ROYALS AT WAR!

■ Princesses Bea and Eugenie must pay their own way, insists Charles
■ Queen caught in the middle as Andy demands upgrade for daughters

THE Queen is at the center of an extraordinary row within the Royal Family over whether the Duke of York's daughters should become full-time members of "The Firm".

Prince Andrew wants Princesses Beatrice and Eugenie to be given taxpayer-funded royal roles and new accommodation at Kensington Palace but the move has been blocked by Prince Charles.

The 90-year-old monarch has been caught in the middle of the royal rift and has been at such a loss over what to do about her warring sons that the Government has had to help smooth things over.

EUGENIE AND BEATRICE: neither of Andrew's daughters have found professional success

Sovereign Grant

The row escalated after Andrew, 56, wrote to his mother demanding that Beatrice and Eugenie carry out full-time royal duties supported by the Sovereign Grant – the public purse which funds the Royals' work.

The letter, originally drafted by the Duke's private secretary and "gatekeeper" Amanda Thirsk, complained that the princesses were in danger of being overshadowed by the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge and Prince Harry when Charles becomes king.

Andrew demanded that his daughters, who are seventh and eighth in line to the throne, be given better accommodation at Kensington Palace instead of having to put up with "small" apartments at St James's Palace.

A source said: "Amanda originally drafted the letter and couched it in very reasonable terms, but the Duke did not think it made his case strongly enough so tore it up and put pen to paper himself."

"He believes his daughters are already being overshadowed by William, Kate and Harry and the situation will get worse as Prince George and Princess Charlotte get older."

"He has long argued that as the only 'blood princesses' in the family, Beatrice and Eugenie deserve proper royal roles like their cousins, along with the same standard of accommodation at Kensington Palace. "He fears that they will be totally sidelined when the Queen dies."

'streamlined' monarchy

Her Majesty was apparently so stunned by the letter that she felt unable to reply and handed it to her private secretary Christopher Geidt to handle.

He raised the matter directly with Charles, who suggested someone in Government should break it to his younger brother that while he will continue to play a formal role in the Royal Family in the future, his daughters

BROTHERS IN ARMS: Prince Andrew disagrees on the proper roles for Eugenie and Beatrice, arguing that they both deserve to play a full royal role will not.

The heir to the throne, 67, wants a more "streamlined" monarchy with only William, Kate and Harry taking centre stage at major royal events.

A source said: "The Prince of Wales is already conscious that he divides opinion more than his mother."

"The last thing he wants is additional criticism by keeping peripheral royals on the public payroll."

His austerity-driven approach is understood to have already caused friction with the Earl and Countess of Wessex, who both gave up careers to become full-time working royals.

In order to preserve their status in the royal pecking order, behind palace gates the Queen has decreed that Prince Edward will inherit his father's title as the Duke of Edinburgh when the time comes. Princess Anne is less put out because her children Peter Phillips and Zara Tindall do not have royal titles and have pursued their own careers.

Andrew, Anne and Edward have grown used to taking a backseat at major royal occasions, like the Diamond Jubilee, when only the so-called "magnificent seven" appeared on the Buckingham Palace balcony – The Queen, Prince Philip, Charles, Camilla, William, Harry and Kate.

Beatrice, 28, and Eugenie, 26, are both university educated and reportedly very popular within the royal fold. But other than accompanying their father on the occasional royal engagement, they have not been encouraged to take on royal duties but to carve out careers for themselves instead.

"Despite starting four different jobs in the past five years, Beatrice announced in July that she was stepping down from full-time employment to "pursue her entrepreneurial ambitions".

In between "exploring her career options" the sun-worshipping royal has enjoyed a string cont. on page 2, col. 1 of luxury holidays. Between December 2014 and December 2015 the princess racked up 18 foreign jaunts, including a trip on Roman Abramovich's £1.5 billion super-yacht in Ibiza.

She broke up with Dave Clark, her boyfriend of 10 years, over the summer. Meanwhile Eugenie is keen to settle down with her boyfriend of six years Jack Brooksbank and as a concession to Andrew's demands, the couple have been given a cottage at Kensington Palace which is currently undergoing renovation.

They plan to announce their engagement in the coming months and a royal insider said Eugenie was keen to settle down and start a family.

"I'm not sure carving out a career is her top priority," added the source. The sisters have been trying to raise their profile, meeting Prime Minister Theresa May earlier this month to discuss modern slavery.

Last week Eugenie recorded a video for the Salvation Army to highlight the plight of trafficking victims and the week before she and Beatrice joined the Prime Minister at a Westminster Abbey service for William Wilberforce, who led the movement to abolish the slave trade.

In 2010 the princesses were stripped of their 24-hour police protection because of the £500,000 annual cost. The move came months after Andrew was forced to step down as the UK's special trade envoy amid criticism of his links to shady Middle Eastern leaders and the convicted paedophile Jeffrey Epstein.

The Duke fought ferociously for the protection officers to stay, arguing that his daughters should be treated differently from other minor royals because they enjoy HRH status.

