May vows to US: no more wars like Iraq

■ But PM says "Opposites attract" and insists she can work with Donald Trump

Theresa May has told US Republicans the UK and America must "stand up for our interests" but cannot return to "failed" interventionist policies.

Speaking in Philadelphia ahead of Friday's scheduled talks with Donald Trump, the Prime Minister said: "The days of Britain and America intervening in sovereign countries in an attempt to remake the world in our own image are over."

Delivering a speech greeted by frequent loud applause, May told the audience that relations between the UK and the US have "defined the world,"

"I speak to you not just as Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, but as a fellow Conservative who believes in the same principles that underpin the agenda of your Party," she said.

"The value of liberty. The dignity of work. The principles of nationhood, family, economic prudence, patriotism – and putting power in the hands of the people.

"I know that it is these principles that you have put at the heart of your plan for government."

Mrs May, the first foreign leader ever to address the annual Republican gathering, was also set to meet Donald Trump for the first time in Philadelphia - telling reporters that "opposites attract," as she set out to forge the future of the special relationship.

Putin warning

But she also told Mr Trump not to trust Vladimir Putin, the Russian president.

"When it comes to Russia, as so often it is wise to turn to the example of President Reagan who - during negotiations with his opposite number Mikhail Gorbachev - used to abide by the adage 'trust but verify'," she said.

"With President Putin, my advice is to 'engage but beware'".

Despite the positive relationship between Mr

THERESA MAY: "The days of Britain and America intervening in sovereign countries in an attempt to remake the world in our own image are over."

Trump and Mr Putin, Mrs May used her speech to heap on criticism of Russia.

She said: "There is nothing inevitable about conflict between Russia and the West. And nothing unavoidable about retreating to the days of the Cold War.

"But we should engage with Russia from a position of strength. And we should build the relationships, systems and processes that make cooperation more likely than conflict – and that, particularly after the illegal annexation of Crimea, give assurance to Russia's neighbouring states that their security is not in question.

"We should no jeopardise the freedoms that President Reagan and Mrs Thatcher brought to Eastern Europe by accepting President Putin's claim that it is now in his sphere of influence."

Meanwhile, the Prime Minister is to use her visit to the United States to tell Mr Trump that Britain and America can lead the world together with a "renewed" bond after Brexit.

Mrs May has come under pressure to challenge Mr Trump after he said waterboarding of terror suspects "absolutely works".

position" on the issue was unchanged, while David Davis, Brexit secretary, stressed the British government does not agree with torture "under any circumstances whatsoever".

In her speech, Mrs May added: "It is in our interests - those of Britain and America together - to stand strong together to defend our values, our interests and the very ideas in which we believe."

"This cannot mean a return to the failed policies of the past. The days of Britain and America intervening in sovereign countries in an attempt to remake the world in our own image are over.

"But nor can we afford to stand idly by when the threat is real and when it is in our own interests to intervene. We must be strong, smart and hardheaded. And we must demonstrate the resolve necessary to stand up for our interests.

"And whether it is the security of Israel in the Middle East or Estonia in the Baltic states, we must always stand up for our friends and allies in democratic countries that find themselves in tough neighbourhoods too," she said, to applause from her audience.

Supreme Court ruling forces Government to put Brexit to House of Commons vote

- Justices uphold principle of Parliamentary sovereignty
- June referendum 'only advisory'

THE certainty of Britain's exit from the EU became a little cloudier this week as the Supreme Court in London gave its ruling on Article 50, following a four-day hearing last December.

The highest court in the land rejected an appeal by ministers against a High Court judgment blocking their decision to begin Britain's exit from the European Union without Parliament having a say.

The Justices' decision will affect the manner in which the Government can begin the formal process of leaving the European Union, and will mean MPs will get to vote in the House of Commons before last summer's vote to leave can be acted upon.

The decision was a victory for a wide-ranging group of anti-Article 50 campaigners led by investment manager Gina Miller, 51, and hairdresser Deir Dos Santos.

Supreme Court justices ruled, by a majority of eight to three, that Prime Minister Theresa May cannot lawfully bypass MPs and peers by using the royal prerogative to trigger Article 50 of the Lisbon Treaty and start the two-year process of negotiating the UK's divorce from its EU partners.

The ruling is a blow to Mrs May, who has repeatedly said intends to trigger Article 50 by the end of March following the clear majority in favour of Brexit in the June 2016 referendum. Article 50 is the formal mechanism which a nation state must use if it wishes to leave the European Union. It is part of the 2007 Lisbon Treaty, which provided a new constitutional basis for the EU by replacing two treaties which had gone before it.

It says: "A Member State which decides to withdraw shall notify the European Council of its intention. In the light of the guidelines provided by the European Council, the Union shall negotiate and conclude an agreement with that State, setting out the arrangements for its withdrawal, taking account of the framework for its future relationship with the Union.

"That agreement shall be negotiated in accordance with Article

VICTORY: campaigner and investment manager Gina Miller

218(3) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union. It shall be concluded on behalf of the Union by the Council, acting by a qualified majority, after obtaining the consent of the European Parliament.

Because the referendum on Britain's EU membership last June was not legally binding, it was treated by the court as a consultative exercise, and the judges decided that an Act of Parliament was required to make Brexit legal.

