Boris warns Russia over spy poisoning

■ Johnson threatens to boycott World Cup if Moscow found behind bizarre attack in Salisbury
 ■ Poisoning of former agent looks like 'state sponsored assassination attempt' say experts

RELATIONS between Russia and the UK worsened dramatically this week with the mysterious poisoning of a former Russian spy in the quiet West Country town of Salisbury.

Tensions between London and Moscow have been growing in recent months and this latest chapter, which, in the words of one intelligence expert 'bore all the hallmarks of a state-sponsored assassination' have ratcheted them up still further, with Boris Johnson threatening a World Cup boycott by British VIPs should Moscow prove to be behind an assassination attempt on UK soil.

The Foreign Secretary indicated officials would be told to stay away from the tournament this summer in Russia if Vladimir Putin's government is implicated in the alleged poisoning of double agent Sergei Skripal, 66, and his daughter Yulia, 33. Mr Johnson told MPs: "Should evidence emerge that implies state responsibility, then Her Government Majestv's will respond robustly."

At press time police were night continuing urgent inquiries into what had left the Skripals fighting for their lives after being found unconscious on a bench in the Wiltshire on Sunday town afternoon. And in dramatic Commons scenes the Foreign Secretary branded Moscow a "malign" force in the world and said assassination attempts on UK soil would not "go unpunished".

"echoes"

Mr Johnson said the alleged poisoning of Mr Skripal, a double agent who came to Britain after a spy swap, had "echoes" of the death of ex-KGB man Alexander Litvinenko in London in 2006 after he drank tea laced with radioactive polonium-210. After a painstaking investigation English police concluded the murder had been approved by Mr Putin.

The Foreign Secretary

told the Commons that if the Skripal case turned out to be "what many MPs suspect, we will have to have a serious conversation about our engagement with Russia". He warned: "Thinking ahead to the World Cup this summer, it is very difficult to imagine how UK representation at that event could go ahead in the normal way, and consider that."

Johnson clarified that

He warned Russia: "This government will take whatever measures we deem necessary to protect the lives of the people in this country, our values and our freedoms.

"No attempt to take innocent life on UK soil will go either unsanctioned or unpunished."

He added: "It is worth it for this country to carry on with what it is doing to stand up to Russia, even if it exposes us to this kind of threat and challenge.

"Russia is determined to impose its own way of thinking, particularly on the peoples of central and eastern Europe, the countries of the former Soviet Union. It is the UK that is in the lead in standing up to it. Many other countries would prefer to turn a blind eye. We do not take that view, we take a principled view." He said Russia was now "in many respects a malign and disruptive force".

Boffins battle to identify Salisbury poison

■ Father and daughter found slumped on a bench outside a shopping centre

ATOP-SECRET weapons research laboratory is conducting tests into the suspected poisoning of Russian double agent Sergei Skripal and his daughter Yulia in a desperate attempt to find an antidote.

Military scientists at Porton Down in Wiltshire were examining samples of a mystery substance taken from the scene where the pair were found slumped on a bench outside a shopping centre in nearby Salisbury on Sunday. Scotland Yard anti-terror officers have been drafted in to lead the investigation into the apparent attempted assassination.

On Tuesday night a relative in Russia said former spy Mr Skripal had always feared his past would catch up with him. The relative said: "From the first day he knew it would end badly, and that he would not be left alone."

Mr Skripal, 66, and Yulia, 33, are fighting for their lives in hospital after the attack. The pair were filmed on CCTV minutes before collapsing as they strolled through an alley that leads from a Zizzi pizza restaurant branch. The restaurant and a nearby pub The Mill pub remained sealed off at press time as scientists trained to deal with chemical, biological and radiological material worked at the scene. Up to 10 other people, all believed to be from emergency services, were treated for symptoms including vomiting. All but one has been released from hospital.

Mr Skripal was jailed in Moscow in 2006 for selling secrets to MI6 but was released in a Cold-War style spy swap in 2010 and set up home in the medieval cathedral city. He slipped into obscurity and it had been believed he had been given a new identity and pension. Businesswoman Yulia, who works for Pepsico, had travelled to see him from her home in Moscow. Mr Skripal's new life has been dogged by tragedy. His wife Liudmila died aged 50 in 2012 after suffering cancer and his son Alexandr, 43, died last year from liver failure while visiting Russia. Mr Skripal, a former colonel in the Russian military intelligence, was said to be "deeply suspicious" about his son's death.

Mr Skripal and Yulia

were overcome by the effects of the suspected poisoning on Sunday afternoon while they were walking through the city. Eyewitness Graham Mulcock spotted the spy in a "catatonic" state at around 4.15pm. He said: "The paramedics seemed to be struggling to keep the two people conscious.

"The man was sitting staring into space. He was just staring ahead of himself."

Gym worker Freya Church, 27, said: "She was just leaning on him, slumped. "She looked passed out and he was looking up gesticulating upwards. His eyes were glazed. To be honest I thought they were just homeless."

Mr Skripal is thought to have rented a property in the city before buying

Friends told how he was "polite and friendly" and was a popular member of the Railway Social Club in Salisbury. Shopkeeper Ebru Ozturk, 41, said he would come in and buy a particular type of Polish sausage and spend up to £40 on lottery scratchcards each time he visited. He said: "I really look forward to him coming in. He often wins money. He's very lucky. Whenever I saw him he was happy."

