but due to the state of emergency in France "100 per cent" of vehicles need to be checked

Sir Philip Greed? tycoon faces being stripped of knighthood as fallout over BHS collapse grows

Retailer dubbed 'the unacceptable face of capitalism' by parliamentary inquiry

SIR PHILIP GREEN faces the prospect of being stripped of his knighthood after being dubbed 'the unacceptable face of capitalism' this week by a parliamentary inquiry.

Frank Field, chair of the Work and Pensions Select Committee, said that Sir Philip's "reputation as the King of retail likes in the ruins of BHS (The British Home Stores)" and warned that he had a "moral duty" to fund the pension deficit.

It comes just days after the Cabinet Office disclosed that it is reviewing Sir Philip's knighthood and will intensify calls for him to be stripped of the honour.

Mr Field told reporters: "He has to decide how much his knighthood is worth. I think the only slight possibility that he has of keeping it is if he pays in full for the pension deficit. That's going to be an enormous

'incredible wealth'

The MPs' report said that while Sir Philip accrued more than £300million in dividends for his family from their early, profitable years of owning BHS he paid little tax and failed to invest in the company and refused to address the "substantial and unsustainable deficit" in the pension fund.

The billionaire was also accused of "systematic plunder" of the high street chain and failing to address the deficit as he "accrued incredible wealth" for his family.

The MPs accused Sir Philip of "firing blame to all angles except his own" and said he must bear "ultimate responsibility" for the collapse of the retailer for selling it for £1 to Dominic Chapell, a former bankrupt with no retail experience.

A spokesman for Sir Philip has declined to comment on the matter.

A committee of MPs in the Work and Pensions department will publish a report on Monday into the demise of BHS, which caused up to 11,000 job losses.

During the hearing on Wednesday, Paul Budge, the finance director of Sir Philip's Arcadia Group, repeatedly refused to blame the billionaire retail tycoon for the department store chain's collapse, prompting Mr Field's anger.

'Offensive'

Mr Field expressed his exasperation at his refusal to pinpoint blame as well as pledges that Sir Philip would "fix" the pension problem at BHS, which had a £571m deficit when the retailer collapsed.

"We're fed up of hearing 'I'm about to fix it'. He does not fix it. What's required is a very large cheque from the Green family who have done so well out of the whole of this.

"The city is furious with your behaviour, the image you put over is that everybody in business is not about creating jobs, about spreading wealth but it's about nicking money off other people.

"Sir Philip could fix this today if he was serious," he said.

Sir Philip's was scathing in response, saying in a emailed statement: "Mr Field's outrageous outburst today demonstrated yet again his clear prejudice against myself, my wife and my executives, who turned up for a second time."

"He arrived very late, offered no apology, heard no evidence, clearly just to put on a ten minute show and was extremely rude. Accusing me and my family of theft is totally false and unacceptable on any basis."

"Mr Field needs to apologise for his shocking and offensive behaviour."

The MP and Sir Philip have had a long-running feud, with the Monacobased businessman accusing Mr Field of bias and conducting a "trial by media".

Sir Philip originally refused to appear before the hearing earlier this month unless Mr Field resigned as chairman.

allowing the company's pension fund become insolvent

He eventually relented saying it "would be the first and only opportunity I have had to tell my side of the very sad BHS story."

'Sniff test'

In Wednesday's hearing, MPs also quizzed three Goldman Sachs executives including the bank's vice chairman Michael Sherwood who has been described as the "gatekeeper" for the sale of BHS to Dominic Chappell's Retail Acquisitions last March.

Mr Sherwood - an adviser to Sir Philip for more than a decade - rejected the description, saying the the deal did not pass the bank's "sniff test", and repeating its previous claims that the deal was "too small" for it to provide anything more than preliminary observations.

The statement appears to contradict ex-BHS owner Sir Philip Green's claim that he "one million per cent" would not have sold the retailer to Mr Chappell if it had not passed the bank's informal vetting.

Mr Sherwood also said the bank was not paid for the work it did on the deal.

The bankers said they provided a range of services to Sir Philip, including helping to manage his family's wealth, which Goldman

Sachs has done since 2008.

However, Mr Sherwood said the bank was now reviewing its relationship with Sir Philip "as all this has come to pass".

Asked if that meant Goldman Sachs would not work again for the retail tycoon, Mr Sherwood said it depended on the nature of the deal.