The Government appealed against that ruling, which has now been decided by the highest court in the country and has set a legal precedent for generations to come.

The Government will do "all that is necessary" to implement the Supreme Court ruling that Parliament must give its approval to trigger the process of leaving the EU, Attorney General Jeremy Wright said.

Mr Wright added that the Government was "disappointed" by the final decision in its historic battle, but said that ministers will comply with the ruling, which effectively means that MPs must be given a vote on Article 50.

Speaking on the steps of the Supreme Court, the Attorney General said: "The Government will comply with the judgment of the court and do all that is necessary to implement it."

Media reaction

The media responded to the decision along predictably partisan lines.

"One thing is certain," said the Daily Mail. Tuesday was "not a good day for democracy". It was the day when eight Supreme Court judges – opposed by three dissenters – handed MPs and peers the right to "overturn" the wishes of 17.4 million voters who opted last June to leave the EU. The court "bowed to the wishes" of Gina Miller, the "gloating investment manager" who brought the case, and ruled that only Parliament can trigger Brexit – even though both sides in the referendum campaign insisted the result would be binding. In so doing, the Court "handed a weapon to Remoaners in both Houses who are determined to frustrate the will of the people by delaying Brexit or watering it down".

Rubbish, said The Times. The Supreme Court decision "should be cause for celebration among Remainers and Brexiteers alike". upheld the principle of parliamentary sovereignty, which was "at the very centre of the original referendum debate". Since at least the Bill of Rights of 1689, it has been a "pillar" of the British constitution that laws may not be changed, nor citizens deprived of their rights, without a vote in Parliament.

'no influence'

The ruling certainly made an impact in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, said Michael Hugh Walker in The Independent: all 11 justices rejected the request of the devolved assemblies to be consulted on leaving the EU. This was expected, but it confirms that the rest of the UK is "consigned to a destiny" over which it has no influence. Politicians in Edinburgh, Cardiff and Belfast are "frustrated, angry and worried at the prospect of a Brexit guided solely by English politicians swayed by hard Brexit sentiments". But thanks to the Supreme Court, Parliament will scrutinise Brexit process more closely, said The Guardian. This is only right. The referendum result was clear. But it cannot be the last word on this "complex, changing and hugely important subject".

Trump inauguration greeted with almost universal derision

■ Even the right-wing press find little to admire about the new President's performance

LAST FRIDAY saw Donald Trump's inauguration as America's 45th President and, as expected, the British media had plenty to say about it – hardly any of it positive.

"Well, now we know," said Janet Daley in The Daily Telegraph. Before last Friday's inauguration, there had been speculation "Donald Trump the Ranting Candidate" would - in that moment be transformed into Trump the Statesman. The ceremony is, after all, supposed to be a "solemn" occasion – not a victory party, but a "proud commemoration of the peaceful transition of power that has persisted since the founding of the Republic". But there was no miracle in Washington on that rainy afternoon, said The Observer. Swaggering into power, Donald Trump rejected "good manners, national healing and consensual politics - and opted for division".

'dystopian vision'

Inaugural speeches are usually uplifting, said Jonathan Freedland in The Guardian: they're supposed to bind wounds, restore hope. Once again, Trump tore up the rule book. In his 1,433 words, he slammed his predecessor's record and - doubling down on his message of economic nationalism - conjured up a dystopian vision of America in which rusting "factories are scattered like tombstones across the landscape". He spoke of cities destroyed by crime and drugs, failing schools, "stolen" jobs, and "forgotten" people. "This American carnage stops right here," he thundered, jabbing his finger. Having promised to transfer power to "the American people", he tore into the Washington establishment alongside him, accusing it of "reaping the rewards of government while the people have borne the cost". And for the foreign dignitaries in attendance, he had this stark message: "From this day forward, it's going to be only America first". Embracing a slogan adopted by the isolationists and anti-Semites who wanted to keep the US out of WWII, he warned that there will be no more defending "other nations' borders". Every decision - from trade to immigration -"will be made to benefit American workers and American families". His only foreign commitment was to wipe "radical Islamic terrorism... from the face of the Earth". the supporters who'd flocked to Washington, this was like Christmas, said Tim Stanley in The Daily Telegraph. They hadn't been happy about the messages they'd heard earlier that day. When the Democrat Chuck Schumer started talking about inclusivity, he was jeered. Trump's speech was more like it. The liberals may have hoped for some comfort - but "not one American voted for Trump on the basis that he would heal the country. They voted for him to get things done - things that they understand are controversial but believe are necessary". They don't want Washington reformed; they want it stamped on. Trump would have been lying if he had "claimed to speak for everyone". He comes to office with the lowest approval rating of any president in modern history. He takes over a country in which a sizeable number of voters hate him – and the feeling "is mutual".

"An impulsive braggart and bigot," is how The Guardian described Mr. Trump

'terrified'

"An impulsive braggart and bigot is now in control of the world's most powerful military and economy," said Gary Younge in The Guardian. "The hands that once grabbed the pussy now have access to the nuclear launch codes." Many Americans are "terrified". The day after his inauguration, their concern was made clear when in cities across the US - and in 59 other countries - women (and men) took to the streets to show their disgust for the new president's apparent misogyny, said The Sunday Telegraph, as well as his stance on abortion, immigration and the environment. In Washington, where up to half a million people took part in the Women's March (far more than turned up the day before), one group handed out knitted "Pussy Hats", creating a sea of pink. We were accused of virtue signalling", said Suzanne Moore in The Guardian. We were told that it was too soon; that the march was pointless. But the people who would take away women's rights have made their anger and frustration felt. We must do the same.

