BRITAIN will not be bullied by Brussels, key members of Mrs May's Brexit team warned this week.

Boris Johnson told European leaders the UK would not take "punishment beatings" without hitting back.

And David Davis said he would stand up to the EU if it threatened Britain with retaliation over leaving. He said: "Our civil service can cope with World War Two, they can easily cope with this."

In a pointed attack on European leaders calling for Britain to be punished, the Brexit Secretary said: "We're not going to take that."

His words followed the tough line by Theresa May who told the EU that Britain will walk away from the negotiating table rather than accept a bad deal.

He also dismissed Guy Verhofstadt, the European Parliament's chief Brexit negotiator, who had claimed that the UK "cannot cherry pick" what it wants when it leaves.

TALKING TOUGH: Boris Johnson warned the EU against 'punishment beatings'

Mr Davis said: "A more important person than Mr Verhofstadt is Donald Tusk, the head of the [European] Council, and he said this is realistic.

'reflective look'

"That was the world that he used – 'realistic'. It's quite interesting, it was entirely possible, when you open a negotiation you get a He warned the EU sort of reaction back to push you back a bit. "We didn't get that, we got a serious and reflective look at it from Brussels and I think we're going to see a really good engagement. "Guy is one player of several."

The comments came as Boris Johnson hit out at comments made by French President Francois Hollande. against trying to inflict "punishment beatings" on Britain in the style of a prisoner of war escape film.

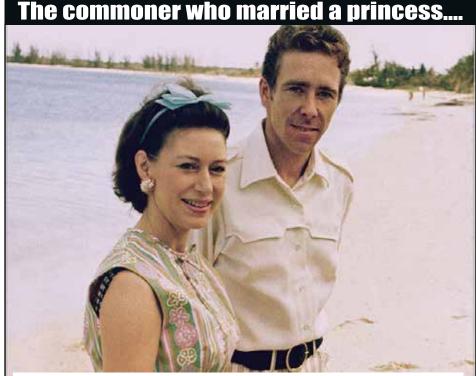

The Foreign Secretary, on a visit to India, said: "If Monsieur Hollande wants to administer punishment beatings to anyone who chooses to escape, rather in the manner of some World War Two movie, then I don't think that's the way forward. It's not in the interests of our friends or our partners."

Meanwhile Mr Davis warned that a final separation from Brussels may not be achieved until 2021.

He said he is "very determined' to agree a divorce deal with Brussels and forge a new trading relationship within the two-year negotiating process set out by Article 50 which triggers Brexit.

May reveals Brexit blueprint

No half-in, half-out deal vows PM

Theresa May promised this week to pursue a clean break from the European Union, ruling out any deal that "leaves us half-in, half-out".

In a long-awaited speech setting out her priorities for the Brexit negotiations, the Prime Minister said the UK cannot remain within the single market, as staying in "would, to all intents and purposes, mean not leaving the EU at all".

She pledged instead to seek a "bold and ambitious" trade agreement with the bloc – one that would keep trade with Europe as "frictionless as possible" while still allowing the UK to control its borders,

"I don't know whether it's customs arrangements or it's a time for companies to accommodate things or whether it's border arrangements or some other elements."

Ukip leader Paul Nuttall on Wednesday made it clear that he intends to ensure that set its own laws and strike solo trade deals with other countries.

May said Britain would remain a friendly partner to the EU, but made clear that she would be willing to walk away from the Brexit trade talks if her former EU partners proved to intransigent in their negotiations.

"No deal is better than a bad deal," she said.

May added that if the EU adopted a punitive approach, the UK might be forced to change its economic model; echoing the Chancellor's warning last week that the country would pursue an aggressive low-tax policy if it was

He said: "I say to the EU negotiators now is not the time for empty threats.

"Britain is not bluffing, Britain will not be bullied. Britain is not some sort of small nation on the peripheries of Europe.

"We are the United Kingdom. The fifth largest economy on the planet.

"We have links all over the globe – to the Anglosphere, the Commonwealth, the emerging markets of the Far East."

frozen out of European markets.

Editorial reaction

For months, "embittered Remainers" have been accusing May of not having a coherent Brexit plan, said the Daily Mail. She proved them spectacularly wrong this week. In "clear, unequivocal" terms, she pointed out that we can't remain in the single market, because it ties us to the free movement of people and the supremacy of EU courts. And she indicated that "if the EU insists that being a member of the customs union means we cannot strike our own trade deals in the wider world, she will take us out of that, too".

