My kind of guy!

■ Farage scorns 'negative' No. 10 after 'anglophile' Trump talks

■ UKIP leader calls on Westminster to 'mend fences' with new Prez

NIGEL Farage has hailed Donald Trump's victory by saying the US President-elect was a true Anglophile that Britain "could do business with".

The Ukip leader and MEP said Mr Trump would undo damage to relations by President Obama.

And he called on British politicians to "mend fences" with the controversial billionaire after a barrage of insults and criticisms from the other side of the Atlantic during his bruising campaign.

Mr Farage spoke after becoming the first British politician to meet Mr Trump since victory last week.

In New York on Sunday Mr Farage said he stood ready to act as a bridge between the Government and the new Republican administration.

'quite rude'

But he admitted it seemed unlikely he would get any post given the Conservatives' "short-sighted" hostility to the idea. He refused to deny ministers had sounded him out over how to deal with Mr Trump.

Mr Farage appeared at rallies alongside the Republican during his presidential campaign.

He said many British politicians had been "quite rude" and needed to readjust their thinking.

He said: "I do think that just too many members of this Government said too many nasty things about the President-elect. I think there has to be a mending of fences."

There were huge opportunities to be had in "Brexit Britain" and Mr Trump would be a more willing partner than Barack Obama – who had "damaged" the so-called "special relationship".

Mr Farage spent over an hour with the President-elect on Saturday night at his home in Trump Tower. After the talks – during which the pair were photographed in a golden lift – he said Mr Trump was "a man with whom we can do business".

Mr Farage said some ministers were open to the idea of his acting as a go-between with the President- elect but Downing Street was more interested in rubbishing him.

He said: "If I can be useful in any way to the British Government, then I'm very happy to do so, though it would appear that the apparatchiks in Downing Street keep saying very negative things about me. I'd have thought that's just a little bit short-sighted, frankly.

'real opportunity'

"In the national interest, they, perhaps, ought to bury their personal enmity towards me and we ought to have a constructive conversation." He called on the Government to work closely with Mr Trump, saying: "There's a real opportunity here. From a British perspective, we've got not just an Anglophile president coming in but the whole of his team are

"They like our country, they're coming in with an incredibly positive view and that's good news. We need to seize the day."

Mr Farage denied suggestions that he would get a position within Mr Trump's team.

'Save yourselves'.... shot MP urged aides to flee as she lay dying

MP Jo Cox urged her two aides to save themselves first as she lay dying from gunshot and stab injuries, the Old Bailey heard on Wednesday.

Google's £1bn UK boost

Britain a huge post-Brexit vote of confidence announcing £1billion investment in its London operations.

The US firm is the international heavyweight to defy the Remain campaign doom-mongers over the UK freeing itself from Brussels rule. The Internet giant announced it will build a new London HQ creating 3,000 new jobs and pumping £1billion into the economy.

chief Google's executive Sundar Pichai said: "The UK has been a tremendous market for us. We see big opportunities here. This is a big commitment from us. We have some of the best talent in the world in the UK and to be able to build great products from here sets us up well for the long

The announcement was welcomed by Philip Chancellor Hammond, who said: "This is a big vote of confidence in Britain's leading position as a global tech-hub and more evidence that leading firms are choosing to invest here. Our technology industry is central to securing future economic growth and this government is committed to ensuring it continues to thrive.

"It's further proof that Britain is open for business and that we continue to be an outward looking, worldleading nation."

The announcement was greeted with glee by the pro-Brexit press, with the Daily Express claiming the news 'makes a mockery of the Remain campaign's Project Fear predictions which supporters of the EU are still trying to push forward in a desperate bid to dilute Brexit. Instead economic giants leaving Britain, Google is the latest example of one wanting to invest post-Brexit.'

Google's announcement followed an announcement that Nissan will protect more than 7,000 British jobs by building the next Qashqai and X-Trail models at its Sunderland factory. Japanese firm Softbank, which recently acquired UK chip design company Arm Holdings £26billion, announced that it will base its new £80billion tech fund in the UK. And the City of London reacted positively to the news, with FTSE 100 risising more than 39 points and the FTSE 250 up over 100 points.

HS2 gets go-ahead

The Government is pushing ahead with the plans for HS2, the controversial highspeed train line between London and the North. Transport Secretary Chris Grayling said that the second phase of the £56bn project will go ahead in full, ending speculation that it would be scaled back. He confirmed that one branch will go from Birmingham to Leeds, the other from Crewe to Manchester – and said he felt "desperately sorry" for the residents affected. The bill to secure the first phase, from London to Birmingham, is expected to go through Parliament

Prison officers heading back to work

Thousands of prison officers returned to work this week after the High Court ordered them to end a wildcat strike. It is illegal for officers to strike, but the Prison Officers Association directed its members to stop working following the breakdown of talks with the Government over safety concerns. With only emergency cover in place, prisoners were locked in their cells and trials had to be postponed. The union says its members are facing a rising tide of violence in jails: attacks on staff rose 43% in the year to June

Judge orders cancer girl frozen

A 14-year-old girl who died of cancer has been cryogenically frozen in the hope that she can be "woken up" and cured in the future after winning a landmark court case in her final days.

The girl's divorced parents had disagreed over whether her wish to be frozen should be followed, so the girl, who cannot be named for legal reasons, asked a High Court judge to intervene.