But his argument failed because their cousin Zara has no bodyguards, even though she has a higher public profile as an Olympic silver medallist.

Meanwhile, Charles has reportedly been "exasperated" by some of the lurid headlines surrounding Andrew and ex-wife Sarah Ferguson.

In 2010, the bankrupted Duchess of York was filmed by an undercover reporter offering access to the Duke for £500,000.

A year later she was forced to apologise for a "gigantic error of judgment" after it emerged she had accepted £15,000 to pay off her debts by registered sex offender Epstein, who was convicted of soliciting an underage girl for prostitution.

There is no love lost between Fergie and Prince Philip either, who once described his former daughter-in-law as "odd and pointless".

The fight's just starting as a third runway is approved for Heathrow

THE GOVERNMENT has approved a highly contentious third runway at Heathrow to expand UK airport capacity following a cabinet committee meeting on Tuesday.

Transport Secretary Chris Grayling said the "truly momentous" decision would support trade and create jobs.

But Gatwick airport said it was disappointed with the decision, which was "not the right answer for Britain".

The issue has split the Cabinet, with Foreign Secretary Boris Johnson saying a third runway was "undeliverable".

Local politicians and residents on the flightpath have been fighting a vigorous campaign in parliament and the media against the decision, which has been pending for several years.

The Department for Transport said a new runway at Heathrow would bring economic benefits to passengers and the wider economy worth up to £61bn and create as many as 77,000 additional local jobs over the next 14 years.

Heathrow said the expansion would allow it to offer more direct flights to UK destinations as well as up to 40 new cities abroad such as Wuhan, Osaka and Quito.

A public consultation will now be held on the effects of airport

MORE TO COME: the new runway will not open until 2025 at the earliest expansion before the government makes a final decision as part of a national policy statement on aviation.

MPs will then vote on that decision in the winter of 2017-18. It is unlikely that any new runway capacity would be operational before 2025.

London Mayor Sadiq Khan said expanding the west London airport was the wrong decision for both London and the UK.

"There are more people affected by noise because of Heathrow than people affected by the airports in Paris, Amsterdam, Frankfurt, Munich and Madrid combined," he said. "The air in London is a killer. It makes you sick and it's unlawful."

However, a wide range of unions and business groups welcomed the decision to expand Heathrow. TUC general secretary Frances O'Grady said it was "absolutely vital for Britain", while CBI chief Paul Drechsler said it would create jobs and boost economic growth.

Zac Goldsmith: called the decision 'catastrophic'

Heathrow management said the airport was ready to deliver a third runway that was "fair, affordable and secures the benefits of expansion for the whole of the UK".

Expanding airport capacity in the South East of England has been a political hot potato for many years, which is why successive governments have attempted to duck the issue.

Although Heathrow has always been the favourite among businesses, it has attracted the most opposition from MPs with constituencies near the airport or under flight paths.

Zac Goldsmith, the Tory MP for Richmond Park, has resigned in protest against the decision, which he called "catastrophic".

Hugh Laurie thanks 'good fortune' as Walk of Fame star is unveiled

British actor Hugh Laurie said he had "lived a life of extraordinary good fortune" as his star was unveiled on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

Laurie made his name in the US for his award-winning lead role in the medical drama House between 2004 and 2012. The show was a global success, resulting in Laurie becoming TV's highest paid performer, earning over £500,000 per episode.

But Laurie has been famous in Britain for over 30 years. Born in 1959 he attended Eton and Cambridge, which he represented as rower, before joining the famed Footlights, the university dramatic club which has produced countless well known actors and comedians. It was there he first met his future writing partner Stephen Fry, to whom he was introduced by another rising young talent, actress Emma Thompson.

After winning acclaim as part of a Footlights revue at the Edinburgh Festival, Laurie quickly moved into television and began writing sketches and acting in other comic projects, including BlackAdder, a Bit of Fry and Laurie and Jeeves and Wooster.

More recently he starred opposite Tom Hiddleston in the critically-lauded

BBC drama The Night Manager. Laurie can currently be seen in the Amazon psychological thriller Chance, playing a conflicted San Francisco-based forensic neuropsychiatrist.

His star is number 2,593 on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

'Incredibly lucky'

Laurie gathered with friends and well wishers at the Pig 'n Whistle British pub on Hollywood Boulevard following the ceremony to tell reporters: "This is not a fair world. I'm 57 now and I've lived a life of extraordinary good fortune from start to finish, so much so

THANKING HIS LUCKY STARS: Hugh Laurie clowns around for the cameras with his star, and (below) with longtime collaborator Stephen Fry

I'm anticipating a piano falling on my head to redress the balance.

"I've been incredibly lucky. I'm going to bask in this extraordinary honour and my extraordinary good luck and I'll set to work first thing tomorrow on the global unfairness problem."

Long-time collaborator Fry was also on hand as guest speaker, and paid tribute to his former comedy partner, saying: "While he may not be the first wise and kind star to be set in a paving slab in old Hollywood, I venture to suggest no star was ever wiser or kinder.

