

Nasa hacker loses extradition fight

A mildly autistic 31-year-old Briton could face a 99-year prison sentence for hacking into American missile defence centres after a British court gave the go-ahead for his extradition this week.

Lauri Love from Suffolk, who has Asberger's Syndrome, and stands accused of hacking into the computer systems of the US missile defence agency, Nasa and the Federal Reserve, lost his appeal against extradition to America last week.

Judge Nina Tempia said the 31-year-old could be cared for by "medical facilities in the United States prison estate" and implied that he should answer the "extremely serious charges" in the country where the damage was inflicted.

"extremely serious"

Love, who lives with his parents in Newmarket, was granted permission to appeal against Friday's ruling and given bail pending further legal action. The battle over his fate could eventually reach the European court of human rights in Strasbourg and last several years.

There were gasps from in the courtroom as has Tempia read out her rome, ruling, which followed cused a full case hearing in the June. Love's supporters, s of who stormed out of effence Westminster magistrates d the court in London shouting lost "kangaroo court", fear he gainst could face up to 99 years nerica in a US jail if convicted on all counts.

Delivering her judgment, Tempia said: "Mr Love faces extremely serious charges for offences of computer hacking over a period of one year, from October 2012 to October 2013.

"I accept Mr Love suffers from both physical and mental health issues, but I have found the medical facilities in the United States prison estate, on arrival and during any sentence if he is convicted, available to him, are such that I can be satisfied his needs will be comprehensively met by the US authorities.

"I am satisfied Mr Love's extradition would be compatible with his convention rights and Asperger's sufferer, who lives with his parents, facing 99-year prison sentence for 'extremely serious charges'
 London judge 'satisfied his health needs will be comprehensively met by the US authorities'.

"It's not fair or just that a boy who has mental health issues should be taken away from his family and support by the US that is determined to exact vengeance on him," said the father of Lauri Love (pictured, above)

I send this case to the secretary of state for her decision as to whether or not Mr Love should be extradited."

The home secretary, Amber Rudd, has until mid-November to consider the case. If and when she decides to authorise Love's extradition, he will have 14 days to appeal against the ruling.

"big debate"

Ahead of Friday's hearing, Love said he held little hope of justice if he was extradited, and suggested a jail term in the US could cause his health to deteriorate and would lead to a mental breakdown or suicide. The electrical engineering student also suffers from severe eczema and depression. He and his family want him to face justice in the UK rather than the US, which he said "coerces" people into pleading guilty to get reduced sentences.

GRIM PROGNOSIS: Kinnock said Labour faced the "greatest crisis" in its history

Kinnock: Labour won't win a general election again in my lifetime

Kinnock, Lord the former Labour leader, has predicted his party will not win another general election in his lifetime ahead of Jeremy Corbyn's expected coronation this week.

The peer, who defeated the hard-Left in the 1980s and put Labour on the road to modernisation that would sweep Tony Blair into power, said the party was facing the "greatest crisis" in its history.

He made the comments in a BBC Panorama broadcast programme on Monday in which some of Mr Corbyn's supporters warn of retribution against MPs who have opposed his leadership.

Len McCluskey, the general secretary of Unite, says that some MPs have behaved "absolutely despicably" and suggests he supports stripping them of their right to stand at the next election.

"I think anybody who kind of behaves in a way that is totally disrespectful and [outwith] the culture of the Labour Party is basically asking to be held to account," he says. On Saturday, the result of the leadership race between Mr Corbyn and Owen Smith will be announced, with the former widely expected to be re-elected.

Speaking to Panorama, Lord Kinnock, who led Labour between 1983 and 1992, offered a bleak picture of the party's chances of winning back power.

"Not just in my lifetime but stretching back to the 1930s, by any examination this is the greatest crisis that the Labour Party has faced," Lord Kinnock says.

investigation

"I'm 74, and unless things change radically, and rapidly, it's very doubtful that I'll another Labour see government in mv lifetime."

In а separate development, Mr Corbyn is on course to call for party members to be given a say over which MPs are selected for the shadow cabinet.

And leading а current affairs ΤV show, Dispatches on Channel Four is also set to air a potentially explosive investigation into Momentum, a pro-Corbyn activist group, that will question whether it is mounting a hard-Left takeover of the Labour Party.

Momentum А spokesman criticised the programme, saying the undercover investigation raised questions about the broadcaster's impartiality.