Neighbour James Puttock said: "He seems to be a happy person. I would say hello, he would say hello."

nuisances or acts of war", Mr Johnson told MPs: "I increasingly think that we have to categorize them as acts of war, which means that we need to elaborate a new doctrine of response and a new doctrine of deterrence."

'demonstrated reluctance'

Responding directly to Mr Johnson's address to MPs, the Russian Embassy posted: "The Foreign Secretary spoke in such a manner as if the investigation was already over and Russia was found responsible for what had happened in Salisbury.

"We regret that instead of a proper official clarification on the issue the Foreign Secretary chose to threaten Russia with retribution."

One Westminster source said that Russia was 'emboldened' by the apparent lack of appetite for a confrontation being displayed by the UK's most important ally, the United States.

"According to the Nato charter, an attack on one member state is considered an attack on all," he said. "But given President Trump's demonstrated reluctance to address Russian interference in the US election process, it's perhaps not surprising that Mr. Putin might feel emboldened to take this kind of drastic action against Washington's most reliable ally."

Who aped all the pies?

■ Rising fury over post-Brexit US pastry pirates

BRITISH institutions such as the Cornish pasty, Melton Mowbray pork pies and Scotch whisky are under threat from a post-Brexit American invasion.

The US is reportedly lobbying hard allow supermarkets to import cheap copies our much-loved traditional creations once the UK leaves the European Union. Under EU law products, including Cumberland sausages, have protected geographical status and cannot be made anywhere else. But it is understood some US lobbyists are battling for the UK to drop them, allowing a "made in America" tag.

Protected status, known as Geographical Indications (GIs, or PDOs), have been granted by the EU to thousands of food and drink products across member nations and the US news prompted a backlash amid fears for our heritage. Washington has long argued that the rules prevent US food and drink makers selling their own products in the EU and wants the UK to ditch them in post-Brexit trade deal.

Shawna Morris of the US Dairy Export Council said: "We think the ability to take a fresh look at UK regulation through the Brexit process provides the UK with a great opportunity for taking a much more reasonable approach.

"There's West Country farmhouse cheddar on the books, but any time I've ever asked anyone from the UK if they have any intentions to try to claw back cheddar, the response has been, 'Of course not, that would be preposterous'. We think it's just as preposterous for the Greeks to reclaim feta"

A Cornish Pasty

Association spokesman said: "A domestic regulation that mirrors the EU scheme is the best solution." Marion Symonds, 50, who owns Portreath Bakery in Cornwall, said: "Even if they brought a Cornish pasty into Cornwall, locals wouldn't buy it. But when they bring it into the UK you have to be really careful. We've fought so hard."

An EU Commission position paper for Brexit negotiations insists the UK must enforce existing rules, including "automatic granting recognition" to all GIs created afterwards. A Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs spokesman said: "Leaving EU gives us a golden opportunity to secure ambitious free-trade deals while supporting farmers and producers to grow and sell more great British food."

Tributes flow for Bannister 'the inspiration'

■ Athletics world pays tribute to miler who broke magical four minute barrier

LORD Coe has led a wave of tributes to Sir Roger Bannister - the first man to run a mile in less than four minutes who died aged 88 at the weekend.

The Olympic gold medallist praised his predecessor on track for making impossible possible"

Other athletes, including Sir Mo Farah, spoke of the "humble" and "inspiring" athlete who earned enduring fame for his feat.

Sir Roger captured the world's imagination when he smashed the mile record in 1954, while still a medical student at the University of Oxford.

His family said Sir Roger, who had suffered from Parkinson's disease, died peacefully on Saturday, surrounded by relatives "who were as loved by him, as he was loved by them".

They added: banked his treasure in the hearts of his friends."

Lord Coe, the middledistance legend and London 2012 Olympics mastermind, said: "On 6 May, 1954, Roger made the impossible possible.

"One year after the coronation of a young Queen Elizabeth II and after man conquered Everest, Roger Bannister ran the first sub-four minute mile with the help of his friends Chris Chataway and Chris Brasher

"The world's best had been runners attempting the fourminute barrier for a quarter of a century. It was as much of a psychological barrier as it was a physical barrier. Bannister's assault allowed mankind to enter a world filled with new possibilities.

"It was a moment in history that lifted the heart of a nation and boosted morale in a world that was still at a low ebb after the war."

The head of the International Association of Athletics Federations added: "This is a day of intense sadness both for our nation and for all of us in athletics."

'sporting icon'

Fellow Olympic gold winner Sir Mo said on Twitter: "He was an inspiration to so many, being the first man to break the four-minute mile. My thoughts are with his family and friends"

Prime Minister Theresa

May said: "Sir Roger Bannister was a great British sporting whose achievements were an inspiration to us all. He will be greatly missed."

Marathon winner Paula Radcliffe said she was "saddened", adding: "We have lost one of the true pioneers, trailblazers and iconic inspirations of our sport."

Steve Cram, won silver won silver in the 1500m at the 1984 Olympics, said: "I wanted to be a great British miler following in his footsteps."

Former Democrat leader Lord Campbell of Pittenweem, who represented Great Britain at the 1964 Olympics, said: every other schoolboy in the 1950s, Roger Bannister was my hero.'