"I can say like Doctor Watson of his friend Holmes, the kindest and wisest friend I ever knew."

Dead or Alive singer Pete Burns dead at 57

By Sean Borg

1980s pop icon and Dead or Alive singer Pete Burns died earlier this week after suffering a cardiac arrest, his management has said.

A statement on Twitter said it was with "greatest sadness" that it had to break the "tragic news" that Burns died suddenly on Sunday.

The management statement said: "All of his family and friends are devastated by the loss of our special star."

It continued: "He was a true visionary, a beautiful talented soul, and he will be missed by all who loved and appreciated everything he was and all of the wonderful memories he has left us with."

Born in Cheshire, England, to a turbulent home life, Burns, 57, turned to pop music at a young age, starting his first band while working at a Liverpool record store before founding

In recent years the British star returned to the spotlight as a contestant on Celebrity Big Brother in 2006. He married partner Michael Simpson after divorcing his wife, Lynn Corlett the same year. Burns released his last single, Never Marry an Icon in 2010.

Known for his ever-changing looks, Burns made his final TV appearance in the UK just weeks before his death, appearing on Channel 5's Celebrity Botched Up

Bodies, opening up about his obsession with plastic surgery, and admitting he's had over 300 operations over the years to fix botched procedures – but is still in love with his appearance even though he nearly died following one operation to fix a surgery gone wrong.

Politician George Galloway, who was on CBB with Burns, tweeted: "Sad to hear of the demise of Pete Burns. He was a cross between Oscar Wilde and Dorothy Parker. You don't get more brilliant than that. RIP".

'Dad's Army' creator Jimmy Perry dead at 93

JIMMY PERRY, the hugely influential creator of two of British TV's most popular comedy shoes, has died at 93.

Perry, who enjoyed a 25-year professional partnership with David Croft, was best known as the creator of Dad's Army, but also produced It Ain't Half Hot Mum, Hi-de-Hi and You Rang M'Lord?

Much of his writing was based on his own varied work experiences which included a spell as a Butlin's Redcoat.

He also had an encyclopaedic knowledge of music hall, something he used to good effect when he presented the BBC series Turns, which chronicled variety performances from the 1930s and 40s.

Jimmy Perry was born on 20 September 1923 in Barnes, south-west London. His fascination for the world of showbusiness came at an early age and, while still at school, he had his sights set on becoming a stand up-comedian.

When war broke out in 1939 he was too young for the army so he signed up in his local Home Guard.

It was an experience on which he would later draw when he conceived Dad's Army, basing

COMEDY GOLD: Perry's creation Dad's Army ran for nine years and 80 episodes on the BBC many of the characters on soldiers he met in the ranks.

He was called up in 1941 and sent to Burma where he became part of a Royal Artillery Concert Party, set up to entertain the troops.

After the war he began training as an actor at Rada, subsidising his studies with spells as a Redcoat at Butlin's holiday camps.

For many years Perry ran the Palace Theatre at Watford as part of a small repertory company that produced a different show each week.

Reservations

Among the aspiring performers who appeared there was Ruth Llewellyn who would later become Ruth Madoc, the indomitable Gladys Pugh in Hi-de-Hi.

In the early 1960s he was playing a series of bit parts in TV comedy and began working on an idea for a sitcom about the Home Guard which he entitled The Fighting Tigers.

Perry showed his idea to TV producer David Croft, who took it to the BBC's head of comedy, Michael Mills.

The BBC had some initial reservations that the programme might be seen to be poking fun at the Home Guard, but Mills was persuaded to commission the first series.

Mills changed the title to Dad's Army, renamed some of the characters and altered the fictional location to Walmington-on-Sea.

Perry himself had envisaged playing the spiv, Private Walker, but

JIMMY PERRY: drew on his experiences in the Home Guard and in Burma

David Croft, who was drafted in to help Perry with the scripts, advised against it.

Many of Perry's characters in Dad's Army were taken from real life. One elderly soldier of his acquaintance recalled serving under Kitchener and became the inspiration for Corporal Jones.

Dad's Army first aired on 31 July 1968, with a total of 80 episodes appearing over the following nine years.

Dad's Army was still appearing regularly when Perry and Croft decided to draw on their wartime experiences in the Far East for It Ain't Half Hot Mum.

The show centred on a British army concert party whose duty was to entertain the front-line troops. A similar scenario appeared in the 1977 film, Privates on Parade.

The first episode was transmitted on 3 January 1974 and the series ran for more than seven years.

In 1979 Perry again went out on his own to write the ITV sitcom, Room Service. Together with a later effort without Croft, High Street Blues, it became a contender for the worst British sitcom ever.

The following year saw Perry and Croft back together again for Hi-de-Hi, based on Perry's experiences at Butlin's.

Set in a 1950s holiday camp, the series ran for eight years and collected a Bafta in 1984 for Best Comedy Series. Perry wrote the theme tune, Holiday Rock.