'Earlier this month, administrator Duff & Phelps, which took control of BHS in April, was forced to admit defeat in its attempts to find a buyer for the department store.

It blamed "seismic shifts" in the retail sector for the collapse of the chain.

Speaking at opening of the flagship National Sheep Association (NSA) Malvern, show in Worcestershire the Farming Minister George Eustice said: decision "The US to press ahead with proposals to lift export restrictions on British lamb is great news for our farmers who are one step closer to gaining access to the lucrative American market, worth an estimated £35 million a year.

"Our world-leading food and drink industry is a key part of our nation's economic success and in addition to forging good trade deals with our European neighbours, we want to secure more export opportunities in

Phil Stocker, chief executive of NSA, said: "It is very encouraging that the USA is interested in opening its doors. Lamb sales in the USA have dropped over the years, as a result of a falling production domestic base, and we would like to see British lamb exported and promoted to boost consumption."

Charles Sercombe, livestock chairman at the National Farmer's Union, which represents British farmers, said: "The US is potentially a huge and affluent market that has strong links to the UK as we share history and language."

Is that a croque, monsieur? artisanal producers push Britain ahead of France in cheese production stakes

THIS has not been a good week for the French.

Following on the heels of a horrific terrorist attack and a national state of emergency, their most coveted athletic competition, the Tour de France, was won by one of Les Rosbifs this week, followed by bad news on the gastronomic front.

For as the French were still digesting the news that Chris Froome had clinched their beloved yellow jersey, it emerged that Britain now produces more varieties than the country for whom fromage is a national icon.

supreme champion

Indeed, more than half of the 5,000 cheeses entered in this year's International Cheese Awards, held in Nantwich, Cheshire, Britain, were from whose country contribution to European gastronomy was derided by the former French president Jacques Chirac as amounting to nothing more than mad cow disease.

Britain has moved to the top of the international league table of cheese producers. As of 2014 the UK was producing 700 varieties of cheese, 100 more than France, despite the French eating twice as much.

Last year the award supreme champion and winner of the Westminster Cup was Greenfields Dairy Products with their farmhouse traditional crumbly Lancashire cheese.

A new cadre of artisan cheese producers and a middle-class obsession with the provenance of produce have helped propel Britain to the top of an international league table that measures varieties of cheese produced per head of population.

Britain's "innovation score" of 11.4 cheese variants for every million people puts it ahead of Switzerland with 9.6 types of cheese per 1m people, and France with 9.2.

The story of Britain's cheese-making renaissance began 20 years ago when many of the nation's 200 specialist cheese companies started operations. The big reduction, 15 years ago, in the powers of the Milk Marketing Board, which had bought up most milk from producers, and the introduction of European Union milk quotas in the 1980s, both proved the spur for dairy farmers to develop new variants as a way of diversifying out of purely producing milk."

Specialist UK cheese often sells in the shops at more than £10 a poundat least three times more "commodity" cheese such as standard Cheddar. But far from seeing sales fall during the recession, many cheesemakers have thrived as consumers opt to cut back elsewhere rather than take luxury cheese off the family menu.

Most of the cheeses produced fall within about 10 main families – such as Cheshire, Stilton and Double Gloucester. But British manufacturers have shown a rare skill at coming up with new recipes – especially in the past few years.

Examples include Lincolnshire Poacher cheese, made by E.W. Read & Sons at their farm in Alford, Lincolnshire, and Stinking Bishop, produced by Charles Martell, who runs a dairy in Gloucestershire. Just like any other kind of bespoke product, they are normally produced in small production runs of just a few tons a year, often using craft-based production methods, as opposed to ultra-modern food processing systems.

Joe Schneider, a USborn cheese expert who is a director of Nottinghamshirebased Stichelton Dairy, a cheesemaker started three years ago, singles out the "strand of individualism" that runs through much of UK society as a key factor behind the expansion in cheese making.

'self-sufficient'

"In the UK there's a spirit of people wanting to be self-sufficient and produce something that others will remember," said Mr Schneider.

In keeping with the individualism of their output, many of the specialist cheesemakers are extremely small, employing fewer than 10 people and with annual sales of a few million pounds or less. This year, their products are estimated to be worth £200m at farm-gate prices, and to contribute about a fifth of UK total cheese output.

