

£50bn to leave?

Brussels plays hardball, demanding UK payments to continue for four more years

Britain will be presented with a £50 billion "exit bill" by the European Union as soon as Theresa May triggers Article 50, the chief negotiator for Brussels is warning.

Michel Barnier has told colleagues that the UK must keep paying "tens of billions" annually into the EU budget until 2020.

The bill would include the UK's share of outstanding pensions liabilities, loan guarantees and spending on UK-based projects.

The demands, which came as the Prime Minister held meetings with other European leaders before being excluded from a dinner at an EU summit, were dismissed by senior Conservatives who refuted the idea of paying such a bill.

Others shrugged off the demands and claimed they were simply the EU's opening position in an attempted negotiation.

'dreadful joke'

Iain Duncan Smith, the former work and pensions secretary and Leave campaigner, said that the figure is a "dreadful joke" and that the true amount will be "peanuts".

It came as Britain's EU ambassador was accused of being a "gloomy pessimist" after telling the Prime Minister that Brexit will take a decade.

Conservatives raised questions about the position of Sir Ivan Rogers – who helped negotiate David Cameron's EU deal ahead of the referendum - and said he was "completely out of his comfort zone" after he warned that a trade deal may not be completed until the mid-2020s, despite those claims later being contradicted by the European Commission.

It was reported Thursday that on Mr Barnier, who has suggested previously the that Brexit negotiations should be conducted in French, has told a number of EU leaders about his plans for a £50 billion bill for Britain.

Tomas Prouza, Czech Republic's Europe minister, told Sky News: "I understand why the Eurosceptics call it an exit fee. But this is agreeing the bills that the UK has already agreed to pay.

"We're talking about payments to the existing budget that the UK already voted for, pensions of British citizens working at the EU. This is only things the UK has already committed itself to paying".

When asked whether British taxpayers should expect a bill worth tens of billions of pounds, Mr Prouza said: "Definitely. This is what the UK has already committed to pay, and we would expect that the UK would honour its commitments ... it will be one of the first issues coming up on the table."

'total rubbish'

Mr Duncan Smith said: "It's playing to the gallery to try and persuade Britain to beg for mercy. We will not. This is based on their fevered imagination, not reality. The remainers will use this to try to stop Brexit, it's project fear all over again. It is utter, total rubbish from Mr Barnier. You expect more. He will keep trying to get his mouth into the media. There are real questions about what we owe, it's probably peanuts. He is deploying the tactics of project fear. People won't believe it."

Dominic Raab, а former justice minister, commented: "Good luck with that. I'm not sure Monsieur Barnier has quite mastered the art of expectation management, but it's good to know he's got a sense of humour." Baker, Steve the for Wycombe, said: "You would expect a negotiator to make a high demand, if he had come in with a low demand I think we would all have been very surprised. Our membership of the EU has resulted in us accruing liabilities, for example pension rights for staff who have worked for the EU, so there will be some discussion about this but I would obviously like that bill to be as close to zero as possible."

Arriving in Brussels, Mrs May said: "We will be leaving the EU, and we want that to be as smooth and an orderly process as possible. It's not just in our interests, it's in the interest of the rest of Europe as well."

Mr Barnier has been criticised in recent weeks after appearing to dismiss David Davis, the Brexit secretary, in a series of tweets after their first meeting in Brussels. He described the meeting as a "courtesy visit" and said he told Mr Davis there will be "no negotiation" before Mrs May triggers Article 50.

■ Leading 'Tory Wet' was made Northern Ireland secretary under Margaret Thatcher, Lord Prior took up the post at one of the most volatile periods in the region

The Conservative former cabinet minister Jim Prior has died aged 89, according to the official website for parliament.

Lord Prior served for five years in Margaret Thatcher's cabinet. Originally appointed employment secretary when she became prime minister in 1979, he was moved to the post of Northern Ireland secretary two years later.

The move was widely regarded as a sign of her frustration at his refusal to press ahead more quickly with her trade union reforms. Thatcher was deeply suspicious of his "wet" tendencies and opposition to her monetarist economic policies.

Prior was sent to Belfast just a month after the 1981 republican hunger strike in Maze prison and spent the next three years in the region. His tenure as secretary of state came at one of the most turbulent and violent periods in the Troubles.

During his time in the post there were a number of highprofile Provisional IRA attacks in Northern Ireland and England, including the 1982 Hyde Park bombings in London and the attack outside Harrods in the Knightsbridge area of the city in 1983. Also in 1982, the Irish National Liberation Army murdered 17 people in a bomb attack on the Droppin' Well bar and disco in Ballykelly, County Derry.