The speech was a "defining moment in British politics", said The Daily Telegraph. Optimistic and outward-looking, yet with a welcome touch of steel, May's plan "represents a masterclass in common sense and is exactly what Britain voted for last June".

The speech has certainly brought more clarity, said The Independent, but May has no mandate for her "extreme" Brexit vision. People didn't vote for the progressive loss of investment and jobs that will probably result from leaving the single market. And they certainly didn't vote for Britain to become the "Singapore of Europe" by mounting a race to the bottom on corporate taxes, as May has threatened.

MAY: "I want us to be a truly global Britain...a country that reaches beyond Europe."

What the commentators said The Prime Minister sounded almost euphoric, said Stefanie Bolts in Die Welt (Berlin). "Just think," she declared, "a single market without barriers... giving direct and unhindered access to the purchasing power of over 300 million of the world's wealthiest people. Bigger than Japan. Bigger than the United States. On your doorstep." No, that wasn't May this week, but her predecessor, Margaret Thatcher, speaking at the same venue, Lancaster House, in 1988. Thatcher was extolling the virtues of the very thing Britain now wants to turn its back on.

May believes she can secure a better arrangement for Britain, said John Harris in The Guardian. We'll see what happens when her rosy vision "collides with what the EU actually wants".

The negotiations won't be easy, said Daniel Hannan in The Spectator, but there is every chance of reaching a "mutually beneficial outcome" if EU leaders know we're willing to walk away without a deal and are not approaching them as a "supplicant". A failure to reach a deal wouldn't be the end of the world anyway. In the 'worst-case scenario", WTO tariffs would be applied reciprocally. According to a study by Civitas, UK exports to the EU would be subject to tariffs of around £5.2bn a year – around half our current annual budget contributions to Brussels; UK, meanwhile, the would collect £12.9bn on EU imports.

Lord Snowdon, the charmer who married a princess, dead at 86

Photographer was first commoner to wed a king's daughter for 450 years

LORD SNOWDON, the former husband of Princess Margaret, society photographer and 1960s bon vivant, has died at the 86.

During a career that spanned six decades, the former Anthony Armstrong Jones earned a reputation as one of the country's foremost photographers, with subjects as diverse as Marlene Dietrich, David Bowie and, of course, the Royal family. He was also a lifelong campaigner for the disabled.

But it is for his tumultuous 18-year marriage to Princess Margaret that he is best remembered.

easy charm

Lord Snowdon began working as a photographer after he failed his second year exams at Jesus College, Cambridge. His easy charm opened doors among the elite of British society and he was to become the first Commoner to wed a king's daughter for some 450 years. Armstrong-Jones was 28 when, in 1958, he met Princess Margaret. She was said to be on the rebound from Peter Townsend, a divorcee whom she'd been forbidden from Armstrongmarrying. Jones was said to be temperamentally unsuited to royal life. He wouldn't, his own father warned, relish spending the rest of his life walking two steps behind his wife. So it proved: 18 years after they married, they became the first royal couple to divorce since Henry VIII rid himself of Anne of Cleves in 1540. But in between, they were the most glamorous couple in Swinging London. And afterwards, Snowdon remained on good terms with the Royal Family: in 2006, he was invited to photograph the Queen to mark her 80th birthday.

Royal courtiers were appalled when plain Tony Armstrong-Jones became engaged to Princess Margaret but he was, in fact, born into the Welsh gentry. His father, Ronald, was a QC; his parents having separated when he was a toddler, his mother Anne (née Messel) lived in a castle with her second husband, the Earl of Rosse. He was sent to Eton. Though gilded, his childhood was not easy: his mother was a distant woman, who referred to him as her "ugly son".

Aged 16, he contracted polio, and spent six months in Liverpool Royal Infirmary. The illness left him with a limp (and disabled him severely in later life).

After two years at Jesus College, Cambridge, Jones moved to London, and set himself up as a society photographer: he started out taking photos of debutantes, but made his name with ground-breaking informal portraits of actors. Charming, witty and handsome, he had countless affairs with his female subjects and other women - and attracted male admirers too.

talent for mimicry

In 1956, he was invited to photograph Prince Charles for his eighth birthday, which led to further royal commissions. Cecil Beaton – who'd spent years currying favour was furious, and even more so when, two years later, the young upstart met Princess Margaret at a sitting, and began inviting her to visit him in his "little white room" overlooking the Thames at Rotherhithe. She was delighted by his irreverence, and talent for mimicry. She even brought her "fun-loving mother" to visit him and his raffish friends in the East End, said The Independent. Their marriage, in 1960, was a Westminster Abbey spectacle, followed by a balcony appearance at the Palace. The crowds cheered, but his friends were worried.

