

Dual citizenship Britons exempt from travel ban

Britons with dual citizenship in the seven countries singled out by Donald Trump this week WILL be allowed to enter the United States, the Foreign Office has confirmed.

The US President's administration told Boris Johnson that Britons who share nationality with one of the seven Muslimmajority countries are exempt from the controversial travel ban.

But UK dual citizens travelling to the United States directly from one of the banned countries will face extra checks.

Mr Johnson was ordered to initiate urgent talks with his United States counterpart by Theresa May on Sunday as she faced growing anger over her failure to criticise Mr Trump over the policy.

His officials later issued guidance about what the border clampdown means for the UK.

The statement said:

• The ban only applies to individuals travelling from one of the seven named countries - Iraq, Iran, Libya, Somalia, Sudan, Syria and Yemen.

• Travellers to the US from anywhere other than one of those countries will experience no extra checks regardless of nationality or place of birth.

•UK nationals travelling from one of those countries are not included in the ban even if they were born in one of the affected states.

•Dual citizens from one of the seven countries travelling to the US from outside those countries are not affected.

• Dual nationals might have extra checks if they travel directly from one of the seven countries

'divisive and wrong'

Mrs May said on Sunday she did "not agree" with the order signed by Mr Trump but refused to attack him directly when repeatedly questioned at a press conference in Ankara.

Downing Street said the move showed how seriously the Prime Minister was taking the issue with Home Secretary Amber Rudd also summoned to hold talks with US aides.

Mr Johnson branded President Trump's controversial policy "divisive and wrong", and criticised the decision to "stigmatise" people based on their nationality.

He said on Sunday: "We will protect the rights and freedoms of UK nationals home and abroad. Divisive and wrong to stigmatise because of nationality." Citizens from seven mainly Muslim countries - Iraq, Iran, Libya, Somalia, Sudan, Syria and Yemen - have been barred temporarily along with all refugees.

BORIS JOHNSON: urgent talks

Relief for Olympic hero Mo

Sir Mo Farah is "relieved" after he was given the green light to return to his family in the United States, his spokeswoman said.

It comes after Boris Johnson revealed Brits with dual citizenship will be exempt from Donald Trump's controversial travel ban.

Sir Mo, Britain's most successful track-andfield Olympian, said Mr Trump "seems to made me an alien" as he slammed the policy on his Facebook page.

He trains in Portland, Oregon, where he lives with his wife Tania and their four children and was said to be unsure how and if he will be affected by the travel ban. But he has been assured he will not be affected personally. He said while he was relieved by the clarification he still "fundamentally disagrees" with the policy.

A spokeswoman for the star said: "We understand from the statement released this evening by the Foreign & Commonwealth Office that the executive order will not apply to Mo, and we are grateful to the Foreign Office for urgently clarifying the situation.

"Mo is relieved that he will be able to return to his family once his current training camp concludes.

However, as he said in his earlier statement, he still fundamentally disagrees with this incredibly divisive and discriminatory policy." Earlier on Sunday, the four-time Olympic champion, who has cont. on page 2, col. 1

The House voted in favour of the bill by 498 to 114 - a majority of 384.

But Jeremy Corbyn was unable to contain a revolt on his frontbench that saw two shadow cabinet ministers quit and 47 MPs vote against the Bill.

Shadow environment secretary and York Central MP Rachael Maskell and shadow equalities minister and Brent Central MP Dawn Butler both defied a three-line whip so they could vote in line with their heavily Remainbacking constituencies.

Changing the Guard is AXED amid fears of a Nice-style terrorist attack

Changing the Guard ceremonies at Windsor Castle have been cancelled amid fears of a devastating Berlin or Nice-style lorry attack by terrorists.

The time-honoured military tradition will no longer take place on Saturdays because police believe jihadis could target soldiers and the thousands of tourists who gather to enjoy the spectacle.

Twelve people were killed and 50 more were injured when a terrorist drove a heavy truck into a packed Christmas market in Berlin at 40mph. And last July, 86 people were killed and another 434 were hurt when a jihadi drove a 19-ton lorry into crowds celebrating Bastille Day in the French city of Nice.

Following the Berlin attack, Thames Valley Police ordered Army top brass to change their ceremonial timetable in Windsor to avoid the busiest times of the week.

As a result, troops will only march through the town in their red tunics and bearskins on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

The tradition (pictured) will no longer take place on Saturdays because police believe jihadis could target soldiers and tourists who gather for the spectacle

Security has also been stepped up with armed police checkpoints and road closures.

But the move, which will be trialled for three months, has been attacked by local residents and traders, who fear they will lose money if the Saturday ceremonies are axed permanently.