In 1982, Prior had tried in vain to hand back some power to politicians in Northern Ireland with his plan for "rolling devolution" at Stormont. But the plan failed because the main nationalist party at the time, the Social Democratic and Labour party, boycotted the assembly.

strict security

The SDLP's line was in large part in response to the rise of modern Sinn Féin, which was rising on the tide of nationalist anger over the deaths of 10 hunger strikers at Maze prison. The party also opposed Prior's plan because the political agreement contained no input from the Irish government and did not result in a power-sharing settlement like the failed 1974 Sunningdale agreement.

His failure to restore devolved power was compounded by the trials of a strict security regime he lived under as Northern Ireland three secretary. For months in the early days of office, Prior was not allowed to sleep over in the region because, in his own words: "They [republicans] were trying to blow me up."

First Minister Nicola Sturgeon was scheduled to help serve breakfast to the group on Friday morning.

'Digital desert' Britain lags Albania in 4G coverage

Britain languishes in 54th place in global rankings new report finds

Britain has worse mobile internet coverage than Romania, Albania and Peru and suffers from vast "digital deserts", a report has found.

A new investigation by the Government's National Infrastructure Commission has found that 80 per cent of rural premises are in a "notspot" for 4G coverage.

The Commission found that the UK is in 54th position in global rankings for 4G, with typical users able to access the service only 53 per cent of the time.

It warned that Britain is "languishing in the digital slow lane" and that even major city centres are lacking coverage.

The NIC, which is chaired by former Labour Cabinet member Lord Adonis, called on the Government to step in to ensure that basic talk, text and data services are available to all Britons, wherever they live, work and travel, and to make the country ready for next-generation 5G communications.

Countries like the USA and Japan already have data volumes four to five times higher than the UK, the report found.

The Commission called for the creation of a strong "digital champion" in Government, backed by a dedicated Cabinet minister, to drive forward change.

The Government and regulator Ofcom should develop a Universal Service Obligation requiring providers to ensure consumers can access essential services when they need them, regardless of the network they subscribe to.

Some 20 per cent of urban homes and 80 per cent of rural premises are currently in not-spot areas for 4G coverage and only 8 per cent of A and B roads have full 4G connectivity, the report found. Even on the motorways, users fail to get either 3G or 4G almost 25 per cent of the time.

Railways are also poorly served by 4G, the report found as it called on the Government to commit to mobile broadband infrastructure on key routes by 2025.

The warnings in the report come after The Daily Telegraph's Better Broadband campaign to improve connectivity for homes in rural areas.

Lord Adonis said: "5G is the future - ultrafast, and ultra-reliable it has the potential to change our lives and our economy in ways we cannot even imagine today. But the UK is currently languishing in the digital slow lane.

"Britain is 54th in the world for 4G coverage, and the typical user can only access 4G barely half the time. Our 4G network is worse than Romania and Albania, Panama and Peru.

"Our roads and railways can feel like digital deserts and even our city centres are plagued by not-spots where connectivity is impossible. That isn't just frustrating, it is increasingly holding British business back as more and more of our economy requires a connected workforce."

Lord Adonis added: "5G offers us a chance to start again and get ahead. If government acts now, we can ensure our major transport networks and urban centres are 5G ready in time to give British industry every chance to lead the world in exploiting its applications.

"But none of this will matter unless we bring our mobile network up to speed. The existing system does not provide the level of coverage we will need in our connected future. "

Lonely this Christmas for the lovelorn Prince Harry

Meghan heads back to California after whirlwind London tour with her Prince

He has spent the past week showing his girlfriend Meghan Markle the delights of London, but Prince Harry will cut a rather lonelier figure when he joins the Royal family for Christmas at Sandringham this year.

Not only will he be without Miss Markle, who will have flown back to the US to be with her mother, but he will also lack the company of his brother the Duke of Cambridge, sisterin-law the Duchess of Cambridge and their children Prince George and Princess Charlotte.

For only the second time since they married in 2011, the Duke and Duchess have decided to spend Christmas with the Middleton family at their home in Bucklebury, Berks.

It means the only relatives of Prince Harry's generation will be his cousin Zara Tindall and her husband Mike, who are expected to attend with their daughter Mia.

Prince Harry has been celebrating Christmas early with Miss Markle, 35, who flew from her home in Toronto early on Monday to be with him at Kensington Palace.

Having bought a Christmas tree together earlier in the week, they were spotted on Wednesday night attending a performance of the West End play The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time.

The Prince, 32, had bought last-minute tickets for the National Theatre production, having taken his girlfriend to see The Lion King on her last visit to London.

But while the intensity of their six-month relationship has prompted speculation of a possible engagement, the Prince has yet to introduce Miss Markle to his father the Prince of Wales, suggesting he is

Briton arrested for Trump shooting bid gets a year in jail

■ Judge tells 20-year-old Michael Sandford: "You have a medical problem. You should not be ashamed or embarrassed about it. You need medication."

A British man has been jailed for 12 months after pleading guilty to charges relating to an incident in which he tried to grab a policeman's gun to shoot Donald Trump at a rally.