Brits do it better: 23 reasons why a California mum thinks the Brits are superior to their US counterparts

An American woman caused an internet sensation this week with her highly amusing list of reasons why the Brits do it better.

Ivy Lee, as she is known on Quora, based in Sunnyvale, California, published the list in response to a question on the forum: 'What do the British do better than the Americans?'

She reeled off 23 examples in total, praising the UK on everything from its food and music to its £10 note and its plug sockets.

At the top of her carefully composed list was the British language in its purest, un-Americanized form.

'They call hamburger "beef burger" because it's clearly made of beef,' she points out. 'They call soccer "football" because it's clearly played with the foot.'

'politeness and profanity'

She also praised the full English breakfast, but also remarked: 'They have portion control, resulting in higher life expectancy while we have supersized everything (because why not?), resulting in obesity (this is why not).'

Other items on the list include the UK's free healthcare and 28-day paid holiday allowance, compared to America's pitiful ten days.

Even the British weather was flipped into a positive.

'They know how to appreciate the sun because though the sun never sets in the British empire, it rarely shines in the motherland,' she wittily remarked.

They have Charles Darwin on their £10 note while we are 42 percent creationist

'They beat us at

LUCKY US: we get the full English, they get the obesity politeness and profanity at the same time,' she stated.

And, 'the English accent. This is just an indisputable fact of nature'.

Essex girls: they're not going to take it anymore

It is a phrase synonymous with 1990s ladette culture, used to define brash party girls in one part of England.

And that is why two Essex women have launched a campaign via the website change.org to remove the 'rude and stereotypical' term "Essex girl" from the Oxford English Dictionary.

Juliet Thomas and Natasha Sawkins want their proud peers to post their success under #IAMAnEssexGirl and sign their petition to have the term scrubbed.

But, a dictionary spokeswoman said, "nothing is ever taken out of the OED".

Speaking to the BBC, she said: "It's a historical dictionary. Definitions can change, but an entry will never come out."

The dictionary defines Essex girl as: "Essex girl n. [after Essex man n.] Brit. derogatory a contemptuous term applied (usu. joc.) to a type of young woman, supposedly to be found in and around Essex, and variously characterized as unintelligent, promiscuous, and materialistic."

The campaigners were further peeved by a Collins definition that added: "devoid of taste". Juliet Thomas told the

CALLING FOUL: Juliet Thomas and Natasha Sawkins have launched an online petition to remove the term "Essex Girl" from the Oxford English Dictionary

BBC: "It's so rude and it doesn't define anyone I know in or from Essex. It describes a very dated stereotype."

'Fight the stereotype'

The alternative meaning of just a girl in or from Essex was absent, she said. And it was "incredibly offensive" to see it in the dictionary with no reference to caricature.

Among those who have backed the campaign, novelist Amanda Prowse tweeted her support and theatre technician Emily Holden tweeted: "I have a BA (hons) degree... I help put on awesome work."

Ms Thomas said women, particularly young women, were still having to fight the Essex girl stereotype years after the term was coined.

"Girls feel they still have to listen to the same tired old jokes, feel like they have to fight twice as hard to be taken seriously at university," she said.

"It's tricky and disappointing to see it in writing in an official way. It reinforces it."

Towie backing

Ms Thomas said programmes such as scripted-reality soap opera The Only Way Is Essex existed for other parts of the UK as well and shouldn't be allowed to define the women of an entire county.

Speaking on the BBC's Victoria Derbyshire show, former Towie star Grace Andrews said she backed the campaign "100 million per cent".

Readers wishing to familiarize themselves more with the Essex girl stereotype are encouraged to watch The Only Way Is Essex, which is available on these shores via Hulu.

SPLITSVILLE: Kate and her hubby calling it quits

ONE OF Hollywood's worst-kept secrets was confirmed this week when Len Wiseman, husband of English actress Kate Beckinsale (pictured, above), filed for divorce citing irreconcilable differences.

Court documents state that he and Beckinsale have both waived any right to spousal support, and according to TMZ, which first reported the news, this decision suggests there is a prenup.

Kate, daughter of Rising Damp star Richard Beckinsale, who died when she was just five, met Wiseman in 2003 while working on the first Underworld film together, which Wiseman directed, and they later tied the knot in 2004. The two do not have any children together.

Beckinsale has a 16-year-old daughter, Lily, with former partner Michael Sheen.

Last November, a source close to the couple told a leading gossip magazine that Beckinsale and Wiseman had been separated for several months.

"They are still friendly and spend time together in L.A. when Kate is there," said the source, adding that "there has been no drama."

At the time, Wiseman was spotted heading into the Hollywood hot spot The Nice Guy with CJ Franco, then 24, and the director was noticeably not wearing his wedding ring.

Meanwhile, Beckinsale previously revealed she is proud of her "intelligent and feisty" daughter but finds parenting a teenager is much trickier than looking after a younger child.

She shared: "Lily is a great, bright, intelligent, feisty girl. Although I do think it's harder being the parent of a teenager than a baby. I wouldn't have said that at the time because you think that every stage you're in is the hardest one."