Williams, Vanessa partner in Loosehanger Cheeses, a company she set up with her husband eight years ago near Salisbury, Wiltshire, says a "huge help" to companies such as hers has been the growth of farmers' markets and other new outlets for food produced on a small scale and using traditional methods.

THE BIG CHEESE: Sarah Hinchliffe was one of more than 250 judges at this week's International Cheese Awards looking for the perfect combination of flavour, aroma and texture among 5,000 entrants

LEADING THE WAY: Lincolnshire Poacher won numerous international awards, helping spur the growth in international sales of British cheese

Attack on UK is 'very likely' as churches on terror alert after Normandy priest murder

A terrorist attack in the UK is "highly likely" following attacks in other parts of Europe, a five-judge tribunal has heard, as churches in Britain are told to tighten security after the murder of an 85-year-old priest in Normandy.

The heightened state of security comes as images threatening attacks in London and other major world capitals were reportedly posted on Telegram, a messaging app used by jihadis.

Despite there being no specific intelligence relating to attacks against the Christian community in the UK, the National Police Chiefs' Council is urging the community to be alert but not alarmed, report concerns and review their security as a precaution.

Neil Basu, Deputy Assistant Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, said: "There is no specific intelligence relating to attacks against the Christian community in the UK.

"However, as we have seen, Daesh and other terrorist groups have targeted Christian as well as Jewish and other faith groups in the West and beyond.

"Following recent events in France, we are reiterating our protective security advice to Christian places of worship and have circulated specific advice today. We are also taking this opportunity to remind them to review their security arrangements as a precaution.

"While the threat from terrorism remains unchanged at severe, we urge the public to be vigilant."

The church that was targeted in Normandy had been on a "hit list" found on a 24-year-old Algerian jihadi who had planned attacks last year in a Parisian suburb.

Sid Ahmed Ghlam, a computer sciences student, was arrested by French police who are investigating whether he was directed to carry out attacks on churches by Isil. PAGE 6 THE BRITISH WEEKLY, SAT. JULY 30, 2016

Shedding the pounds: ten methods that work

Health & Fitness with Ricky Parcell

Here .thebodycamp.com in Ibiza, we believe exercising regularly burns fat - but if you want to shift pounds, you may need to adjust your thinking too. So try these simple fat loss tricks and you'll feel energetic and satisfied without depriving yourself of your favorite foods. We support 20 people a week with the following 10 methods...

LEAN ON PROTEIN: When you take in fewer foods you risk losing muscle mass. So you need to (slightly) up your protein intake -include a portion of fish, chicken, turkey, low fat cheese, eggs, quorn, soya, beans, lentils or yoghurt with each meal. Studies have also shown that protein blunts your appetite more than carbohydrate or fat. If you skimp on protein you could find yourself still hungry after you've eaten.

SNOOZE LOSE: Aim to get at least eight hours sleep every night to stop yourself from snacking. Research published in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition found those who were restricted to just 5.5 hours of sleep ate significantly larger amounts of highcarb snacks during their waking hours than those sleeping for 8.5 hours a night. A lack of sleep boosts levels of ghrelin, the 'hunger hormone'.

WATCH THOSE
E V E N I N G NIBBLES: Overeat in the evening? Then most of the treats (simple carbs) will be stored as body fat. It also increases your risk of developing type 2 diabetes. Aim to eat the majority of your daily meals during the morning and afternoon
– spread over breakfast, lunch and two or three snacks. This will help boost your metabolic rate and promote fat burning.

RULE OF THREE: If you're presented with a wide variety of sweet foods you're likely to eat more, according to research from Tuft's University in the US. So when you're faced with a glorious choice, opt for just two or three types rather than a bit of everything.

DRINK BEFORE YOU EAT: Women who drank a large glass of water before breakfast or lunch consumed 13% less food, according to a study published in the Journal of the American Dietetic Association. Water distends stomach, leaving you feeling full and less likely to overeat. Knock back a glass of water 15 minutes before you tuck into your spaghetti and you might even leave a few spoonfuls!

BULK UP: Make your first course a bowl of veggie soup, some fresh fruit, or a salad with less dressing. Eating fibre rich foods before a meal can help reduce your food intake. A 2004 study at Pennsylvania State University found that people who ate a large salad before their meal consumed 12 per cent less.