In a heartbreaking letter to the court, she said: "I don't want to die but I know I am going to...I want to live longer...I want to have this chance."

The girl, known as JS, asked Mr Justice Peter Jackson to rule that her mother, who supported her desire to be cryogenically preserved, should be the only person allowed to make decisions about the disposal of her body.

Shortly before her death in a London hospital on October 17, in what is believed to be a unique case, the judge granted JS her wish. Her body was frozen and taken to a storage facility in the US. She is one of only 10 Britons to have been frozen, and the only British child.

But after a decision that raises profound moral and ethical questions, the judge and the girl's doctors expressed serious misgivings about the process, which did not go entirely according to plan. Her mother spent the last hours of her daughter's life fretting about details of the freezing process, which was "disorganised" and caused "real concern" to hospital staff.

The judge suggested that "proper regulation" of cryonic preservation - which is currently legal but unregulated - should now be considered.

Rooney gets boozy on England duty

■ England captain read the riot act after dropping in on wedding party seemingly the worse for wear

England captain Wayne Rooney has
"unreservedly"
apologized to interim manager Gareth
Southgate, the Football Association and young fans following the emergence of
"inappropriate" images from the weekend.

The 31-year-old regained his place in the Three Lions' starting line-up last Friday, when he helped secure a 3-0 win against oldest foes Scotland in a crucial World Cup qualifier at Wembley. A minor knee injury saw Rooney withdraw from the squad on the eve of Tuesday's 2-2 draw with Spain, after which Southgate was forced to deny the absence was anything to do with images that emerged from The Grove hotel on Saturday night.

The Sun alleged that Rooney dropped in on a wedding party, with the paper printing a photo appearing to show the Manchester United forward, sporting an England training top, looking the worse for wear.

'inappropriate'

The FA is to review players' free time as a result of an incident that led Rooney to apologise in private to interim boss Southgate and the governing body's technical director Dan Ashworth. In a statement issued on Rooney's behalf to Press Association Sport on Wednesday evening, the player's spokesperson said: "Naturally Wayne is sorry that pictures taken with fans have been published today.

"Although it was a day off for the whole squad and staff, he fully recognises that the images are inappropriate for someone in his position.

"Earlier today Wayne spoke privately to both Gareth Southgate and Dan Ashworth to unreservedly apologise."

Harry's love beads send new sign to Meghan

PRINCE Harry wore his heart on his wrist this week during an impassioned speech to people living with HIV.

The two important women in his life – his late mother, Princess Diana, and his current girlfriend, Meghan Markle - were clearly on his mind when he visited an HIV choir working with a sexual health charity. During his visit to the charity, called Naz, Harry, 32, wore a blue, white and black beaded love bracelet identical to the one proudly sported by his actress girlfriend in Instagram photographs. It was a symbolic show of affection for his girlfriend, miles away in Toronto.

Harry was carrying on his mother's work and in an impromptu speech urged the choir to speak about their illness and pose for photos to end the stigma around their condition. Many were reluctant. But by the time he finished speaking, all but a handful of the 25-strong group were posing with him, even though some had not told their families of their illness.

"I don't believe we can really smash the stigma unless people like yourselves are willing to talk," he told the Joyful Noise choir at the Hurlingham Club in South-west London. Members of the choir told Prince Harry that the HIV test he took in public earlier this year was "one of the greatest things you ever did". He replied: "It was one of the easiest things I ever did."

The Prince met the choir before they performed at the charity's awards evening. Naz, founded in 1991, provides sexual health services to black, Asian and other ethnic minority communities, which make up a disproportionately high percentage of the estimated 103,000 people living with HIV in the UK. Choir member Sarah Bisholo, 58, who spoke to the Prince, said: "HIV is not dangerous. What kills you is isolation and self-stigmatisation."

Clarkson flies into storm after airport argy-bargy

■ Is controversial TV host up to his old tricks?

JEREMY Clarkson was slapped down by police and airport authorities this week after claiming an "Argentinian" worker swore at him and barred him from boarding a flight.

The ex-Top Gear host, 56, had alleged Stuttgart Airport worker Manuel Pereira said he was from Argentina as he stopped the star boarding a flight in Germany on Monday. Clarkson also claimed airport workers suggested he and his co-presenters were "too drunk" to fly, when they had only had "one can of beer".

Top Gear's Argentina special famously prompted protests over a car number plate that appeared to refer to the Falklands War – and Clarkson hinted the act of barring him from the flight had been one of revenge. But German police said the presenter's version of events was "not comprehensible".

A police spokesman said: "The film crew with Mr Clarkson paused in the lounge and they did not hear the call for the delayed flight to London."

'personal behavior'

A Stuttgart Airport spokesman said that Clarkson and his team had simply missed several calls for their flight. He added: "After a certain time the luggage will be removed from the aircraft and the missing passengers withdrawn from the passenger list. From this point there is no chance for boarding, even if the passengers show up."

The airport authorities further disputed that an employee sworn at the star. adding that he was not even Argentinian but Spanish. The spokesman said the incident would investigated its partner company, S.Stuttgart Ground Services. He said the alleged "personal behaviour" described did "not conform to our approach on customer service". The spokesman added: "We do already know that the employee mentioned is Spanish, not Argentinian."

