Let's 'seize the day', May urges Tories

"This is a turning point for our country, a once-in-a-generation chance to change the direction of our nation for good," PM tells party conference

Theresa May has pledged to "seize the day" and build a more united Britain outside the European Union.

Speaking on Tuesday in her first keynote speech at the Tory Party Conference, May cited Margaret Thatcher as a key inspiration as she set out a vision of a country transformed after Brexit where every citizen has a chance to succeed.

She said that Britain's first woman prime minister had "taught us we could dream great dreams again".

bold pitch

Mrs May added that the forthcoming departure from the EU and the fact that laws would once again be made in Westminster gave Britain the chance to change for the better. She told the Conservative Party faithful in Birmingham: "This is our generation's moment to write a new future upon the page, to bring power home and make decisions here in Britain."

She made a bold pitch for the support of the "ordinary working class" abandoned by Labour by setting out her desire to end mass immigration and encourage a new generation of grammar schools.

And she vowed to stand up to big businesses who fail to "play by the rules" by dodging tax or hitting customers with rip-off energy bills.

Mrs May said: "Come with me as we rise to meet this moment – come with me and together let's seize the day."

Her hour-long speech, her first full-length conference address as Prime Minister delighted the Tory faithful at the end of the conference.

She drew a huge cheer from her audience by branding Jeremy Corbyn's Labour as "the nasty party" – a term she coined in 2002 while in

She also praised her predecessor David Cameron as "a great leader of our party – a great servant to our country".

'quiet revolution'

Her speech underlined key areas and acknowledged there was a decisive change in direction required by the Government and the country.

Britain's referendum vote to quit the EU on June 23 had been a "quiet revolution", the Prime Minister said.

It was a plea for change from voters no longer prepared to put up with their frustration at mass migration and Brussels meddling and marked "a turning point for our country".

She said: "Change has got to come too because of the quiet revolution that took place in our country just three months ago

We'll be bigger, better, greater, outside the EU, insists Hammond

BRITAIN can be a "bigger, better, greater" country outside the EU, Philip Hammond declared on Monday, after announcing a series of measures to support business through Brexit.

Speaking to the Tory conference, the Chancellor forecast a "vibrant, successful economy" in a "new age" of freedom from Brussels rule. "No one should be in any doubt that we have the skills, the ingenuity and the determination to make a success of Brexit," he said.

But the Chancellor also warned of some possible economic "turbulence" during the two-year process of quitting the EU.

He went on to promise Government support to help businesses adjust to the change and hinted that tax cuts or public spending increases may be needed to counter any slowdown in economic growth.

And he confirmed that his predecessor George Osborne's targets for zeroing the deficit by 2020 were being scrapped.

'turbulence'

"Let me be clear, throughout the negotiating process, we are ready to take whatever steps are necessary to protect this economy from turbulence," he said. "And when the process is over, we are ready to provide support to British businesses as they adjust to life outside the EU."

Mr Hammond's speech, his first to a Tory conference, gave a sober assessment of the challenges facing the country as the Government prepares to apply to leave the EU. He also hinted at Cabinet tensions over border controls by repeatedly insisting that the country had to "go on attracting the brightest and the best, the highest-skilled and most dynamic entrepreneurs, scientists, engineers and managers from around the world".

Mr Hammond promised to extend a guarantee that the Government will match EU subsidies to firms and universities after the country has left the bloc.

"Today, I can go further. The Treasury will offer a guarantee to bidders whose projects meet UK priorities and value for money criteria, that if they secure multi-year EU funding before we exit, we will guarantee those payments after Britain has left the EU," the Chancellor said.

On possible tax cuts or public spending rises, he said: "As the economy responds over the coming months fiscal policy may also have a role to play."

Carolyn Fairbairn, CBI director-general, said: "With the clock now ticking on an EU exit, it's good to see the Government set out the right chapter headings on how to boost confidence in our economy."

– a revolution in which millions of our fellow citizens stood up and said they were not prepared to be ignored anymore."

Ignoring the "once-in-a-generation chance to change the direction of our nation for good" would be disastrous, she said.

"If we don't respond – if we don't take this opportunity to deliver the change people want – resentments will grow, divisions will become entrenched and that would be a disaster for Britain."

Mrs May said the referendum vote was "about a sense – deep, profound and let's face it often justified – that many people have today that the world works well for a privileged few but not for them".

"It was a vote not just to change Britain's relationship with the European Union but to call for a change in the way our country works – and the people for whom it works – forever," she said.

It was time to "stop quibbling, respect what the people told us on the 23rd of June – and take Britain out of the European Union".

She confirmed her plan to trigger Article 50 of the Lisbon Treaty, the formal mechanism for leaving the EU, by the end of March and introduce a "Great Repeal Bill" into Parliament that will get rid of the European Communities Act underpinning Britain's EU membership.

Mrs May said that building a "Great Meritocracy" where anyone could succeed through talent and hard work whatever their background was her vision for the country. She said: "That's what I've always believed in."