STOP LOOKING AT FOOD: Turns out it's not our bottomless bellies that are to blame for our penchant for second helpings, but our eyes. Vision is a huge appetite stimulant. Studies show we eat 50 per cent more if food is left within our field of vision. So next time you have a Chinese takeaway, dish up your plate in the kitchen rather than leaving containers in tantalizing view on the table in your dining room."

P R A C T I C E
P O R T I O N
CONTROL: It may sound obvious but eating off a bigger plate

SNOOZE TO LOSE: not getting enough sleep can boost levels of ghrelin, the 'hunger hormone', leading to increased snacking during the day makes you eat more. Researchers at Cornell University, New York, found that people ate 45% more food when given a large portion, even when they disliked the food. Also, the size of the plate you eat from, the bowls you serve yourself from and the utensils you use can make a big difference to amount you eat. A 2005 US study found when people serve themselves from bigger bowls and use larger serving spoons, they serve themselves at least 31 per cent more. Try using large bowls for foods like salad and small ones for ice cream.

FRUIT NOT JUICE: Fruit juice is healthy but actual fruit is better. Downing a glass of orange juice is not the same as if you eat a whole orange instead you will get more fibre and still get your daily vitamin C quota.

Slow down: Sit down and slow down your meal rather than eating on the run. People eat up to 15% more when they rush at mealtimes. Scoffing your meal means that your hypothalamus – the part of the brain that senses when you are full – doesn't receive the right signals and explains why you may feel hungrier sooner.

Meet a Member: Amy Hoff

Meet Amy Hoff. Originally from Minnesota she also lived in Glasgow for many years, before making the move to LA to pursue writing, directing, and acting.

Tell us about how you made the move to LA:

I have been working on films in Scotland and it seemed like the next logical step if I wanted to pursue a career in the film and television industry. I am here in order to find work as a writer, director and actor, with a particular interest in episodic, one-hour television dramas with paranormal themes.

I grew up on the American road, living out of cars and cheap motels. That was when I started to hear urban legends and became very interested in storytelling, particularly about monsters. I am now an academic, a folklorist specialising in Scottish mythology and American urban legend with a speciality in monster legends. Next year one of my papers will be featured at an academic conference in Svalbaard on the supernatural in television and film.

What do you miss most from home?

The Scottish sense of humour and good public transit! From Glasgow in particular, I miss my cast and crew; I worked with the same group over the last seven years and they are wonderful people. And Islay, my favorite island. I've only been away for a few weeks so I haven't had much time to miss things yet!

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? If so why?

It's very warm! After many years in Glasgow it will take some time to acclimate. People are friendly, the food is good. It's strange to be back in urban legend with a the United States after so speciality in monster many years abroad!

What do you find the biggest difference between Glasgow and here?

There is a vast enough difference between Glasgow and LA that it's difficult to think of a short answer!

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

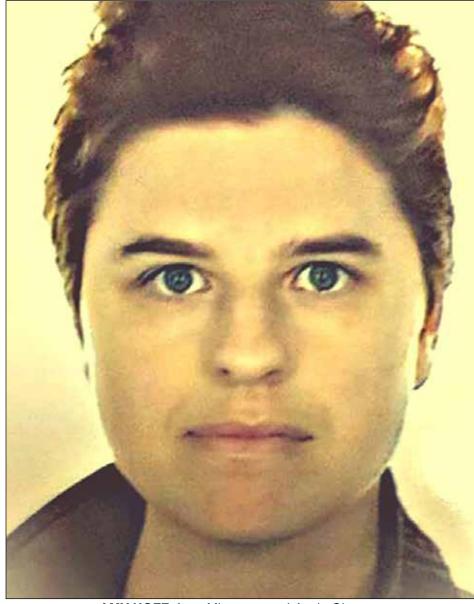

I'm new, I haven't had the chance to find one yet! I'll be sure to let you know. I know a few in Scotland.

Monsoon Summer: it never rains, but...

Exclusive interview with author Julia Gregsonn and a review of her novel about a British midwife in India after Independence

Rating: ★★★

"I think of midwifery as being one of the most powerful and the frightening jobs you could possibly do," says Monsoon Summer author Julia Gregson. "You're meeting a woman at one of the most vulnerable moments. Such hope, such joy when things smoothly. Such devastation and distress if you get it wrong. The Countess of Dufferin's fund, set up in 1885 and funded by Queen Victoria, sent out teams trained English midwives to India to work with the Indian dais, -otherwise know TBAs, Traditional Birth Assistants. So many ways of getting it wrong, particularly when I decided to set my book in 1948, a year after Indian Independence, when Indians would be particularly ill-disposed towards the British."