Sadiq Khan, Mayor of London, said: "By breaking the four-minute mile he redefined what was thought impossible and inspired the world."

Lord Patten of Barnes, Chancellor of Oxford, said: "He was not just one of the great athletes of the last century but a superb doctor and servant of Steve Ford, chief executive of Parkinson's UK, said: "Sir Roger spoke publicly about his condition and his positive outlook, taking each day as it came, will have provided comfort to others in his situation."

BANNISTER: held record for just 46 days

Sir Roger won his greatest accolade on May 6, 1954, at Iffley Road track in Oxford aged 25. His finish with a time of just of 3:59.4 seconds was captured in a famous black-and-white photo. His record only stood for 46 days before it was broken by Australian John Landy, but the Englishman beat him to gold at the Vancouver Commonwealth Games, later that year.

Sir Roger retired from athletics in 1954 to concentrate on his medical studies and became a neurologist and Master of Pembroke College, Oxford. He married Moyra Jacobsson, daughter of an eminent Swedish economist, and they had four children. He was knighted for services to sport in 1975. He retired in 1993 and was diagnosed with Parkinson's in 2011. Sir Roger died at Oxford's John Radcliffe Hospital, where he had studied.

Mo cries foul over airport 'harassment'

Sir Mo Farah this week claimed he was racially harassed at Munich airport and has lodged formal complaint with the airport and the German police.

The German Federal Police responded to the British four-time Olympic champion's initial claim by saying the accused officer was "properly carrying out his duty".

Farah had posted a video on Instagram showing an altercation at the airport.

But the police added they "cannot see any indication of racial harassment".

Farah, 34, was travelling to Ethiopia in preparation for next month's London Marathon when the alleged incident took "The guy is touching me up like crazy. Pure harassment. Pure, pure, harassment," the Somaliaborn athlete wrote, later posting the 47-second video on social media with the caption "Sad to see racial harassment in this day and age. 2018...!!!!"

In a statement, a police spokesperson said security checks at the airport are carried out by a private company on behalf of the State of Bavaria.

"It seemed that Sir Mo Farah did not agree with this passenger security check performed on him and blamed this check on a racist measure. Obviously he was very upset," the statement added.

"As Sir Mo Farah didn't want to leave the security check point, security staff asked the Federal Police officer seen in the video for support. In cooperation with the security staff's supervisor, the officer tried to explain this routine measure to Sir Mo Farah and to calm him down. Unfortunately that didn't work

"Then the officer asked him to leave the security check point because he was blocking the area. Sir Mo Farah got more and more upset. He continued arguing and blaming security staff and the Federal Police Officer being racists."

Police said Farah began to film in the security check area, "which is not allowed".

"The officer asked him to stop immediately recording. As Sir Mo Farah ignored this police order the officer asked him to leave the security control area and proceed to his departure gate," said the statement.

"Mr Farah persistently ignored this second police order so that the officer slightly touched him and tried to direct him away from the security check area to the shopping and gate section what you can see in the video."

Gary Oldman: Put the kettle on – I'm bringing Oscar home!

■ Actor snags Best Actor statuette for his portryal of Winston Churchill in Darkest Hour

Gary Oldman told his 98-year-old mother "put the kettle on – I'm bringing Oscar home" as his portrayal of Winston Churchill earned him his first Oscar Sunday night.

The British star, 59, picked up the best actor prize for his turn in Darkest Hour, while Frances McDormand won the best actress gong for Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri.

Oldman appeared emotional as he accepted his award and in a lengthy speech, he thanked "the Academy and its members for this glorious prize" as well as his colleagues, his wife and family.

He thanked America "for the many wonderful gifts it has given me – my home, my livelihood, my family and now Oscar."

The actor also sent out a special thank you to his mother.

He said: "I would like to thank my mother, who is older than the Oscars, she is 99 years young next birthday and she's watching the ceremony from the comfort of her sofa.

"I say to my mother, thank you for your love and support, put the kettle on – I'm bringing Oscar home."

Born in London in 1958, Oldman dabbled in theatre before gaining regular work on the London stage in the late 1970s during stints with the Royal Shakespeare Company at Sloane Square's legendary Royal Court Theatre. He soon moved into film, gaining fame for his turns as Sid Vicious in Sid and Nancy (1986) and playwright Joe Orton in Prick Up Your Ears (1987). Hailed as a leading member of the so-called 'Brit Pack', he soon outdistanced his peers with a series of wellreceived roles in movies including State of Grace (1990), JFK (1991), and Bram Stoker's Dracula (1992). More recently he he has starred as Sirius Black in the Harry Potter Series, James Gordon in the Dark Knight trilogy, George Smiley in Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy and the human leader Dreyfus in Dawn of the Planet of the Apes.

There were several other British accents to be heard accepting awards at Hollywood's biggest night, but among the behind-the-camera set no winner was considered more deserving than Roger Deakins, the legendary British cinematographer who won his first award with his 14th nomination for Blade Runner 2049.

classics

Deakins, who has homes in his native Devon and Santa Monica, has enjoyed a career that has spanned over 40 years, filming classics including Shawshank Redemption, The Big Lebowski, Fargo, No Country for Old Men and True Grit. In typically understated style, Deakins told the audience: "I really love my job. I have been doing it a long time as you can see. One of the reasons I really love it is because of the people I work with in front of and behind the camera." The cinematographer also joked that he had no interest in the evening's prize for the shortest acceptance speech, deadpanning, "I don't see myself on a Jet Ski somehow."