The couple moved into Kensington Palace, where Jones was forced to deal with sneering courtiers and frequent snubs from other lesser royals. Meanwhile, said The Guardian, he had to adjust to a royal protocol that insisted that his wife was always served first at dinner, and that no one could eat after she'd finished, or leave the table before her. The now Lord Snowdon escaped by taking on various outside projects, including photographic assignments for The Sunday Times, many of which highlighted the plight of the poor, the elderly and the lonely.

He undertook royal duties too, though. In October 1966, he was the first member of the family to visit Aberfan after the landslide disaster, arriving unannounced by train, with no retinue.

In the early years of their marriage, the couple relished a jet-set lifestyle, and - mingling with rock stars, actors and artists - made the stuffy Royals look cool, said the Daily Express. The partying continued even after the arrival of their two children, David and Sarah. But cracks were appearing. Margaret was imperious and demanding - notorious for her tantrums - and insecure; he could be arrogant and difficult, and was serially unfaithful, said The Independent. There was talk of drunken rows, and infidelities on both sides. He reportedly took to leaving "lists of things I hate about you"

Margaret and Tony: their 18-year marriage was tumultuous, marked by a jet-set lifestyle, frequent rows and tit-for-tat infidelities on both sides for her to find. Then came much-publicised her with affair Roddy Llewellyn, a 26-year-old landscape gardener. They finally divorced in 1978. immediately, Almost Snowdon married Lucy Lindsay-Hogg, with whom he'd been having an affair for years. They had a daughter, Frances, a few months later, but divorced in 2000, when she tired of his infidelities. In 1998, he'd had a "secret love child" – a son, Jasper – with the Country Life journalist Melanie Cable-Alexander.

In 2004, a paternity test confirmed that he had fathered a daughter, Polly Fry, who was born while he was on honeymoon with Princess Margaret.

Snowdon spent much of his remaining years fighting for the rights of the disabled, taking on, among others, Butlins ande the Royal Chelsea Flower Show. In 1981, he set up the Snowdon Trust for the disabled; and in 1988, he took on British Rail, after being outraged to find a woman in a wheelchair strapped into a guard's van.

He is survived by his children.

Ailing McGuinness quitting politics

FORMER IRA chief Martin McGuinness is leaving frontline politics permanently to recover from an "very unspecified serious illness", he announced this week.

He quit as Northern Ireland's Deputy First Minister last week in protest at Democratic Unionist Party First Minister Arlene Foster's refusal to step aside over a botched green energy scheme.

His party Sinn Fein's refusal to replace him forced a new election, on March 2, for the Northern Ireland Assembly.

Mr McGuinness, 66, said he would not stand in it because of ill health, which some reports have identified as a rare heart condition.

But he wants to remain "an ambassador for peace, unity and reconciliation".

His life has taken him from republican terrorist fighting British rule to senior politician dining with the Queen.

The former butcher admits to being secondin-command of the IRA, and was found by an inquiry "probably" to have carried a submachine gun, on Bloody Sunday in 1972, when soldiers killed 14 civil rights protesters. He served jail time over terror links but was an IRA negotiator in secret talks with the British government in 1972. He became increasingly prominent in the IRA's political wing Sinn Fein and in 1998 with its leader Gerry Adams signed the Good Friday peace deal brokered by Tony Blair.

He was elected a Westminster MP in 1997 but as a Sinn Fein member who will not swear loyalty to the Queen he never took his seat. He was later elected to the Northern Ireland Assembly and nearly 10 years ago he became deputy to First Minister the Rev Ian Paisley of the DUP.

UK-China rail link finalized

Britain and China are now linked by a direct train service for the first time. Setting off from Yiwu, in eastern China, the East Wind freight trains revive the Silk Road trading route, passing through seven countries on their 7,456-mile journey to London's East End - in a relatively quick 16 days. It is not perhaps as novel as it sounds, as varying rail gauges require the containers to be reloaded onto different trains at various points. However, it is hoped that the line will open up new trade opportunities between China and the UK.

Trump names Woody Johnson as new UK ambassador

Woody Johnson, the owner of the New York Jets football team and scion of the Johnson & Johnson industrial dynasty, has been nominated as the next US ambassador to London.