Michael Sandford, 20, attempted to snatch the weapon as Mr Trump addressed crowds in a casino during his campaign in June.

Sandford, who has autism, allegedly told police officers that he had driven from California to Las Vegas with the plan to shoot the Republican presidential candidate.

He did not succeed in getting hold of the gun and no shots were fired. Sandford was sentenced at a federal court in Las Vegas, having pleaded guilty in September to charges of possession of a firearm and disrupting an official function.

'crazy stunt'

Lawyers acting for Sandford said he suffers a number of mental health problems and he was diagnosed as having had a psychotic episode at the time of the incident on June 18.

Sentencing Sandford to 12 months and a day in prison, Judge James Mahan told him: "You have a medical problem. You should not be ashamed or embarrassed about it. You need medication.

"You're not a hardened criminal. You're not evil or a sociopath like a lot of people we have.

"I don't think you wanted to kill anybody. This was just some crazy stunt that your mind told you to do."

Sandford, of Dorking, Surrey, had faced up to 20 years in jail had he been found guilty of the offences at a trial. He had initially denied the charges but pleaded guilty in September following a plea agreement.

Before sentencing, Sandford waved to his mother Lynne, father Paul Davey, grandmother Christine and four-yearold sister Jessica, who were in court. Ms Sandford has called for her son to be allowed to serve his sentence in the UK so he can receive psychiatric help.

Veteran of Bismarck sinking dies at 97

A Scottish veteran pilot who helped to sink the Bismarck during World War Two has died at the age of 97.

Lt Cdr John "Jock" Moffat was credited with launching the torpedo that crippled the German warship in 1941.

The air strike carried out by the biplanes from HMS Victorious and Ark Royal on 26 May 1941 was said to have been Britain's last hope of stopping the Bismarck.

Mr Moffat described flying through "a lethal storm of shells and bullets".

Born in Kelso in June

1919, he joined the Navy as a reservist in 1938 and was posted to Ark Royal with 759 Naval Air Squadron after qualifying as a pilot.

In total, he served with four squadrons in a fleet air arm career spanning eight years.

After the war he trained as a hotel manager and remained with the profession for decades. He took up flying again in his 60s and flew into his early 90s. In recent years he campaigned for the No side in the Scottish independence referendum, appearing alongside Scottish Conservative leader Ruth Davidson in 2014 to make the defence case for the Union.

The air strike on the Bismarck was launched as the battleship headed to the relative safety of waters off the coast of France.

Mr Moffat and his crew took off in his Swordfish L9726 from the deck of Ark Royal and headed for the Bismarck, fighting against driving rain, low cloud and a gale.

Naval chiefs said he flew in at 50ft, nearly skimming the surface of the waves, in a hail of bullets and shells, to get the best possible angle of attack on the ship.

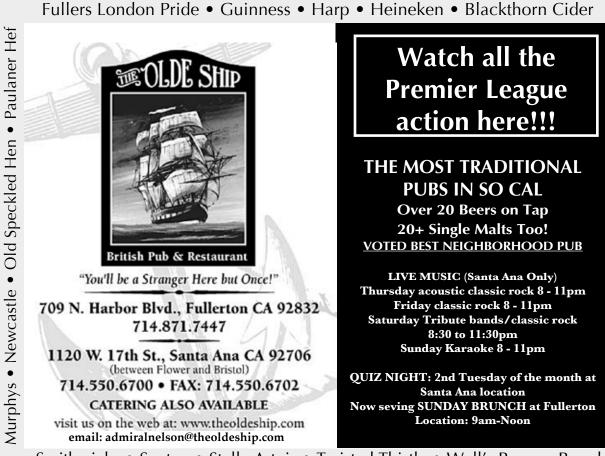

At 21:05 he dropped the torpedo which hit its target, jamming the rudder of Hitler's flagship.

Speaking to BBC Scotland earlier this year, he said: "The Bismarck turned on its side and all these sailors seemed to be in the water - it lived with me for a long time."

The battleship was forced to steam in circles until the guns of the Royal Navy's home fleet arrived the next morning.

"When Churchill gave the order to sink the Bismarck, we knew we just had to stop her trail of devastation at all costs," he said.

"The great thing about the Swordfish was that the bullets just went straight through. After all, it was only made of canvas. It was like David and Goliath."

Fireworks partygoers invited to see new year in with a whimper biggest New Year celebrations and the world's largest arts festival, it is a city that prides itself on knowing how to throw a party.

■ Could Edinburgh's famed Hogmanay celebrations REALLY feature SILENT fireworks?

Edinburgh has always celebrated Hogmanay, its military tattoo and the end of its famous summer festivals by illuminating its skyline with dazzling and deafening - firework displays.

This reputation may be under threat, however, as councillors in the Scottish capital are considering introducing silent fireworks.

Mowat, a Ioanna Conservative councillor, claims that residents have had enough of a year-round barrage of roaring rockets and screaming catherine wheels and want some respite.