Boris Johnson 'didn't want Brexit victory'

Boris Johnson only campaigned to leave the EU to set himself up as the next Conservative leader, Sir Alan Duncan said the day before June's referendum.

Sir Alan said he believed the now foreign secretary, who is his current boss, wanted to lose narrowly and be the "heir apparent" to David Cameron.

The foreign minister's comments were made in a BBC Two documentary broadcast in the UK on Thursday evening.

Mr Johnson has said the UK will be better off outside the European Union.

In his first interview after becoming foreign secretary he said: "There is a huge opportunity and...I have been very struck by how excited and how positive people here are about the opportunities for Britain." The UK voted by 52% to 48% to end its membership of the bloc in a referendum on 23 June.

In a behind-the-scenes documentary, Brexit: A Very British Coup?, Sir Alan - then a backbench MP but now a minister in Mr Johnson's Foreign Office - predicted the result would be 52% for Remain and 48% for Leave.

And he questioned the motives of Mr Johnson in backing the campaign to exit the EU.

"I think there are a lot of Leave people who don't believe it, and I've always thought that Boris's wish was to lose by one so that he could be the heir apparent without having to have all the ... you know... of clearing up all the mess, that's always been my view of Boris."

He added: "Bv championing leave, he can be the great heir apparent of the future, darling of the activists, but actually it would be quite good if he didn't actually win the referendum because there would be total chaos."

Bicycle campaigner knocked down by cyclist

A leading London bike campaigner was left unconscious after being knocked down...by a cyclist.

Emma Robinson was on her way to a meeting about cycling routes as part of her job as Barnes town centre manager when she was knocked down by a cyclist riding on a pavement in

She was knocked out in the incident which happened last month and still suffers dizzy spells.

It may take her up to three months to make a full recovery.

'It was a very scary moment,' she told the Evening Standard.

'It was literally moments after I had and the next thing I knew I was on the ground.

'I flew through the air and hit my head which meant there was a lot of blood. When I did come to I remember I had no vision and couldn't feel my arms and then I just remember this pain in my head.'

The cyclist fled when police were called but angered by the decision. "If you have come for justice then you have missed it," Love told a crowd of press in the courtroom afterwards.

He added that he had not yet read the judgment and would "delay processing it until he was in a safe place". He added: "It may simply be that this is such an important case that it has to be settled at a higher court."

His father, the Rev Alexander Love, said: "I don't criticise the judge. She has just acted on a law that is flawed.

"I always used to believe that to be born in this country was to win the lottery of life. But it's not fair or just that a boy who has mental health issues should be taken away from his family and support by the US that is determined to exact vengeance on him.

'no love'

"We have recently had a big debate [in the referendum] about who can come into this country. We need to have one now about who can be taken out."

Outside the court, Karen Todner, Love's solicitor, said she was very disappointed by the district judge's ruling. She pledged to appeal against the decision, initially at the high court and, if necessary, at the supreme court and eventually the European court of human rights in Strasbourg.

feel "T awfully disappointed," Todner said. "I thought we had done enough. I'm hopeful that the higher courts will consider the human rights issues. This is not the end of the road ... I was in and out of courts for 10 years with [the extradition case of the computer hacker] Gary McKinnon."

At one stage supporters blocked the road outside the court, bringing traffic to a standstill. They chanted "no love for the US gov" before being moved on by police.

Trump campaign 'stole image' from Cypriot immigrant

A CYPRIOT immigrant now living in the UK became an unlikely player in the US presidential election this week when it emerged Donald Trump Jr. stole an image he created for use in a Tweet for his father's campaign.

Trump Jr's tweet comparing Skittles to refugees caused a furore on social media, and to make matters worse it has now emerged that not only did the man who created the image not give his permission for the Trump campaign to use it, but that he is also an immigrant himself.

David Kittos, 48, from Guildford in Surrey, woke up to find an image he had posted to Flickr in January 2010 had become embroiled in a political controversy.

"This was not done with my permission, I don't support his politics and I would never take his money to use it," Mr Kittos told the BBC.

"In 1974, when I was six-years old, I was a refugee from the Turkish occupation of Cyprus so I would never approve the use of this image against refugees."

"That's our Syrian refugee problem."

He adds: "This image says it all. Let's end the politically correct agenda that doesn't put America first."

'No permission'

Wrigley, the company owns that Skittles, stepped in to the furore by responding: "Skittles are candy. Refugees are people. We don't feel it is an appropriate analogy". David Kittos, who does not follow Twitter, was alerted to the use of the image by friends.