"But I do think little kids have little problems and bigger kids have bigger problems, so you spend much of your time in terror when they do things like driving - that's scary. I'm quite jealous of friends whose kids aren't doing that yet."

Underneath: combining the earthy and the ethereal

This weekend is the last chance to catch Underneath at the Odyssey Theatre on Sepulveda Boulevard in West Los Angeles. It's well worth the trip, writes Catherine Siggins

One would hardly expect the County of Cork in Ireland to have anything in common with ancient Egypt, however in Pat Kinevane's new one-man show, Underneath, we find ourselves neck deep in the shadows of the Book of the Dead.

Set in Mr. Kinevane's County Cork hometown of Cobh, the play is an eclectic mix of rural Ireland and ancient Egyptian afterlife imagery, based around the Egyptian belief that the burial tomb was a magical place that allowed the dead to move between the world of the living and the dead, and where your life on earth would be judged. Kinevane has made his audience the gods standing in judgment, as he comes before us to explain the life of his character from cruel childhood to an adulthood of shame, solitude, self-awareness, and death.

Irish storytelling

An onyx woman rises out of the darkness. The blackness of her skin is the result of its decomposition, as the woman who stands before us is speaking to us from her tomb. We never learn the protagonist's name, though we get to know Her intimately through the play. It was a life shaped by a childhood accident that badly disfigures Her, and causes her to be shunned within her community. Alone, isolated, hated and reviled, she tells about the people she encounters in her life, who they were perceived to be by her and society at large, and who they revealed themselves to be, the truth beneath the judgments. To the world their outward lives are very different from the reality of their personal existence.

I don't want to go into particulars, as much of the joy of this play is that you will become part of the story thanks to Mr. Kinevane's outstanding performance and performance style. This is a hugely entertaining and moving evening of Irish storytelling. The audience gets drawn into his character's life, and her sense of sad loneliness, and the cruel twist of fate that brings her growing happiness to a sudden and terrifying end. Moments of joy and love, felt from an uncle and acquaintances stand in high relief against the otherwise lonely existence.

savage and cruel

However if you are expecting a heavy night of tragedy, you are in for more surprises. Kinevane's superb writing and performance is full of fun and great jokes as he puts a spotlight on the societies obsession with surface appearance, lampooning its shallowness without restraint. He even does a great turn parodying the television series "A Place in The Sun", a couple looking for their "perfect property" with unrealistic expectations that border on the ridiculous.

NOT SO DARK: Pat Kinevane's superb writing and performance spells an evening at the theatre full of fun and great jokes

There is definitely something unsettling about the play, outside of the fact that you are being talked to by a corpse. The mix of surreal setting, the savage presence of nature, that also courses through the veins of the people who populate the town where the stories are set, savage and cruel to any weakness perceived in the protagonist. It's a surprising piece, shifting from stylized movement and the highly theatrical to light hearted and witty conversation, often involving references to contemporary news and celebrity.

Mr. Kinevane allows Her to break through the fourth wall and directly engages a number of the audience, learning their names and having a chat with them before revealing to them more of her story, as if to a close friend. His sharp humour and ability to ad lib make you feel at ease and laugh loudly, until the banter is shattered by the horror of his character's reality as it breaks through once more.

Indeed his character says she has no friends and has lived her life in hiding for the most part. Death is the loneliest of places, especially when no one will even find your resting place, so when you have the chance to have a chat, go for it.

This play asks a lot of the audience, as Mr. Kinevane doesn't hold back when retelling the harsher elements. Structured as a kind of shaggy dog story, it goes off on tangents, jumping into different realms, flights of fancy, spanning the past and foretelling the future. It is a narrative that takes the viewer into Her's imagination, where song and dance and ancient mythology are normal. All of this is achieved through Mr. Kinevane's remarkable physicality, some gold lame fabric in a black box set, and some very affecting sound design by Denis Clohessy, all under the editorial eye of director Jim Culleton, Mr. Kinevane's long time collaborator.

This play is something to be experience rather than observed. As the title suggests, this play gets underneath, and takes up residence in your subconscious and feelings, much as the foxes in the next tomb, like a hard-to-forget dream. Catch it before it's gone!

Meet a Member: Nicola Bailey

Meet Nicola Bailey from St Ives, Cornwall, who moved to LA almost 11 years ago to pursue performing arts, sunshine and boys with American accents!

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

After growing up as a kid who watched too much Saved By the Bell and Baywatch, I always wanted to live in the US for a period of time. Growing up by the beach in Cornwall and being a self-proclaimed beach bum, the California beaches and endless summers appealed to me.

As soon as I arrived in Los Angeles, I felt instantly at home and found people here to be incredibly helpful and supportive. I wanted to marry Zach Morris and live at the Baywatch beach!!

What do you miss most from home?