"There are fireworks every night at the tattoo during August, there are fireworks at the end of the international festival and more at Hogmanay, Diwali, Guy Fawkes Night and many others," she said. "The fireworks are getting bigger and people tell me they are now feeling them as well as hearing them.

"Pets are being affected, small children are being woken up and there is evidence that people with posttraumatic stress disorder really struggle with the loud bangs. The time has come to look at this, especially as silent fireworks are now available."

Ms Mowat, who represents the city centre, accepts that her stance is likely to provoke controversy. She said: "I expect there will be some kickback and my husband did say, 'Oh, you'll be known as Scrooge'.

"Somebody said to me last night, 'Fireworks

As the host of Europe's without the bang is like cheese without pickle'. However, I've been surprised by just how supportive people have been. The spectacle is beautiful but it does impact quite significantly on those who can't see it."

> She also wants the council, which is run by a coalition of the Scottish National Party and Labour, to examine whether vibrations from displays are damaging buildings. She was inspired by the Italian city of Collecchio, which has a law ensuring that fireworks must make no noise.

However, the organisers of Hogmanay celebrations said the city would lose out with silent displays. Penny Dougherty, director of Unique Events, said: "The fireworks are the signature element of an event that brings in 150,000 visitors from around the world and generates an economic impact of more than £42 million."

Paul Gudgin, a former director of the Edinburgh Fringe, added: "It would be a great shame and the event that would suffer the most would be the Edinburgh Royal Military Tattoo."

Alex Cole-Hamilton, represents who Edinburgh Western in the Scottish parliament, hoped a compromise could be reached. "Fireworks are a sensory experience and that includes the sounds that they make," he said. "If we have the technology to make silent fireworks I'm sure we could make quieter fireworks."

Epic Fireworks, the biggest online supplier, said quiet events were becoming popular. А spokesman said: "Loud bangs are not everybody's cup of tea."

The Man With Two Brains...and how it applies to all of us

■ The degree of connection between the conscious and unconscious mind can have huge implications for how we reach our goals

HEALTH & FITNESS with Ricky Parcell

This week's title will doubtless remind some of you of the great Steve Martin movie from the 1980s.

But the following column is actually about the conscious and unconscious mind and their effect our our physical and mental health.

At my regular day job in Ibiza at The Body Camp (thebodycamp. com) our guests spend the first few days unwinding from all the stresses of their lives, soaking up the Spanish sunshine (in moderation), eating live, healthy organic foods in an incredible setting and enjoying some fun exercise. We also spend a few hours daily talking and discussing the interesting subject of the conscious and unconscious mind the two brains.

What is the conscious mind?

Believe it nor not, the conscious mind only accounts for 5-10% of your daily thought process. The conscious mind is what we choose to focus on, in the moment (around 3-7 things for most people) such as thinking about someone or looking at something. It's where our focus goes - when WE CHOOSE to use it.

But of course this begs the question... what about the other 90% of our thoughts. Just for a moment think of the iceberg that sunk the Titanic. As anyone can tell you, what really did the damage was the 7/8th of the iceberg which lay under the surface.... and so it is with us. 90% of our hidden, learned daily habits and behaviors come from fair, the To be unconscious is responsible vital behaviours like driving our hearts to beat 100,000 times a day, and ensuring we breathe over 20,000 times a day - and that's just for starters! But the unconscious mind also consists of all our learned habits and behaviors from education, family, environment, learned experiences, trauma, etc.... and so it is very, very powerful.

suggests Research we have over 70,000 thoughts a day in this area of our minds.... which is why the conscious mind can 3-7 only focus on things at once. The unconscious mind is an incredibly powerful part of our minds and is heavily involved in daily habits (which you sometimes don't even think about) - such as brushing your teeth, driving and texting (some people!) dressing in a hurry perhaps, eating and drinking. If you can communicate to this part of the brain, you have a high chance of success in life. The most successful people in life are able to say something, act on it and just do it, but for many of us all the good intentions in the world are no match for the socalled 'critical facility'.

Critical facility?

If you believe you have no will power and you can't stop smoking, eating chocolate, drinking etc...it could be because you have a critical facility. It's a gap between our conscious and unconscious mind. When the two are linked, they talk easily and communicate to each other. There is a direct and unencumbered link between desire and action. Therefore simple orders like "I am going to stop smoking" or "I am going to stop eating too much chocolate" (or any highly addictive substances) are followed, allowing both minds to work in harmony and make this a certainty. But people with a large critical facility – too many of us, sadly don't process much (in terms of will power) and find it difficult to control the urge or impulses they sometimes feel in daily life.

IT'S ALL IN THERE: 90% of our thoughts are confined to the unconscious mind

The good news is that all behaviours are learned and reinforced over time, and bad behaviours can be unlearned the same way. The key is to improve your habits on a daily basis and clarify the communication between the two minds. We recommend practising mindfulness training, meditation, yoga, tai-chi, mindful eating and mindful walking. And of course, a weeklong retreat to the Body Camp wouldn't hurt either!