A keen photographer, he told the BBC he originally the took picture in his home studio: "I was just experimenting with something called offcamera flash.

"This was six years ago when there were no Syrian refugees at the time and it was never done with the intention of spreading a political message.

"I have never put this image up for sale. This was not done with my permission, I don't support Trump's politics and I would never take his money to use it."

Mr Kittos' personal history means he is particularly dismayed by his image being used in a debate around accepting refugees.

Great Britain asked to apologize by Palestinian PM for 1917 declaration BRITAIN has been asked to apologize for its 1917 declaration endorsing the founding of a Jewish homeland in Palestine by the Palestinian president.

Speaking at the UN General Assembly, Mahmoud Abbas said Palestinian people had suffered greatly because of the 1917 Balfour Declaration in which Britain said it favored the establishment of a home for the Jewish people in Palestine, but that this should not undermine the rights of others living there. He said: "We ask Great Britain, as we approach 100 years since this infamous declaration, to draw the necessary lessons and to bear its historic, legal, political, material and moral responsibility for the consequences of this declaration, including an apology to the Palestinian people for the catastrophes, misery and injustice this declaration created and to act to rectify these

MAHMOUD ABBAS: described the Balfour declaration as 'infamous' and said it created 'catastrophes, misery and injustice' for the Palestinian people disasters and remedy its consequences, including by the recognition of the state of Palestine.

He added: "This is the least Great Britain can do."

Israeli-Palestinian peace talks last collapsed in 2014 and there are few hopes for a resumption anytime soon in part because of Israeli anger at Palestinian violence and Palestinian criticism of Israel's construction of settlements on occupied land where Palestinians want to establish a state. The declaration, named for the British foreign secretary at the time, offered a more nuanced message than Abbas described.

It said: "His Majesty's Government view with favour the establishment in Palestine of а national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of non-Jewish existing communities in Palestine or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

'It has been a real journey to reach this point," said Lord Ivar Mountbatten (pictured, left, with James Coyle)

Queen's cousin comes out as first openly gay Royal

Lord Ivar Mountbatten, a cousin of Queen Elizabeth II. has become the first member of the extended British royal family to come out as gay.

The 53-year-old, who has three children with his ex-wife, Penny Thompson, found love with a man he met during a ski trip, he told London's Mail on Sunday.

"I am a lot happier now, though I am still not 100 percent comfortable with being gay," he said.

"Coming out' is such a funny phrase but it's what I suppose I did in a rather roundabout way, emerging to a place I'm happy to be," he told the outlet. "I have struggled with my sexuality and in some ways I still do; it has been a real journey to reach this point."

Mountbatten, who is the son of the 3rd Marquess of Milford Haven and godfather to Price Edward's eldest child, said he has known since his teens that he was bisexual. Thompson was also aware of his sexuality when they married in 1994

"Shewasunderstanding and I will always be grateful to her. We had a lot of fun, we have three fabulous daughters and I don't regret any stage of my life," he said.

The couple divorced in 2011 and Mountbatten had a "gay fling" in the ensuing years, he told the Mail. But he never felt comfortable enough to come out about his sexuality until recently, when he met 54-yearold airline cabin services director James Coyle.

The pair was skiing in Verbier, Switzerland when a chance encounter at a bar changed their lives forever.

They immediately hit it off and exchanged phone numbers, they both recalled. Coyle was already open about his sexuality, having come out after his mother's death in 2003. If this relationship was to continue, Coyle declared that it could not be in secret.

"If I was going to be with him, it had to be in the open with friends and family. I wanted us to be honest, not to hide anything, not to be anything else," Coyle told the Mail.

Mountbatten agreed, first speaking with his family, who "could not be more supportive," he said.

The couple decided to come forward to the media after receiving inquires into their personal lives, they told the newspaper.

In June, Prince William also made history by becoming the first royal to appear on the cover of a gay magazine.

His photo spread on the U.K.'s Attitude Magazine followed joint efforts by his wife, the Duchess of Cambridge, and his brother, Prince Harry, to address mental health issues and fight bullying that can come with them.

Mental toughness: what it is and how to develop it...

HEALTH & FITNESS with Ricky Parcell

Here at The Body Camp in Ibiza, we coach our clients that one of the key components to personal growth and development is learning certain habits and behaviors, which develop and improve mental toughness - for improved decision making in life.