Born in Torquay, Deakins developed a love of photography while at school. He made a name as a documentarian before moving into music videos and then film in the 1980s, working on Sid and Nancy, Pascali's Island and his first American movie, Mountains of the Moon, in 1990.

Ahead of his victory, Deakins maintained that his lack of wins "doesn't really bother me," telling the Los Angeles Times, "I'm just proud to still be doing the job, really."

Sir Bradley set to lose big amid 'malicious' doping accusations

SIR Bradley Wiggins could lose a fortune after the all-conquering Team Sky cycling team was accused of abusing doping rules in a report.

Britain's most Olympian decorated faces the axe from endorsement deals after MPs found his doping "crossed an ethical line" by using drugs to performance enhance instead of just for medical purposes.

The report by MPs said he took the drugs shortly before the 2011 Tour de France, his 2012 Tour win and the 2013 Giro d'Italia.

There were calls for Sir Bradley, 37, to be stripped of the knighthood he was awarded in 2013.

Sir Bradley hit back: "I'd have had more rights if I was a murderer."

Asked if he cheated he said: "I refute that 100 per cent. This is malicious. This is someone trying to smear me.

"It's the worst thing to be accused of. It's also the hardest thing to prove you haven't done."

The father of two said he is the subject of a "witch hunt" and his children "get a hammering at school".

He added: "The effect it has had on the family is just horrific, I am having to pick up the pieces with the kids."

Halfords, which launched a range of children's bikes with Sir Bradley, said: "We are currently in discussions with his management team regarding this latest report.

"We continuously review all of our product ranges based on a variety of different factors and the Wiggins range is no different."

Experts predict Sir Bradley – worth £13million – faces losing up to £1million a year over the scandal.

The Commons Digital, Culture, Media and Sport Committee rejected Sir Bradley's claims that the triamcinolone was to treat his asthma in the run-up to becoming the first Briton to win the Tour de France.

The report said Sir

Bradley may have been given the drug up to nine times over four years.

Team Sky's owners are understood to be backing the British outfit's under-fire boss Sir Dave Brailsford. But MPs ruled Sir Bradley and other Team Sky riders were given the steroid because it helped them lose weight without compromising power.

Labour MP John Mann said the cyclist must "justify why he should keep his knighthood and sponsorship deals by now proving his innocence". Sir Bradley won five Olympic and seven world championship golds. He was the first person to win the Tour and Olympic gold in the same year.

He sat on a golden throne at Hampton Court Palace after winning the cycling time-trial at London 2012. The guitar-playing fan of mod culture, known for his mutton-chop sideburns won fans with his self-deprecating humour and sharp dress style.

After 66 years, the NME stops the presses

The NME – or New Musical Express – which for many years was essential reading for young pop music fans in Britain, is to cease publication in print after 66 years. The weekly music title joins a growing list of once-mighty magazine brands that now only exist online.

The NME.com website will continue, replacing the print edition's cover star interview with a new weekly digital franchise, the Big Read.

The NME will continue to keep a sporadic presence in print with special issues such as its paid-for series NME Gold, to cater for music stars' appetite for appearing in a printed product.

In 2015, the magazine stopped being a paid title after a decade of High winds have been blowing powder from hilltops in the north Pennines creating huge drifts up to 20 feet deep. Deb Huby, of Nenthead, near Alston, has been snowed in for six days and without heating for three.

She and her partner Tim Gallagher had to walk three miles, often sinking waist-high in snow, to get food, the 46-year-old said. Conditions had been horrific and she feared her cottage would be "buried".

Ms Huby, who suffers from anxiety and had also run out of her medication, said: "I've been in this area 20 years and I've seen some bad winters but nothing like this. We couldn't even get out of the door and at one point the snowdrifts were 20ft high. There seems no end to it."

sales declines saw its circulation drop to just 15,000. It relaunched as an ad-funded, free title with a circulation of 300,000 in a last throw of the strategic dice for the print edition.

"Our move to free print has helped propel the brand to its biggest ever audience on NME. com," said Paul Cheal, the UK group managing director, music, at NME publisher Time Inc UK.

NME, which has been printed weekly since 1952, managed to make money as a brand overall through spin-off activities such as awards and events.

Early readers of the magazine included John Lennon, Malcolm McLaren and T Rex frontman Marc Bolan, while its writers have included Bob Geldof and Pretenders lead singer Chrissie Hynde. The film director, Michael Winner, was NME's film critic in the 1950s and 60s.

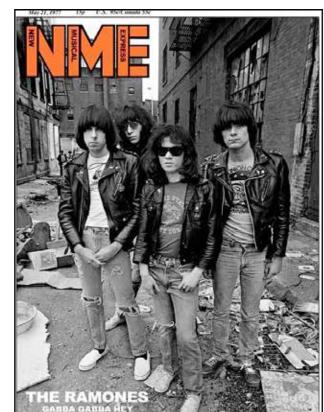

NME's sales peaked at almost 307,000 in 1964 when the magazine was a must-read for keeping up with the latest exploits of the Beatles and Rolling Stones.