The row began when Clarkson was waiting to fly to the UK with fellow ex-Top Gear presenters James May and Richard Hammond.

CLARKSON: Was he targeted for retribution, or did he just miss his flight?

The presenter, whose new show The Grand Tour made its debut this week on the Amazon Prime streaming service, claimed he and his team had been stopped at the departure gate before being told they had missed their flight. Clarkson said Mr Pereira had claimed to be from Argentina and had used a profanity. He had then "marched off looking pleased with himself," the presenter continued. But Mr Pereira later denied he was from Argentina or that he had sworn at Clarkson. He said: "I would never say such a thing. I wasn't rude. I was polite and professional."

Clarkson took an alternative flight home and claimed it arrived in London before the scheduled service.

The fiery presenter – said to be on £10million a year with Amazon Prime – has a track record of bust-ups. He was sacked by the BBC after punching Top Gear producer Oisin Tymon in a row over cold food.

Corrie bosses deny star Eileen has quit show after year's absence CORONATION Street bosses have said that long-time star Eileen Derbyshire – who plays Emily Bishop – is still on leave but she will be returning to the show.

It had been reported that the actress, who first stepped on to the famous cobbles in 1961, had ended her time on the show after 55 years.

But on Monday night ITV chiefs stressed that actress decides to return to work.

An ITV spokesman added: "Eileen is currently on an extended break from the show and has given us no indication that she doesn't plan to return."

The veteran actress has been an integral part of the show since her character appeared in 1961 and is now the soap's longest- running female character.

After celebrating half a century in Corrie she was awarded an MBE for service to drama in 2010 alongside co-star Barbara Knox, who has played Rita Sullivan since 1964.

When Eileen first asked for time off last year her character waved goodbye to the cobbles on New Year's Day to travel to Peru to visit her nephew Spider Nugent.

But Eileen's departure comes after a long series of tragic exits for some of the soap's iconic stars.

Anne Kirkbride, who played Deirdre Barlow, died from breast cancer last January, while Jean Alexander who played Hilda Ogden died in October.

Emily arrived on Coronation Street in scenes which aired on January 27, 1961.

She shared the screen with formidable Street legends such as Ena Sharples, played by Violet Carson and Pat Phoenix as Elsie Tanner. She has suffered her fair share of Weatherfield woes ever since. Her beloved husband Ernest was shot and killed in a botched robbery in 1978.

Most memorably, the devout Christian cheated death after being whacked over the head with a crowbar by evil killer Richard Hillman in January 2003. Devotees of the show will all be hoping that Eileen will soon be back on the Street and hearing the latest gossip with Norris and Rita in the Kabin.

Wales fans sabotage English bar with HUNDREDS of damning 1-star reviews after refusal to show Serbia match

A TORQUARY bar might be regretting its decision not to screen the Wales v Serbia World Cup qualifier at the weekend.

The bar, which refused to show Wales' clash with Serbia on Saturday night, after it was revealed players would not wear poppies on their shirts, has been inundated with hundreds of spoof reviews from supporters.

The Clocktower Bar in Torquay posted a message on Facebook on Friday night which read: 'Due to Wales and Northern Ireland refusing to wear the poppy we will not be showing their games'.

Fans have responded in their droves, leaving 1-star reviews on the bar's Facebook page , many of them instructing visitors to 'never go there' and 'avoid at all costs'.

It is believed the majority of reviews have come from Wales fans angry at the decision, despite the bar's insistence the decision was a protest directed at Fifa rather than at Wales and Northern Ireland.

Many of the responses use explicit language, but among the more printable ones one fan posted: "I ordered the £3.50 "Sunday Special" and was saddened to receive a dusty shoe filled with mash potatoes. It didn't come with gravy, so it was incredibly dry. When we complained, the owner just threw a pan at my children and told us to "go back home to Wales". Never again."

Another simply said: "I'd rather have dinner with Donald Trump than have a pint in here."

One of the more sincere reviews addressing the controversial issue said: "Very poor of the landlord to use the poppy to gain free publicity! Where's the respect there?"

Another, with tonguein-cheek, said: "I took my sheep here to watch the Wales game only to find out we were Baa'd and they weren't showing the game. Shameful."

The bar now has 859 reviews - 796 of which have left a 1 star rating. It has an average rating of 1.2 stars. And because of Facebook's review function, it cannot delete them.

GOOD WEEK FOR: Denise Coates, the founder and chief executive of online gambling firm Bet365, who was named Britain's highest-paid businesswoman. The 49-year-old was paid £54m in 2015, and also received £63.5m in dividends; her basic pay was second only to that of Sir Martin Sorrell, of media giant WPP. Forbes reckons that Coates's total net worth is £2.7bn.

Alan Steadman, a retired jazz DJ from Dundee, who is to become the new voice of the speaking clock. Steadman, 69, won a nationwide competition to find a new voice for the clock, and his will be the first not to have an English accent. Accurate to within 30 microseconds, the speaking clock receives around 12 million calls a year.

BAD WEEK FOR:

D.H. Lawrence, with news that a museum dedicated to his life and work has closed – and is likely to be replaced by a tanning salon. The D.H. Lawrence Heritage Centre, housed in the writer's childhood home in Eastwood, Nottinghamshire, fell victim to council cuts in March. It is set to re-open as a beauty spa. However, the salon's owner says she'll keep his "legacy alive" by housing an exhibition of Lawrentian memorabilia.