The hallmarks of mentally strong people are very often real strategies that you can begin using today. Here are five of the hallmarks of emotionally tough people:

1. They are emotionally intelligent.

Emotional intelligence is of the cornerstone mental toughness. You cannot be mentally tough without the ability to fully understand and tolerate strong negative emotions and do something productive with them. Moments that test your mental toughness are ultimately testing your emotional intelligence (EQ). Unlike your IQ, which is fixed, your EQ is a flexible skill that you can improve with understanding and effort. It's no wonder that 90 percent of top performers have high EOs.

2. They are confident.

"Whether you think you can, or think you can't - you're right." - Henry Ford. Mentally tough people subscribe to Ford's notion that your mentality has a powerful effect on your ability to succeed. This notion isn't just a motivational tool - it's a fact. A recent study at the University of Melbourne showed that confident people went on to earn higher wages and get promoted more quickly than others did. True confidence as opposed to the false confidence people project to mask their insecurities has a look all its own.

Mentally tough people have an upper hand over the doubtful because their confidence inspires others and helps them to make things happen.
3. They neutralize toxic people. Dealing with difficult people is frustrating and exhausting for most. Mentally tough people control their interactions with toxic people by keeping their feelings in check. When they need to confront a toxic person, they approach the situation rationally. Thev identify their emotions and don't allow anger or frustration to fuel the chaos. They also consider the difficult person's standpoint and are able to find common ground and solutions to problems. Even when things completely derail, mentally tough people are able to take the toxic person with a grain of salt to avoid letting him or her bring them down. 4. They embrace change. Mentally tough people are flexible and are constantly adapting. They know that fear of change is paralyzing and a major threat to their success and happiness. They look for change that is lurking just around the corner, and they form a plan of action should these changes occur. Only when you embrace change can you find the good in it. You need to have an open mind and open arms if you're going to recognize, and capitalize on, the opportunities that change creates. You're bound to fail when you keep doing the same things you always have done in the hope that ignoring change will make it go away. After all, the definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again and expecting a different result! 5. They say no.

Research conducted at the University of California in San Francisco showed that the more difficulty you have saying no, the more likely you are to experience stress, burnout and even depression. Mentally tough people know that saying no is healthy, and they have the self-esteem and foresight to make their 'nos' clear.

When it's time to say no, mentally tough people avoid phrases such as "I don't think I can" or "I'm not certain." They say no with confidence because they know that saying no to a new commitment honors their existing commitments and gives them the opportunity to successfully fulfill them. The mentally tough also know how to exert selfcontrol by saying no to themselves. They delay gratification and avoid impulsive action that causes harm.

Meet a Member: Ray Trickitt

Meet Ray Trickitt from the London, who moved to LA four years ago to pursue acting.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA? I always wanted to come to the States, either NYC or LA, and LA seems to be where the majority of work opportunity is, although now it seems there's a lot of opportunities for work in the industry in other cities too. It's an industry town and I wanted to check it out.

What do you miss most from home?

From home, friends you could say really, country pubs, getting easily around town, no car needed...and the four seasons! Don't get me wrong, I do like the sun!

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? If so, why?

Well, when you first arrive it's all new, exciting and you're finding your way. But it's a whole different thing when you move out here and commit. It's not for everyone and the only way to see of course is to live here and see how the system operates. The workings of LA and if it's right for you.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus London?

I would say getting about, Everyone says this, but it's true. The car is king. In London you can get around really easy using public transport. Also you find yourself walking more, with other people doing the same. Yes, it's smaller and seems more hectic but getting around town you don't you don't really need a car. Here I find you can find yourself cut off from people when you spend the majority of your time in a car, And yes, everything is spread out, but people are more positive I find here, and it you have a passion for something; an idea, people are interested. It seemed harder back home. This is the land of anything is possible!

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

It's not really a hidden gem, but I really like going up to the Griffith Observatory. It's a wonderful building, with great views over LA, and of course parts of the classic film Rebel Without A Cause were filmed in and around the building. Also, along Pacific Coast Highway, a little past Malibu there's a place called Neptunes Net with great seafood. You can usually see a large number of

If it's what you want to do, go for it! But keep in mind to check things out first, research as much as possible and be prepared for the long haul. If you decide to take the plunge, it can be tough coming to a new place and starting fresh, finding friends, etc. I think it takes a

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Keep everything very low key this week and don't make any waves over anything or the current situation will get out of hand. Mars your ruler runs through your cousin Sagittarius currently so make yourself available as new work opportunities will arrive. TAURUS: Write a list of priorities and start with the biggest as your tendency is to go in opposite directions at the same time; this will not help you as the month progresses - especially in financial matters.