69-year-old The businessman and philanthropist is а longstanding Republican donor, but came relatively late to supporting Donald Trump's election campaign. He served as finance chairman on Jeb Bush's campaign to win the Republican nomination until it collapsed in February last year. Johnson only endorsed Trump in May, but emerged as a major fundraiser in the final months of the campaign and served on his inaugural committee.

In 2006, Johnson was called to testify before the senate on the use of tax avoidance schemes by his investment firm. He claimed he had relied on professional advisers who told him the use of tax havens was lawful and he later settled with the Internal Revenue Service, paying all the outstanding taxes and interest.

Once confirmed by the senate, Johnson will be the sixth businessman in a row to be appointed as ambassador to the UK, which has emerged as a top reward for wealthy campaign donors in the US political system.

Johnson's father was president of the Johnson & Ĵohnson pharmaceutical and medical equipment company, but the nominee himself has run a private investment firm, the Johnson Company Inc, since it was set up in 1978. He spends much of his time raising funds for charities combating lupus and juvenile diabetes, both of which have affected his family.

NHS in crisis? the media weighs in

BRITAIN'S cherished National Health Service is facing a crisis of financing and morale, according to the findings of a new report.

A two-year analysis by the Health Service Journal (HSJ) paints a picture of lengthy waiting lists, overflowing casualty departments and staff stuggling to cope with ever-increasing an workload, with official data suggesting almost every acute hospital in England is failing to meet its own standard on how many nurses it should have on wards.

described Nurses "desperately unsafe" numbers of registered nurses, while others said patients are being put at risk.

The problem appears to have got worse since the Government introduced a cap on how much hospitals are allowed to spend on agency staff.

Health Secretary Jeremy Hunt ordered NHS trusts to publish monthly data on staffing levels as part of the Government response to the mid-Staffordshire scandal in 2007, in which is "not for turning". hundreds of patients died as a result of poor care.

But an analysis by the HSJ, covering data from 2014-15 to 2016-17, shows 96 per cent of acute hospitals (214) reporting figures failed to meet their own planned level for registered nurses.

Some 85 per cent (190 hospitals) also missed their target for nurses working at night in the same month.

"We should have reached the tipping point by now, said Polly Toynbee in The Guardian. Usually, during a major NHS crisis, "prime ministers crumple when people die – as they have in the Royal Worcester Hospital's corridors". When doctors describe conditions as the worst they've ever seen, when patients on trollies pile up in A&E departments, when the Royal College of Surgeons protests at the cancellation of cancer operations, you would expect the Government to take swift action. But no, Theresa May Instead, we've had a "flamethrower of blame from Westminster".

The system, says the PM, needs "reform", not more money. Patients have been criticised for clogging up hospitals with minor complaints, GPs for not pulling their weight, managers for not managing better.

May is quite right, said Russell Hopkins in the Daily Mail. The "real cause of the crisis" is the breakdown in GP services. Thanks to Labour's absurdly generous 2004 contract, allowing doctors to duck out of out-ofhours services, "too many GPs have become unresponsive and unavailable". And because many GPs now choose to work part-time, even the core weekday hours are not always covered: 46% of practices in England close at some point during these times. As a result, A&E is flooded by people who should have seen their local doctor.

Be honest, said Philip Stephens in the FT.

The NHS is run on a shoestring, and "the shoestring has broken". Funding may be rising in real terms, as May But Britain protests. spends about 30% less per person than Germany. And "the budget is shrinking as a share of national income, at a time when a growing and ageing population, increased longevity, an epidemic of chronic diseases such as diabetes, and higher expectations for health care, are generating everrising demand". Deep cuts to social care since 2010 have transferred an additional burden to the NHS, with many elderly people in need of care 'clogging hospital beds".

Realimprovements will require an "ideological compromise", said The Guardian. "Labour will have to concede that problems in the NHS are not simply a manifestation of wicked Tory austerity." And the Tories must "stop pretending that adequate resources are available", and stump up more cash.

Unfortunately, for the time being, the gap between the parties appears "unbridgeable". Corbyn needs the NHS as a stick "for beating the Government". Theresa May seems determined to "deny the problem". So instead of a solution, expect more political "trench warfare".