Pound slumps to three decade low against dollar

The pound came within a whisker of a new 31-year low against the dollar this week after the Prime Minister told the Conservative party conference at the weekend that Britain would trigger Article 50, the official legal notification that would formally begin negotiations with the remaining EU powers, "no later than the end of March". That set the UK up to leave the EU by 2019.

Against the dollar, sterling was down 1.2 per cent at $1.2815, within touching distance of the July 6 drop to $1.2796 when the pound hit its lowest level since 1985.

'uncertainty'

The pound was 0.9 per cent weaker against the euro, with as much as £0.8737 needed to buy a unit of the single currency, a level not touched since 2013.

"The decline in sterling is another reminder that the market doesn't like the uncertainty that Brexit is bringing, that the negotiations will be hard and that the probability of a hard Brexit has increased," said Charles St Arnaud, Nomura FX strategist.

While Mrs May's Article 50 comments provided some clarity on the timing of negotiations, there was little on their outcome, "which is what matters for most businesses", Mr St Arnaud added.

Kit Juckes at Société Générale described the date as bringing "a bit of clarity, but not much joy" for the pound.

And sterling remained under pressure after UK chancellor Philip Hammond told the conference to expect Brexit-induced turbulence in the UK economy, and the currency market is inclining towards believing the pound has further to fall.

UKiP in crisis!

■ Farage back in charge - again - after his replacement steps down and new leadership hopeful is hospitalized after being punched by a rival

THE UKiP party was in full crisis mode this week after their recently-installed leader stepped down on Tuesday and one of the favorites to replace her was hospitalized two days later after a punch-up with a rival.

The news that leadership hopeful Steven Woolfe collapsed outside the European Parliament after being struck by a colleague following a "clear the air" meeting was the very last thing the party needed following a difficult time in which its relevance has been increasingly questioned.

Following the Brexit vote and the government's announcement at the weekend that the UK would begin exiting the EU in March, the viability of the UKiP going forward is being openly questioned in Westminster and across the country.

Former party leader (and now interim boss) Nigel Farage has launched an official inquiry into the incident which saw Woolfe rushed to a Brussels hospital.

Farage told reporters Woolfe was 'recovering in hospital and said a CT scan has shown that there is no blood clot in the brain and he is "feeling brighter, happier and smiling as ever."

Party insiders told reporters that Mr Woolfe was punched by a UKiP colleague following an altercation. The two colleagues were both seemingly alright after the fight and went to vote.

But after voting Mr Woolfe collapsed on a bridge and was rushed to a hospital after losing the "feeling" down one side of his body.

Mr Farage said: "We as a party take every incident seriously. We've never had one like this, of this nature before. We will have an inquiry and decide what to do."

"He's in a much better place than he was a few hours ago. He did, as you know collapse coming out of the chamber during the voting session, and hit the ground pretty hard. He has suffered two seizures, one quite major one, which is obviously pretty serious.

FARAGE: the former and temporary leader of the party refused to name the man who threw the punch

"He did lose consciousness for a bit so things are pretty bad. He has had a series of scans. I'm pleased to say there is no bleeding on the brain and they've not found any clots.

'not very seemly'

"He is being kept in overnight for observation. He still has a bit of numbness down the left side of his face so it is a pretty serious medical incident but he's sitting up in bed and he's feeling a lot better.

"It's two grown men getting involved in an altercation. It's not very seemly behaviour but I'm not today going to get involved in the blame game or name names or say who did what," Mr Farage said.

Mr Farage refused to name the man who threw the punch, and said UKiP "will have an inquiry and decide what to do."

He said there was no French police investigation because no complaint had been lodged.

The incident came barely 48 hours after Diane James unexpectedly quit the party's top job after 18 days at the helm.

Ms James announced her resignation late on Tuesday, citing professional and personal reasons for her decision.

Ms James said she did not have enough authority in the party and would not be "formalising" her nomination.

She had not appointed a deputy and UKiP officials were initially unable to say who was now the leader of the party.

Asked why Ms James had stood down, Mr Farage said he believed it was partly due to a family illness and the "realisation" of what the job entailed.

"When you take this job your life finishes. This is what you are 24/7, there is nothing else. I think she looked down the barrel of that and thought 'this is not how I want to live my life'."

Mr Farage said he was "sorry" for Ms James as "it's a very difficult thing to have done". While it was "not a great day" for the party it was "not the end of the world", he said.

Asked about speculation that his bitter rival Welsh UKiP leader Neil Hamilton could be installed as interim leader by the party's national executive committee, Mr Farage said: "Really? Well we'll have to see about that won't we."

ROUGH AND TUMBLE: Steven Woolfe (above) collapsed after being struck by a UKiP colleague following a 'clear the air' meeting, while Diane James (below) quit the job abruptly on Tuesday after just 18 days at the helm, claiming she 'did not have enough authority' in the party to pursue her agenda

"I do not see any prospect of that horror story coming to pass," he said, adding that Mr Hamilton "doesn't do our public image a whole host of good".

But speaking to the BBC's Daily Politics programme Mr Hamilton said he had no interest in being the UKiP leader in any circumstances.