Islamic State is already thought to have terror cells in the UK. The jihadis are believed to be plotting a massacre on the scale of the atrocities in Berlin and Nice.

Changing the Guard at Buckingham Palace has also been switched to fixed days as part of the shake-up, with armed police following the soldiers as they parade along the Mall.

In December 2014 Royal Guards were removed from posts including Clarence House and St James's Palace amid fears of a 'lone-wolf' attack.

The world-renowned ceremonies involving the Guards regiments have taken place since the 17th Century but are now under unprecedented threat.

A Thames Valley Police spokesperson said: 'Security measures have been increased in relation to the Changing the Guard in Windsor.

These measures have been put in place as part of a review in order to reassure and increase the safety of the public and military.'

By contrast, Victoria's high-end clothing brand is making multi-million pound losses and is £21million in debt.

Court setback for McCanns

THE search for Madeleine McCann was dealt a huge blow this week after her parents lost a major legal battle.

Judges ruled in favour of a former police chief who claimed Kate and Gerry McCann faked their daughter's abduction. The couple now face a huge legal bill.

The official fund set up to find the youngster is thought to have less than £300,000. A source close to the couple said: "It's not good news. We don't know what to do. We need to sit down with our lawyer and discuss it.

"We've gone to the pinnacle of the Portuguese legal system and we've lost. We now have to pay a sizeable amount in costs."

The ruling by Supreme Court judges in Lisbon is a double blow for the couple as they will no longer receive the £430,000 in damages which was awarded to them in 2015.

The payout would have been plowed into the official Find Madeleine Fund, set up through public donations to finance the worldwide hunt for the missing girl.

But under Portuguese law, this cash was never handed over while proceedings were ongoing.

On Monday the judges upheld a lower court's decision to reverse a libel award the McCanns had originally won over claims in a book written by police chief Goncalo Amaral, 56.

Kate and Gerry McCann: huge legal bill

damages

It paves the way for the former detective to rake in a fortune from his controversial book The Truth Of The Lie, in which he made his allegations against the couple.

The judges said Amaral's "exercise of his freedom of expression was not considered abusive" and "was within admissible limits in a democratic and open society, which excludes the illegality of possible damage to the honour of the McCanns".

It also means Amaral, will not now have to pay the McCanns the damages awarded to them two years ago.

The McCanns first issued a writ against Amaral in June 2009. Tuesday night they issued a statement:

"What we have been told by our lawyers is obviously extremely disappointing."

The latest setback came just before the 12th birthday today of their younger children, twins Sean and Amelie. The McCanns, of Rothley, Leicestershire, could now also be sued for damages by Amaral, who led the initial hunt after Madeleine vanished aged three from their holiday apartment in the Algarve in May 2007.

Appeal judges reversed the initial ruling in April last year, siding with the former police chief and overturning a ban on his book.

That sparked a fresh appeal by the McCanns to Portugal's highest court. It was lodged by their Portuguese lawyer Isabel Duarte last May.

But on Monday, in a private hearing, the appeal was thrown out. A spokesperson for Ms

Duarte said: "This is very bitter for us and for Mr and Mrs McCann."

HURT: a reformed hellraiser

Farewell Sir John: the versatile actor who specialized in playing outsiders

THE LONG LIST OF entertainers who have left us in recent months grew a little longer this week, with the death of veteran star John Hurt, who has died aged 77.

The actor was equally at home on the stage, the TV and the big screen, and he specialised in playing characters on life's margins, said the Daily Mail: he was the emaciated heroin addict locked up in a brutal Turkish jail in Midnight Express; the outrageous "stately homo of England" Quentin Crisp in The Naked Civil Servant; and the grotesque but tenderhearted John Merrick in The Elephant Man Yet with his expressive eyes, and rich, instantly recognisable, voice, Hurt could be as imperious as he was vulnerable, said The Independent. He played an astonishing variety of roles: he was often cast as chancers and roués (he was a brilliant Alan Clark), and was very much at home in John le Carré's "seedy doubledealing world", yet he was just as convincing as a kindly wandmaker (in three Harry Potter films), and as the voice of a plucky rabbit (Watership Down). He even played Bob Champion, the jockey who beat cancer to win the Grand National, in Champions (1984).

Born in Chesterfield, Derbyshire, John Hurt was the son of a vicar and an engineer. Although he lovedacting as a child, his parents wouldn't countenance a career on the stage, and insisted he go to art school, with a view to becoming an art master. It was at St Martin's that he first set eyes on Quentin Crisp, working as a nude model. Living on a pittance in a basement in Earls Court, Hurt was miserable, until a friend persuaded him to defy his parents, and audition for Rada. He won a scholarship, and joined a class that included Sarah Miles and Ian McShane.