Eagle numbers take flight

Britain's golden eagle population has increased by 15% in little more than a decade. There are now 508 breeding pairs, all of them in Scotland: 66 more pairs than in 2003, when the last national survey was carried out – and enough, it is thought, to ensure the population's long-term viability. The raptors – whose two-metre wingspan makes them the UK's second-largest bird, after the white eagle – were once common across the UK, but had all but vanished from England and Wales by the mid 19th century, largely as a result of being killed by gamekeepers (the birds prey on grouse). Scotland's golden eagle population was then hit by the use of organochlorine pesticides, which caused mass infertility among them.

There are fears that the golden eagles are still being shot, poisoned or trapped to protect grouse moors, but according to the RSPB, attitudes are becoming more "enlightenened". The eagles – many of which are now satellite-tagged – have also benefited from there being more prey, including grouse and hares, on the hillsides as a result of reduced grazing by sheep and deer.

Millions see GPs needlessly

The NHS's resources are being put under severe strain by millions of people seeking medical help for trivial complaints, a report has warned. According to the Local Government Association, 57 million GP consultations every year are about minor ailments that could be treated at home. These include 5.2 million for blocked noses, 40,000 for dandruff, and 20,000 for travel sickness. These visits, together with 3.7 million similarly unnecessary A&E attendances – for problems such as flu, insect bites and colic – cost the NHS £2bn a year, or just under 2% of its total budget. "We need a new culture of care, where people think before calling the doctor," said Izzi Seccombe, chair of the LGA's Community Wellbeing Board. Instead of going to see their GP or to an A&E, the report said, patients with these types of ailments should visit a pharmacy or seek advice on the NHS Choices website.

PURIST PLEASURE: the traditional Christmas pudding, set aflame in the gathering gloom

Traditional Christmas Puddings making way for 'blinged-up' TV chef versions

The tradition of setting Christmas puddings has been carried out by families for many centuries, but the festive ritual may be under threat from a new, trendier type of pudding.

These days Britons increasingly are favoring 'blinged-up' puddings adorned with gold dust, glitter and melting centres after several celebrity chefs, most notably Heston Blumenthal, have begun to sell them on the high street. The new puds now account for a third of puddings being sold in shops, figures from pudding maker Matthew Walker show.

Bejeweled cakes are a new and rapidly growing trend and were virtually non-existent five years ago, according to the cake manufacturer makes per cent of the UK's Christmas puddings.

This year supermarkets including including M&S, Sainsbury's and and Waitrose will be selling fancy puddings designed to wow guests without hosts needing to set them on fire or spend hours in the kitchen decorating them.

Flaming the pudding by pouring alcohol over it is a tradition which is said to date back to Roman times represents passion of Christ.

In recent times it has been seen an essential part of the theatre of Christmas day, but the recent evolution of more exciting Christmas puddings is causing many families to stray from their traditional routines.

Golden and glittery puddings are designed impress guests without needing to be set on fire.

65 years on, thwarted lovers finally tie the knot

A couple who were forced to break off their engagement in the 1950s have finally tied the knot, 65 years later.

Davy Moakes, 86, and Helen Andre, 82, met when they were studying at art college. Moakes proposed in 1951, but Andre's parents refused to give the couple their blessing because they feared that as an artist, he'd be unable to provide for their daughter. They each went on to marry other people, but after their spouses died they were reunited. The couple (pictured) got married last week in Ripley, Derbyshire, before spending their honeymoon in Cyprus. "I have loved Davy my whole life, but now I've got him," said Andre. "I feel like a teenager again."

Feeling the love

Hundreds of dog lovers turned out last week to join a whippet on his final walk. Walnut, 18, had suffered from a series of illnesses, and Mark Woods had decided it was time to ask a vet to put him down. But first, he resolved to take him on one last walk on Porth Beach, in Newquay. On social media, Woods asked if anyone wanted to join them; the response overwhelming: thousands of people sent messages of support, and hundreds came to bid farewell to Walnut in person.

Bataclan reopens

A year after terrorists stormed the venue, killing 90 people, Paris's Bataclan theatre has reopened. Sting gave a concert to mark the occasion, having first led the audience – which included survivors of the attack, and relatives of its victims – in a minute's silence. One survivor, a 25-year-old who gave his name as Aurelien, whose friend died that night, said it was the first time he had been in a confined public space since. "I'm here because it's important to finish a concert that was never allowed to end," he said.

Brits in LA

Meet A Member: Michele Rothwell

Meet Michele Rothwell from Cheshire, who moved to LA seven years ago with her screenwriter husband Jayson Rothwell and two children.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

My husband Jayson sold a movie script to Warner Bros. We knew that if he was to make a serious career as a screenwriter we had to live in LA and now was the time. We moved with our two children who were eight and ten years old.

I was an interior designer in the UK. After a few years living in LA I decided to set up as an interior designer here. I am a huge fan of British brands: Farrow & Ball paint, Osborne & Little and Designer's Guild fabrics, all available in LA. I specialize in upholstery, drapery and paint. I'm bringing my English style to the LA market.