Ms James said in her resignation statement sent to The Times newspaper: "It has become clear that I do not have sufficient authority, nor the full support of all my MEP colleagues and party officers to implement changes I believe necessary and upon which I based my campaign.

"For personal and professional reasons therefore, I will not take the election process further."

The former Conservative councillor, who defected to UKiP in 2011, said she would "continue to concentrate fully" on her activities and responsibilities as an MEP, adding it was her "final media statement on the issue".

'Fake Sheikh' needs deep pockets as he faces £800m lawsuit

■ Former undercover reporter for News of the World embarrassed royalty, sports figures and corrupt officials

FAKE Sheikh Mazher Mahmood, whose two-decade run as an investigative journalist has trapped dozens of members of Britain's elite, is facing a possible jail sentence and an £800million lawsuit.

The writer is being pursued by 18 people who claim they were dishonestly trapped by the self-styled "King of Sting".

They are poised to sue Mahmood after he was found guilty of tampering with evidence to snare former X Factor judge Tulisa Contostavlos.

Tulisa was charged with acting as a go-between to supply the undercover reporter with £800 worth of cocaine. But the case collapsed in 2014 after Mahmood was accused of lying to a judge.

conspiracy

It later emerged Mahmood, 53, got his driver Alan Smith, 67, to change a crucial police statement which described how Tulisa told him she was anti-drugs. The two men were both found guilty of conspiracy to pervert the course of justice this week. They face prison when they return to the Old Bailey later this month for sentence.

During a 20-year career on the News Of The World, Mahmood won awards and exposed corruption at the very highest levels of British society, earning the Fake Sheikh nickname after posing as a wealthy Middle Eastern prince dressed like Lawrence of Arabia.

Among the his targets were Sarah, Duchess of York, and Sophie, Countess of Wessex, who was taped calling the Queen an "old dear".

Among his other targets were politician George Galloway, former England manager Sven Goran Eriksson and footballer Justin Fashanu, who was subsequently prosecuted for match fixing. He exposed similar corruption in international cricket and match fixing in international snooker involving Alex Higgins and his manager. In order to expose what he considers lax immigration procedures Mahmood has repeatedly entered the UK using fake passports. Corrupt Home Office officials, police offices, solicitors and doctors have also been among his targets. Mahmood was named Journalist of the Year in 2011.

'innumerable lives'

He moved to the Sun On Sunday after the News of The World closed down in 2011.

Mark Lewis, a partner at Seddons solicitors, is representing 18 people who are pursuing the Fake Sheikh through the courts. He said: "Over the last 25 years innumerable lives have been ruined by the dishonest actions of Mazher Mahmood."

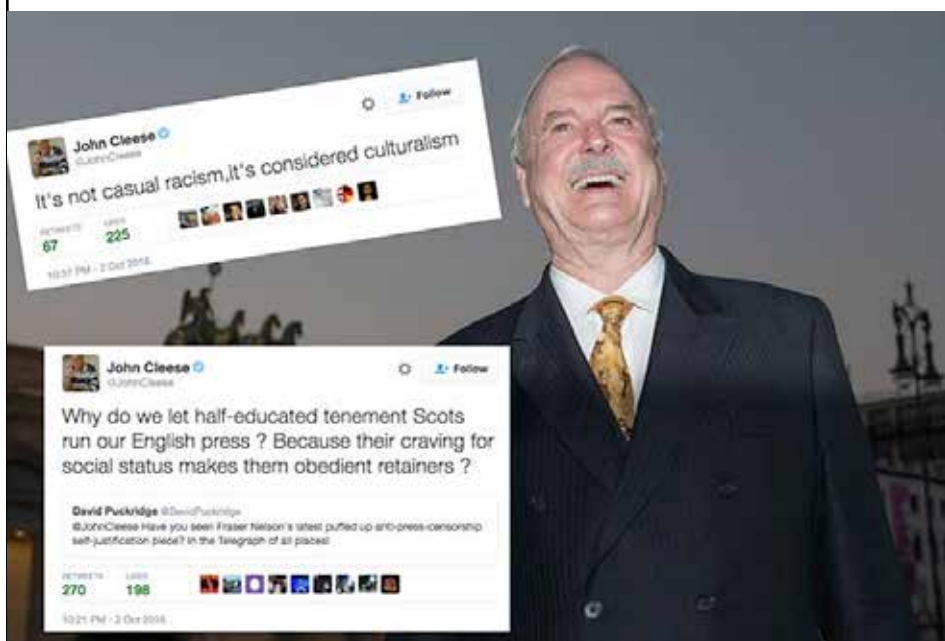

"Following today's verdict, there will be a significant number of civil claims made against Mazher Mahmood."

"We anticipate the total sums involved could easily reach £800million with some awards dwarfing those seen in the phone-hacking scandal."

"Old, unfunny and bitter": former Python Cleese blasted after online tirade against Scottish journalists

JOHN CLEESE found himself the target of anger and derision this week after the Monty Python star launched a bizarre online tirade about a Scottish journalist.

Everyone from Piers Morgan to Scottish comedian Brian Limond (known as Limmy) hit back after Cleese railed against "half-educated Tenement Scots" on Twitter.