Still, if the aim is to stop Trump winning a second term, there is a better way, said Daniel Hannan in the International Business Times. Trump's supporters heard his comments about women and minorities on the campaign trail; they may not have liked them, but they still voted for him. So...the Left should focus on a weakness that his supporters might be swayed by -"namely his apparent inability to distinguish between public office and commercial interest". The former might give a warmer glow of selfrighteousness, but the latter could actually work.

News From Britain

May under fire over Trident

Theresa May came under fierce criticism this week for covering up news of a Trident missile test that went dramatically awry.

According to The Times, Sunday unarmed missile launched from the submarine HMS Vengeance off the Florida coast last summer, veered off course and headed back towards the US mainland before self-destructing. The misfire came weeks before the Government's victory in a key Commons vote on renewing the Trident II D5 missile system. May's critics claim she deliberately omitted any reference to the incident during the debate.

In a TV interview this week, May repeatedly refused to say whether she had known of the incident at the time of the vote, although Downing Street later conceded that she had been informed. Press reports said that Washington, which supplies Britain with its stock of Trident missiles, had asked Downing Street to suppress any news of the test's failure.

What the editorials said

Ministers are "treating the British public like children", said the Daily Mirror. It's a matter of "paramount" public importance that tests involving a key element of our nuclear defence failed. Yet May and Defence Secretary Michael Fallon have deliberately kept MPs in the dark. Of course, there's sometimes a case for preserving "military secrets", as Fallon claims, but the Russians would have known all about the test's failure from their own satellites. Besides, it's ridiculous for Downing Street to say it never comments on such matters, said The Times. When past Trident tests were successful, it never hesitated to broadcast the news.

'Allo 'Allo actor Kaye bids adieu at 75

Gorden Kaye, the actor best known for his role as René François Artois in the BBCsitcom 'Allo 'Allo, has died in a care home aged 75.

Kaye's most memorable role was as the owner of Cafe René in the hit BBC1 comedy, which made light of the German occupation of France during the second world war.

The series, which ran from 1982 to 1992, was based around his character's struggle with daily life in the French town of Nouvion: maintaining a friendly face for the German soldiers, getting dragged into the French resistance and having numerous affairs with his waiting staff.

Kaye appeared in all 84 episodes of the popular series and was nominated for a Bafta.

He appeared more than 1,000 times in the stage version.

Vicki Michelle, who played Yvette Carte-Blanche, paid tribute to her co-star. "So sad to hear news of Gorden Kaye. A brilliantly talented actor, consummate professional, loved the world over," she said. "There'll never be another René."

Allen, Shane the controller of BBC comedy commissioning, said Kaye was a "terrific comic actor whose signature role, René Artois, earned his place in the comedy hall of fame", adding: "He was instrumental in making 'Allo 'Allo! such a longrunning and well-loved series."

Born in Huddersfield in 1941, Kaye described himself in his Government gets a roasting for warning nation off toast and spuds

The Government has been accused of 'massively overreacting' by telling people not to eat crispy roast potatoes or browned toast despite there being no scientific proof of a link to cancer.

Experts said the Food Standards Agency's (FSA) new campaign, which warns people against cooking starchy foods at high temperatures for long periods, risks undermining support for "real" public health priorities like tackling obesity.

Launched on Monday, the official guidance aims to raise awareness of acrylamide, a chemical which forms in some foods when they are cooked in temperatures hotter than 120°C.

It states that people can lower their risk of cancer by avoiding overbrowning roast potatoes, chips, root vegetables as well as cereal-based foods. But the advice is based on experiments on mice, rather than any studies showing that acrylamide causes cancer in people.

It is also not known whether even a diet high in browned foods such as well-done roast potatoes could expose a person to enough of the chemical to risk triggering the cancer.

According to the FSA, people should no longer "fluff" their potatoes before roasting them, as this increases the surface area and maximises the brown crispiness which for most people is the main point of eating them in this style.

The new FSA guidance also states people should roast potatoes and vegetables in a preheated oven for approximately 45 minutes, turning every 15 minutes to avoid over browning.

Using the slogan "go for gold", it also warned that people should set a timer for 25 minutes to ensure

NATIONAL STAPLES: scientists are telling Britons to 'go for the gold' with roasted potatoes, and avoid toasting our bread until it is dark. Both increase levels of acrylamide, which may be harmful....

they catch them before they overcook.

Sir David Spiegelhalter, professor of the public understanding of risk at Cambridge University, said the campaign was inappropriate.

"I'm always ambivalent about public health campaigns that are not based on some pretty firm quantitative evidence," he said.

"Many things in life may increase risk, but it's the size of the risk that makes it important."

Acrylamide forms due to a chemical reaction between certain sugars and an amino acid in the food when fried, roasted, baked, grilled or toasted, boiling, rather than steaming or microwaving. Chips and crisps are foods thought to contain the most amount of acrylamide because of their relatively greater surface area in proportion to weight.