Good wee We

Good week for: Jeremy Hunt, the Health Secretary, with reports that he could be about to make around £14.5m from the sale of a business he co-founded before becoming an MP. Known as the Queen of Arts, Dame Julia spent 25 years turning the Serpentine into one of the world's most admired galleries, before stepping down in October 2015, saying she wanted to concentrate on other projects. Bad week for: Healthy eaters, many of whom have struggled to get their greens. Owing to bad weather in southern Spain, where much of the veg sold in British supermarkets is grown, stocks of courgettes, spinach, aubergines and lettuce have all been running low. The Notting Hill Carnival (pictured), after a London Assembly report concluded that the two-day festival -Europe's biggest street party – must change

SPIRIT OF THE AGE A growing number of employers are fitting their workers with trackers to measure their fitness, productivity and ability to get on with colleagues. Deloitte and the NHS are among those who ask staff to wear "sociometric badges", in many cases for 24 hours a day, according to The Sunday Times.

Meet A Member: Margaret Finlay

Meet Margaret Finlay from Edinburgh (via Shetland, Dumfries and Galloway and Glasgow), who moved to LA about 15 months ago to pursue...a life worth living!

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

My husband is retraining as an actor (from a software engineering CEO!), so LA was the no-brainer destination! He was born in Santa Monica, grew up in Munich and spent the last nearly 20 years living in Edinburgh, where we met 8 and 1/2 years ago. I'm not gonna lie, I was talking up Vancouver as the best destination option, but here we are, "living the dream".

What do you miss most from home?

I miss the fresh air! And the green hills. And until this past couple of weeks,

I was really missing rain too, but LA has been delivering the moisture of late - love it! Now we've been here over a year, I'm missing family members more keenly.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? If so, why?

I thought LA was busy! A sprawling concrete jungle with wonderfully wide streets, that were less wonderfully full of traffic ALL the time! I'm a country girl at heart, so the sheer volume of people and cars was a bit of a culture shock. I've adjusted now I think, and settled in a bit more, so I take it more in my stride. In the heat of the summer the air seemed oppressively grubby - now things have cooled off it's wonderful and there are some days it altogether feels practically fresh!

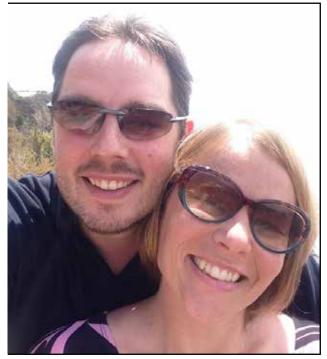

What do you find the difference biggest is living here versus Edinburgh?

I don't miss the dark, grey winter days. The damp and the cold (although this past summer I did recall them somewhat fondly), the wind and sleet. Despite the weather I used to walk more in Edinburgh, and miss being able hop on a bus as required, or a train! But I found this first LA summer a bit too hot for spending much time outdoors, and the public transport options are a bit more limited.

There's actually been some pretty major changes in my life the past few years and LA, for me, at the moment (!) is a bright and brave new world. I was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis in 2012 and had to give up my vet work (I'm a veterinarian) because of it in 2013. For a time I thought my life was effectively over and I never thought I'd be able to work again. I was on a half dozen or so prescription medications, daily injections and what-not and was generally feeling pretty hopeless. But then I kind of stabilized, medically speaking, and I began to look at different ways of optimizing my health and taking responsibility for managing my disease. Fast forward to now,

I'm not taking any drugs at all and have spent the last year working more and feeling better than I have in a long time! After spending the past year working as a veterinarian here in LA, I've come to realize that many of the diseases I was seeing in pets, could be prevented or treated using a more holistic and that approach, conventional medical options were not always in the best interest of the patient. So I decided to quit my job and am in the process of studying holistic and integrative practices, veterinary including nutrition, therapeutic massage and hospice care and plan to

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Your health should be a priority this month ahead, so if you are planning anything that could jeopardize it take heed and put yourself in safe mode. Your boss Mars is having an emotional few weeks, so stay cool and do not overreact.

TAURUS: Whatever you are thinking you feel is probably not the truth, as the planets that affect you are going haywire. Do not be fooled into acting on these thoughts. Take a day or so and think hard before acting.

GEMINI: You will have to make haste to put right that unfinished emotional business that is still hovering in the back of your mind. It's best to set your plans for unexpected travel not as far as you think.

CANCER: Plans are delayed this week due to a change in financial matters. Remember a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. This will likely ring true in a family situation this coming month.

LEO: Movement of some kind is all around you this coming month, even if nothing is obvious right now. You would be wise to spend these next couple of weeks with close family or friends.

VIRGO: You will be getting a break this coming month due to positive planets helping you along. The last couple of months problems are receding, bringing you luck this weekend.