What do you miss most from home? Family. Although we all get together for holidays now, something we never did when we were living 20 minutes from each other. We see less of each other but we have better quality time. Plus winter clothes. Aga stoves. Real fires in snugs. But I'm glad to get away from British Soaps, and the obsessive culture of tabloid newspapers and gossip magazines.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? If so, why?

Amazing. Although it was hard to find a lease house that wasn't falling down or had a landlord that you could trust. Design has improved. style of new The homes are stunning. West Hollywood has completely changed. Melrose has rejuvenated.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Cheshire?

I lived in the English countryside, in a small village. My life is completely different in every way. I think the biggest difference is the way my children live their life compared to me as a teenager. My 17-year old son was driving at 15, had a car at 16 and now drives all over LA night and day. My friends back in UK with teenage kids would never believe the independence and confidence most 17 year-olds have in LA. With that independence maturity comes and ambition. I have a recent picture of my son hanging out at the Paul Smith store on Melrose with the man himself!

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

We obviously miss the Indian food, good Indian restaurants are hard to find. We love a little Indian restaurant on Montana in Santa Monica called Pradeep's. It's a good mix of the traditional Indian dishes you find back home but with LA healthy choices: butter & cream-free, vegetarian, gluten-free & vegan options!

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here? LA is not what you perceive it to be from the pages of OK magazine. It's competitive, fast moving and often lonely. There are few people you can trust. Most are on their own tough path and haven't got the resources or time to help you. Work hard and don't waste money. Value the simple things like the weather and the ocean. Slowly build your circle and grow organically.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice

We didn't have any advice or know anybody. We moved over here ľm developing completely blind. The online store at www. talent is immense and fourcolors.la and have started doing Pop Ups the competition fierce. A successful South African around the city.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: In any relationship situation please understand you can't control everything that people think. All you can do is keep an eye on what the other person is doing. The holiday season is nearly here so start your preparation sooner than in years past.

TAURUS: Pay attention to the things on your to-do list and get it done asap. The super moon last week in your sign should motivate you in more than one way. But it's also time to surrender to a big issue that has remained unresolved.

GEMINI: You have a very creative side and it is about time you explored the possibilities. If you just think about it you will not see the benefit that can be had from opening up to new directions. You are ready to change some area of your life in a very positive way.

CANCER: This coming week beware of speaking out of turn or overly harshly to anyone. You crabs have some difficulty in letting go of perceived past hurts. The fact is that it is all in the mind anyway and by letting them be negative YOU are on the losing end.

LEO: If you have any health concerns (your own or those of someone close to you) make sure you are not stressing out or feeling anxious. The recent full moon in Taurus may have brought up subconscious fears. Know this: nothing is as bad as you fear.

VIRGO: You are often the victim of your own making. Protest as you will, you are the most organized sign when you choose to be and the opposite also at times. This is the time of the year to plan holiday events and you will feel much less stressed when fully engaged. LIBRA: If you have to stop assisting someone else to complete their tasks in order to get on with your life, please does it now. The fact is you sweet souls are often taken advantage of and you do not realize until you look back at the situations. Love you first and the rest will fall into place.

SCORPIO: The full Taurus super moon last week completed a cycle that began on October 30th with the new moon in your sign. Whatever came to pass in your life will be in force now. It's time to celebrate what you have learned about life, love and its many faces. Happy Birthday. SAGITTARIUS: Life for you recently has not moved in the direction you would have wished. However, because you do not know what life is preparing for you rest assured with Saturn in your life it will present a challenge. You are well up for it, as the end result will be good overall and it's nearly your new year.

CAPRICORN: As you discovered recently life has not gone as you planned. But things are going in the right direction even if you are not aware of it. Your long-term visitor Pluto is changing the face of your whole existence slowly but surely and by mid next year you will look back and marvel at the transformation.

AQUARIUS: Time will tell if you are ready to give up something that you have held onto - maybe a grievance or hurt from long ago. You will have more joyful things to think about in the near future....likely a family celebration and meeting with old friends.

PISCES: You are the only one who can set your own boundaries and take a leading role in who decides what in your general life. This should be sooner now as you have the lovely planet Jupiter in a good position to assist your life over the holidays.

Marie Antoinette's Darkest Days

several days exploring the Conciergerie, simply couldn't resist recounting these 76 final days of the last queen of France," says Marie Antoinette's Darkest Days author Will Bashor. "Since earning my masters in French literature at Ohio University, I've been fascinated by eighteenth century France and the royals. My biographies have focused mostly on the life of Queen Marie Antoinette.

August 1793. Marie Antoinette was removed from her family at the Temple and brought to the Conciergerie, which for the uninitiated was the disgusting dungeon where aristocrats were taken first before going to the guillotine. She waited two months for her "trial", but the verdict was already decided. Her treatment at the varied Conciergerie sometimes she was accorded the respect due a deposed queen, other times she was treated like a base criminal. While there have been many books about Marie Antoinette, this is the first about her sad life in a dungeon cell before she was put to death.

"Readers often ask me why I write about these often tragic historical personages," Bashor. "But, whenever you see the Mona Lisa or Whistler's Mother, that become yours forever? It's the same for me with a good biography, where Marie Antoinette or her entourage can become living, credible human beings. And, although you put the book back on the shelf, the character remains yours forever."