"You want to act in order to show people that you are more than you appear to be," he later said, "that you have more to offer than had been allowed at school or within the vicarage."

He was signed by an agent before graduating, and was soon making his name in the West End. In 1966, Fred Zimmermann saw him on the London stage and cast him in his film version of A Man for All Seasons. After that, Hurt was rarely out of work, said The Daily Telegraph. People warned him not to do The Naked Civil Servant, but it won him a Bafta. He was the astronaut who dies when an alien bursts out of his stomach in Ridley Scott's Alien (1979), and in 1984, played Winston Smith in Orwell's 1984.

For many years, Hurt was almost as famous for his drinking as he was for his acting. His first marriage, in the early 1960s, lasted just two years. He later lived for 16 years with the French model Marie-Lise Volpeliere-Pierrot – and was devastated when she was killed in a riding accident in 1983. He began to drink even more heavily, which put paid to his second marriage; his third, to Jo Dalton, produced two sons, but ended in 1995. Finally, he found lasting happiness with Anwen Rees-Myers. After their marriage, in 2005, he gave up drinking and smoking.

We'll Meet Again....Dame Vera launches new album aged 100 AME Vera Lynn will The record comes Vera Lynn 100 which DAME Vera Lynn will celebrate her 100th birthday with the release of a new album next month.

The forces' sweetheart, who buoyed spirits in the Second World War, is marking the milestone with re-orchestrated versions of her most beloved songs alongside her original vocals.

It also features a previously unreleased version of Sailing.

It is thought the collection – to be released on March 17 three days before her birthday – will make Dame Vera the first singer to have released a new album as a centenarian.

The record comes eight years after Dame Vera became the oldest living artist to land a UK No1 album and also marks her 93 years as a professional singer.

Dame Vera is joined by a line-up of chart-topping British singers on the album, including Alfie Boe on We'll Meet Again, Alexander Armstrong on The White Cliffs Of Dover and Aled Jones on As Time Goes By.

Auf Wiederseh'n Sweetheart, with which she became the first British singer to top the official US chart in 1952, also appears on the record.

Of the release, entitled will be released by Decca Records, Dame Vera said: "It's truly humbling that people still enjoy these songs from so many years ago, reliving the emotions of that time. It's so wonderful for me to hear my songs again so beautifully presented in a completely new way."

She will also celebrate her birthday with a charity concert at the London Palladium.

The March 18 show will raise funds for her children's charity and features Armstrong, Blake and the New Zealand classical singer and crossover artist Hayley Westenra.

Revealed: the bizarre story of the Gloucestershire gorilla

The astonishing story of a gorilla who was brought up in a Gloucestershire village a century ago has been uncovered by an amateur historian.

The ape was captured as a baby in Gabon, and shipped to London. In 1918, Major Rupert Penny found him on sale in the London department store Derry and Toms, and bought him as a present for his sister, Alyce Cunningham. From then on, John Daniel – as he was known - spent much of his time at her home in the village of Ulev. He had his own bedroom, made his bed, and helped with the washing-up. Beloved by the local children, who pushed him around in a wheelbarrow, he attended many of their lessons at the village school. He liked a cup of tea, and would also wait outside the pub for villagers to give him cider. But his story, pieced together by Uley resident Margaret Groom, has an unhappy ending: by 1921, John Daniel weighed almost 15st and was still growing, and Cunningham felt she could no longer cope. She sold him, thinking he was going to a home in Florida. Instead, he ended up in a circus. When she heard he was ill, she set sail straight away to tend to him – but he died, aged four, before she could get there.

Ethical caviar spotted in Yorkshire...

A Yorkshire sturgeon farm is producing the world's first ethically sourced caviar. Normally, the fish – which are endangered in the wild – are killed to get their prized eggs. But at KC Caviar, near Leeds, the sturgeon have their eggs pumped out using an apparently harmless massage technique. In later life, the fish – which live for 50 to 60 years, on average – will be sent to retire in lakes in Hungary and Bulgaria, while their offspring are raised in Yorkshire.

Passings: Tam Dalyell, veteran Labour firebrand, 1932-2017

Principled MP who was never afraid to be "a bore"

He was the Old Etonian with an ancestral pile who ended up representing a mining constituency; the former Tory who moved to the left-wing of the Labour Party; the self-described "single issue" politician whose persistence could exasperate even his friends.