It's 1947. Kit is a nurse who wants to become a midwife. She's told there's an opportunity in India to work with the charity cases in the maternity home there. She falls in love with Anto, an Indian doctor finishing his studies in Oxford. They marry and move to India where Kit has to deal with prejudice against a mixed marriage. Her own family and the people in her new neighborhood treat her as an outsider.

Gregson's descriptions are evocative of the sounds, sights and smells of India. If vou've ever wondered about life in India after independence, this is a great insight into that world. A turbulent time for the country and the women who live there. Kit is starry-eved about her recent marriage and her new job but she's come from a completely different world than the one she's about to embrace and that her marriage makes her an outcast. That she's British and a working woman affects how people treat her. The story is gritty at times and reveals an often harsh life.

"I've been obsessed with India since I was a small child," says Gregson. "So when I sat next to this English woman at a dinner party in London and she told me she had married an Indian doctor and now lived in a small village in Northern India, my ears pricked up. Her story was this... She'd fallen in love with an Indian doctor while they were both students at Cambridge. He was handsome, irreverent, drank, smoked they'd quickly become lovers, and a few months later, married. In India, she ate mostly with the women in his extended family, and was disliked and bullied by her mother-in-law. She was expected to treat her husband as a kind of God."

On a research trip to South India, Gregson stayed in Fort Cochin at the hotel where Anto and Kit in the book stay on their first day. She visited Homestay, where she stayed with a Nasrani family in a beautiful house on the backwater. "They were amazingly kind and helpful to me," says Gregson. "Showed me how to eat and prepare their food, how to tie a sari, how they did their hair, how they washed, when they prayed... all the intimate details that make a story come alive.."

Monsoon Summer is Gregson's fourth novel. Her first, Band of Angels, is set in Wales and Turkey. The second, East of the Sun, in England and India. The third, Jasmine Nights, in Cardiff, Cairo and Turkey.

Gregson has many published short stories. Her first, Apple Blossom Time, won the Ryman's Literary Review Award. Band of Angels was the runner up for the Waverton Award. East of the Sun won Romantic Novel of the Year and the Prince Maurice Prize with a panel of French English judges that included Sebastian Emma Freud,

Book Corner with Gabrielle Pantera

and Tim Lott.

Gregson is currently writing a book set in London, Paris, New York and Los Vegas. "I'm reading like crazy at the moment, and planning a trip to the Folies Bergère in Paris," she says.

Grego lives in the small village of Whitebrook, on the border of England and Wales. She was born in London.

Stowing away in a floating hotel on the Thames

Greetings from the offers offer discounted motherland..... Hotel Tonight, which offers offer discounted hotel rooms on very

With my monthlong trip back home winding down I decided to treat myself for the last few days and check in to the Sanborn Yacht Hotel right on the river in London.

Yup you heard that right! Ayacht, which his also a hotel, stationed in the Docklands right by he Excel center. A bizarre concept, but nonetheless, huge fun. I found out about the Sanborn via the incredibly useful app offers offer discounted hotel rooms on very short notice. The rooms at the Sanborn are impeccably decorated, large and luxuriously appointed. They usually run around $200 a night, but definitely check the app if interested and use my promo code CYOUNG379 to get $25 off your first booking.

When I've not been filming I've been catching up with old friends and seeing lots of West End theatre including Brits in

LONDON SIGHTS: (top) the interior of a room at the Sanborn Yacht Hotel, and (below) a scene from Exposure in the West End

LA member Michael Greco's new show Exposure, about a young photographer who makes a pact with the devil in the world of paparazzi. Michael excels as Mason.

I also saw Mike Bartlet's most recent play called Wild, and intriguing show which manages to pull of one of the most elaborate scene changes I've ever seen. And then finally for fun I saw Sunny Afternoon, the story of Ray Davies and the Kinks. A really good musical that will you have up out of your seats and dancing in the aisles with all your

John Stones: City in talks with Everton over England defender

Manchester City are in talks with Everton over the possible signing of England defender John Stones.