GEMINI: Time to deal with what has been neglected so far this month from yourself or others as Uranus the troublemaker is hanging out in the area of family/friends. If you are planning on a trip it's better to wait for next month.

CANCER: A positive beginning to the month may have dwindled down to a small trickle by now. However this means that some area is blocked and it's up to you to use that deep intuitive feeling and figure it out.

LEO: The good news is if you take control of a thorny issue it will be sorted within the week. The fact is you can get in your own your way and as Mars is in your cousin sign until November, be sure you tap into his great energy.

VIRGO: If any area of life currently is not going as smoothly as you expect you can let go of worry about the outcome, all will be well in the end. Please find something to change in your own life... not trying to change the life of someone else.

LIBRA: The main lesson of this month is that it's time to make decisions - not something Libra is good at. However as it is the beginning of your particular New Year make at least one resolution, you will have made some good strides forward this month. Happy Birthday! SCORPIO: You have been in search of a more peace-filled existence for some time now. This has been difficult in a lot of ways. Be calm and positive in thought and deed and life can be much better from now on. It is time you got moving and make changes inyour life soon; the rewards for you are long overdue.

SAGITTARIUS: You could be feeling a bit moody or out of sorts due to Saturn moving in your area of deep feelings. Know that what you reap is what you sow and this would be a good time to start thinking positive in all areas of life. Make time for family this week ahead.

CAPRICORN: Your financial situation is still not what you want, however in order to achieve a positive flow of money you have to assume it is already here. This means to not act or think in lack of anything in life. Be flexible in all areas this week ahead.

AQUARIUS: A family member will likely ask for help these next few days. How you handle this situation will decide if they come back for more. It's your decision if you decide to help them out. Know this: if you help it has to be because you really want to, not because you feel obliged.

PISCES: It's best to not feel sorry for yourself as the current situation will not change any time soon. If you waste time nothing can get it back. Life is to be enjoyed, so go for it and know that your boss Neptune in your life now will bring many rewards.

Mata Hari's Last Dance: not putting a foot wrong

Exclusive interview with author Michelle Moran and a review of her novel about the famous sensuous spy

Rating: $\star \star \star$

"What interested me most about Mata Hari was not actually her dancing or even her extravagant lifestyle, but her emotional arc," says Mata Hari's Last Dance author Michelle Moran. "What was it like to go from such a privileged and carefree upbringing to total poverty, then back again to tremendous wealth? How did she handle it? Was this why she couldn't seem to make any relationship What would stick? make an eighteen yearold woman answer an ad for marriage in a newspaper and then give herself to a man twenty years her senior? Desperation, obviously, but what else? I try to cover all of that."

Moran's books are typically about women in power. Mata Hari has almost no power. beautiful She's а woman who knows how to use her beauty to captivate men. She was a sensual woman in a time when it was considered scandalous to be so. It still is. Hari did what she had to in order to survive in a male-dominated world. She travels, dances and meets many important people of the day. The bravery she shows at the end of her life tells us she must have been deeper. I've been reading Moran's books since 2007, when I first picked up in the UK a copy of Nefertiti: A Novel. Her stories typically leap off the pages, with Moran bringing the location and historical figure to life. With Mata Hari it seems that everything is happening to her. I wish we'd gotten inside

Mata Hari's feelings. In 1904 Paris, after failing to be hired to dance at the swanky nightspots La Madeline and L'Ete, 25-year-old Margaretha Zelle meets Edouard Clunet, a lawyer to some very rich men. Edouard becomes her agent, booking her to dance for exclusive events. She becomes a star in Paris. She takes many lovers, some men, some women. She'd abandoned her daughter to escape an abusive marriage. By 1917 Mata Hari's star has faded. She's become a spy and a double agent, seducing officers from France and Germany. Arrested as a spy, she is convicted by the French military in a secret trial. Was she an enemy spy or just a beautiful woman persecuted for refusing the advances of an obsessive French officer?

Visiting the Musee Guimet in France inspired Moran to write about Mata Hari. "This is where Mata Hari had her debut. Imagining her dancing there pre-WW1 made me want to know more about who she had been. She was the Madonna of her time. Everyone knew of her. And then suddenly one day she was gone. closed trial, an А execution Can you imagine?"