In short, Tam Dalyell was different. He was a maverick and such a thorn in the flesh of the Establishment, he never once held ministerial office during his 43 years at Westminster (he was Father of the House by the time he retired, in 2005). But it was not a role he sought out. The MP for West Lothian - famed for framing the so-called West Lothian question – genuinely believed in the rightness of his causes, and in pursuit of them, he was willing to risk unpopularity; as he said, if your campaign is worth fighting, "you must not be afraid to be thought a bore". Born in Edinburgh in 1932, Tam Dalyell was educated at prep school in Cumbria, and then at Eton. At King's Cambridge, College, he was chairman the Conservative of Association, but had a change of heart after the Suez Crisis of 1956. Returning home to West Lothian and the House of the Binns (the Dalyell family seat, inherited from his mother's family), he became a teacher at a local secondary school. With his background, he had little chance of being endorsed as a Labour candidate by the National Union of Mineworkers, but a unionist whose troubled grandson he had taught put in a good word for him, and he was duly selected to fight a 1962 by-election. He fought off a strong challenge by the Scottish National Party candidate William Wolfe – whom he would stand against a further six times. A committed opponent of devolution, Dalyell first asked his question in 1977: why should Scottish MPs be able to vote on matters that pertain only to England, when English ones cannot vote on areas that are devolved? Enoch Powell dubbed it the West Lothian question.

In the 1960s, Dalyell fought a long campaign to stop Aldabra, an unspoilt coral atoll in the Indian Ocean, from being turned into an air base. In the early 1980s, he became known for his opposition to the Falklands war, and his relentless pursuit of Margaret Thatcher over the sinking of the Argentine warship the General Belgrano. New Labour's election victory in 1997 didn't quiet him: a former member of the left-wing Campaign Group (probably the only one, it was memorably observed, "to own peacocks"), he described himself as "Ancient Labour". He voted against the intervention in Kosovo in 1999; and opposed the Iraq invasion of 2003. One of his final acts as an MP, said The Daily Telegraph, was to table fresh questions about the Belgrano, "the last of thousands". He is survived by his wife, Kathleen, and their two children.

Turing Law pardons thousands Thousands posthumous pardons were issued this week to men convicted of homosexual offences that have been removed from the statute book. The so-called Turing Law, named after the wartime codebreaker Alan Turing, who was granted a posthumous royal pardon in 2013, is a clause in the Policing and Crime Bill, which came into force this week. The automatic posthumous pardon applies to 50,000 men. People still alive who have been convicted of, or cautioned for, homosexual acts that are no longer illegal an estimated 15,000 can now apply for pardons. A spokesman for Stonewall, the gay rights charity, hailed it as "another important milestone of equality".

Ambulance delays

Ambulance crews spent 500,000 hours waiting outside hospitals last year because A&E staff were too busy to take in their patients, according to the National Audit Office. Ambulances are meant to take 15 minutes to hand over a patient, but in 2016 the target was met in just 58% of cases; over the past two years, the time spent waiting beyond this 15 minutes has increased by 52%. The report also found that 10% of paramedic posts are empty.

Media watch: Papers roast May as Trump switches tack

■ Overnight the PM's visit – 'hailed a triumph by friendly newspapers' – became a liability"

THERESA May's first meeting with Donald Trump seemed to be going so well. He called her "my Maggie", and held her by the hand. He assured her that he was "100% behind Nato" (days after declaring it obsolete) and reaffirmed his commitment to striking a trade deal with the post-Brexit UK.

They may have seemed an oddly matched pair but the flamboyant billionaire and the vicar's daughter seem to have found surprising common ground during their meeting at the White House last week. At a press conference, the normally abrasive president was calm and even playful. And over their private lunch, the conversation was said – by Downing Street - to have been "warm, free-flowing and unscripted". Trump declared that Brexit was going to be "a fantastic thing" for the UK, and that "our relationship has never been stronger". He showed off the bust of Winston Churchill that Barack Obama had removed, now restored to the Oval Office; and told the PM that when he comes to Britain for a state visit later this year, "I want to see you first".

And then May found out "what it's like to be Tangoed", said Alex Massie in The Spectator. No sooner had she left the building than her new friend signed an executive order banning the residents Muslimof seven majority countries from entering the US temporarily, and Syrian indefinitely; refugees and overnight, her visit – "hailed a 'triumph' by friendly newspapers" became a liability.

Unseemly rush

As anger grew around the world, in Britain more than 1.78 million people signed a petition calling for Trump's state visit to be cancelled; and the PM's critics demanded that she denounce the man she had just wooed. Had May not been in such an unseemly rush to be the first foreign leader to visit Trump at the White House, she'd have seen this coming. Allies need to be reliable: the new US president has done nothing to suggest that he might be a partner the UK, or indeed any, country could rely on.

The PM no doubt thought she was "doing her pragmatic duty" by going to the White House, said The Guardian. But in currying favour with Trump, a president she cannot control, she's in danger of making the same mistake Tony Blair did with George W. Bush. When Trump was merely a candidate, she condemned his anti-Muslim plans as unhelpful "divisive, and wrong". She must stand alongside Britain's allies, in France, Canada, Germany and elsewhere, and speak as plainly now. It is not in Britain's interest "to be, or to be seen as, a lackey of possibly the worst president the US" has ever had.