A deal is yet to be agreed but it is thought the two Premier League clubs are not far apart in their valuations.

It is thought Everton want £50m for the 22-year-old former Barnsley player, who came close to joining Chelsea last summer.

Stones was part of the England squad at Euro 2016 but did not feature as they were knocked out in the last 16.

He made his debut for Barnsley in March 2012, 10 months before joining Everton for £3m.

City boss Pep Guardiola has identified the Yorkshireman as the kind of central defender who fits his approach to the game.

"Normally central defenders are strong in the air and aggressive," said Guardiola on Wednesday.

"But we need to have

STONES: £50m price tag

a good build-up to create easy passes in the midfield so they can create good passes for the strikers. I believe when the ball goes from the central defender to the striker as quickly as possible, it comes as quickly as possible back.

"That is why the players in that area need quality. By 31 August we will have the right squad to play how we want."

Guardiola used midfielders Javier Mascherano and Javi Martinez as central defenders while managing Barcelona and Bayern Munich respectively.

And the Spaniard has identified a City midfielder who could step into the back four if required.

"Fernandinho can play in 10 positions," he said.

"He is quick, fast, intelligent, aggressive. He is strong in the air and has the quality to play good build-up, can go right or left and can pass long."

Rodgers happy with Celtic draw

Boss Brendan Rodgers praised Celtic's resilience after they came back to draw 1-1 in the away leg of their Champions League qualifier against Astana in midweek.

Leigh Griffiths scored late on for the Scottish champions, who host their Kazakh counterparts next Wednesday.

"It was an outstanding result," said former Liverpool manager Rodgers.

"We're disappointed with the goal but I think after that we showed wonderful mentality to keep fighting. It's a very important result for us."

With several central defenders missing, the visitors played with a back three, with 20-year-old Eoghan O'Connell making his European debut.

Yuri Logvinenko headed Astana in front and Craig Gordon made several good saves before Griffiths made Celtic's only shot on target count. "I think we were all written off before the game," added Rodgers.

"Everyone was pretty clear in their opinion of the game, that we would do well to come back with anything other than a loss, but the players deserve an immense amount of credit, to fight and show spirit and passion in the game.

"The resilience and strength that we have built up over the course of the pre-season came into effect."

LANDMARK VICTORY? Johanna Konta beat Venus Williams in Stanford at the weekend to secure her first WTA title

THE CAREER of Britain's top female tennis player took a giant leap forward at the weekend, as Johanna Konta beat seven-time Grand Slam champion Venus Williams to win her first WTA title in Stanford.

Konta, 25, won 7-5 5-7 6-2 in California to join Heather Watson as a British winner on the WTA Tour in 2016.

"It's quite an incredibly humbling experience," said the British number one. "It's a validation of all the hard work you've already put in."

Sue Barker was the only previous British winner in Stanford, beating Virginia Wade in the 1977 final.

Konta said: "I wanted to leave it all out there, but also absorb everything that I could possibly reinvest in my career moving forward.

"I've played her twice before and knew I'd be playing a magnitude of experience. Venus Williams doesn't need an introduction."

British number one Konta - ranked 147th last June - will rise from 18th to a career high 14th when the new world rankings are confirmed on Monday.

England level series after thumping second Test victory over Pakistan

England 589-8 dec & 173-1 dec; Pakistan 198 & 234 England win by 330 runs. Four-match series level at ALISTAIR COOK'S controversial decision not to enforce the follow-on after Pakistan's first innings in the second Test was gloriously vindicated as the hosts thumped the tourists by 330 runs to level the four match series this week.

After England declared

at 173-1 Pakistan were set 565 to win, a challenge far beyond their capacity, and they were dismissed for 234 with 17 overs of the fourth day remaining to give England a comprehensive victory.

The win was England's fourth-largest Test victory, and Pakistan's fourth-biggest defeat, revenge certainly for the home side after losing the first Test at Lord's. The series is level with two matches to play, the next starting on 3 August at Edgbaston, a happy hunting ground for England.

England's hero was unquestionably Joe Root, who between first and second innings finished with a remarkable 325 in the match, had scarcely looked in trouble in all that time. For Yasir, man of the last match, it was a sorrier story, brought to earth by match figures of one for 266. It is a cruel game at times....

Froome cycles into history.....