Family and friends, without a shadow of a doubt. My one wish is that LA wasn't quite so far away. In fact, I often forget just how far till it's time to go on that big plane across the pond, followed by another long trek down to St Ives. I also miss the British humour a great deal; the American version just isn't the same. I also missed playing netball when I first arrived here as I had played throughout school and college. Seeing as no one in America seemed to know about the sport, I was very surprised to learn that there was in fact netball. I play for the Santa Monica Spirits Netball Club, as well as organizing many of their social events, and have found lifelong friends through the club.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? If so why?

My very first impression of LA was that it was such a sunny and optimistic kind of lifestyle, and I loved it from the very beginning. A decade on, and I still love it as much as I did then, with the same crazy excitement I had when I first set foot here.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus St Ives?

Where do I start?! They're completely different planets, but I'm very lucky to be able to call both of them home. There's slightly more going on in LA, but I'm yet to find a half-decent

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

I think that the best hidden gems in LA are found in places you are not familiar with, so merely exploring new areas is always fun! Going for hikes (walks) up in the mountains and exploring the diversity of Los Angeles is great to do. My own little hidden gem was finding the Santa Monica Spirits Netball Club and its founder, Maxine Lewis. To have such an amazing group of women, many from England as well as Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, has really enabled me to explore LA sights with the best people, and provides such a sense of love and comfort when you're so far away from home.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here? Don't think too much. Go for it and have an adventure!!

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of ## wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

If you're in a classroom here and you make a mistake, don't shout out to everyone that you want a rubber. Words have different meanings here...

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment? I'm currently gearing up to play in the U.S. Open Netball Championships November 4-6, which are actually being held in LA for the first time this year!

You can follow me and my fellow teammates through the Santa Monica Spirits Netball Club socials. ARIES: In any direction you make a move - be it personal or business - make very sure you have all the facts. But don't let uncertainty delay you. Mars your boss is on a short leash and will not let you procrastinate forever.

TAURUS: Your priority should be taking care of YOU in any area that requires attention. Mercury in Scorpio is looking at everything with an eagle eye checking up on what you have done (or not done) these last few months.

GEMINI: You may be feeling you need to make a move in a direction that you have put off. Even if you are not sure what the reaction will be you will get, this is the time to do it, your ruler in Scorpio now is impatient.

CANCER: You will have to be aware this next week not to speak out of turn or harshly to anyone. The consequences are not something you will have to deal with right away, but eventually you will be paid back with interest.

LEO: There is a time for that inner voice we all have to show itself. Usually when we are not participating in life as we know we can. Be sure you are listening to that voice with your keen intuition, not your rational mind.

VIRGO: Just make sure you have caught up with whatever is unfinished and then make the plans you are ready to make. This month is not as good as next because of many obligations keeping you busy.

LIBRA: You are well in to making plans for the next part of the year and as this is usually the busiest part make space for unexpected invitations. The lovely planet Jupiter (also known as the astrological Santa) is visiting you now - enjoy the limelight.

SCORPIO: This month ahead will bring a lot of the things you have been working on to fruition.

This has been a difficult year for many of you, but now your new year is here so make the most of it and have a Happy Birthday

SAGITTARIUS: Put your holiday plans in motion as life is getting ready to surprise you. This could be in the form of a move of sorts or some one will come to visit and stay longer. Either way expect an adventure.

CAPRICORN: Pluto, the lord of digging up the dirt on your financial situation is causing trouble right now but it could provide you with gold at the end of the rainbow - if you handle it correctly. Put feelers out to anybody who owes you money...it could be just in time for the holidays.

AQUARIUS: A health or diet issue that has bugged you in the past will pop up again as we move into the middle of the month. It's best to so get a handle on it right now, you will then feel ready for any work challenges to get your teeth into.

PISCES: This week ahead confront any unfinished business in a much more determined way than in the past. You have the powerful Scorpio sun at your back so take advantage of this energy. Mercury also in Scorpio may bring up something from the past.

A Gentleman in Moscow: room and bored?

Exclusive interview with author Amor Towles about his new novel featuring an aristocrat sequestered at a hotel in post-
revolution
Moscow

"In 2009, while spending a week at a hotel in Geneva, I noticed the same well-dressed and weary people in the lobby every day," says A Gentleman in Moscow author Amor Towles. "I found myself wondering what life would be like if I had to live there. Upstairs in my room, I began to play with the idea of a novel in which a man is stuck in a grand hotel. Thinking that he should be there by force, rather than by choice, my mind immediately leapt to Russia...where house arrest has existed as a practice since the time of the Tsars." Four years later, Towles left the investment business to write full time.