The magazine hit what is regarded as its golden age in the 70s, becoming a cheerleader for punk and then a champion for the new wave and indie acts that flourished in its wake, including Joy Division and the Smiths.

In the 90s, NME was at the forefront of Britpop, amping up the mediahyped rivalry between Blur and Oasis with its "heavyweight championship" cover in August 1995 when rival singles Country House and Roll With It were released.

The magazine began to feel the pressure in the noughties as music listings went online and music discovery started moving to services such as Spotify. This was exacerbated by the wider issue of readers moving to digital media, resulting in the falling sales and ad revenue that have claimed many other magazine titles in the past decade.

Proactive Mental Health: how to take responsibility for the right path

In this week's article we are going to look at how we can make better decisions around food, alcohol and other events which befall us in life.

Most people are driven by old automatic patterns or behaviors and these are learnt early in our younger years. As we develop into our teens and adulthood, most of these "passed on patterns" already in grained in us. They are usually taught by parents but also come from the need for familiarity and survival. These become "unconscious choices". There is a better way: to be mindful about our choices. But first, let's look at how passed on patterns manifest in our daily lives:

The Left Path

Unconcious, automatic choices made from a place of "staying clear of fear".

Welcome to the left path - automatic, safe and easy choices, which are usually made out of fear, motivated by staying in your comfort zone which will become very normal after a while. Here are some examples: Brushing your teeth when you wake up; always ordering the same food at a restaurant or making the same lunch and taking it to work; sitting in the same place on your commute or driving the same route to work; drinking a glass of wine when cooking, or after a hard day at work, on a daily basis; watching TV every night whilst eating at the same time.

The Right Path

By contrast, this is a mindset wherein conscious and loving choices are carefully made from a place of mindfulness and awareness.

WINE WITH DINNER: it's easy to become a habit!

This is known as "the right path". And you can see why. Wouldn't your rather make mindful and awareness-based choices which help you enable yourself to find the best way to live? Here are some examples of conscious, mindful choices: ordering food from a menu and becoming truly AWARE what and why you are ordering that food or drink; pausing and becoming mindful how you FEEL when you arrive home from work and THINK before you pour that glass of wine or beer; before speaking, pausing and checking in WITH YOURSELF before you speak out loud to your loved one about a problem; consciously slowing down your eating and mindful eating your food with no distractions.

At any point with making a decision in our lives around food, alcohol or anything that is not working to our higher, healther good, we are always at a point of choice, and when we realize we can choose the left path or right path — then we can regain full personal power over our lives.

Which path will you choose today?

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Take this week's energy and move it in a positive area for you and make it work and then some. This rare and positive planet lineup will bring so many opportunities for good things to light up all the areas you need.

TAURUS: He who hesitates is lost should be your mantra this week ahead. Do not waste time remembering how things used to be. The planets are forcing you out of that old comfort zone. Best to let the past go and move to a positive future.

GEMINI: Seems as though all around you are procrastinating - including you. If you do not make a decision this week it will continue, so make this a priority to complete. Life can work to your advantage next week.

CANCER: Your inability to face your own downside, which is hiding under the shell of your crab-like nature will in the end be your downfall. This time there is a simple solution: own your mistakes and all will be resolved.

LEO: This time of year is a reflective time for Leo as the sun moves into springtime. In order to get the best results going forward make an inventory in preparation for what you want to achieve in the next month.

VIRGO: You have a busy month ahead starting with the full moon in your own sign and so this weekend take time out and get away from your normal routine. By the middle of the week you will be fit and happy and be ready to be on the go.

LIBRA: You may be feeling somewhat puzzled this week ahead when a person close to you does something that makes no sense. You cannot second guess anybody with this planetary energy and it is best to not assume the worst.

SCORPIO: The recent Virgo full moon and the stuff that this brings up will be one of the emotional moments of the month. Just go with the flow and you will see unfinished business and resolutions all will come together. Just go with the flow.

SAG ITTARIUS: Jupiter your boss planet is moving slower and will soon start going in a backward stroll. With this in mind take a chance and make hay while the sun shines. You are in the spotlight so take full advantage of the energy.

CAP RICORN: The recent full moon should have made you aware of something lacking in your life. This does not mean you missed out on something. It simply means you are ready for change. Take the chance offered.

AQUARIUS: You will be ready (and hopefully waiting) for the moment to take some kind of action. Wait until you feel the time is right and it will make a difference. Sunny days are ahead in any home situations

PISCES: The moon in your opposite sign recently along with Sun in your own this week is bringing some kind of completion for you. How you deal and complete this will be the focus for the rest of the month. Happy birthday.

Olivia Twist: a distaff take on the Dickens hero

Exclusive interview with author Lori Langdon discussing her new novel, a reboot of the classic Dickens tale

"Olivia Twist is a love letter to characters that first entered my life as a child in the musical, Oliver!, and later in Dickens' classic Oliver Twist," says author Lori Langdon.

"After my grandma took me to see a rerelease of the movie musical, I became obsessed with the story. I'd sit in my room and listen to the double album soundtrack for hours, making up new adventures for the characters. In my favorite daydream, Oliver had been born a girl and was disguising her true gender as a safety measure. I imagined that the two (Olivia and the Artful Dodger) became embroiled in endless mysteries and eventually fell in love."