'phoney outrage'

Yet there is something hysterical about the current outcry, said The Daily Telegraph. If the British government does not like US policy (and evidently, in this case it does not), it should let its feelings be known through diplomacy, not the kind of "frenzied virtue-signalling and phoney outrage" we've seen this week. To snub Trump by ripping up his invitation would be a "monumental exercise in national self-harm",

Trump with May: "My Maggie' agreed Robert Hardman in the Daily Mail. And those who demand it are being "wilfully naive". Trump's policy was a manifesto promise; he is doing what he was elected to do. Moreover, Obama also restricted travel to the US from these same countries. It's also worth noting that six of the countries on that list ban Israelis. As for the claim that it's wrong to drag the Queen into this, she's had far worse visitors foisted on her – including the Romanian tyrant Nicolae Ceausescu - and she has taken them in her stride. She knows it's a "mucky old world". May's job is to represent our national interest, and it's in that interest to have the US on our side.

'ruthless dealmaker'

Brexitistheproblem, said The Economist. May rushed to Washington because she is desperate to sign a trade deal with the US that can be closed as soon as Brexit takes place. The irony is that leaving the EU was supposed to give Britain more control, to restore autonomy its and independence. Instead, it is forcing our leaders to prostrate themselves before a foreign ruler they find odious, a ruthless dealmaker who knows he has the upper hand.

Britain, post-Brexit, finds itself in a strange place, agreed Anne Applebaum in The Washington Post. Isolated, and desperate for trading partners and political friends, it is rushing into the arms of a president who is "drifting away" transatlantic from institutions. Searching for a positive message about Britain's future at Davos, May lit upon the idea of a "global Britain" that is an advocate of global free markets, and the "rulebased global order". But if these are British ideals, why is Britain leaving the wealthiest free trade zone in the world, and cosying up to a protectionist for whom the international rules mean nothing? She may or may not be able to strike a trade deal with the US, but while Britain is tied to the US president, her broader vision is doomed.

The Spirit of the Age

Doctors have been urged not to refer to pregnant women as "mothers", to avoid offending trans or intersex men who become parents, and to "celebrate diversity".

A leaflet issued by the British Medical Association suggests NHS doctors should adopt the gender neutral term "pregnant people" instead. There is only one known case of a transitioning person in the UK becoming pregnant: Hayden Cross is in his second trimester.

• Taking cakes to work could be a "public health hazard", civil servants have been told. An official responsible for "well-being" advised Treasury staff to only bring in cakes occasionally - so as to be "mindful" of colleagues who have "difficulty resisting" processed sweet treats.

Meet A Member: Nicole Neto

It may come as a surprise to some, but not all Brits in LA members are British. Our evergrowing community is made up of people from all over the world, including America, hence our motto, "you don't have to be British, you just have to like us".

This week's Meet a Member subject is Nicole Neto from Connecticut, who moved to LA more than three years ago to pursue a career in hairstyling.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I first came to Los Angeles when I was 10 years old on a family vacation. I remember being in the backseat of the car driving up and down the Hollywood Hills and loved it. We went to Universal Studios and I couldn't believe my eyes! I loved the behind-the-scenes movie making and props. I told my mom "someday I will live in Hollywood"....I've been obsessed ever since.

What do you miss most from home?

I miss having PARKING SPOTS! I also miss the first snowfall of winter, and of course, most of all family.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? If so why?

My first impression of LA was "WHOA this is madness! I don't know how to parallel park, will I ever get used to this traffic? Almost 4 years later and I have mastered parallel parking, I avoid the 101 altogether and I listen to podcasts to entertain myself in traffic.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Connecticut?

GLUTEN FREE options LOL. I have a gluten free diet (not by choice) and almost every restaurant here has tons of delicious gluten free options.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us? Hmmm yes! I have two. Coffee at the Bourgeois Pig in Hollywooddelicious lattes, and you can sit in a little tree house; and Night + Market Song in Silverlake for amazing Thai food that won't break the bank.

What would you

Our very wet winter: but we're still not out of the woods.....

It is hard to believe that after all the rain fall we've had that California is still in a severe drought.

But according to the United States Drought Monitor's last report on January 24th (droughtmonitor.unl.edu) we still have a way to go before we make up the deficit. There are many effortless ways to conserve water; I have now made it a habit to not have the tap running whilst I brush my teeth, and when rinsing dishes I make sure to do them over a bucket which can then be used to water the plants. The easiest one of all is to make sure your sprinklers are turned off. This usually requires no more effort than a flick of a switch, and with the downpours we have had recently it will probably be a couple of weeks before you need to put them on again - unless it rains again in the meantime! It is astounding how many systems are left on, I have even spotted some going when it is actually raining. It looks like we may get another downpour over the weekend so turn them off today!