The comedy actor made the remark as he criticised an column in The Telegraph written by Scottish journalist and editor of The Spectator, Fraser Nelson.

Cleese wrote: "Why do we let half-educated tenement Scots run our English press? Because their craving for social status makes them obedient retainers?"

When a social media user accused his words of being "upper class" and "classless", the 76-year-old quickly hit back: "Both? That's a remarkable achievement. Seriously, I'd rather have educated, cultured and intelligent people in charge. Sorry for the elitism."

When more followers accused his comments of being racist, he still refused to back down. Piers Morgan led the outrage against Cleese's outburst.

The former Mirror editor wrote: "As I thought, @JohnCleese is now just an old, unfunny, bitter, elitist, loathsome snob. Other than that, a great guy."

Glasgow comedian Limmy was inspired to go on his own social media tirade, writing: "It's comforting to see somebody as educated and intelligent as John Cleese say something so ignorant. I don't know why."

Furious Spaniards pan Jamie's paella

■ Twitter storm over Jamie's latest recipe, with one aficionado opining: 'Adding chorizo to a paella should be an offence!'

Spaniards were left choking on their paella this week when Jamie Oliver unveiled his take on the classic rice dish...and committed the cardinal sin of adding chorizo to the mix.

The celebrity chef, whose global empire includes multiple TV series, cook books and cookware, shared his paella recipe Tuesday evening on Twitter and saw his post quickly go viral - with many diners finding his offering less than palatable.

"Great Spanish food doesn't get much better than paella, the Naked Chef wrote to his 5.6 million followers. "My version combines chicken thighs and chorizo."

The rich dish, which hails from the Valencia region, traditionally includes meat, fish, shellfish and vegetables - but not chorizo, and the inclusion of the Spanish sausage saw Oliver bearing the brunt of much outrage.

Critics were quick to suggest the dish is no

Others suggested that since Oliver made some tweaks on a Spanish traditional dish, they would do the same with British recipes... and former Prime Ministers. Murray stalked by 'arm-stroking maid'

Tennis star Andy Murray has described the moment he woke up in a hotel room to find a maid stroking his arm.

Murray said he was staying in a hotel during a tournament and had a "do not disturb" sign hanging on the door.

"She came in and sat on my bed and started stroking my arm at about seven in the morning when I was still sleeping," he told the International Premier League Tennis (IPTL) website this week.

The woman later turned up at other tournaments he was playing at.

'sarcastic'

The Wimbledon, US Open and Olympic winner had been asked by interviewer Anusha Dandekar what the "craziest thing" a fan had said or done to him.

He told Ms Dandekar: "[The maid] then turned up at a couple more tournaments in the hotels I was staying at - in Rotterdam and Barcelona.

"I don't know if that's a fan thing? That's a bit extreme, but that happened."

Murray also told the IPTL that his dream doubles partner from any era would be Serena Williams or Steffi Graf and the tennis star's one-word description of himself was "sarcastic".

When the Scot was asked whether he had the "dry English humour", he answered: "Er, I would say so."

After almost 80 years serving local Brits, the Continental Shop is set to finally close its doors

ANOTHER great British institution in Los Angeles is set to close its doors.

The Continental Shop, which has been serving the cravings of expat Brits for tea, candy, British newspapers, videos and discount travel at several locations across the city for almost eighty years, will close its location at 16th and Wilshire after being unable to strike a new deal with its landlord.

The gentrification of Santa Monica has raised rents for everyone, and according to the shop's owner, Michael Clewer, he was unable to find another suitable location in the area.

The original Continental Shop was founded in 1938 by Mr. and Mrs. Ferenc in the mid-Wilshire area. He was Hungarian and his wife, British. They operated the store at 3439 Wilshire Boulevard and continued to run it until his death.

Michael's father Brian Clewer purchased the business in 1967 and in 1969 moved it across the street to the Ambassador Hotel, just below the famous Coconut Grove nightclub. Brian Clewer not only served the needs of local Brits, but he also hosted the long-running radio show 'Cynic's Choice' featuring classic British comedies from the Forties, Fifties and Sixties, considered by many to be radio's golden age. The show ran for forty years before Brian's death in 2008.

The Ambassador closed in 1989 and was later demolished, but the shop moved into Santa Monica, locating at 407 Santa Monica Boulevard for two years before moving in 1991 to its present location further east on Wilshire.

Meet a Member: Douglas Dewar

Meet Douglas Dewar, who left England in 1973 for sunny Bermuda, then moved on to California 16 years later.

Was there a particular reason you choose LA?

I am most probably one of the few members in Brits in LA that has never acted (apart from the fool) or been involved in film. I did try doing voiceovers, or should I say auditions, but that's not what brought me to California. In July 1973, I replied to an advert in the Daily Mail for the position of printer in Bermuda, and for some unknown reason they hired me. The best description of this time uttered by a good friend after a few drinks was, "We're on a cruise ship 700 miles from land, and we don't know when the party will end."