The FSA is also instructing people not to keep bread in the toaster beyond a golden colour, as this also increases acrylamide.

Potatoes must also not be stored in the fridge as this too raises levels of the chemical when cooked.

Footballer on the mend after horror head injury

A PREMIER LEAGUE footballer who suffered a fractured skull during a league game at the weekend, prompting fears his life was in danger, was said to be making "excellent by his progress" hospital in London on Thursday.

Hull City midfielder Ryan Mason suffered during injury the Sunday's game at Chelsea clashing heads with Blues defender Gary Cahill 13 minutes into the Premier League match at Stamford Bridge.

He was taken to St Mary's Hospital in London, where he had surgery.

Hull's statement said Mason would "continue to be closely monitored by staff" at the hospital. It added: "There will be no further updates from the club until there are any changes in Ryan's condition."

The club said on Monday that Mason was conscious and talking and had been visited by captain Michael Dawson, club doctor Mark Waller, head of medical Rob Price and club secretary Matt Wild.

Cahill, Chelsea captain John Terry and assistant manager Steve Holland had visited on Sunday to check on Mason's wellbeing, and spent time with his family.

Mason, Hull's record signing, fractured his skull as he attempted to head the ball clear of his own box following a cross from Pedro.

He got to the ball a split second before Cahill, who was already committed to attempted header, and the pair collided.

Mason joined Hull from Tottenham last August for a clubrecord undisclosed fee. He has scored one goal in 16 Premier League appearances for the Tigers.

Prior to his move, he made 53 flight appearances for Tottenham, and had loan spells at Yeovil, Doncaster, Millwall, Lorient and Swindon.

Hull lost Sunday's game 2-0 as goals from Diego Costa and Cahill gave Chelsea a victory that took them eight points clear at the top.

ARIES: If life at work is not all it could be, do not assume the worst. It would be wise to look at what you are dealing with currently in other areas of life. In any event life will return to normal by next weekend.

TAURUS: Your emotions are probably in a bit of turmoil in one or more areas. As this will turn out to be unfinished business, it's best to take charge of the situation sooner than later.

GEMINI: Your life is filled currently with all kinds of situations and you are probably wondering which is the most important to deal with now. Look at what can or will impact your long-term life, as this will be the most important. The rest will be easy to resolve.

CANCER: You are carrying way more problems on your shoulders than you should. This is not necessary as no man is an island. You might be dealing with someone you are trying to appease and it is not the first time. Be aware it's time to let it go.

LEO: You may be involved in sorting out a family or work situation currently. You would be wise to keep your opinions to yourself in this matter. You have a big heart and tend to share it. In this case keep a low profile.

VIRGO: Everything in life is a lesson as you (more than anyone) know. Look to someone who you respect and ask for guidance as this can be resolved in a much calmer way. This is especially true in a current life situation, LIBRA: The lovely and lucky planet Jupiter is well on his way to bringing you at least some of your wishes. If you are in any sort of a tizzy remember to breathe and relax as you will surely benefit from this.

SCORPIO: February will bring all sorts of unfinished things to your attention, even a recent disappointment can turn around in a positive and uplifting way. It's time to enjoy life. And start now to plan the changes you know are inevitable.

SAGITTARIUS: Just watch that temper if things don't always go the way you planned. Life is always a journey and with this in mind enjoy the traveling. If you are currently not enjoying life as you can, remember this; you can change the direction if you really want to CAPRICORN: This could be the month that all your hopes begin to grow. It is entirely up to you how you make it work, patience should be your keyword and going forward into February life will be kinder.

AQUARIUS: You will always get back what you put out; just be careful you don't say too much to another that can upset your long term plans. Keep your life stress-free these next few days and see how much better life becomes.

PISCES: You are reputed to be the most sensitive and creative of all the signs, so this week proves it, if not to another then to yourself. Jupiter sitting in your money house for the rest of year ahead brings rewards in several areas of your life.

Schooling the Viscount: the not-so-good old days

Exclusive interview with author Maggie Robinson on her new novel featuring romance and rehabilitation

"As much as I love writing about the Regency, Victorian, and Edwardian eras, I am grateful for living in the twenty-first century," says Schooling the Viscount author Maggie Robinson.

"Laudanum and opium for the asking at the apothecary. Tonics that were 100% alcohol. Soldiers who were malnourished and ill-equipped and sent off to hellish foreign climes to fight anyway. Queen Victoria cranking out nine kids."

In Robinson's new book series, Puddling-on-the-Wold is a tiny village that has no train, no manufacturing and very little to offer...except the people of the town, who are known for helping members of the aristocracy recuperate, rehabilitation and to get rest. The town will do all in their power to help a guest recover... whatever their affliction.

"Puddling-on-the-Wold popped up in my head as a humane alternative for those suffering from the reality of the 19th century," says Robinson. "I saw a young soldier, wounded in body and spirit, limping down the street and trying to get his life together, and Schooling the Viscount was born.

The novel opens with Captain Lord Henry Challoner's father The Marquess of Harland, bringing Henry to the village. His son needs to dry out and stop chasing As wanders the town he can't believe the town is dry and has no young women. He's restricted he may take walks, but leaves the path. He sees a young woman teaching at the school. Rachel Everett knows the rules when the town has a guest. Will she break them?