The chilly weather has given me the perfect opportunity to get out my M&S thermals - I stockpiled them on a recent trip home and was feeling rather foolish until this recent cold snap. I knew they would come in handy eventually! Marks and Spender now deliver to the USA and even offer free express delivery for orders over $50! Visit marksandspencerlondon.com/us to get your long johns...or anything else that grabs your fancy.

We have some great events and giveaways coming up over the next few weeks. You can always find out what is on offer either by visiting our Facebook page @BritsinLA or via this link www.Britsin.LA - this weekend some of our

I did save a ticket giveaway so that those of you who follow us via the British Weekly can participate too. Goldenvoice have given us a pair of tickets for the White Lies show at El Rey (February 15th) - this show is already sold out, so if you are a ticketless fan, email us at info@britsin.la to enter. We will notify you by Monday February 6th via email if you are successful. Make sure to put White Lies in the subject heading.

Preparations for the 10th Annual Toscars are in full swing. Teams were selected last week and now they are all frantically trying to write, film and score the Toscar-winning movie. The awards ceremony will be held on February 22nd, visit TheToscars.com if you would like to join us and the hopeful Toscar nominees for a fun-packed evening full of glamour and laughter.

Our weekly Breakfast Club has been very busy recently. I think the main attraction is our lovely Mayor of Breakfast, Bernard Skibben. He always goes out of his way to make sure everyone is welcomed and finds a seat and a friendly face - we are really lucky to have him. Although the food is extremely tasty too. Eggs Benedict seem to be neckand-neck with the Full English in the popularity stakes. You can find us any Tuesday from 9.30am-11.30am at Cecconis in West Hollywood - please note they do stop serving the breakfast menu at 11!

Hope to see some of you soon and keep an eye on our Twitter @BritsinLA for future competitions. And don't forget to turn those sprinklers off! Cheers! Eileen Baby is a 'miracle', says Geri!

Former Spice Girls singer Geri Halliwell-Horner says it is a "miracle" she conceived naturally.

The 44-year-old star recently welcomed son Montague George Hector Horner with her husband Christian Horner and Geri admitted she "incredibly feels lucky" that she didn't need any medical help in order to get pregnant. Oo-er!

She told The Sunday Times: "I feel incredibly lucky to have conceived naturally at my age, 44. I see it as a miracle. Trust me, I can still moan like the rest them but, equally, I remind myself every day that this is an absolute gift."

And Geri, who battled bulimia when she was younger, insisted that she will not be a "fanatic" about losing the baby weight.

She said: "When it comes to losing my baby weight I am not going to be a fanatic about it. At the moment the stairs in my house are exercise enough. Trust me, I have been there, done it, with all that perfect clean eating, but sometimes it is not sustainable or manageable.

Capaldi: time to think outside the box!

Hurrah! Let the joyous news be spread...

Doctor Who star Peter Capaldi is quitting his role in the famous science fiction series, telling the BBC, "it's time to go."

The Scottish actor (pictured, right) will step down as the 12th actor to spearhead the muchloved television show at the end of the year. Who-er!

The 55-year-old star started his stint in 2014.

In an interview on BBC Radio 2, he said: "it's time to move on." before adding: "But I'm still Doctor Who. I've got a lot to do – we're doing epic stuff. I'm not done vet."

Capaldi is the fourth actor to play the enigmatic hero of time and space since the BBC relaunched the series in 2005. He followed in the footsteps of Christopher Eccleston, David Tennant, and Matt Smith. And Capaldi isn't the only person stepping down from the cult TV show this year. Showrunner Steven Moffat will be Chris replaced by Chibnall (Broadchurch) for the next season.

For the uninitiated (and there must be VERY few of you out there) The Doctor is a member of an alien race called Timelords who travel through time and space in a Tardis, a vehicle shaped like a classic British blue police-box.

The character is recast every few season as part of a quirk in which the character dies, then is regenerated in a new body.

"Doctor Who," first broadcast in 1963, is one of the BBC's most popular programs around the world.

Don't get me wrong... I think Capaldi is a great actor, he was just not the perfect Doctor Who. He was excellent as John Frobisher, a civil servant in 2009's Torchwood: Children of Earth. In my opinion, he would have fared far better playing the The Master. But then Moffat got it wrong every time, IMHO!

Speculation began Tuesday about

Capaldi's replacement, candidates include Richard Ayoade (er, Rory NO), Kinnear (Hmmm, not bad), Miranda Hart (er, NOOOOO), and David Harewood (great in CW's Supergirl, but NOT the Doctor!).