1985 was the turning point in my life when I met the woman of my dreams at the Robin Hood Pub in Bermuda. We stayed in Bermuda for another five years, at which point we knew that staying on the island would not be beneficial in the long run, so we headed to California sight unseen, nowhere to stay and no job. We ended up in Oxnard, California, where we found an apartment with a water view. I found a job in my trade (printing) and my wife had no trouble in securing a position at the Ventura County Naval Base at Point Mugu.

What was your first impression of LA?

In 1989 when we arrived there were no clubs or organizations that are like Brits in LA, and you just had word of mouth as to where you would shop, or meet other Brits. I believe it was around 2010 before I even heard of Brits in LA, that could be because we were living about 60 miles north in Oxnard. One Tuesday I decided to give it a bash and drive down to see what it was all about. I arrived at Cecconi's around 9am and was immediately given the friendliest reception by the only two members that were present who had gotten out of bed early. They are friends that I don't see very often but will always remain friends, Marc Connelly and Bernard, who are great ambassadors for the club. That day I also met the two people that are responsible for organizing everything, Craig and Eileen. How they do it is beyond comprehension, and they are certainly appreciated by everyone that has already moved here or intends to move here.

What do I miss about England?

Well!...the pubs of course, where else in the world can you go and see such outlandish characters with such camaraderie? One of the most important things is the food. I take exception to anyone that still says British food is bland, we have the most diverse cuisine in the world... but even before that, we have pork pies, Scotch eggs, and sausage rolls. Some of this is hard to find in the US, that's why I started making my own. The pork pies and scotch eggs were a bit of a disaster in the beginning, but I have now worked out all the problems. There are places where you can buy English food, such as The Kings Head in Santa Monica, the Hare and Hounds in Thousand Oaks and Rosy Lee's in Ventura.

What do I find the most difference about living here?

As Sir Winston Churchill stated, we are two countries divided by a common language. I left England 43 years ago, and people here in the US know that either I'm from Australia, New Zealand, South Africa or England, but when I return to England some of my friends say that I've lost some of my accent, and when I ask for my eggs over easy, I get some very strange looks.

My wife and I moved from Southern California to Arizona three months ago when I retired. The reason for this was that it's a lot cheaper to live here, we miss the ocean and our friends, but it's only like living in an oven for about three months of the year, and we have new things to see, such as The Grand Canyon, Sedona, and much more.

Do you have a hidden gem you want to share with us?

I wouldn't attempt to name any, apart from the usual British pubs that people already know about, and if not they will soon. But if you want to travel further north where it's a bit cooler, take Pacific Coast Highway. It's a scenic drive past a lot of well known locations, Sunset Blvd, Topanga Canyon Blvd, and Malibu state park where some of the MASH scenes were filmed. There are also a lot of good restaurants, such as Geoffrey's, the Reel Inn fish shack, and Paradise Cove where the Rockford files were filmed (If you can remember that far back) and if you are a biker, Neptune's Net is the place to go.

Further North is Oxnard where we lived, where I recommend the Hampton Inn on Peninsula road, which is just round the corner from Mrs. Olsen's Café. Try the bangers with bubble and squeak but get there early or you'll have to wait, especially on a weekend, on the other hand if you wish to stay for dinner, and not just a dinner, more of a dining experience, then call my friend James Chan at the Brasserie Communautaire for haute cuisine at its best.

Or go up to Ojai where it's so laid back you'll fall asleep, and if you're still awake go to Suzanne's for dinner. The drive will take you to Ventura, which has a big harbor worth a visit, and lots of shops on Main Street. The other places worth a visit are Carpenteria, Summerland, Montecito and Santa Barbara.

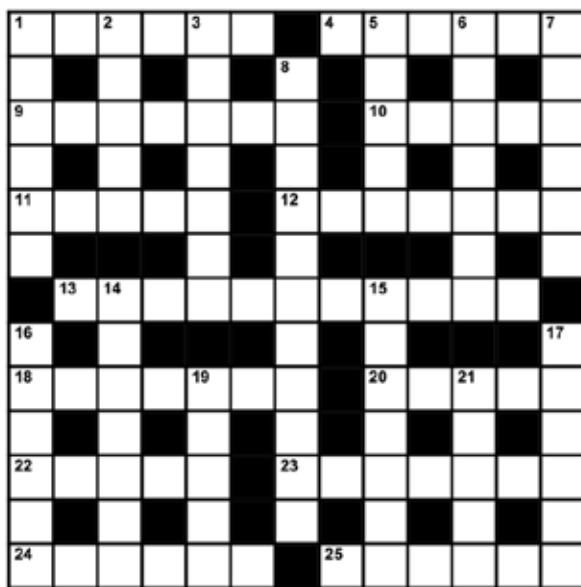

What advice would I give to anyone that wants to relocate to LA?

The first thing is make sure that you will be eligible to reside in the US with the skills that you have. The second thing is to take a vacation (holiday) to see if you like it. Even if you don't like it first of all I guarantee that you'll make a lot of lasting friendships through Brits in LA.

The Queen's Accomplice: dark deeds in the blackout

Exclusive interview with author Susan Elia MacNeal on her WWII spy novel, number six in the Maggie Hope
mystery series
Rating: ★★★

Susan Elia MacNeal was inspired to write her novels by a visit to the Cabinet War Rooms in London.