Robinson started researching for the book in 2014. "I was planning a trip to Bath and did some research on its history as a Regency spa town. I'd read my Jane Austen. Charlotte Bronte too. I thought of mad Mrs. Rochester in her attic. I read some truly horrific things about how 'difficult' people, particularly women, were treated medically, psychologically, and legally for rebellious behavior. If I'd been alive then, I would have been rebelling all over the place."

Robinson visited a hydrotherapy spa hotel in Scotland for another book. "I kept wondering how people managed to live with societal constraints without going insane. Massages and hot baths and the odd game of lawn tennis were obviously insufficient. So I made up my own celebrity rehab in an imaginary tiny Gloucestershire village.

Simple food, fresh air, daily exercise, a chat with the vicar...after twenty-eight days, cured! Or not, as my characters can tell you."

Robinson lived nineteenth century weaver's cottage for a month and visited local (sometimes the smaller the better). churches, and graveyards. "Soaking ...ducking atmosphere under the low lintels. My six foot three husband himself knocked several times. I discovered Rococo Garden (in the Cotswolds), which have been transformed into the Sykes estate for the second book in the series."

She did most of her research online, and bought local books and booklets on the region for primary source excerpts and maps within.

Schooling the Viscount is Robinson's 14th full-length novel. She has eleven published novellas. She's been nominated twice as a Romantic Times Reviewers' Choice and won several contests as an unpublished author. A former library clerk, Robinson says she's proud of a starred review from Library Journal for In the Arms of the Heiress. Schooling the Viscount has yet to be optioned for film or television.

Robinson is currently working on the fourth book in the Cotswold Confidential series, a marriage-in-trouble story. Books two and three in the Cotswold Confidential series are releasing soon, Seducing Mr. Sykes (June 2017) and Redeeming Lord Ryder (November 2017).

Robinson will be at the annual Romance Writers of America convention in Orlando in July and at the Fall in Love with New England conference in Manchester, New Hampshire, in October.

Book Corner with Gabrielle Pantera

Robinson lives in Belgrade, Maine, in a house on a lake. She was born in Mineola, New York, narrowly avoiding being born at sea when her parents returned from Vienna. She grew up in a suburb of New York City.

Brits in LA

Meet A Member: Cat Sherwin

Meet Cat Sherwin, a Britishborn, Australian expat makeup and hair stylist, who has been living and working in Sydney for the last 13 years. Last summer she moved to Los Angeles with plans to live and work here for 3 years.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I moved to Los Angeles for a number of reasons – expansive opportunities, the amazing energy of the city, I felt the universe was kind of directing me here, to be nearer my family, the climate...but the most compelling driving force was to lift my game, to work among the very best in the industry, to grow and excel and become amongst the very best in the world.

What do you miss most from home?

My family! It goes without saying, they are always dear to my heart and I try to chat to them at least once a week. I've not lived in England for almost 14 years now, so I don't necessarily 'miss' certain things like Heinz Baked Beans, but I have a great fondness and love of the heritage, beautiful green landscape, proximity to Europe... and of course Marks & Spencers and Boots! The exceptional choice and quality of these stores and their home brands (especially relating to skincare and cosmetics) is fantastic and hard to find at such great prices either in Australia or the US.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? If so why?

I first came to Los Angeles in August 2004. It all seemed a bit blingbling, sunny, bright Disney Land-ish, but I do remember loving the vibe and energy and wishing I was here for longer.

I still feel the same energy and vibrancy, but I think what has pleasantly surprised me the most is the real sense of community here. People often refer to LA as being flakey and full of transparent, vacuous people. One thing living in a number of countries has taught me, is that you get that the world over. It doesn't matter where you are. I've certainly have felt a real sense of belonging and many generous, open-minded, warm-hearted people.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus your home town?

I've not lived in the UK for a long time, but the biggest difference is definitely the weather!

Australia is much closer in climate similarities, but the biggest adjustment I've had to make is coming from a firmly established career and working all the time, to growing a business from the ground up again, going back to flat sharing from having my own place for many, many years and not having a car after always having a car - thank goodness for Uber! Then there's just the practical stuff that's different - the banking system, taxation and everyday practicalities like not being able to find your favorite hair brands and products. But this stretches you to go out and learn different ways of doing things!

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

The Paramount Coffee Project (PCP) down in Fairfax village has the best coffee, with super nice homemade almond milk.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