My favorite is Ben Whishaw — who plays Q in the James Bond 007 films - please give him the job!

ARIES: If life at work is not all it could be, do not assume the worst. It would be wise to look at what you are dealing with currently in other areas of life. In any event life will return to normal by next weekend.

TAURUS: Your emotions are probably in a bit of turmoil in one or more areas. As this will turn out to be unfinished business, it's best to take charge of the situation sooner than later.

GEMINI: Your life is filled currently with all kinds of situations and you are probably wondering which is the most important to deal with now. Look at what can or will impact your long-term life, as this will be the most important. The rest will be easy to resolve.

CANCER: You are carrying way more problems on your shoulders than you should. This is not necessary as no man is an island. You might be dealing with someone you are trying to appease and it is not the first time. Be aware it's time to let it go.

LEO: You may be involved in sorting out a family or work situation currently. You would be wise to keep your opinions to yourself in this matter. You have a big heart and tend to share it. In this case keep a low profile.

VIRGO: Everything in life is a lesson as you (more than anyone) know. Look to someone who you respect and ask for guidance as this can be resolved in a much calmer way. This is especially true in a current life situation, LIBRA: The lovely and lucky planet Jupiter is well on his way to bringing you at least some of your wishes. If you are in any sort of a tizzy remember to breathe and relax as you will surely benefit from this.

SCORPIO: February will bring all sorts of unfinished things to your attention, even a recent disappointment can turn around in a positive and uplifting way. It's time to enjoy life. And start now to plan the changes you know are inevitable.

SAGITTARIUS: Just watch that temper if things don't always go the way you planned. Life is always a journey and with this in mind enjoy the traveling. If you are currently not enjoying life as you can, remember this; you can change the direction if you really want to CAPRICORN: This could be the month that all your hopes begin to grow. It is entirely up to you how you make it work, patience should be your keyword and going forward into February life will be kinder.

AQUARIUS: You will always get back what you put out; just be careful you don't say too much to another that can upset your long term plans. Keep your life stress-free these next few days and see how much better life becomes.

PISCES: You are reputed to be the most sensitive and creative of all the signs, so this week proves it, if not to another then to yourself. Jupiter sitting in your money house for the rest of year ahead brings rewards in several areas of your life.

In Bed with the Georgians: hotter than you'd think

Exclusive interview with author Mike Rendell about his new book about sex life in Georgian England

"It was the obscene is, from 1714 to 1830. amount of publicity given to the Kardashians," says In Bed with the Georgians author Mike Rendell.

"It got me thinking about how, 250 years ago, the courtesans dressed up like fashion icons. Whereas now the fashion icons seem to dress, well, like streetwalkers. But what intrigued me is how this gets reported in the press...and how it was reported in the Georgian era. Courtesans occupied a sort of parallel universe, incredibly famous, admired, and arbiters of taste and style ... and yet of course not allowed polite households. in The caricaturists of the time, especially people like James Gillray and Thomas Rowlandson, had a field day. It was all very open and above board."

In Bed with the Georgians explores the sex lives of people living in Georgian England, that There were madams. brothels, courtesans, kept women, a demi-monde, houses of pleasure and streetwalkers. The English sex scene was hot, before the backlash of the prudish Victorians that followed.

Rendall, who's а member of the British Library, says most of his research was done online. "many of the 18thcentury books which comment on prevailing prostitution are available online. These include the early kiss-and-tell memoirs. I also use the online facilities offered by museums and galleries in the United States, including the ever-helpful Lewis Walpole Library at Yale University, and places like the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Library of Congress, which bought a huge collection of 18th-century prints off the Royal Family shortly after the First World War."

In Bed offers details about different areas of London, each with its own scandalous beauties. It describes how they dressed, with illustrations. It covers how courtesans became famous and for which of their aristocrat or royal lovers. A glossary describes the world of the London sex trade at the time. If you're a writer, the letters from the time, newspapers, caricaturists, and details on royal and aristocratic scandals, would be great to use to write about the times.

While writing the book, Rendall mentioned on his blog the high cost of obtaining permission to use high definition museum prints for a book cover. "A total stranger in Montreal contacted me and asked if I would like the original of the print I was thinking of using ... and sent it to me free of charge. As he put it, he had acquired it in a job lot with a Gainsborough, and had no use for it. Nevertheless it is incredibly generous, and much appreciated." Rendall's first book was

The Journal of a Georgian Gentleman, based on the diaries journals and memorabilia belonging to his ancestor who was born in 1729. "I have virtually every bit of paper he ever wrote, as well as his chairs, his cutlery, even his bedwarming pan," says Rendall. "I wrote up his story. It is what got me interested in the entire period of 18th-century history. It is an era I love. I am just so fortunate to have trunkloads of papers from my ancestors which are an endless source of interest and delight."