■ Team Sky rider becomes first Briton to win Tour de France three times

Chris Froome became Britain's first three-time winner of the Tour de France when he crossed the finish line of the 21-stage race in Paris on Sunday.

The Team Sky rider, who won the 2013 and 2015 races, is the first man to successfully defend his title in more than 20 years.

He finished arm-inarm with his team-mates behind the peloton after Andre Greipel won the final sprint finish.

"It's like the first time, it's amazing. Every time it's special," said 31-yearold Froome.

"It's an absolutely amazing feeling. It feels like a privilege to be in this position. I've always had my team-mates around me."

Froome's three victories in four years follows Sir Bradley Wiggins becoming the first Briton to win the race in 2012.

He had built up a lead of more than four minutes over the previous 20 stages and tradition dictates that the yellow jersey is not attacked on the final stage.

Froome ended up beating Romain Bardet of France by four minutes and five seconds with Colombia's Nairo Quintana in third and Britain's Adam Yates fourth.

Sunday's stage to Paris began with a processional ride from Chantilly, in northern France, with the winners of the four main jerseys leading the peloton.

Froome, in the yellow jersey, was joined by Yates in the white jersey as best young rider, Slovak Peter Sagan in the green points top and Poland's Rafal Majka in the polka dot king of the mountains jersey.

When the riders reached Paris the race became competitive for nine 6.8km laps of the city centre which culminated in a bunch sprint on the Champs-Elysees, which Greipel won for the second time in his career.

He becomes just the eighth rider to win at least three Tours de France, joining Belgium's Phillipe Thys, Louison Bobet of France and American Greg LeMond on three.

With disgraced Lance Armstrong's seven 'wins' between 1999-2005 expunged from the record books after he admitted to doping, the record of five Tour wins, held jointly by Frenchmen Jacques Anquetil and Bernard Hinault, Belgium's Eddy Merckz and Miguel Indurain of Spain, is very much in Froome's sight.

Indurain was the last man to successfully defend the title, winning five successive Tours from 1991.

"It would be my dream to keep coming back for the next five or six years and give myself the best opportunity of winning again," said Froome.

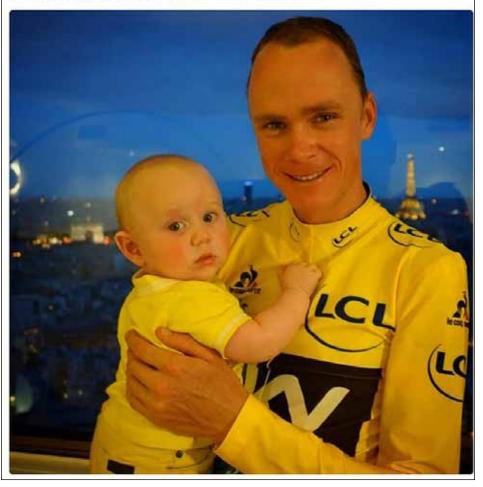

"I can't say the novelty is wearing off. It's such an incredible event and to be in the yellow jersey is every cyclist's dream and the biggest honour in our sport.

"I hope I can be back next year to fight for it again."

Gunners know Howe to replace Wenger?

ARSENAL have already earmarked Eddie Howe to replace Arsene Wenger as manager next summer, according to reports.

Wenger, 66, is into the last year of his Arsenal contract and has not committed to a new deal at the club.

Bournemouth boss Howe, 38, kept the Cherries in the Premier League last season and has been touted as a future England manager.

The FA were said to have considered him for the vacant Three Lions post this summer before appointing Sam Allardyce. And the Daily Star claim Howe is on the Gunners' list of potential successors to Wenger.

According to the report, Arsenal's board are unwilling to axe Wenger but would have had no problem had the boss decided to take the England job.

Wenger was also approached by the FA but rejected their offer to instead remain at the Emirates for one more

The report claimed Gunners chief executive Ivan Gazidis will not let Wenger choose his successor - a situation

Manchester United found themselves in when Sir Alex Ferguson pushed the club to appoint David Moyes when he retired in Moyes was sacked in April of the following year.

Howe supposedly fits the bill for Gazidis and the board after leading Bournemouth through the divisions and into the Premier League.

The former Cherries defender took over the club in 2012 when they were in League One and secured promotion to the top flight by winning the Championship in 2015.