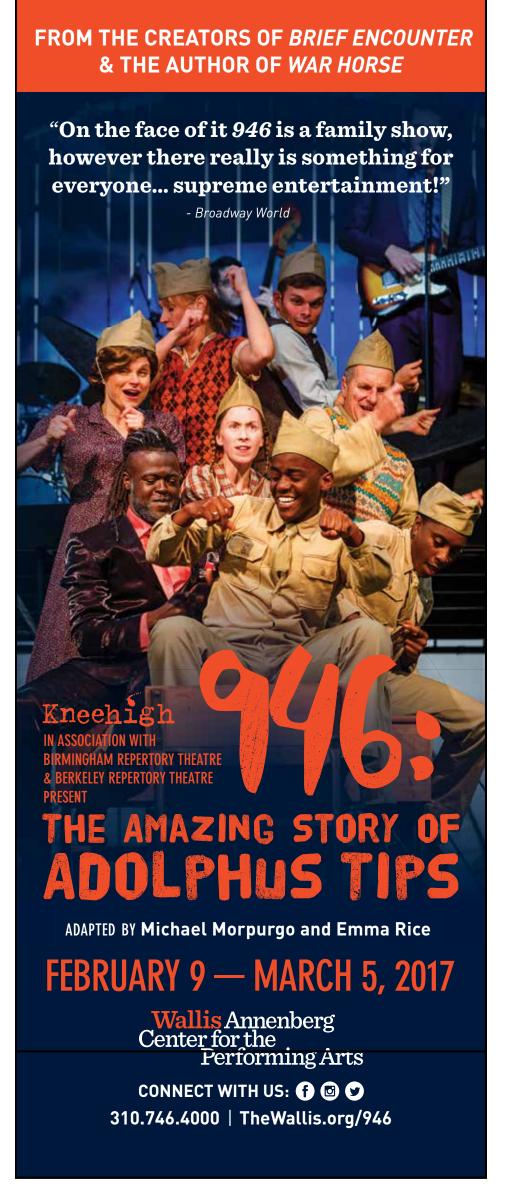

Do your research. Talk to people who have done it already. Do a few trips back and forth to see if you like it other than just a holiday, live here for a month or so. Establish what you will need to start your particular career and life and consider if you're prepared to do what it takes.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

Stay strong and keep going! Accept things will be different and learn to adapt, love the differences, and be flexible to a different culture.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you?

You can contact me via Instagram (cat_sherwin), Facebook or through my website www.catsherwin. com.

The Toscars: teams set for a night of parody

Greetings Britlings!

There's a couple of great things to announce - The Toscars are happening on Feb 22nd at The Renberg Theatre in West Hollywood. This year promises to be our biggest yet. On Tuesday we had our selection night and we conducted an elimination competition with our team leaders this year, called "Toss your competition off".

Entrants had to fight hard for the movies they wanted and boy was it nail-biting to watch. Kim Morgan Greene won the first round and chose to parody "LA-LA Land" Sandro Monetti came in second and chose "Manchester winning director Marc Cleary was happy with his pick of "Lion". Amy Chaffee guessed the price of a three-pack of Magnum extra large condoms to win the next round of "The price is right" awarding her with the movie "Moonlight" Staying with Shopping we played a game of "I went to the market and I bought..." Martin Lee White was the last man standing and decided upon "Arrival".

A quickfire round of Name as many Oscar best picture winning films as possible in 3 minutes saw Maria Elena Infantino take home "Hell or High Water" which left us with three contestants. Balancing the books saw by the Sea". Last year's Victoria Hoffman take home "Hidden Figures" and the final round of Craig's Mallet saw Scott Kaske chose "Fences" leaving Kerry Marlowe's team with "Hacksaw Ridge" to parody. This year instead of giving our team leaders random participants, we thought it would be fun to to allow the participants to choose which film they wanted to be a part of. A fun night was had by all at Obica Restaurant on Sunset Plaza drive, where guests enjoyed pizza and beer for just $20. Trust us, it's the best pizza in town!

Saying our piece....

Last weekend I travelled with approx 750,000 people to DTLA to participate the in "Women's March". A movement seen all over the world, from London to Sydney, from New York to Chicago and Washington DC. It was a peaceful protest to let our current administration know that women's rights are human rights and to send a message loud and clear that we won't stand for a totalitarian leader who doesn't care for his people. Even though it was a somber event, it was great to see so many people of different ages, gender, color and creeds come together and rise and stand up for their beliefs. These are very interesting times and it seems this is just the start of this activism. I hope you join me as I and others like me continue to protest for the rights of all citizens and make our government accountable their for decisionmaking.

The world is watching, Mr. Trump!

I'm happy to see so many new faces at Breakfast Club at Cecconi's, located at the corner of Robertson and Melrose. And it's so nice to see a lot of our regulars mingling with them and offering sage advice and helping guide the newbies. Keep passing the flame on to the next generation!

Unfortunately Quiz will be on hiatus for a while longer - until after The Toscars at least. But don't fret it will be back!

Have a great week all... and see you soon! Craig Young

Nothing vague about Shulman's Vogue exit!

Tributes are pouring in from all corners of the fashion world after British Vogue editor Alexandra Shulman announced she would be stepping down from her role this summer.

A longtime figurehead (pictured, right) who has been the editor-inchief for 25 years (which is practically a century in magazine time) will depart from the industry bible in June.

The popular haute couture website Business of Fashion reports that Shulman is parting ways with the title.

"It has been very hard to find a rational reason to leave what is unquestionably a fascinating and rewarding role," Shulman told the site.

"But last autumn I realized that I very much wanted to experience a different life and look forward to a future separate to Vogue," she continued.

Prior to her time at Vogue, Shulman was the editor of British GQ, and also spent time at Tatler and the Sunday Telegraph. During her Vogue tenure, Shulman brought the magazine to its highest circulation ever.

She has been a fierce critic of fashion's sizeism, penning a letter to designers calling out "miniscule" sample sizes in 2009 and, last month, opening up about the brands that refused to dress plus-size Ashley Graham for her cover.

This past November, she published an all 'real woman' issue which included profiles of CEOs, philanthropists, and transit engineers.