Meet a Member: David McManley

Meet David McManley from Cumbria who moved to LA three months ago to pursue acting and modelling.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

Before moving to LA, I was in NYC modelling and making my transition into acting. In New York, however, it's a lot more theatre and I had aspirations for film and television. I finally reached a point where I asked myself, 'If not now, then when?' and so I signed with LA Models, packed my bags, and moved to Hollywood!

What do you miss most from home?

How much time do you have? No, really- the first things that come to mind are: a proper kebab, Camden Town, Robinson's squash, and Rugby.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? If so why?

It was like a dream. The sun, beaches, and palm trees. It's a climate and lifestyle I grew accustomed to after living in Brasil and one that I definitely prefer! So far, my impressions haven't changed at all. I take the good with the bad but, for me, LA has had so much more good to offer. It's been an incredible experience.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Barrow? Quite a lot, actually but, namely, I think the people are quite different. I think this is true of all the north country, in fact-- not just Barrow-- but I find that people in Barrow are more genuine and honest. In LA, as an English transplant, I think one can be easily misled by the grandiose stories, because we tend to take people at face value.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

I don't think I'm Angeleno enough to say I've found anything hidden here just yet, however, I can't recommend enough The Getty Center and The Griffith Observatory.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here? A: Save your pennies, keep your wits about ye,

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: The financial situation for you could be getting a boost as early as mid week arrives. Look for an opportunity to add to your bank account. Not only is this very possible but your boss Mars is in Aquarius to assist you.

TAURUS: The sun in your cousin sign of Capricorn starting next week will bring some stability in any area you need it, even if it is only a mindset to turn around. The next week will start a new cycle for you altogether.

GEMINI: Your boss Mercury has turned backwards to complete what has transpired in your life these past few months. You will be travelling (mentally or otherwise) to a place that has many possibilities if you are open to it.

CANCER: Movement is good for you and this week it's all around you and in the family also. Be strong and understand you can do whatever you wish; the clue is to make sure you don't hold on to feeling or things that are not for your highest good.

LEO: Emotional issues could hold you back from enjoying these last weeks of the year. Mars in the opposite sign to you will assist you tackling what is required. Then spend time relaxing and do not stress about what is not possible.

VIRGO: As this week moves forward be sure you are ready and willing to get going on your particular plan for the holidays now. Your boss Mercury turns backwards next week and anything can change in a second.

LIBRA: With Mercury going backwards in the part of your life that demands you make decisions, it's not easy for you as you need time to deliberate. However, if you leave things as they are currently you will have to scramble in the end.

SCORPIO: You should be ready at short notice this week ahead to go on the town. Even if you are not thinking about doing much currently. The fact is that the Universe is aware of all your wishes and desires and is acting for your highest good overall.

SAGITTARIUS: You could be feeling a little out of sorts or moody this week ahead. This is due to Mercury turning backwards not to mention Saturn sitting around your daily life. This is a good time to think in any area with positivity as you reap what you sow. Happy Birthday.

CAPRICORN: Your current financial situation may not be as solid as you prefer. It is actually better than you realize and with Mercury going backwards in your money house for a couple of weeks ahead you could recoup some losses. Happy Birthday!

AQUARIUS: It will be up to you on how soon you start preparing for the coming New Year. With your boss Uranus in a fire sign Aries now you will not be able to sit back and do nothing. With this in mind set your intentions now.

PISCES: Take extra care while shopping for the holidays that you do not get carried away. Saturn will be watching how you spend and you will not be happy when the bills arrive if you do not. You will have a busy social life as a bonus.

Shunned No More: Regency redemption

Exclusive interview with author Christina McKnight for the audio book release of her novel of romance and horses

"At the time I was processing the sudden, and very unexpected death of my father, how I was not always there when he needed me," says Shunned No More author Christina McKnight.

"That loss inspired me to write a story in which it wasn't too late to for my hero and heroine. With this tale, I wanted to impress upon my readers that forgiveness, compassion, and understanding are within all of us if we only look deep enough."

Shunned No More is an historical romance set in the Regency Period dealing with themes of vengeance and ultimately of redemption for past misdeeds to mend a fractured family. As the book opens we learn that eight years previously Lady Viola Oberbrook was young, beautiful and spoiled. Forced to flee London after causing two brothers to die in a duel over her, she's been living at her father's country estate.

Brock Spencer, Earl of Haversham, has left military service and returned to England and since he inherited the title he is expected to repair the family estates and find a bride. His real intention is to find the woman considered responsible for the death of his twin brothers. However, Lady Viola regrets the past and hopes for another chance. The two form a bond through their love of horses.

plotline for "The Shunned No More started off as a simple idea," says McKnight. "What if a woman of the ton (the term of the time for Britain's high society) did something that society could not forgive? In this case, Lady Viola was responsible for inciting a duel between two brothers. In the end, both died. She was shunned by society and banished to the country. Over the next seven years, Viola realizes if she is to have a future she has to forgive herself and make amends with those she's hurt, to have any chance at happiness and a family of her own."