Moran began her research in France, then continued in the U.S. reading biographies and memoirs. Everything she found was in books or online in old newspapers. Moran's book covers from Mata Hari's childhood to her death.

Mata Hari's Last Dance is Moran's seventh novel. Shes' written Nefertiti, The Heretic Queen, Daughter, Cleopatra's Madame Tussaud, The Second Empress, and Rebel Queen. Her fourth novel. Madame Tussaud, was optioned for a miniseries. A screenplay adaptation was written by the Michael Hirst of The Tudors fame. However, it was not produced.

"After every book I attend signings and the readers I meet there make everything worth it," says Moran. "There are so many fascinating people in this world. If you had a full-time job just talking to people you still wouldn't ever hear every possible life situation or story."

announced her next book, but says she's completely in love with the subject matter. "I'll be going to Canada to do some research for it in a few months, and after that, Europe."

Talking nosh!

Just look how lucky we are! The average wait time at an L.A. drive-thru is about 10 minutes. So I was wowed when I heard that there was a five-hour queue for a London popup of the burger chain In N' Out this week.

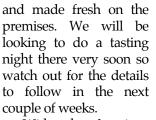

The one-day pop-up which had been slated to offer its fare from 11am to 3pm, took place at Estancia Brazil restaurant in Swiss Cottage in North London. And according to In-N-Out spokesman Eric Billings, they had to start turning people away by noon. He said a line started to form at about 8am, and customers began to get wristbands at 11am that let them claim a burger later. I guess this is the foodies' equivalent of a secret Elton John show. Great marketing tool no doubt.

But while those who lined up were clearly familiar with the brand, it left Roberto Trevisan, general manager of Estancia Brasil, scratching his head. He told a local newspaper: "I know it's an American company who are going to do some type of, well, American food. I have no idea which one."

Mozzarella me, baby!

From epic burgers to fine French dining, or from sushi to Korean BBQ, LA's status as a food capital is yet another reason we love it here. Just this week Eileen and I were lucky enough to be invited by Sandra and Anouska of Obića Mozzarella Bar in Sunset Plaza to try their fabulous Italian wares.

Obića is a casual Italian restaurant concept featuring the best Mozzarella di Bufala Campana, together with traditional recipes and high quality Italian handmade products, all prepared 'in sight' (and let's face it, don't we all love a little theatre while we eat?) Artisanal mozzarella is all the rage right now, and I have to tell you Obića's is sublime. As for their truffle pizza...out of this world. Their portions are light and healthy

With other locations in Santa Monica and Century City it's a great place for a lovely meal, and they have just been added to our growing list of favorite 'key member' vendors, where our members can receive a 20% discount off of their food bill. Fixating on Chezza no Payne for Liam!

He may be hard at work in the studio, but One Direction's Liam Payne has clearly got his lady on his mind!

Speculation about whether the British star and former Girls Aloud singer Cheryl Tweedy are are expecting their first baby together has been rife ever since he changed his Twitter bio to read 'the luckiest man in the world'.

But for now the pair are keeping schtum about the rumours, instead sharing pictures on social media of themselves wearing matching face masks...

Oo-er!

Now the showbiz world is buzzing after Liam sent a cute message to his girlfriend – via Instagram - where he gushed about how much he missed her. Sharing a sweet snap of the pair wearing facemasks, Liam wrote: "I miss you, the things you make me do. Home soon!" adding smiley face emojis. Loved-up Liam then shared another more solemn selfie on his own, and other snaps showing him busy making music.

Liam signed to Capitol Records in July as he embarks on a solo career while 1D are on hiatus. Meanwhile, the star's super cute message to Cheryl comes amid increasing speculation there are "ready for a baby" together.

Last Cheryl week sparked pregnancy when rumours she appeared in a new L'Oreal advert with a fuller face and changed appearance. Neither has commented on the speculation.

The star hasn't been pictured in public since June when she accompanied Liam to his sister's wedding, and has only posted pics from previous shoots. Her new ad features a series of famous faces dressed down with minimal make-up, promoting the brand, and Cheryl looks totally different in a basic white vest top, loose hair and noticeably fuller cheeks. One fan commented: "Just seen the new L'Oréal advert & Cheryl Cole is looking back to her normal stunning self with some weight back on her. Good to see!"

Neither of the stars have confirmed or denied recent claims, but a source told Now magazine: "Cheryl's never been more determined to have a baby.