Just as fiercely as she critiqued the industry's failings, throwing her support behind London talents like Alexander McQueen and Christopher Kane early on, and urged designers to show in the British capital.

The announcement of Shulman's resignation comes amidst a time of change for Condé Nast. Earlier this month fellow Brit Nicholas Coleridge announced he would be stepping down as president of Condé Nast International and managing director of Condé Nast Britain in August.

There was no word on who her replacement will be, but Shulman will certinly be tough act to follow.

Grey actor now seeking a different kind of Bondage...

It seems that every actor in the Western Hemisphere is panting to be the next James Bond.

But there's one actor apparently more desperate than the rest... Fifty Shades of Grey actor Jamie Dornan.

According to The Sun, Jamie made the playful comment about the coveted role during a unique interaction with Stephen Clements, a popular breakfast host on Belfast's Q Radio station.

Clements had penned a version of rapper Eminem's smash hit Stan featuring the likes of Eamonn Holmes, Chipmunk and Arlene Foster in a bid to get Jamie's attention. It worked!

The Irish actor was happy to respond as the challenge had been a tool for the pair to raise money for the TinyLife charity.

Jamie made his name playing a Belfast serial killer in the acclaimed TV drama The Fall, (if you haven't seen it yet, Netflix IMMEDIATELY) before shooting to worldwife fame as the kinky tycoon Christian Grey. And he proved to be a good sport, replying to Clements with his own rap verse as he quipped: "Dear Stephen, I'm sorry it took me so long to respond - I've been running around the world trying to convince people I'm James Bond."

The search for the next 007 began after the current Bond, Daniel Craig, refused to confirm - or deny - his participation in the next film. This stalemate has forced Eon Productions, who own the rights to the Bond canon to look for a replacement.

Producer Barbara
Broccoli, daughter of Albert R. Broccoli, the man who first brought Bond to the screen

HEIR APPARENT? Jamie Dornan and Daniel Craig

more than 50 years ago, has reportedly conducted auditions for actors including Idris Alba, Aidan Turner, Jack Huston, Tom Hardy, James Norton, Tom Hiddleston, and even Ryan Gosling, but no word yet on who the lucky choice will be.

Who knows, Craig could still be in the frame for another outing – if the price is right. A source said: "Daniel and MGM are currently at a stalemate with him having not spoken to them about Bond.

"They have offered a bigger wage deal, and asked about his filming availability to his reps in 2017, but as of yet they have not spoken to Daniel."

Meanwhile, the sequel to Fifty Shades of Grey – Fifty Shades Darker will be released in time for Valentine's Day, with trailers now out teasing the fans about the next installment. There is a hint of a possible wedding and tragedy as the trailers show a stalking woman following Christian Grey and Anastasia Steel.

Glasgow's Finest, further down the track....

■ Long-awaited Trainspotting sequel gets mixed reception from critics

Do you rembember Trainspotting? Of course you do. Well the long-awaited sequel has just been released in British cinemas and the critics are weighing in:

Boyle's Danny hyperactive tale of Edinburgh heroin addicts, adapted from the novel by Îrvine Welsh, was one of the "seminal British films" of the 1990s, said Rob Carnevale in The Herald (Glasgow); and that makes it a hard act to follow. Yet I can honestly say this long-delayed sequel is "every bit as good" as the original; indeed, "maybe even better". It has the same director and cast, and it shares the first film's "profane language, drug scenes, and horrific bouts of violence". But the oddly named T2 Trainspotting also boasts a newfound maturity, which lends it "unexpected poignancy".

If Trainspotting ruefully confessed that it was "shite" to be Scottish in 1996, T2 suggests that not a great deal has changed, said Geoffrey Macnab in The Independent. In a plot that is partly inspired by Welsh's follow-up novel, Porno, our protagonist Renton McGregor), who scarpered at the end the first film with £16,000 of drugs money that he should have shared with his friends, returns to Edinburgh two decades later. He finds the vituperative

Sick Boy (Jonny Lee Miller) running a shabby extortion racket with his Bulgarian girlfriend (Anjela Nedyalkova), and the hapless Spud (Ewan Bremner) hooked on heroin again. Then he learns that the psychotic Begbie (Robert Carlyle) is out of jail and bent on revenge. We see a lot of drugs sampled on-screen, said Chris Hunneysett in the Daily Mirror, but what really stands out is the "chemistry" between the actors. Boyle has cooked up "an addictive hit"

"Nostalgia, that's why you're here," declares Sick Boy at one point. "You're a tourist in your own youth." He's talking to Renton, but he could just as easily have been addressing Boyle, or any of us in the audience for that matter, said Andy Lea in the Daily Star. Several iconic moments from the first film, such as when Renton dives into an unimaginably disgusting toilet bowl, are recycled here for old time's sake. These, and some dated directorial tricks such as the use of freeze-frames, feel a little "maudlin". But wistfulness is the deliberate keynote, said Dave Calhoun in Time Out. THE BRITISH WEEKLY, SAT. JANUARY 28, 2017 PAGE 19

BRITISH WEEKLY

Former Liverpool captain Steven Gerrard says he is "excited" but also "nervous and anxious" about his impending return to Anfield as a youth coach.