A theme in McKnight's stories is the connection between the hero or heroine and their mother and father. "It took a long-time reader to point this out to me," says McKnight. "These relationships are usually complex, convoluted, and filled with betrayal and ultimate sorrow. Maybe I've been trying to improve, or at the very least, explore, the relationship I had with my own father."

McKnight became a fan of historical fiction reading from her great-grandmother's collection of 70s and 80s Regency novels. "Since high school I've had a fascination with the time period; including decorum, fashion, society functions, and sports," says McKnight. "With this project, I had the need to research the legality of duels. In this case, if a man dies during a duel it is classified as murder under English law, though the country was lax in prosecuting. And, since both men die in my story, it is only society who can punish my heroine."

We typically review the latest book in a series, however readers may prefer to start with Shunned No More, A Lady Forsaken, Book One, before reading the convoluted, rith betrayalfour following books in the series: Forgotten No

More, Scorned Ever More,
Christmas Ever More, and Hidden No More. Shunned
No More is has recently released in audio, and translations into German, Italian, and Spanish are in the pipeline.

Jen Blood at Adian Editing was McKnight's editor on Shunned No More, and switched to Chelle Olson of Literally Addicted to Detail after Jen Blood became too busy with her own writing. "In mid-2016, I also added a strictly historical editor to my team, Scott Moreland," says McKnight. "Together, we have completed six books in under eight months. Each of my books goes through a grueling six-step editing process...from beta reads, revisions, three passes by editors, a proofreader, and finally, a last read through by my closest circle of readers."

McKnight is currently writing the Regency romance trilogy; The Undaunted Debutantes series, with The probably headed back to the motherland for the holidays, for those that remain, enjoy L.A. in its former glory where freeways will be mildly empty, and better still, no lines in the supermarket checkout. It truly will take only twenty minutes to get from Hollywood to Santa Monica beach or the opposite way to downtown.

Speaking of DTLA. My, has that changed in a heartbeat! Hustling and bustling, seriously becoming the "It" place to be. I lived down there in the year 2000 and it was a ghost town. Not any more. On Sunday, I visited something called "Smorgasburg"; a collection of pop-up food vendors, from lobster to tracos, cool clothing stores in camper vans and vintage books. It's open every Sunday, 10am-4pm, on the fiveacre site of the weekday Produce Alameda

It's been a busy couple of weeks for me, we finally wrapped principal photography on @asst_ my comedy pilot that some of you donated to our fundraiser earlier in the year, so thanks to you, we pulled it off the footage has now gone off to the editor in NYC and we should have something to look at mid- January. One of our backers was Martin Lee White, who got himself a speaking part in the film playing an American cop. His accent was pretty spoton, he also came along and helped out on set for the three days too, as did many Brits in LA members, which I'm extremely grateful for. It truly took a village....

And of course after our successful, Christmas fun-filled dinner party last week, I was fortunate enough to be invited to Consul-General Chris O'Connor's Hancock Park residence for mulled wine, mince pies and caroling, where Victoria Summer, Nigel Daly and Gustaf Farwell led us all in some wonderful Christmastime carols. It was great to see so many friends there. Fiona and Alan Harden with their son Alexander. The newly-appointed head of the BABC, Piers takes on Lady Gaga in the latest unmissable celebrity Twitter feud!

We all know Piers Morgan is not one to mince his words...But it looks like the Good Morning Britain host may have met his match when it comes to Lady Gaga.

Gaga confronted the outspoken, motormouthed morning presenter after he said he doubted if the Born This Way singer suffered from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD).

The 30-year-old claims she was raped as a teenager and has since suffered from the condition.

Piers said Gaga's claims should be taken with "a pinch of salt" until proven which obviously got the songstress' back up.

She confronted him on Twitter, writing: "@ piersmorgan I've work w/ our VP Joe Biden on helping educate people about why women don't report, would love to share it w/ you some time."

Piers was quick to accept the invitation. He replied: "OK, you're on. Let's do an interview about this & you can tell me why I'm wrong to be sceptical."

Gaga added: "@ piersmorgan would also love to talk with you about PTSD, that it's not just a 'military' disorder. There is a mental health youth epidemic."

While Piers fired back: "I know numerous soldiers with PTSD, it's a very serious thing. I also know people who claim to have it but clearly don't. Let's talk..."

Gaga agreed to take on the host, continuing: "@ piersmorgan Let's do that & yes Mr. Morgan, I can handle u. Surprised you would question that. Was that the 1st question of our interview? [sic]"

Before Piers joked: "I rather admire @ ladygaga for agreeing to an interview after my criticisms. Should be a fascinating debate. I'll press my meat suit."