"They're much bigger and more popular now," says MacNeal. "This was back in 1999 when they were not as well-known. It was a random Tuesday, during a snowstorm. I was basically there by myself. And there I was, walking the same floors that Churchill and his staff walked during the height of the Blitz, and for a second...I felt like I time traveled for a moment.

I swear I could hear the telephones ringing, smell the smoke from the cigars and cigarettes, feel the desperation of wondering whether London was still standing. And I knew I wanted to write about it."

MacNeal's latest book is set in 1942, as code breaker and spy Maggie Hope returns to London. She has advanced from being a typist in Mr. Churchill's secretarial pool to become an SOE, a Special Operations Executive. The Nazis have temporarily paused the bombing of London. As Londoners continue to black out their windows at night, the darkness is covering a murderer stalking young women to recreate the crimes of Jack the Ripper. Somehow, the killer is targeting the women who are spies for Winston Churchill. MI-5 calls on Maggie to find the killer.

The Queen's Accomplice is the sixth book in the Maggie Hope series. The city of London is a key character in the book whose historical figures include Winston Churchill and Queen Elizabeth, (not the current queen Elizabeth II, but rather her mother). The Maggie Hope series has made the

New York Times and USA Today Bestseller lists. Mr. Churchill's Secretary won the Barry Award and was shortlisted for the Edgar Award, Agatha, Dilys, Macavity, ITW Thriller, and Lefty Awards.

The Maggie Hope series might never have been except for a trip with her husband for the Muppets. Her husband, Noel MacNeal, is a voice actor and writer whose work includes NBC's The Wiz Live, HBO's Last Week Tonight with John Oliver, and who recently finished a new Netflix children's show for Julie Andrews called Julie's Greenroom.

"My husband is a puppeteer who often works for the Jim Henson Muppets," says MacNeal. "At one point, he was doing a show called Bear in the Big Blue House for Disney Channel. It was quite popular in the UK. When he went to London to promote the show, I went with him. On our first night there, one of our lovely British friends showed up with a copy of Time Out London and as I was paging through, we both spotted an ad for the museum at the Cabinet War Rooms, the bomb-protected underground bunker where Prime Minister Winston Churchill and his colleagues ran World War II."

MacNeal is currently writing her next novel in the Maggie Hope series, The Paris Spy. She's part of a group of blogging female mystery writers called the Jungle Red Writers, with Rhys Bowen, Deborah Crombie, Hank Philippi Ryan,

Hollywood's Dark Side revealed in new book by British author

The summer heat is barely fading away and our thoughts are turning to Hallowe'en, and as always, Hollywood's dark side has plenty of British influences which you may be unaware of.

And interesting new book is hitting the shelves just in time for Hallowe'en, called Gourmet Ghosts Two by British author James T. Bartlett. It offers a fun murder, mystery and history guide to the weird and haunted past of Los Angeles, offering up more bars, restaurants and hotels across town where you can sit down with the devil – if you dare.

"People from all over the UK played a big role in the history of L.A.," says Bartlett, "and many of them disappeared into the dark side, fell from grace, or even still haunt the city today."

Perhaps the most influential was William Muholland. Born in Belfast in 1855, he ran away to join the Merchant Navy and end up in L.A. He rose through the ranks of the city's water company and pioneered the massive 233-mile LA Aqueduct from the Owens Valley. The controversial project was most famously the subject of Roman Polanski's classic film, Chinatown.

Mulholland Drive was named in his honor in 1924, but his career was ruined when his St Francis Dam burst, killing over 500 people, just a day after he had inspected it in 1928. It ruined his career, reputation, and his health, and he died a broken man.

Then there is Griffith J. Griffith, born in Bettws, Glamorganshire in Wales in 1850, who emigrated to the US when he was barely 16. Soon a rich man, he moved to L.A. and bought 4000 acres of Rancho Los Feliz, donating nearly all of it to the city as a "Christmas Present" in 1896 – and giving the park his name.

But in 1903 he shot and disfigured his wife and was sent to San Quentin prison for two years, his name further ruined by rumors of secret alcoholism and mental illness. Desperate to get back into society, he donated more land and funded the Greek Theatre and Griffith Observatory – but his offer was rejected, and they were built only after his death.

Another Welsh native – this time actress Peg Entwistle – took her suicidal dive from what became arguably the most famous icon in the world. In September 1920 the 24 year-old climbed to the top of the H on the then-Hollywoodland sign, looked over the glittering lights that she felt had failed her, and jumped.

People have reported seeing Peg's ghost there, and even smelling gardenias – her favorite perfume scent. Another young girl was killed there in the 1980s, when she fell off a cliff while taking a photo up the rugged hillside.

William Mulholland - proud son of Ulster

Oddly, the Hollywood sign itself has a British connection. Londoner Thomas Fisk Goff was the all-but forgotten designer; owner of the Crescent Sign Company in 1920, he must have felt his job to design a 400 foot wide, flashing bulb real estate sign to go across the hills and catch the eye was nothing special. By the time he died in the 1980s, it meant something very different.