Bashor researched documents from the period at the Archives Nationales in Paris. "After being ordered online, they are delivered to you about an hour later in a box," says Bashor. "You can photograph them too, if they are not too sensitive. Otherwise, permission is required."

McEachern, Susan Editorial Director of History, International Studies, and Geography at Rowman & Littlefield Publishers, is Bashor's editor. "French history has always been a favorite part of my list at Rowman & Littlefield," says McEachern. "So, it was a happy twist of fate when we bought Lyons Press, the publisher of Marie Antoinette's Head. My boss forwarded to me Will's inquiry about his next book. Once I read his compelling story of Marie Antoinette's time in prison before her execution, I knew I simply had to publish it. Our only minor battle was over how sympathetically to portray her. Of course her fate was heart-wrenching, but she wasn't entirely a saint either." Nightmare Press, 2011) as the family a family are fatewas heart-wrenching, but she wasn't entirely a family as the family as the family family and the family and the family are fatewas heart-wrenching, but she wasn't entirely a family and the family are fatewas heart-wrenching.

Marie Antoinette's The Head: Royal Hairdresser, the Queen, the Revolution Press, (Lyons 2013) won the Adele Mellen Prize for Distinguished Scholarship and received the Kirkus Star Award. It was also nominated for the American Library of Paris and Ohioana Library Book Awards in 2014. It was Bashor's second book and follows the rise of Leonard Autié from humble country barber in the south of France to the inventor of the pouf and premier hairdresser Queen Marie-Antoinette at Versailles. As the only man in a female-dominated court, Leonard's life is filled with seduction, intrigue and espionage. The script for Marie Antoinette's Head is being represented by an agent in Los Angeles.

Bashor's first book was Jean-Baptiste Cléry: Eyewitness to Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette's Nightmare (Diderot Press, 2011). Cléry served as the family's valet in the Temple prison until the king was guillotined.

Bashor's articles include Marie Antoinette's Craziest, Most Epic Hairstyles for the Huffington Post and Coiffing Marie Antoinette for Lyons Press. His article Vanity Hair was featured in Carine Roitfeld's fall issue of CR Fashion Book 9.

Bashor is currently writing Marie Antoinette's World: A Labyrinth to the Queen's Psyche, the third book in the trilogy, with her promiscuous acts that scandalized her world at the infamous château of Versailles.

In February 2017 there will be an evening extravaganza at the National Art Club in New York City. Hairdressers will recreate the amazing poufs worn by the queen for a video presenting Marie Antoinette's Head. Bashor has book signings at that event and the Ohioana Book Festival in

Book Corner with Gabrielle Pantera

April 2017.

Bashor recently moved from Columbus, Ohio, to Albi, a small town in southern France. "I'm fascinated by the Cathars," says Bashor. "Heretics of a Christian sect exterminated here during the Middle Ages." Bashor was born in Oak Hill, Ohio.

Getting over it. Slowly.

Well, this election got me like....!

This will be my last post on this crazy, tumultuous election that has had more twists and turns than a Christmas episode of Eastenders.

As we all know I don't speak for the whole of Brits in LA, or its partners, or the readers here and some of you may have voted Trump and that's okay, But if you are a regular follower of mine and of this column, you would know I've been very much pro-Hillary throughout this whole cycle and what I'm about to say is an opinion piece.

We all have our opinions on where Hillary went wrong. It was the emails! It was the FBI! It was Bill's affairs! She was a terrible debater! Wikileaks! Her lesbian affair with Yoko Ono! I never liked her! We should have chosen Bernie!

Although a lot of these may have added up and caused some to vote third party (or not at all), the truth of the matter is Hillary was the DNC party's candidate and in this general election she won the popular vote by well over a million. That is huge. However, in America you don't win the election by the popular vote, (cue folks scratching heads).

It is a common misconception that the United States is a pure democracy, but American voters do not directly elect the president of the United States. Our systems is better described as a representative republic, and here is a brief explanation of how the electoral college works:

Every state has a number of electoral college members equal to the number of representatives and senators in that state. There is a minimum of 3 members, in states such as Alaska and Montana, and a maximum of 54 members in California. Securing a majority of 270 electoral votes (out of a possible 538) ensures that the candidate will go on to the White House. Therefore, a candidate can actually become president by winning the electoral contest but losing the popular vote - which is what cost Grover Cleveland the 1888 election, and more recently resulted in George W. Bush becoming president in 2000.

The electoral college was intended as a compromise between those who favored the election of the president by a vote of Congress and those who favored obeying a popular vote of the people. The founding established fathers the electoral college in the United States Constitution, believing that it would be both a buffer and provide fair power to all states regardless of size.

Ironically, modern critics find the winner-take-all approach of the electoral college unfair because it takes the vote out of the hands of the people and may fail to reflect the popular national will by unfairly skewing the importance of individual votes in certain states. The electoral votes are won wholly, county-by-county then state-by-state, regardless of whether a majority is decided by one vote or one million votes.

Someone just told me about the three 'As' to help me get over the hurt I've been feeling for the last few weeks: "Acknowledge, Accept and Action".

Acknowledge what just happened.

Accept the outcome.
And then take Action.