Gerrard, who made his Reds debut in 1998 and retired from playing last year, will begin the job in February.

"Liverpool are prepared to help me an awful lot.

They want to help me to become a better coach or a better manager," Gerrard, 36, told BBC Sport.

"But at the same time I've got to commit to it and put in the hard work."

interview, Gerrard also said he is in no rush to take up a managerial role as he does not yet know if he'll be "good enough"; he revealed Liverpool boss Jurgen Klopp has "gone out of his way" to welcome him back to the club and backed Liverpool to overcome their current "blip" and said he was "absolutely delighted" to have Klopp as manager.

wide-ranging

Midfielder Gerrard left Anfield at the end of the 2014-15 season to join MLS side LA Galaxy before retiring in November after a 19-year playing career.

The former England captain said he was "really happy" to be "back at the club I love and being back home with my family" but insisted his return was not down to sentiment.

"With me and Liverpool there will always be an emotional pull. But the decision to go back as a coach and what that entails, I couldn't really make that decision on sentiment or emotion because I'd have been doing it for the wrong reasons," he said.

"I'm very excited but at the same time a little bit nervous and a little bit anxious because it's a brand new role."

Ecclestone finally out of F1

After spending almost four decades in charge of Formula 1, Bernie Ecclestone (above) has finally been moved aside from the top of the sport.

USconglomerateLiberty Media completed its £6bn takeover of F1 this week, and replaced the 86-yearold with Chase Carey, the vice-chairman of 21st Century Fox. Ecclestone will stay on as "chairman emeritus", offering advice to the board, but the British billionaire will no longer be involved in the day-today running of Formula 1, for the first time since the 1970s.

After starting out as a team boss, he became a middleman between the teams and the powers that be, before slowly moving into a position of almost absolute power. Under his management, F1 evolved from being a relatively minority activity into one of the biggest television sports in the world. But Ecclestone has also been widely criticised. His demands for huge fees left several much-loved European racetracks unable to afford to host a Grand Prix, and their slots on the calendar were filled by wealthy but controversial nations such as Bahrain, Russia and Azerbaijan.

Semi Final, 2nd Leg Liverpool.....0 Southampton..... (agg: 0-2)

Southampton reached the EFL Cup final at Wembley Wednesday night with a fully deserved victory over against legs Liverpool - crowned by Shane Long's late winner at Anfield.

Claude Puel's side, defending a 1-0 lead from the first leg, should have put the tie out of Liverpool's reach inside the first 45 minutes but Dusan Tadic's closerange shot was blocked by keeper Loris Karius and captain Steve Davis blazed another great chance wildly over.

Liverpool raised the tempo in front of the Kop in the second half but Daniel Sturridge wasted their two best chances, Fraser Forster hooked acrobatically an Emre Can shot off the line and the hosts also had a late penalty appeal turned down when substitute Divock Origi tumbled under Jack Stephens' challenge.

But Southampton broke clear in the closing moments and Long finished convincingly from Josh Sims' pass to send them into the their first final in this competition since 1979, where they will meet either Manchester United - a feat achieved without conceding a goal.

Saints were vastly superior over two legs against Liverpool and, despite the home side's complaints about that late penalty claim, no-one could seriously begrudge them their victory.

And it was all done without their talisman and key defender Virgil van Dijk, out through injury. Southampton were dangerous on the break in the first half and then, when they needed to be, were superbly organised, disciplined and determined defensively before breaking for Republic of Ireland international Long strike the killer blow.

Long leaves it late to stun Reds and secure final berth

Southampton once more demonstrated their ability, as a club, to take the blows of key departures and still achieve.

They lost manager Ronald Koeman Everton in the summer - as well as important components such as Victor Wanyama and Sadio Mane to Spurs and have Liverpool respectively and have carried on undisturbed with Wembley appearance as their reward.

Liverpool's laboured performance was in stark contrast to the all-action attacking displays that briefly took them to the top of the Premier League earlier this season.

Jurgen Klopp's side

looked jaded and have lost their way, with only one win in seven games this year, a third-round FA Cup replay victory at League Two Plymouth Argyle.

Liverpool look shorn of threat without £34m summer signing Mane, away at the Africa Cup of Nations with Senegal, and lacking an alternative plan when teams as disciplined as Swansea and Southampton have been in inflicting two successive home defeats.

United do just enough

Manchester United set up an EFL Cup final against Southampton despite their 17-match unbeaten run ending with defeat at Hull City in the semi-final second leg on Thursday.

Jose Mourinho's side led 2-0 from the first leg but, making five changes, they struggled to impose themselves at the KCOM Stadium.

Huddlestone Tom put the hosts ahead from the penalty spot after four players had tangled in the area after set-piece, Marcos Rojo's pull on Harry Maguire's shirt the most visible offence.

It gave Hull, 19th in the Premier League, poise and confidence, but their hopes of just a second domestic cup final in their 113-year history were dashed when Paul Pogba poked through the legs of Maguire and into the bottom corner from 10 yards.

Rojo headed against the bar for United and Tigers' Oumar Niasse also struck the woodwork before he turned in David Meyler's cross to set up a tense finale.

But the visitors held on and former Chelsea boss Mourinho could move level with Brian Clough and Sir Alex Ferguson on four League Cup wins at Wembley on 26 February.