A Gentleman in Moscow is set in post-revolutionary communist Russia. Most of the aristocrats are dead or have already fled the country. Count Alexander Rostov came back to Russia to help his grandmother escape. He stayed on in Moscow. The Bolshevik military leaders put him on trial for a poem he wrote. They decide he can live, but he's not allowed to leave the Metropol hotel. They move him from the grand rooms he occupied to the top floor's tiny servants quarters. He's free to move around the hotel and even have visitors. Rostov meets Nina, a young girl living at the hotel with her father. She is fascinated by Rostov and the fact that he's an aristocrat. Instead of being killed or sent to Siberia, for the next four decades Rostov will not leave the Metropol. Towles was inspired by his own experience living in hotels. "Over the two decades that I was in the investment business, I traveled a good deal for my firm. Every year, I would spend weeks at a time in the hotels of distant cities meeting with clients and prospects. I'm hardly a Russologist. I don't speak the language. I didn't study the history in school. I have only been to the country a few times. But in my twenties, I fell in love with Russian literature ranging from Tolstoy and Dostoevsky to Mayakovsky and Solzhenitsyn."

"Kazan Cathedral is a perfect symbol of Russia's mystique for me," says Towles. "Built in 1636 on Red Square to commemorate both the liberation of Moscow from interlopers and the beginning of the Romanov dynasty, Kazan was among Russia's oldest and most revered cathedrals. In 1936, the Bolsheviks celebrated the 300th anniversary of its consecration by razing it to the ground. In part, they leveled the cathedral to clear Red Square for military parades, but also to punctuate the end of Christianity in Russia. Peter Baranovsky, the architect who was directed to oversee the dismantling, secretly drafted detailed drawings of the cathedral and hid them away. More than fifty years later, when Communist rule came to its end, the Russians used Baranovsky's drawings to rebuild the church stone for stone."

"I find every aspect of this history enthraling," says Towles. "The cathedral itself is a reminder of Russia's heritage... ancient, proud, and devout. Through the holy landmark's destruction we get a glimpse of how ruthless and unsentimental the Russian people can be. While through the construction of its exact replica, we see their almost quixotic belief that through careful restoration, the actions of the past can effectively be erased. But most importantly, at the heart of this history is a lone individual who at great personal risk carefully documented what he was destroying in the unlikely chance that it might some day be rebuilt. Russian history abounds with sweeping moments of cultural change and with the stoic heroes who work in isolation towards some brighter future."

Towles novel Rules of Civility was a New York Times bestseller,

Book Corner with Gabrielle Pantera

published in 2011 by Viking Penguin. Rules is being adapted into a film by Lionsgate with producer Marc Platt and director Sam Gold.

Towles next novel is set in America in the early 1950s. Viking Penguin has contracted to publish his next two novels.

Towles was born in Boston and now makes his home in Manhattan.

Feeling the pain of compulsory health coverage

Ouch! I just got hit over the head with a huge health insurance hike!

According to the newspapers it seems I'm not alone. Why do they have to make this procedure so daunting and complicated? I recently got a letter from my health care provider. It starts off with a friendly "Hello Eileen, Thank you very much for being a Blue Shield member". It then goes on to say 'In this years open enrollment we are excited to introduce our new generation of health plans'. I bet they are excited, as it seems they are offering me less coverage and increasing my monthly payment by 23%, bringing it to $416.72 a month; which I'm told is reasonable! The irony is that if I chose to earn slightly less from some of my freelance work, this would qualify me for subsidies and I would still be better off financially than paying my monthly premium. So really the government are trying to encourage me to work less, pay less in taxes and take more from the state - which doesn't make sense at all.

If you are still dithering over if you really need it, or are using the popular "I will go back to Britain if I need to see a doctor" method, then you might want to think again. As if your appendix bursts there won't be time to book a flight. Same if you get hit by a car. Plus, I hear that doctors are starting to check your eligibility in the UK, and if you have not been making contributions for the last five years you might just receive a bill.

If you would like to continue paying your National Insurance whilst overseas visit www.gov.uk/national-insurance.

In the meantime, whilst you are here you do need something, even if it is just for Emergency Care. Open enrollment starts on Nov 1st and decisions should be made by December 15th. This is the small window to change or sign up for a health insurance policy.

The introduction of Obamacare meant no one could get denied or dropped due to medical history. However, the flaw in this new format of 'no one being denied' is that you may not be refused coverage but you can be charged an exorbitant amount for the privilege of it - and we now cannot opt out, as if we do we will be charged a fine!

Covered California (www.coveredca.com) is a great place to start to see if you qualify for tax credits and reduced healthcare rates, but if all this is gobbledygook to you and you can't tell your co-pays from your deductibles, we have another option in the form of fellow Brit Adam Beach! ## Sherlock's heading back this way... and trailer sends fans into a tizzy!

Sherlock is back! (or soon will be). And fans were given a much-needed boost after a trailer for the new series aired on BBC One starring Benedict Cumberbatch this week.

The 90-second clip sent Twitter into meltdown as ecstatic fans shared their reactions online.

One wrote: "Did anyone else see the trailer for Sherlock? I am screaming!"

Another then posted: "Sherlock! Good trailer. Well positioned straight after Bake Off. 10/10 would watch Cumberbatch again."

Moments later, a different viewer tweeted: "Seeing Andrew lose and a Sherlock trailer straight afterwards was far too much for my heart. It is still beating and I can't sleep."

Shortly afterwards, a different fan commented: "Ok, that trailer was seriously amazing. I can't wait for the show to come back. #Sherlock.!"