America is one of the greatest countries in the world and am glad and grateful I get to live here. Especially in California. I am a huge advocate for equality. We aren't there yet, so we keep fighting, taking it to the streets. Protesting does work, don't listen to the people who call you whiners. If you feel passionate about something and want to cause change, get out there and take action. Feel that you have done everything to be a part of the movement. Left or right! (But hopefully for me and equality -- Less right ;-)

In other news my team won last Tuesday's

Electoral College Math

The population of California is 38,800,000
The population of Wyoming is 584,153

California has 55 electoral votes Wyoming has only 3

it takes 705,454 Californians to equal 1 electoral vote it takes 194,717 Wyomingites to equal 1 electoral vote

That makes every vote from Wyoming worth 362% what each vote from California is worth in the election for the President of the United States of America.

LOSE SOME, WIN SOME: thanks to the Electoral College, the Presidental Election didn't go my way...but things got better at our Quiz Night!

pub quiz - yay! Thanks to Sandro Monetti for hosting. I'll be back in the hot seat November 29th - so come on by and have some fun!
Cheers!

Frog trick leaves Becks and Brooklyn speechless!

David Beckham FREAKED out when magician David Blaine spat live frogs out of his mouth as part of a trick on his new show Beyond Magic.

The former pro footballer was left visibly disgusted by the trick and held his head in his hands in disbelief.

In the clip, David Blaine asks Beckham and his son Brooklyn to pick an animal, to which he replies: "A frog".

Blaine then sews his own mouth shut and afterward spits out two live frogs while David records it on his phone.

David then freaks out as he turned to the camera and revealed he thought the trick was Blaine sewing his mouth shut and he'd completely forgotten he'd even mentioned frogs.

Unable to get to grips with the trick, David then holds his head in his hands and walks off in disbelief.

In the footage, David's wife Victoria Beckham and son Brooklyn can also be seen looking on with worried faces.

In the new series, David isn't the only one who gets freaked out as Blaine also shocks Johnny Depp, John Travolta, Drake, Dave Chapelle and many others.

The show will also feature one of Blaine's most potentially lethal tricks of his career, the bullet catch.

Blaine, 43, first attempted and succeeded at the trick in 2009 and repeated it again at a Las Vegas arena in 2015.

The bullet catch is where a magician catches a bullet fired directly at them, usually in their mouth or their hand.

Rising Brit Carly nabs ET gig!

A big brava to fellow Brit Carly Steel (above), who this week was named a correspondent for CBS' Entertainment Tonight, where she previously served as a special correspondent.

Oo-er!

Back in the day, I worked with Carly on TV Guide's Hollywood 411 with the 'Bachelor' host Chris Harrison, so I am especially thrilled for her.

The Scots lassie, who is known for her high-profile celebrity interviews, has been a part of the ET family for years, from serving as a special correspondent for ET's sister show, The Insider, to joining ET as a special correspondent after covering the 2013 Cannes Film Festival.

Steel said of her new full-time role: "I'm so excited to officially join the incredibly talented Entertainment Tonight team," she told Us Weekly.

"The past two years, working as a regular special correspondent at ET, have already been a high-octane whirlwindfrom touring Mariah Carey's yacht in Capri to globetrotting on Tom Cruise's jet.

She added: "I'm already looking forward to the many fun and fabulous adventures we're going to take the viewers on soon - stay tuned!"

Steel joins the twotime Emmy-winning newsmagazine, now in its 36th season, following the news that CBS News veteran Sharon Hoffman has been named executive producer at ET and The Insider. CBS Corp had been looking for a new ET EP since Brad Bessey exited in August.

Good luck Carly, we will be watching!

If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on this property.

England impress as First Test is drawn

ENGLAND secured a draw that felt like a victory in the First Test in India this week.

Just a fortnight after Alastair Cook's men were humbled in Bangladesh, they nearly pulled off one of the great heists against the world's No. 1 side. When time was called on the first Test, in Rajkot on Sunday, India were six wickets down and teetering. On home ground, India are all but unassailable, having suffered just one loss their previous 13 home Tests. Yet England were by far the better side, with four England players Joe Root, Moeen Ali, Ben Stokes and Alastair Cook nabbing centuries.

And in a good sign for the future, the 19-year-old newcomer Haseeb Hameed made the finest Test debut by an England batsman in 40 years, scoring an incredible 82 runs in the second innings, a record for a teenage England debutant.

HASEEB HAMEED: stunning debut for England

In a nerveless debut Hameed reproduced his remarkable form for his county club, Lancashire, where he averages nearly 50 runs a match, and scored more than 1,000 in his first season. Displaying crisp footwork and astute judgement allied to exemplary technique, Hameed was remarkably assured more so, at times, than Cook, his opening partner. England have long struggled to find someone who can play alongside Cook (Hameed is his tenth partner in four years), but it now looks as if their long search may be over

It was all a far cry from last month's match in Dhaka, where England's batsmen were terrorised by Bangladesh's spinners, while their own spinners struggled to assert themselves on Bangladeshi pitches. This Test proved that England can still thrive in Asia.

Gerrard says goodbye to LA

Ex-Liverpool and England captain Steven Gerrard says he has "options on and off the pitch" after announcing he will leave MLS club LA Galaxy.

Gerrard, 36, joined Galaxy in 2015 and scored five goals in 34 appearances during two seasons in America. His contract expires next month.

"It's certainly not the end of me in football terms," said Gerrard, who has been linked with Newcastle and Celtic.