Olivia Twist was born in a workhouse and raised as a boy among thieving London street gangs. She's tough and smart. After she gets in trouble she's taken to her uncle's to live. She's raised to be a lady, but there is still a bit of the street urchin in her. Jack MacCarron was known as the Artful Dodger when Olivia first knew him, when they were struggling survive on the mean streets of London. Now working with his "aunt", a society matron, Jack steals from members of society. When Olivia more modern sense and Jack come face to of agency within the face, she seems familiar.

Does he know her? darkly beautiful

"As a teen, I devoured every bit of historical fiction I could get my hands on, including the classic Dickens' novel, Oliver Twist," savs Langdon. "I quickly realized two things. Artful Dodger was not the hero I had envisioned, and the film had missed a major character, Oliver's halfbrother, the villainous

"Olivia is living the double life of a lady in high society, while sneaking out at night disguised as a boy to help a destitute group orphans," says Langdon. "Jack has teamed up with an old widow who turned him into a gentleman so that they could rob the rich. I wanted to give the characters a more modern sense of agency within the context of Dickens' darkly beautiful London. Olivia Twist is a gender-swapping continuation of sorts. We see flashbacks that are nods to the original story, but the bulk of it is set when Jack and Olivia are young adults."

Langdon describes doing historical research as both an inspiration and a rabbit hole.

"I enjoy reading about the customs, culture, and daily lives of different eras and can waste too much time searching for a specific detail," says Langdon. "As with most historical fiction, I learned far more about the era during my research than I include in the novel itself."

Olivia Twist is Langdon's sixth published novel with Blink/HarperCollins. Her first publishing experience was the fourbook, co-authored Doon series, a reimagining of the musical Brigadoon. The first book in the Doon series won RWA's Great Expectations contest for best YA novel in 2012. Langdon also wrote the YA thriller Gilt Hollow. The Doon series has been optioned for film by Dreamstreet and Lonetree Entertainment. Film rights to Olivia Twist are under consideration with the same company.

Sara Bierling is Langdon's editor at Blink YA Books, an imprint of HarperCollins. "Olivia Twist will be "Olivia Twist will be sold in Target Stores across the nation," says Langdon. "I never could have accomplished that with a self-published book."

Langdon is currently writing her next novel, about one of the secondary characters

BRITS IN LA

Spilling the Royal Tea: quality wedding banter for your listening pleasure...

As you are doubtless aware, over at Brits in LA we LOVE all things royal.

We embrace majestic British royal family and celebrate many of their events. Since Brits in LA's inception we have organized events to celebrate the royals including having a good ol' knees up for Her Majesty's jubilee. We slumber partied to Kate and Wills' nuptials and wet the baby's head when little George was born. We even got to watch Wills in a polo match up in Santa Barbara. And now of course ever since 'When Harry met Meghan', I started to drool a little at the possibilities of another event. Let's face it, we've always liked Harry, ever since Baby Spice gave him a little peck on the cheek all those years ago. And through the ups and downs of his life life, and his fun nights out after polo matches. He's always been the fun one. So the fact he chose an American actress to be his wife was not all that big of a surprise. The Press tend to have a field day with her though, trying to dig up the dirt. But she definitely seems like the kind who can handle it and will take everything in her stride. So until Eileen and I decide what to do (open to suggestions from members) I was thrilled to ask to co-host a new podcast with Sean Mandell (an American lover of all things Royal) for Spoke and TMZ. Called "Spilling The Royal Tea" (geddit?) it will update weekly and be told through the eyes of a Brit (me) and an American in the lead up to the actual day. We will have exclusives, up-to-date news on the planning, special guests each week who are most definitely in the know and fun banter between the two of us.

To listen to our premiere episode go to iTunes now, search "Spilling The Royal Tea" and download it. Perfect for when you're stuck in LA traffic (which is usually always) or planning a road trip to the desert.

As Eileen mentioned last week the 2018 Toscars were sensational. And all thanks to the community and the staff at the LGBT Center, who were simply incredible in their support at the Renbert Theatre venue. Remember if you want to make a further donation to the center (talking to you JC) please visit lalgbtcenter.org and see how you can help.

Just want to give a huge shout out to my mum, whom I love with all my heart. She is usually here for a visit this time of year, but instead will be celebrating my wonderful Aunt Sue's birthday in New York City. Happy 70th to her...and I hope you both have a fabulous don't wish for anybody. We play whoever we get."

It wasn't a spectacular ending to Liverpool's last-16 tie but there were a few chances to break the deadlock.

Sadio Mane acrobatically fired an effort over the bar and hit the post in a generally tame first half that also saw Dejan Lovren head narrowly wide.

Danny Ings picked up some rare game-time as a second-half substitute and was denied from close range by Iker Casillas late in the game after Majeed Waris' strike - Porto's only shot on target.

Klopp used the opportunity to rest players for Liverpool's Premier League match against Manchester United on Saturday, making five changes to the starting line-up.

Virgil van Dijk and Mohamed Salah were named among the substitutes but the Egyptian did have a cameo in the second half as Mane was given a breather.