"She's never been so focused on something. Cheryl has a stash of pregnancy and motherhood books she's always reading."

After all this brouhaha would rather disappointing now if all this couple were really making together was sweet music...

Just saying!

Adele dedicates NY concert to shock Brangelina split

"It feels like the end of an era," singer tells MSG crowd

Forget a breakup playlist - Adele just offered Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie a full-fledged concert!

The woman behind such emotional hits as "Set Fire to the Rain," "Someone Like You" and "Don't You Remember" put on a fabulous show at New York City's Madison Square Garden this week that doubled as a live ode to Brangelina.

The longtime celebrity couple shocked the showbiz world earlier this week when news broke of Jolie filing for divorce. The Oscar winner requested joint legal custody, but sole physical custody of the couple's six children. According to the legal documents, she also requested that Pitt be granted visitation rights. As Tuesday night's concert attendees reported on Twitter, the British songstress (who has recently overcome serious stage fright) announced to the crowd that she was dedicating the show to the "elephant in the room," calling the split the "end of an era."

She addressed the crowd with, "are you up for a good time?" before explaining, "Well, you've come the wrong place... It's two hours of misery. Two hours of egotistical songs about moi and my ex-boyfriends."

She told the packed stadium, "I'm dedicating this show tonight to them," In between songs she added, "I don't know them personally, but it feels like the end of an era," she said to the crowd.

"I was shocked when I woke up this morning."

The dedicated festivities didn't end there. Fans in attendance at the star's New York show quickly took to social media to share the pop star's remarks. One fan wrote on Twitter: "Now #Adele is leading us all in a group Brad and Ange' breakup therapy session. Also, there are songs."

It has to be said, Adele isn't wrong in saying her songs are the weepy and heartbroken, she has forged a record-breaking career based off of her own bumpy experiences in love.

Hopefully, with time and the help of Adele's tunes - this split will one day be water under the bridge....?!!

Euro 2020: Football will be coming home!

 Wembley to host final and semis of European championship
 Other matches to be spread throughout the continent as tournament celebrates 60th anniversary

Wembley Stadium will host the final and semi-finals of Euro 2020,European governing body Uefa has confirmed.

Glasgow's Hampden Park and Dublin's Aviva Stadium will also host last-16 matches and three group games.

The English Football Association won unanimously after the German FA (DFB) withdrew just before the Uefa vote to focus on a bid to stage Euro 2024.

Cardiff missed out as one of the 13 venues that will host matches for the first pan-continental Euros.

England's FA chairman Greg Dyke, 67, said: "This bidding process was open to more than 50 Uefa countries so for Wembley to be recognised in this way is testament to a lot of hard work behind the scenes."

Dyke confirmed that the FA had held discussions with their German counterparts but said there was no deal in place to back DFB's bid for Euro 2024

"There is no agreement other than we will not bid for 2024, as we wouldn't get it," Dyke said.

England manager Roy Hodgson said the opportunity to play a final at Wembley would be excellent motivation for his players.

"For the young team that is emerging, many of those players will be at their best football years in 2020," the 67-year-old said.

"If the young players of today do not use this to spur them on then they are making a mistake.

"By 2020 some of them will be playing their fifth tournament and that is the type of experience you can't buy."

The quarter-finals and three group matches will be held in Munich (Germany), Baku (Azerbaijan), Rome (Italy) and St Petersburg (Russia).

The other host cities that will hold three group games and a last 16 game are Copenhagen (Denmark), Bucharest (Romania), Amsterdam (Netherlands), Bilbao (Spain), Budapest (Hungary) and Brussels (Belgium).

Scottish FA chief executive Stewart Regan said the backing of former Manchester United manager Sir Alex Ferguson and the long history of football in Scotland had been key to their bid.

"Glasgow was the city that held the first

None of the 13 hosts, including England, are given preferential treatment. Everybody has to qualify for the final stages.

20 of the 24 finalists will comprise the top two from each of 10 qualifying groups of five or six teams, matches to be played between March and November 2019.

The final four will gain entry by winning a series of play-offs from the newly formed UEFA Nations League. Matches in the League will be played September to November 2018, play-offs in March 2020.

For the finals, 24 teams will be split into six groups of four, with the top two progressing. UEFA have not finalised how the draw will be arranged but each group is expected to be hosted by two cities close to each other with teams in each group determined to some extent by region.