But Gaga did not see this as a laughing matter, tweeting: "If you continue to shame me in the process of kindly agreeing to interview w/ u I'll happily do the interview with someone else."

We can't wait for this match!

Piers is known for getting himself into trouble on Twitter with celebs, often engaging in heated debates just like his friend – President Elect, Donald Trump... Oo-er!

Night Manager leads Brit pack at Golden Globes

BEST OF BRITISH: Hiddleston and Colman are both nominated for Globes

It's an exciting time for Brits in Hollywood as The Night Manager star Tom Hiddleston is in line for Golden Globes glory after the BBC drama won four nominations along with a host of other British talent also up for honours.

Hiddleston and fellow stars Olivia Colman and Hugh Laurie have all been nominated for awards.

Taylor Swift's ex Tom, 35, will compete for best TV actor against fellow Brit Riz Ahmed, nominated for his role in the HBO short series The Night Of.

Colman will battle for the award for best supporting actress in a limited series or film made for television with Thandie Newton, who is nominated for Westworld, and Lena Headey from Game Of Thrones. House star Laurie, 57, is up for best supporting actor.

Charlotte Rampling is nominated for best telly actress for her performance in the five part drama London Spy.

Dev Patel and Aaron Taylor-Johnson will compete for best supporting actor for their roles in Lion and Nocturnal Animals respectively.

campaigns and finished behind them in the group stage last season.

The Foxes, in their debut campaign, have a tough test against Europa League champions Sevilla. Manchester City's opponents Monaco beat Tottenham twice in Group E.

One of the other standout ties of the round pits Spanish champions Barcelona against French champions Paris St-Germain. Barca beat PSG in the quarter-finals en route to winning the title during the 2014-15 season.

Champions and La Liga leaders Real Madrid face Italian side Napoli, who are fourth in Serie A.

Three years ago, Mackay apologised for sending three texts containing discriminatory language.

And he is one of five men being pursued by Cardiff City in a High Court claim over allegedly fraudulent transfers. Mackay denies any wrongdoing and said that he would "respect the legal process".

SFA chief executive Stewart Regain added that the governing body had carried out "due diligence" and that Mackay could be a "force for good".

Arsenal have been knocked out by Bayern the past three times they have met in the knockout stage.

Gunners club secretary David Miles told BT Sport: "We are through to the knockout stage for the 14th consecutive season, which is testament to manager Arsene Wenger and the teams throughout that time.

"But the fans will think we have got the rough end of the draw again - at some stage the tide has got to turn and we will beat them."

Manchester City director of football Txiki Begiristain said Monaco should not be underestimated.

He added: "Monaco are playing probably the best football in France now.

"In the group of Tottenham and Bayer Leverkusen, they were top. They have young players and a lot of talent. They play good football. It is a good draw."

Manager Claudio Ranieri said his Leicester side were set for a tough challenge against a "big, big, big team".

"I know that Sevilla have lifted the Europa League three times in three years - it is unbelievable," said the Italian, who led the Foxes to their first Premier League title last season.

"Now they are third in the league and have lost only three so far. They are fighting to win the title with Real Madrid and Barcelona in Spain, so that Gianfranco Zola has been installed as the new Birmingham boss and says he must be "professional" about replacing Gary Rowett as manager.

Blues fans were shocked by the Chineseowned club's decision to replace the immensely popular Rowett with the club eighth in the Championship table.

"The difficulty was that my predecessor was doing very well," Zola

Spurs get back on track

Christian Eriksen scored twice as Tottenham proved far too strong for spirited Hull City at White Hart Lane Wednesday night. The Denmark international struck in either half as Spurs consolidated their grip on fifth place in the Premier League with a 3-0 win - their eighth victory of the season.

Danny Rose laid Eriksen's first on a plate inside 15 minutes after good work down the left, and Kyle Walker did likewise from the right to snuff out any hope of a Hull comeback after the break.

Eriksen was desperately unluckv not to claim the match ball after seeing a superb free-kick tipped on to the post by Hull goalkeeper David Marshall, allowing Victor Wanyama to mop up the rebound from a couple of yards out.

Hull can have no complaints about the defeat but the one-sided final score was a tad unfair on the Tigers after they matched their hosts for long spells.

However, 35 goals conceded in 16 games is a damning statistic for the side second-bottom of the league - as is the fact they have now lost six away games in succession, equalling their top-flight record.

Spurs dominated possession and chances - having 27 shots in all - but clear-cut openings were at a premium. Wing-backs Rose and Walker were a constant menace, however, and it was through them that Spurs had the most joy.

Despite the gulf between the sides in terms of league position and resources, Hull produced a display that was, for a time, on a par with their hosts.

Spurs boss Mauricio Pochettino: "I think it was a game we dominated. I think the most important is the three points, to be close to the top four."