The new series, promises the darkest episodes yet – will Sherlock make it out alive?

The clip opens with a concerned Sherlock chillingly uttering: "Something is coming. Maybe it's Moriarty. Maybe it's not. But something is coming..."

He is then seen discussing a case with his sidekick Dr John Watson – played by Martin Freeman.

"Whenever he's coming, whatever he's lined up, I'll know where to begin," Sherlock insists.

Viewers are then warned that everything their favourite characters know will be tested and everyone is under threat.

Why do we have a horrible feeling that some characters are going to be killed off this series?

Sherlock returns to BBC One and BBC America on 1 January 2017. Can't wait!

Mel C slammed for fake posh accent!

Singer Mel C has been slammed by viewers of the popular ITV breakfast show This Morning as Spice Girl fans claimed she was putting on a 'terrible posh accent' and 'forgotten her roots'.

The 42-year-old star is back with a new solo album and appeared on the ITV Daytime show to explain why she wasn't joining the latest Spice Girl reunion.

Oo-er!

Despite ITV's Holly Willoughby practically begging Mel to return to the group, those who were watching at home were reacting to the Liverpudlian singer's accent.

"How posh does Mel c sound? Lost her accent big style #thismorning," said one viewer.

Another added that it was the "worst attempt at a posh accent" they'd ever heard.

Speaking about her return to music, Mel told Ben Shephard and Holly it was "exciting, daunting, tiring" and her new sound is "honest".

Mel C said: "I've always been honest but as I got older I think I'm more courageous to delve a little bit more.

Holly then pleaded for her to join Mel B, Geri Horner and Emma Bunton for the Spice Girl reunion.

"It's really hard. I know people want it," said Melanie. "There are various reasons. It was just bothering me. It's like a jigsaw puzzle and you need all the peices.

Victoria Beckham is not joining the other girls for a reunion, and Mel added: "We're not the same if we're not all together."

When Holly pressed for her to join the girls, she replied: "Yeah, that is not going to happen."

Personally, I think she sounds as if she has grown up, that's all... And she's certainly NOT Posh!

You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. # Juan strike makes derby difference

EFL CUP
Manchester Utd....1
Manchester City....0

Juan Mata struck to win a tight Manchester derby Wednesday night as United knocked out EFL Cup holders City to reach the quarter-finals.

The Spaniard pounced to drive low into the corner from Zlatan Ibrahimovic's pull-back as United set up a home tie with West Ham.

Paul Pogba had hit a post moments earlier as the game came alive in the second period, following a first half in which neither of the bitter rivals managed a shot on target.

City boss Pep Guardiola made nine changes to his side, who are now six games without a win in all competitions - his worst run as a manager.

Their best chance arrived early on when Kelechi Iheanacho headed over from six yards, while second-half substitutes Raheem Sterling and Sergio Aguero made little impact.

Victory was United's second in five matches, and only Jose Mourinho's fourth win in 18 meetings with Guardiola.

United, far from at their best, scored during their only spell of quality in the opening 10 minutes of the second half as Ibrahimovic - anonymous in the opening period - profited from Nicolas Otamendi's missed header to square for Mata.

There remain areas of concern for United. Luke Shaw was constantly outwitted by Jesus Navas and again there was no place in the 18-man squad for £26m summer signing Henrik Mkhitaryan.

But while Guardiola said the competition was his "lowest priority" before kick-off, Mourinho perhaps took the chance to shift United's momentum.

Guardiola said City must be "more clinical" after they ended the night without working David de Gea once - the first time they have not had a shot on target in a game since 2012.

City, who are top of the Premier League, had an early penalty appeal turned down when Michael Carrick tangled with Aleix Garcia.

The wholesale changes made for the tie may blur detailed analysis of just what is amiss in recent weeks, but a switch to a 4-4-2 formation after two league games where a back three was used perhaps shows Guardiola has not yet settled on the way forward at City.

He could also face more time without captain Vincent Kompany, who, making only his second start of the season, asked to be replaced at half-time because he was tired.

Kompany suffered a groin strain in September but has been dogged by thigh and calf issues, prompting his playing time to fall from around 2,700 minutes in 2013-14 to 1,700 last season.

HERE WE GO AGAIN: confrontations between fans marred the Hammers' win

Vibrant Hammers left counting the cost

WEST HAM notched a memorable 2-1 cup win against London rivals Chelsea on Wednesday night but the match was marred by violent clashes between rival fans at London Stadium.

Plastic bottles and seats were thrown towards the end of the match as hundreds of fans were involved in ugly scenes.

The flash points were a blot on what had been an entertaining night on the pitch as a much-changed Chelsea side were beaten by a cohesive and intense West Ham.

A superb Cheikhou Kouyate header before the break and an 18-yard Edimilson Fernandes strike a few minutes into the second half secured West Ham's place in the last eight and a tie against Manchester United, who beat Manchester City 1-0 in one of the evening's other matches.

Gary Cahill swept home from close range