LIBRA: You will find you can deal with life much better when you sort out your relationship problems. Lucky Jupiter is visiting you for a while ahead and will help you, maybe not as you wish, but as you need.

SCORPIO: Sometimes when life seems like its not going your way, remember this: There is a reason for everything and in a few weeks you will see the outcome is very much better than you can imagine.

SAGITTARIUS: Your lucky boss Jupiter is in the lovely Libra until later in the year. He is encouraging you to dream bigger than you have done in any area. As we move through the next few weeks by March you will see the plan unfold.

CAPRICORN: This is the beginning of your personal new year and with the Sun in your money houses it's time to put any plans into action to grow by springtime. You will be in a much better mood by month's end.

AQUARIUS: You will probably be feeling like a break away from routine. This is in part because your Birthday is approaching. However, it is not the right time to make long term plans yet - hold of until next month if you can. Happy Birthday.

PISCES: It's high time to put your life in order, ready for your personal new year. While you have plenty of time left, be sure that you understand more than ever before that you are ready to make an important decision this year. Time and tide wait for no man!

Queen Anne's passion: A Want of Kindness

Exclusive interview with author Joanne Limburg about her new novel about Queen Anne

"Many years ago, watching a was documentary about royals, disease and doctors," says author Joanne Limburg.

"I was particularly intrigued and moved by the story of Queen Anne, who went through seventeen or eighteen pregnancies, but was to leave no heir. She suffered all manner of losses...miscarriages, stillbirths, neo-natal deaths, the deaths of two daughters in infancy and one son on his eleventh birthday. Years later, when I had myself suffered a miscarriage and given birth to a child, I was trying to write about those experiences, and Anne came into my head again."

The court of King Charles II is a glittering rebirth of Restoration England. Princess Anne, niece of the king, is a ten-year old sickly girl. As she grows up she likes to gamble, gossip with her ladies of the bed chamber and eat unhealthy foods. As a pawn in her uncle's plot to secure the crown of England, she seems unlikely to survive. At eighteen she marries Prince George of Denmark and becomes heir to the throne. She will face grief over her lost children, the political intrigues of her sister Mary and her betrayal.

"I felt drawn to Anne because of her experience of maternal loss," says Limburg.

"When you suffer a a wealth of fascinating miscarriage, you realise women how many experience it, how much it hurts, and how little it is talked about. wanted, through I Anne's story, to honour all those bereft women and all their lost children."

Limburg did а great deal of research, reading biographies, histories of the time, and works on clothes and food. She had a small research grant from the Society of Authors that enabled her to visit Windsor Castle, Hampton Court and Kensington Palace, to see the locations where the many of the events in the book took place.

"While I was writing the book, I subscribed to a service called British History Online, where I could check the State records of the time," says Limburg. "That supplied me with detail that I was able to use in the book. It enabled me to check what was happening on a political level on any given day in Anne's life. As a member of the royal family, Anne's personal life was inextricably tied up with domestic and European politics."

A thread that runs through the book is passionate Anne's friendship with Sarah Churchill. "Sarah kept the letters Anne wrote to her," says Limburg. "I was fortunate enough to be able to read them in the British Library. It was extraordinary to touch the paper Anne had touched, to read her writing and even to see those places where her tears had smudged the ink."

Limburg has written three poetry collections: Femenismo, Paraphernalia and releasing next year, The Autistic Alice. She's also written a children's poetry collection, Bookside Down. She's written two memoirs, Woman The Who Thought Too Much and Small Pieces: A Book of Lamentations, to release next summer.

Limburg won an Eric Gregory Award for poetry in 1998. Femenismo was shortlisted for the Forward Prize for Best First Collection. Paraphernalia was a Poetry Book Society Choice. The Woman Who Thought Too Much was on the shortlist for Mind Book of the Year. A Want of Kindness has yet to be optioned for film or television.

Greenberg says her role in getting this book published was presenting it to her publishers and then... waiting. "I apologised to her editor for saying that it was stunning, says Limburg. "But, her editor replied that if I were saying that it was probably true...which it has been found to be."

Book Corner with Gabrielle Pantera

Limburg has recently finished a PhD and is looking forward to taking a break. She is based in Cambridge, and was born in London.

A Want of Kindness, a novel by Joanne Limburg. Hardcover: 448 pages, Publisher: Pegasus Books; 1 edition (December 6, 2016). Language: English, ISBN-13: 978-1681772592 $25.95

THE BRITISH WEEKLY, SAT. JANUARY 21, 2017

Happy 20th LA-nniversary to me!