Finally, how about Charlie Chaplin? Another Londoner, he's still famous around the world as the "Little Tramp" – a comic genius who was one of the early movie superstars. He had plenty of scandal in his life too, and it's no surprise that his ghost is said to make appearances all over town – in his favorite booth (number 1) at Musso & Frank on Hollywood Blvd for example, and also at the Stowell Hotel (now the El Dorado lofts and Le Petit Paris restaurant) in downtown.

Charlie really did lay his head at "The Stoll," and staff there blame him for flying glasses and crockery; visit and take a walk up the grand staircase. You'll be following in his footsteps...

Gourmet Ghosts 2, a murder, mystery, history, ghost and weirdness guide to bars, hotels and restaurants in Los Angeles is available on Amazon and in stores across town. The book launch is at the Last Bookstore in downtown L.A. on October 28 at 7pm – for more information go to www.gourmetghosts.com or get your Daily Death and more on Instagram, Facebook and Twitter @gourmetghosts #gourmetghosts Bros Brothers Reunite for 30th Anniversary Concert!

[Time to get your Grolsch lager bottle tops and Dr Martens Shoes out folks, as 80's duo Bros have announced they are reuniting and hitting London's O2 Arena to celebrate their 30th anniversary.

Oo-er!

Twins Matt and Luke Goss, one of the biggest boy bands in the 1980s, revealed the big news at a press conference this week with Emma Willis.

Luke said of the reunion: "I've always wanted it to happen in my heart but I wanted it to be the right time. This is a dream come true.

"I think the fans deserve something that will stand up today. I'm like a big kid right now, I'm pinching myself. I'm very excited."

However, everyone was pretty certain the duo would be there in person when the news was publicized at a top secret event earlier this week.

Instead, a silhouette of two men – one wearing a hat – was issued before the press conference, and fans of the duo figured it out immediately. Bummer!

Still, no-one knew they'd be taking on the O2 next August.

The band said they have no plans to release new music ahead of the shows. "We're going to honour the songs, some of the key sounds," said Luke.

"But at this stage, I don't want to populate the show with new stuff. If it was to happen again [after that] then maybe so."

Bros started as a trio in 1986 with Craig Logan, who left the band three years later.

Logan quit the group at the height of their fame after suffering ME. He later became a successful music mogul, managing the likes of Sade and Tina Turner and playing a key role in the success of Robbie Williams.

The brothers said he was "welcome" to return. Matt said: "I'm very proud of Craig's success but we started the band in school and Bros is Matt and Luke, without question."

Kiss me, Hardy? Tom's back with a vengeance in Taboo!

The brooding, brutish Tom Hardy almost caused the internet to crash when he was pictured stripping naked to film scenes for his new TV show Taboo in February.

However, Tom Hardy is back with a vengeance with this week's release of a sneak peek at his upcoming FX show, which is set in the early 19th century and is produced with veteran British director Ridley Scott.

Taboo stars Hardy as James Keziah Delaney, a roguish character with potentially supernatural abilities, who returns to London from Africa after being presumed dead, to take over his late father's shipping company. The 38-year-old Mad Max: Fury Road actor is pictured wading shirtless through the foreboding waters of a swamp, showcasing his hulking physique and menacing character.

"I have sworn to do very foolish things," Hardy says menacingly in the clip. It's only twenty-seconds, but it does show off the extreme body art of the notoriously intense actor.

There's no premiere date yet, but it should drop in early 2017 on both the BBC and FX on this side of the pond. Until then, you can get your Hardy fix on Netflix with his portrayal of another brutal British gangster-type in Peaky Blinders.

Polly Hill, Controller of BBC Drama commissioning said in a statement: "The talent on-and off-screen is incredible. Tom Hardy and the rest of the cast are set to bring this original and spectacular story to life in a unique and epic way." Can't wait!

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF SUSAN D. UNGAR aka SUSAN UNGAR

Case No. 16STPB04636
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of SUSAN D. UNGAR aka SUSAN UNGAR

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Robert Craig Ungar in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Robert Craig Ungar be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held on Oct. 31, 2016 at 8:30 AM in Dept. No. 99 located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Attorney for petitioner:

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Susan K. Holzman in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Susan K. Holzman be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on Nov. 29, 2016 at 8:30 AM in Dept. No. 11 located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

they retain their place at Group D's summit thanks to their superior goal difference.

This meeting between

Group D's top two seeds was always likely to be a significant fixture, and the game was given added spice by the two managers' pre-match comments.

Austria had won their past 10 qualifiers and were unbeaten in competitive matches at home since 2012.

A draw was the least Austria's attacking efforts warranted and, for Wales, a point away from home against one of their primary rivals for Group D's top spot was reward for a valiant performance.

WHERE IRISH GUYS ARE SMILING: Seamus Coleman takes the plaudits

Seamus tracks down the winner for Ireland

Seamus Coleman's first international goal gave the Republic of Ireland a narrow victory over Georgia in their 2018 World Cup qualifier in Dublin on Thursday.