Feeling the heat, Guardiola pleads for time

■ "If it doesn't go well, I say 'sorry guys, I was not able' and another guy is coming here.....I have been here six months though so I still have time."

City Manchester manager Pep Guardiola says he does not know if he will be given the time he needs to build a successful team at Etihad Stadium. Defeat by Leicester on Saturday was City's second in a row in the league - the first time they have lost backto-back league games under Guardiola.

Although they righted the ship with a comfortable2-0 midweek win against Watford, the club remains seven points behind league leaders Chelsea and have won just five of their past 16 games in all competitions.

"enough energy"

Asked if he would be given time to get things right, Guardiola said: "I don't know. I don't think about that. Anything can happen. Our position depends on the results."

But Guardiola, who succeeded Manuel Pellegrini in the summer, added: "I'm not leaving. Next season will be better. Two years will be better."

Asked whether he was failing, Guardiola said: "Give me time. If you analyse the last month, I have failed."

The 45-year-old former Barcelona and Bayern Munich coach said this was the first time in his managerial career he had experienced such a challenging period.

He admitted he was prone to self-doubt when his team lose, but insisted he had "enough energy" to fight his critics.

"If it doesn't go well, I say 'sorry guys, I was not able' and another guy is coming here," he said. "I have been here six months though so I still have time."

Guardiola said former Manchester United manager Sir Alex Ferguson was an example of why the Premier League club needed to be patient.

Ferguson, who became United boss in November 1986, won 13 Premier League titles

"The last month I have to accept the results have strong. not gone well. But we have to improve what I believe, not change what I believe. When it doesn't work, you have to be the opinions of former players, the media, the fans because we didn't win - but I wish and hope they will give me a "I have to accept little more time."

Koeman mocks Wenger's ref complaints

Everton manager Ronald Koeman has mocked Arsene Wenger for questioning referee Clattenburg's Mark decision-making after the Toffees beat Arsenal 2-1 Tuesday night.

Gunners boss Wenger felt a corner was incorrectly awarded in the lead-up to Ashley Williams' winner.

Koeman said: "I'm not surprised because it's the third [home game] in a row I won against Arsenal and three times in a row it was about the referee.

"I'm sorry Arsenal, we won through the referee," added the Dutchman.

Koeman's past two wins against Arsenal came while he was in charge of Southampton a 4-0 victory in December 2015 and a 2-0 success 11 months earlier.

Wenger felt that a freekick was headed behind by Everton's Dominic Calvert-Lewin in the 84th minute rather than his marker Laurent Koscielny.

After Petr Cech then pushed behind Phil Jagielka's strike, Williams headed home from the resulting corner.

"It was not a corner," said Wenger. "It was a wrong decision. I am really disappointed because Clattenberg was in a very good position to see that they headed the ball out.

"It is not the first time we were unlucky with his decisions this season

Fabregas strike downs Black Cats, ensuring Blues will be top at Christmas

Chelsea moved six points clear at the top of the Premier League Cesc Fabregas' as first-half goal beat a stubborn Sunderland at the Stadium of Light in midweek.

Fabregas steered into the far corner from the edge of the box as the Blues recorded a 10th consecutive league victory.

Sunderland keeper Jordan Pickford saved from former Black Cat Marcos Alonso and Willian to prevent Chelsea from winning by a bigger margin.

The hosts, who had set up to try to nullify their opponent's attacking strength, had few chances although they could have snatched a point in injury time but Thibaut Courtois superbly denied Patrick van Aanholt.

It was a hard-fought and important win for Chelsea after Arsenal slipped up against Everton on Tuesday and means Antonio Conte's side will be top of the table at Christmas.

they struggled to find a way to break down a packed Sunderland defence, but Fabregas highlighted the Blues' strength in depth.

As Sunderland's seven-man defence frustrated the visitors, Fabregas somehow managed to find the gap to sneak a shot into the far corner and ultimately give Chelsea victory.

Chelsea have kept a clean sheet in five of their previous seven games but their inability to put the game out of Sunderland's reach was a cause for concern for Conte.

For the third time in four games, they won by a single goal margin and Conte is now keen to see

Also at Stamford Bridge, Brazilian midfielder Oscar says he is "90% certain" to move to Chinese Super League club Shanghai SIPG in January.

The fee for the 25-yearold Brazilian midfielder would be around £60m. He joined the Blues from Internacional for £25m in 2012.

Oscar started the first five league games under Antonio Conte but has only played four times since September.

"It just depends on a few bureaucratic details," Oscar told Sportv in his homeland.

Mourinho 'needs two more windows'

Manager Jose Mourinho will need at least two more transfer windows to get close to the squad he wants, say senior United Manchester figures.

Seven months after Mourinho's arrival as successor to Louis van Gaal, United are sixth in the Premier League, 13 points behind leaders Chelsea and six points adrift of the top four to guarantee Champions League qualification.