This week marked my 20th anniversary of arriving in Los Angeles!

When I first got here back in 1997 I had no plans to stay for more than a few weeks. So many of my friends are intrigued or impressed that I am still here and still happy!

LA is like a magnet. For some people it is has an attractive pull that is hard to resist, but for many others it has a repulsive push that makes it unbearable. I have never really been able to put my finger on what keeps me here. It is almost like Los Angeles chooses you and will either embrace you or break you. As I know it can be a very tough city to get settled in.

Being part of Brits in LA has made the transition easier for some, but it still takes time and effort. This city has plenty of people who seem genuinely interested in who you are/what you do, but sadly these enquiries are often to gauge whether you are worth chatting to. If you dig a little deeper you will start to find the 'angels', I promise. We actively discourage traditional networking at our weekly Breakfast Club, as we feel this is a time to nurture friendships and the community. However we are always pleased when business relationships grow organically via one of our get-togethers.

Fellow Brit in LA, Richard Shelton hit the nail on the head when he was interviewed for our weekly Meet A Member feature. He said the best advice he had been given, was 'Don't ask what LA can give you. Rather, ask what you can give to LA'.

Night is set for January 24th

So if you haven't found your feet yet make sure to come along and get involved. We all need to see a friendly face every now and again, we all have our struggles, but being part of a community has really helped me feel right at home in spite of the fact that I am thousands of miles away from many of my friends and family.

All of our upcoming events can be found on our Facebook page @ BritsinLA or visit www. Britsin.LA or feel free to drop me a line at eileen@ Britsin.LA

Our annual film competition 'The Toscars' kicks off on Tuesday January 24th with our Team Selection night at Obica Restaurant on Sunset Plaza. About 100 of our members get split into groups and go off and make five-minute parodies of the latest Oscar-nominated films. If you are still undecided as to whether you want to participate, feel free to stop by for a drink (and the best pizza I have had in ages). All details can be found at www.the toscars.com. ### Sherlock stars not exactly besties away from the camera...

British actors Martin Freeman and Benedict Cumberbatch have played best friends on Sherlock for over six years but behind the camera there is allegedly no love lost between the pair.

Co-creator Steven Moffat has already said the future of the show depends on the two actors' busy Hollywood schedules andtheir willingness to return, but that is starting to look like a long shot.

The news comes as the series four finale pulled in the show's lowestever audience with a peak of 6.2million in the UK on Sunday. A source said: "Benedict and Martin aren't mates and they don't spend time together away from the show."

"Now that their careers have taken off – both have become Hollywood stars with Benedict recently taking on the lead role in Marvel's Dr Strange – neither Benedict nor Martin have 'a huge desire to come back for another season'.

"They're professional and very polite to each other but there's not the warmth you'd expect after filming together for six years," the source told The Sun.

And it was a feeling that fans of the show also had when they watched The Final Problem on Sunday night after the episode ended with a sense of finality, as the late Mary Watson was heard on tape giving an emotional speech in which she referred to the pair as 'my Baker Street boys'.

Questions continue to be raised over the future of the program, given concerns over the film stars' continued availability; Cumberbatch has several movie projects in the works, while The Hobbit star Freeman is committed to several other projects, including forthcoming superhero film Black Panther.

Another "well-placed BBC source" told Radio Times that there would not be another series of Sherlock next January, while adding that the broadcaster is "reasonably hopeful" the programme will return for 2018.

If it is the end, the finale to the fourth season ended in such a way as to tie up any loose ends, with Moffat recently adding: "We could end it there.

"We couldn't have ended it on any of the previous [seasons] because they're all ended on walloping, great cliffhangers."

Hardy workouts bring aches and pains!

IT SURE is hard(y) work being beautiful!

At least that's my takeaway from hearing Tom Hardy describe the aches and pains he suffers after bulking up for roles including Bane in 'The Dark Knight Rises'. The heartthrob has revealed that constantly changing his physique for films has really taken its toll. Oo-er!

Speaking to The Daily Beast, the 'Mad Max' actor said that his new mobster role, starring as the middleaged Al Capone in "Fonzo" might mean he'll have to pack on the pounds, explaining: "It's not the classic Al Capone that you necessarily envision with the silhouette.

"I don't want to give too much away about it, but there's definitely a transformation with that role.

"I don't know if it's as drastic as Bane. I've probably damaged my body too much. I'm only little. If I keep putting on weight I'll collapse like a house of cards under too much pressure."