"I'm going home to spend time with family and decide the best challenge."

He added: "I've got options on the pitch, off the pitch and I've got a bit of thinking to do over the next two, three weeks.

Galaxy were beaten on penalties by Colorado Rapids in the MLS Cup play-offs on 6 November and Gerrard admitted he was disappointed at not fulfilling his "objective" of helping Bruce Arena's side win the trophy.

But he said he was "proud" of his accomplishments in the US, adding his time there was an "incredible experience".

Arena said Gerrard who won 114 England caps - was "one of the most iconic players of alltime".

Gerrard's move away from MLS comes a day after former England team-mate Frank Lampard, 38, announced he would leave New York City FC.

Neither have offered clarity on their futures, although Gerrard is adamant he will "be back involved in the game".

Gerrard made 710 appearances for Liverpool between 1998 and 2015 and trained at their Melwood base during the MLS off-season.

Liverpool manager Jurgen Klopp has said the club legend is "always so welcome".

Hamilton fight keeps title race alive

FORMULA ONE

With one race to go, the odds are against Lewis Hamilton retaining Formula 1's world championship, but on Sunday, in a chaotic Brazilian Grand Prix, he proved beyond doubt his extraordinary ability.

Driving in pouring rain, he led from pole position to chequered flag, notching up the 52nd victory of his career - the secondhighest tally of all time, behind only Michael Schumacher. If his Mercedes teammate Nico Rosberg comes fourth or lower in the Abu Dhabi Grand Prix, in just over a week's time, winning the race will secure Hamilton the championship. Given Rosberg's reliability, that will prove a tall order.

But terrific Hamilton was, the real star at Interlagos was Max Verstappen. The 19-year-old Dutch driver spent much of the race in second place; when his Red Bull team foolishly brought him in for intermediate tyres, to cope with the rain, he dropped back to 14th. Yet over the last 16 laps he made a sensational comeback, finishing third. It was a drive for the ages, up there with the best races by Schumacher and Ayrton Senna.

England beat the Boks at last

England's rugby team ended a dismal ten year, 12 match losing streak against South Africa this week with a convincing 37-21 win which further cements the reputation of coach Eddie Jones. The team are now ten for ten since Jones's appointment – a record matched by only two other coaches in the history of international rugby.

Jones wants England to be the best team in the world, but they looked far from it as they conceded six penalties in the first 20 minutes. Against a better side than South Africa, who have been weakened by retirements and injury, such weaknesses could have proved fatal. But they stepped up a gear as the match progressed and grew in confidence as the Springboks wilted. Jones has achieved his results not by an influx of new talent, but rather transforming the form of the players he already has and instilling a teak-tough self belief. The side have risen to No. 2 in the world rankings.

Southgate adamant he has what it takes for England job

Gareth Southgate says he has shown he can cope with the intensity of leading England in high-pressure matches.

Southgate, 46, is the favourite to replace Sam Allardyce after ending his four-match interim reign unbeaten with a 2-2 draw against Spain.

"Until this run, under this spotlight, and in matches under intense pressure, you're never sure how it is going to be," said the former England defender.

"I've proved that I can handle big occasions."

Southgate stepped up from his role as England Under-21s manager following Allardyce's departure after just one game and 67 days in charge.

The ex-Middlesbrough boss oversaw comfortable World Cup qualifying win against minnows Malta, before his team laboured to a goalless draw in Slovenia.

He took a significant towards being appointed full-time manager with a 3-0 win against old rivals Scotland last week, before his team squandered a lead against Spain at Wembley on Tuesday.

"I'm pleased and I think the remit we were given has been fulfilled," added Southgate.

Southgate, who is due to return to his previous Ūnder-21 role as manager, says he does not know when the Football Association will make a decision about his future.

If he is not given the senior team job, he will instead focus on leading the Young Lions into next summer's European Under-21 Championships Poland.

"I've no idea what happens now," he said. "I've got a few days at home and a load of meetings in the diary for next week.

"We've got Under-21 tournament next summer and the draw is being made next month.

"I've no idea which office I need to go in or which space I'm going to park my car in."

The FA is expected to clarify its position Southgate regarding within the next 24 hours.

However, there will be a formal recruitment process and former England defender Graeme Le Saux will join the selection panel.

Gordon Strachan is to remain as Scotland head coach after the Scottish FA board gave 59-year-old "unanimous" backing on Thursday.

Chief executive Stewart Regan issued a statement after its review of a poor start to their World Cup campaign.

"The board convinced that he still has the hunger for this challenge and we have four home qualifiers in 2017 to rejuvenate our campaign," he said.

"We support Gordon unanimously

had There been speculation about Strachan's position after Friday's 3-0 defeat by England at Wembley.

It left the Scots in fifth place, with only four points from their opening four games in Group F.

The SFA explained that Strachan had provided his feedback on the campaign and his views on the team's prospects in 2017 to the eightstrong board.

board "The have considered the team's performance since the start of the campaign and subsequently discussed the disappointing points total after four matches," said Regan.

"Gordon shared the disappointment of the board and, of course, the fans.

"He is adamant, however, that we can recover the position and believes a play-off place still to be attainable."

Only the nine group winners are guaranteed a place at the 2018 finals in Russia and the Scots trail section leaders England by six points.