There was also a chance for Joe Gomez and Adam

Back then they were hitting the heights in European football pretty regularly - the most successful English club in the competition's history, it was just two years since they had beaten the same opponents to lift their fifth trophy on a famous night in Istanbul.

But since being knocked out at the group stage in 2009, Liverpool have only featured in the Champions League twice.

It was a dejected-looking Reds side who trudged off the field in December 2014, a 1-1 draw with Basel confirming their elimination from the competition after a wretched campaign.

It would be Steven Gerrard's last game in the Champions League - a Liverpool legend bowing out with a goal but unable to reproduce the heroics he had done against Olympiakos a decade before en route to Istanbul.

After five years of waiting, it wasn't the way Liverpool had dreamt their comeback would go. Four more years on, Liverpool are back. And this time they look more than worthy members of Europe's elite.

They have cantered into the quarter-finals - barely hitting second gear - and now they eye the prize of a place in the last four.

Porto goalkeeper Casillas likely played his final Champions League Tuesday tonight - leaving the competition with a record number of appearances.

The 36-year-old, who played his 167th game on Tuesday, is expected to leave Porto at the end of the season and it is unclear where his future lies.

But this was not the fairytale ending the threetime European champion might have hoped for. Despite a decent save from Ings late in the second half, it was largely a forgettable evening.

Liverpool manager Jurgen Klopp speaking to BT Sport: "We did the job and that was it tonight.

"It wasn't the most exciting game but we controlled it, had a few chances, got a clean sheet and gave some boys some minutes. I am pretty sure it is rare to have a game like this in the knockout stages!

"We needed to be serious and we were, so all good. Of course, we want to win two games at this stage. When you watch the game you always think 'oh come on, a little bit more here or there' but they did well and it is all good. The attitude was outstanding."

Spurs young hopefuls mugged by Old Lady

Tottenham's Champions League ambitions came crashing down Wednesday night as Juventus produced two goals inside three secondhalf minutes to decide the destiny of their last-16 tie.

Son Heung-min's scrambled finish six minutes before the interval strengthened Spurs' position at Wembley after they recovered from two goals down to draw the first leg in Turin 2-2.

In an eventful first 45 minutes, Son and Harry Kane had wasted chances for the hosts, while Juventus were denied a clear penalty when Douglas Costa was brought down by Jan Vertonghen.

Tottenham appeared to be in control until Gonzalo Higuain turned in Sami Khedira's flick to give Juventus a 64th-minute lifeline - which they capitalised on ruthlessly and Paulo Dybala raced clear for the decisive goal three minutes later.

Mauricio Pochettino's side fought to revive their chances but to no avail, coming agonisingly close in the dying moments when Kane's header hit the inside of the post but bounced right on the goalline.

For Spurs, who last reached the Champions League quarter-finals in 2010-11, it was a first defeat in 18 matches, while Juventus are unbeaten since 22 November - a run of 20 games.

The London club are the first English team to be eliminated from this season's Champions League. Elsewhere on Wednesday, Manchester City lost 2-1 to Basel but went through 5-2 aggregate win to join Liverpool in the quarterfinals.

Manchester United and Chelsea could make it four Premier League sides in the last eight of Europe's top club competition when they play the second legs of their ties next week.

United entertain Sevilla on Tuesday following a goalless first leg in Spain, before Chelsea play at Barcelona on Wednesday after it finished 1-1 at Stamford Bridge.

Pochettino has performed outstanding work in piecing together an exciting and talented Tottenham team - but familiar questions will be asked after this devastating loss.

Spurs showed maturity as well as excellence to come from two goals down to earn a draw in Turin in the first leg, putting themselves in a favourable position to finish the job and secure a place in the quarter-finals.

And yet, from a position of strength bolstered even further by Son's goal just before the interval, Spurs once again came up short. Juve coach Massimo Allegri clearly told his side to be a lot more physical after the break, and with the air seemingly let out of the game, Spurs seemed to lose concentration and intensity. At that moment Allegri made two key substitutions, sending the full backs forward and delivering width and penetration. While Spurs were still processing the change, Juve scored twice and then settled into a comfortable thirty minutes of trademark Italian defending to see the tie out.

There is no doubting the quality in this Tottenham side and they were excellent in spells at Wembley, but with two Premier League title campaigns promising much but unable to deliver and an FA Cup semi-final loss to Chelsea last season, the requirement for tangible success is intensifying.

The hosts missed chances and suffered ill luck in the closing moments when Kane's header somehow stayed out, but in the end they paid a heavy price for three minutes of slackness that undid all the fine work from the first leg.

Juventus could have been forgiven for believing luck was against them when referee Szymon Marciniak and his assistant somehow failed to penalise Vertonghen for a first-half challenge on Costa in the area.

They had been put under pressure by Spurs and survived a succession of near misses - but showed their ruthlessness to deliver those two devastating blows and then the resilience to fiercely protect their advantage.

Juventus have a streak of experience a mile wide through the core of Massimiliano Allegri's side and it was epitomised when the old firm of keeper Gianluigi Buffon and Giorgio Chiellini celebrated as if a goal had been scored after the veteran defender made a crucial clearance late on.

And for Buffon, who has previously said he will conclude a glittering career if Juve fail to win the Champions League this season, the dream lives on.