Rendall also wrote a book about Phillip Astley, who started the very first circus, what became a hugely popular form of entertainment in the Georgian and Victorian period. Rendall has published books on Bristol Blue Glass, and on 18th Century paper-cuts. He's written illustrated introductions to the Regency and Georgian periods.

Rendall who worked in an office for 30 years as a lawyer, says he loves the freedom that goes with being a historian. He doesn't have an agent. He approached Pen & Sword because he knew the editor. "I came up with a synopsis and title and submitted it. They said, fine, go off and do it."

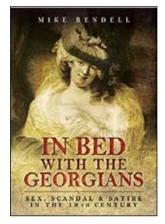

Rendall is currently writing the book Petticoat Pioneers, about women who defied male prejudice and legal restraints to succeed in a man's world. Pen & Sword will be publishing in 2018.

Rendall lives in the southwest of England and spends several months of each year in Spain. He was born in Bristol in 1947.

Burnley were one of the busier sides, recruiting 25-year-old Republic of Ireland international Brady from Norwich for a club-record fee having earlier snapped up another midfielder, Ashley Westwood, from Aston Villa.

Southampton bolstered their attacking options by bringing in Gabbiadini, 25, while Crystal Palace secured Liverpool centre-back Mamadou Sakho on loan and signed Serbia midfielder Luka Milivojevic from Greek side Olympiakos.

Swansea City signed Aston Villa forward Jordan Ayew in a swap deal that saw Wales defender Neil Taylor go the other way.

Several mooted moves did not go through on a relatively low-key day, with Celtic keeper Craig Gordon and striker Moussa Dembele staying with the Scottish champions despite Sunderland, thwarted in their attempts to sign forward Leonardo Ulloa from Premier League champions Leicester City, had a bid of about £12m rejected by Southampton for forward Jay Rodriguez.

Stoke have signed West Brom striker Saido Berahino on a five-anda-half-year deal. The 23-year-old's contract had been due to expire at the end of the season, and the Baggies offered him a new deal for a third time in December.

Palace will pay a £2m loan fee plus wages for Sakho, who has played 56 league games since his move from Paris St-Germain in 2013.

The France international, 26, has not played for the Reds since April because of off-field issues.

Sakho was sent home from Liverpool's preseason tour of the United States by manager Jurgen Klopp as a disciplinary measure.

Former Chelsea and midfielder England Frank Lampard has retired, bringing to an end a 21-year professional career.

The 38-year-old, who spent last year with New York City in Major League Soccer in the US, announced his decision on social media on Thursday.

Lampard made 649 appearances for Chelsea and won 106 England caps.

"Whilst I have received a number of exciting offers to continue playing, at 38 I feel now is the time to begin the next chapter in my life," said Lampard.

"I'm grateful to the Football Association for the opportunity to study for my coaching qualifications and I look forward to pursuing the off-field opportunities that this decision opens."

He won 11 major trophies, including Premier three League titles and the Champions League in 2012. Lampard also won four FA Cups, two League Cups and the Europa League.

joined Lampard Chelsea from boyhood club West Ham for a fee of £11m in 2001.

His club-record 211 goals helped the Blues win the Champions League, three Premier Leagues, four FA Cups, two League Cups, the Europa League and a Community Shield.

He played a pivotal role as Jose Mourinho's side delivered

He added 16 league goals the following season as Chelsea retained their title, finishing runner-up to Barcelona forward Ronaldinho in both the Ballon d'Or and Fifa World Player of the Year awards.

First transfer window profit for Premier League clubs

Premier League clubs have recorded a transfer window profit for the first time - despite spending reaching a six-year January high of £215m.

Southampton and Burnley made late deadline-day deals, while Odion Ighalo moved from Watford to China for £20m.

Saints paid about £14m for Napoli's Manolo Gabbiadini, and the Clarets signed Robbie Brady for up to £13m.

However, top-flight sides brought in £40m more than they paid out, according to finance analysts Deloitte.

Premier League teams have spent a record £1.38bn on transfers in the 2016-17 season, after a summer outlay of £1.165bn.

Spending in January 2017 is the second highest - behind the record mark of £225m six years ago - and dwarfs the £35m spent in the first January transfer window in 2003.

While the window is now closed for the major European leagues, there could still be departures as big-spending China has an official deadline of 28 February.

Deadline-day sales were led by Nigeria cont. on page 19, col. 4 in 2011-12 as Lampard suspended John Terry. captained the side to a penalty shootout win over Bayern Munich in the absence of the