Tom, who recently discussed his chances of playing James Bond, blamed the fluctuations between different weights for his new 'aches and pains'.

He continued: "After the film I'm tired, and you maybe have to change your shape again and go back to your normal size for the next film. To go from one extreme to another has a cost.

And while the Londoner admits he got away with an extreme body-altering regime in his youth, he says it's harder now he's got 'achier'.

"I'm certainly a bit achier than I used to be... I certainly have joints that click that probably shouldn't click, you know what I mean?

He added: "As you get into your forties you have to be more mindful of the rapid training, packing on a lot of weight and getting physical, and then not having enough time to keep training because you're busy filming, so your body is swimming in two different directions at the same time."

Payet has been linked with a switch to both

Payet has reportedly decided he has outgrown the club, having been one of the players of the tournament at Euro 2016 last summer.

League, despite breaking the £450m barrier for the first time ever. Barcelona rank second with revenue only marginally greater than that of Real Madrid.

United's resurgence comes as a result of significant growth across all three of the revenue categories (matchday, broadcast and commercial) compared with 2014/15.

The club's matchday and broadcast revenues were boosted by their return to the Champions League, but it was commercial revenue growth of £71m that has led to United's ascension to the top position, with the club now boasting over 70 commercial partnerships.

Antoine Griezmann could be Chelsea's next marquee signing as Atletico Madrid appeared to leave the door open for the French striker to move to London in the summer.

And although Chelsea are thought to be the striker's preferred destination, it's no secret that Jose Mourinho is also an admirer, prompting speculation that Manchester United will also submit a bigmoney bid for the marksman, who has a  $\in$ 100 million (currently £86 million) release clause in his contract.

With Simeone likely to leave Atletico in the summer after taking the unusual step last September of shortening his contract with the Madrid club by two years, one considerable barrier to Griezmann (pictured, right) departing is expected to be removed.

In addition, Atletico are due to move into a new 67,000-capacity stadium next season and it is thought the club will have to consider the sale of at least one leading player to help offset some of the loans they have taken out to fund the Simeone has had a significant part to play in helping to turn Griezmann into one of the world's most revered strikers but the Atletico coach was adamant he would not stand in the player's way if he was determined to leave. Asked about the speculation surrounding Griezmann's future, Simeone said: "I don't tie anybody down. I simply work in order to continue getting better for the good of the club.

"He [Griezmann] is in an extraordinary moment. He is working well, he has got back on the score sheet. He is currently in great form and it's normal that the top clubs in the world want him. I'm not surprised that those that can afford him are seeking him."

Bastian Schweinsteiger could be the next player to leave Old Trafford after Memphis Depay underwent a medical in France on Thursday as Lyon moved closer to completing the signing of the Holland winger in a deal that could eventually be worth up to £21.7 million with add Mourinho is not averse to Schweinsteiger seeing out the season at Old Trafford but talks are ongoing with potential suitors, including Major Soccer League clubs in the US.

Will Jesus be Pep's savior?

Brazilian teen sensation finalizes City move

E M B A T T L E D Manchester City boss Pep Guardiola got a welcome boost ahead of this weekend's crunch match with Spurs as his club secured the signature of red-hot Brazilian prospect Gabriel Jesus.

The 19-year-old winger is set to make his debut on Saturday against the North London team after formally completing his £27m move from Palmeiras.

Brazil international Jesus agreed a five-year deal with City in August.

He stayed with Palmeiras until the end of the Brazilian season in December.

"He has the potential to become one of the best attacking players in the game," said City's director of football Txiki Begiristain.

Jesus arrived at City at the start of the month but registration to play for his new club was reportedly delayed while the Football Association examined documents relating to his move.

City regard the player as the best young talent in South America and fought off interest from Barcelona.

Jesus was voted the best newcomer in the Brazilian top flight last season and was part of his country's squad at the Rio Olympics. The teenager said City boss Pep Guardiola was

Jesus added: "City is a club that always competes for the title in the competitions it enters, so that was an important factor, and because of the manager, Guardiola, and the squad."

City are fifth in the Premier League table, 10 points behind leaders Chelsea, after two defeats in the last three games.

•Dimitri Payet is reportedly so desperate to return to Marseille that he hhas reportedly turned down offers from three different Chinese clubs that are willing to pay the West Ham playmaker £500,000-a-week.

The French international's family have already moved back to the French port city and the player is determined to join them, even if it cont. on page 19, col. 1