Coleman, 27, made a strong run down the right, cut into the box and slotted home after the ball ricocheted into his path thanks to two fortunate rebounds.

It was a victory which the Irish barely deserved from a match which produced little creativity and goalmouth action.

The Republic are one of four Group D teams with four points from two games.

Austria and Wales drew 2-2 in Vienna and Serbia won 3-0 in Moldova in Thursday's other two Group D encounters - suggesting this could be a very competitive group.

For Martin O'Neill's men, this match and Sunday's game with Moldova represent an important few days in their quest to reach the finals in Russia, with anything less than six points a blow to their qualification hopes.

With only the group winners guaranteed an automatic place in the finals, the chance to pick up maximum points against the supposed two weakest teams in the group is crucial to Ireland's ambitions of qualifying for a first World Cup finals since 2002.

The Republic had won all of their previous seven contests with the Georgians, six of them in competitive fixtures, including two one-goal victories in the qualifiers for Euro 2016.

But on Thursday, Georgia, who had lost 2-1 at home to Austria in their opening group game, posed the greater threat in a largely uninspiring first half.

Valeri Kazaishvili turned and fired a left-foot shot wide of the post in the 17th minute and then the visitors struck the woodwork twice in quick succession with eight minutes of the half remaining.

Levan Mchedlidze thundered a header off the crossbar and when the home side failed to clear, the ball fell to Guram Kashia, whose looping header back over Darren Randolph bounced off the post.

The game was the Republic's first since O'Neill signed a deal to continue as manager until the end of the present campaign - and their first competitive home game since reaching the last 16 of Euro 2016.

They started their qualifying campaign with a 2-2 draw in Belgrade last month but Daryl Murphy, the man whose late goal earned them a draw against Serbia, was among eight players ruled out through injury.

Goalkeeper Keiren Westwood, Harry Arter, Stephen Quinn, Kevin Doyle, Aiden McGeady, Anthony Pilkington and Marc Wilson were also absent.

Southgate is tough enough, says Stones

■ City defender backs interim England boss to get job done

JOHN STONES has backed Gareth Southgate to succeed as England boss, and insists the former international defender has the steel to take the job on a full time basis.

The Manchester City star told reporters he and other members of the squad were impressed with the time Southgate has taken to speak with them on an individual basis since they convened at St George's Park this week ahead of their forthcoming World Cup qualifying matches.

England face Malta on Saturday in the first of Southgate's four-game temporary stewardship since he stepped up from his role with the under-21s to replace Sam Allardyce. Yet there is already confidence within the squad, voiced by the Manchester City defender Stones, who featured under the 45-year-old in the junior set-up, that Southgate has the quality and, perhaps just as significantly, the self-confidence when it comes to difficult decisions to take on the position full-time.

Asked if Southgate, who earned 57 caps in an international career which stretched over eight years, is tough enough to assume the role, Stones said: "Being a defender I think it is born into him. Every manager knows when to have the ruthless streak in telling the players what they need. Sometimes it is not what those players want to hear and I have experienced that [with Southgate] in the under-21s.

"I have been in situations in games where we weren't playing well and doing what he wanted and he came in at half-time and told us precisely that. We went on to turn it round and that is a great quality to have.

"I can't see why he couldn't take on the role. He knows all the players, he has been in the set-up and he's been great for the under-21s. In the summer he got silverware [at the Toulon tournament]. It is a new challenge and chapter for him and I am sure he will be relishing coming here and working and trying to do his best in these four games. Whatever happens after that is down to the FA.

"But he brings great calmness to the group and he is always talking to every player individually, which is a good characteristic to have as a manager, to spend a bit of time and give advice to individuals. Every manager speaks to a team as a collective but I think the lads really appreciate when he speaks one on one and gives advice on good and bad things. We all know we have to improve."

Malta and Southgate will step up the side's tactical preparations at St George's Park on Thursday. He often employed a diamond formation with the under-21s and the make-up of his senior side may lend itself to a similar approach against a team ranked 176th in the world and the whipping boys elect of the section. That could mean Dele Alli employed at the tip, operating just ahead of Wayne Rooney and Jordan Henderson, and Eric Dier anchoring.

Marcus Rashford, who scored a hat-trick for Southgate's Under-21s against Norway last month, is likely to start up front in an attack-minded selection aiming to seize the early momentum in the group after a traumatic few months.

Wales twice squandered a winning position as Austria fought back to draw in a lively 2018 World Cup qualifier on Thursday.

Joe Allen's half-volley put Wales ahead in Vienna but slack marking allowed Marko Arnautovic to nod level.

Wales were fortunate to regain the lead through Kevin Wimmer's own goal - a day after Austria manager Marcel Koller had called his opponents "lucky".

level again but Wales held on for a point to stay top of Group D.

Chris Coleman's side had to cope with spells of heavy Austrian pressure as well as a vociferous Viennese crowd inside a packed Ernst Happel Stadion.

The European Championship semifinalists also had to contend with an injury to Allen, which will make the midfielder a doubt for Sunday's match at home to Georgia.

The draw means Wales are level on points with Austria, Serbia and the Republic of Ireland - who beat Georgia 1-0 - but