We forgot to attack, says Guardiola after shock loss

Manchester City boss Pep Guardiola said his side "forgot to attack" against Basel as they suffered their first home defeat since 2016 but still reached the Champions League quarter-finals on Wednesday night.

City's 4-0 away win meant Wednesday's second leg of the last-16 tie was almost a formality, with Pep Guardiola resting several first-team players.

They led through Gabriel Jesus's opener from Bernardo Silva's cross - his first goal since November.

But Mohamed Elyounoussi lashed home a leveller and then set up Michael Lang's secondhalf winner.

The Premier League champions elect, who dominated the first half but wilted after the break, actually broke the Champions League record for passes completed in a game - 978 - despite losing. This was three days after breaking the league landmark with 902 against Chelsea.

But Guardiola was not too impressed, saying:

"Just to pass the ball for itself is nothing.

"The first half was quite good but in the second half we forgot to attack, we forgot to play. When we pass the ball we do it to move through the opponents to attack. The second half was really, really poor.

"It is not easy to play with a 4-0 lead. I think in the first half we showed we wanted to win the game. We created a lot of chances and we were good.

"But after 1-1 in the second half, it didn't happen. We just passed for itself and when that happens, that is not football."

It is only the second time City have reached the quarter-finals of the European Cup or Champions League. Juventus, Real Madrid and Liverpool are the other sides to have clinched their last-eight spots this week.

Guardiola - who has won the Champions League twice with Barcelona but not since 2011 - is not worried about a repeat of the performance in the next round.

"In the quarter-finals, this kind of situation is not going to happen - to play the second game 4-0 up, the rhythm will be completely different," he said.

Guardiola also singled out 17-year old Phil Foden for praise.

"In the second half, maybe he and Leroy [Sane] were the only ones who tried to be aggressive, who tried to do something, to get the ball and go forward," Guardiola said.

■ EUROPA LEAGUE: Arsenal shrug off domestic woes with impressive win in Milan

Arsenal put their recent problems to one side as a polished 2-0 win at fallen giants AC Milan gave them the upper hand in their Europa League last-16 tie.

The Gunners arrived at the San Siro for Thursday night's encounter at arguably the lowest point of manager Arsene Wenger's 22-year reign, yet responded to a run of four straight defeats with a confident and controlled display against their Italian hosts.

Henrikh Mkhitaryan's first goal for the club put the Premier League side ahead, cutting in from the left to fire in with the aid of a deflection off Milan skipper Leonardo Bonucci.

Wenger spoke before the game about his team showing fight without compromising their attacking principles and they delivered in dominant first-half performance.

Aaron Ramsey deservedly doubled their lead before half-time, collecting Mesut Ozil's piercing pass through the centre of Milan's defence to round keeper Gianluigi Donnarumma and tap in.

Milan tried to up the tempo after the break, wasting a clear early chance to pull one back when Giacomo Bonaventura spooned over the bar.

But Arsenal were largely unruffled from then on, limiting the home side to half chances with a solid defensive effort.

The two away goals now make the Gunners firm favourites to reach the quarter-finals after next Thursday's second leg at Emirates Stadium.

"Overall it is important to win, but it is not qualification. We have to finish the job at home. I am happy with the spirit and response we gave," said Wenger.

"We were not in a position to take risks, but we could not be too cautious as you lose fluidity. We defended with resilience until the end."

Arsenal travelled to Italy looking for respite from a torrid recent run during which the north London club have lost four straight games for the first time since October 2002.

A toxic atmosphere has been hanging over the club as fans continue to turn against Wenger, with 88% of the Arsenal Supporters' Trust's (AST) 1,000 members voting this week in favour of the 68-year-old Frenchman's contract being terminated at the end of the season.

Few of the 2,000 or so Gunners fans who travelled to the San Siro would have been confident of seeing a positive performance.

they But watched a display containing commitment and organisation two qualities sorely lacking in recent weeks - against a Milan side revitalised under Gennaro Gattuso.

Arsenal striker Danny Welbeck led the line superbly with his tireless running, allowing Ozil, Mkhitaryan and Ramsey to find space from deeper positions when the team attacked.

And defensively, they worked hard as a unit marshalled by skipper Laurent Koscielny - to deny Milan space in attacking areas.

Arsenal's problems are not going to be masked by one good result.

However, their display could not help but give the impression that, even in their lowest moments, it would be foolish to write off their chances of somehow going on to win the Europa League and secure a route back into the Champions League.

Klopp: we're back where we belong

Jurgen Klopp says Liverpool "belong" in the Champions League quarter-finals after a 0-0 second-leg draw at Anfield gave them a 5-0 aggregate win over Porto in their last-16 tie.

It is the first time since 2009 the Reds have reached the last eight but Klopp insisted it "should not be a big surprise".

Liverpool won 5-0 in Portugal to set up a comfortable return leg at Anfield.

They will discover their next opponents when the draw is made on 16 March.

"The next round will be difficult, seven other very good teams - maybe four of them are from England, which doesn't make it easier," Klopp said.

"I think we will have a chance for sure to go to the semi-finals. We'll take it step by step."

The quarter-final ties will be played in the first and second weeks of April and Klopp says he "doesn't care" who Liverpool's opponents

"We take it how it comes," he said. "We cont. on page 18, col 1
