Ailing father will not attend daughter's wedding

Meghan Markle has confirmed that her father, who had been expected to walk her down the aisle, will not be at her wedding to Prince Harry on Saturday.

She said she hoped he could be given space to focus on his health.

Ms Markle and Prince Harry held a rehearsal at St George's Chapel on Thursday, and a military rehearsal of the procession took place in Windsor.

Beforehand, Ms Markle's mother, Doria Ragland, met the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge for the first time.

Ms Ragland was scheduled the Queen at Windsor Castle on Friday, accompanied by Prince Harry and Ms Markle.

On Thursday afternoon, Prince Harry and Ms Markle were driven along the procession route with a police escort. The Duke and Duchess were also spotted in Windsor for the dress rehearsal.

It was the first time the duchess has been seen in public since introducing Prince Louis, her third child, to the world on the steps of St Mary's Hospital in London little over three weeks ago.

The rehearsal in Windsor drew hundreds of children, parents and pets who were keen to get into the party mood early.

Many were dressed in red, white and blue, and waved union jacks as carriages and cavalry soldiers passed by.

The sun was out for the rehearsal - and looks set to stay for Saturday. The weather is expected to be sunny and breezy with temperatures reaching 21C (70F) in the late afternoon.

Thomas Markle had been due to arrive in the UK in the days before the wedding to meet the prince for the first time.

But in the run up to the wedding, he became caught up in controversy after allegedly staging photographs with the paparazzi.

The pictures showed Mr Markle - apparently unaware he was being photographed - carrying out preparations for the wedding, including being measured for a suit. On Monday, Mr Markle reportedly told US celebrity news website TMZ that he would not attend the ceremony to avoid embarrassing his daughter.

Prosecution of Ulster vets 'breach of natural justice' says former army chief

THE FORMER head of the Army has branded the hounding of elderly veterans over their actions in Northern Ireland a "breach of natural justice".

General Lord Dannatt, who was chief of the general staff, spoke out with three veterans already facing trial and up to 300 living with the threat of being tried for events dating back to the 1970s.

They include former Life Guards Regimental Corporal Major Dennis Hutchings, 77, who has been charged over a 1974 shooting despite having been cleared at the time.

Lord Dannatt, who as a young officer won the Military Cross in Northern Ireland, said: "There were competent authorities at every stage of the Northern Ireland campaign to investigate allegations. In this case an investigation concluded of attempted murder that there was no case to answer.

"Why, 44 years later, do we think that we can hope to know more about the case than we did then?

"Why do we think 44 years later that witnesses will have a better recollection of events now than then?

"And how can judges get back in their minds to what the circumstances were like in Northern Ireland in 1974? They cannot. That is why it is unreasonable and unfair to put an old man like Dennis Hutchings through all this at this stage of his life.

"If the state had wanted to go after him, they could have done so five or 10 years after the event. To do it 44 years later is a breach of natural justice."

Mr Hutchings, from Cawsand, Cornwall, believes he could be the first of hundreds of soldiers to be dragged through the courts. Next month two former paratroopers in their late 60s, known only as Soldiers A and C, will appear at Belfast Crown Court charged with the murder of IRA gunman Joe McCann in 1972. A police investigation at the time did not lead to any prosecutions.

Bank official gets no credit for 'menopause' analysis

BANK of England deputy governor Ben Broadbent faced backlash this week after hedescribed the economy as "menopausal". He said the term meant "you've passed your productive peak" – but was immediately accused of being outdated and sexist.

Kathy Abernethy, of the British Menopause said: "At Society, the usual age of the menopause, about 50, women are at the peak of their careers and at their most productive running the country's businesses.

"It's a shame he was so negative. The menopause is a completely natural physical change experienced by half the population."

TUC general secretary Frances O'Grady said: "There's no need to resort to lazy, sexist comments to describe problems in the economy.'

Mr Broadbent responded: "I'm sorry for my poor choice of language in an interview and regret the offence HAS to change." caused.

Economic productivity is something which affects every one of us, of all ages and genders."

In the interview, he said Britain's productivity slump may be a trough between the digital boom and the next big technological advance, possibly Intelligence. Artificial He suggested the UK economy was entering a "menopausal" era akin to a lull in the 19th century between the ages of steam and electricity.

The 53-year-old former Goldman Sachs economist provoked an outcry on Twitter. Pamela Wales called his words "outrageous and insulting".

"No wonder there is such a large gender pay gap with attitudes like these," she said.

Another Twitter user @ commuterlaydee wrote: "Absolutely shameful by comment Ben Broadbent. The language

Jonathan Riley called "truly disgraceful", it "Perhaps adding: to flabby, reference flaccid, balding men who have lost their potency might have been more appropriate?"

The episode is an embarrassment to the bank, which aims to promote gender diversity within its ranks. It has already come under fire after revealing its male employees are paid almost a quarter more than their female colleagues. Only one of the bank's ninestrong Monetary Policy Committee – which sets interest rates - is female. Mr Broadbent, who is tipped as a future governor, is a member. Productivity woes pose a headache for the Government and have been blamed for stagnating wages. Mr Broadbent spoke after official figures revealed that productivity fell 0.5 per cent in the first quarter.

Security concerns could push the wedding bill above £30m

Harry and Meghan's big day will cost taxpayers dearly
 Terror threats lead to huge spike in security costs

Prince Harry's wedding to actress Meghan Markle is generating huge excitement around the world, but as Windsor gets ready for the TV event of the years, concerns have been raised over the cost.

According to some estimates the bill is between £24m-£30million – and the taxpayer is footing it. Prince William's wedding to the Duchess of Cambridge in April 2011 cost the police Metropolitan about £7.2m, a Freedom of Information request showed.

With other security and preparations the total bill is believed to be around $\pounds 20$ million.

However, Harry's big day is believed to be costing much more.

Wedding planning service Bridebook told The Independent it could cost as much as £32m to ensure the event remains safe.

The amount is more than double the security needed for the 1981 wedding between Prince Charles and Diana Spencer which was estimated to have cost \pounds 4m - which equates to around £12m today.

public purse

Extra police from around Britain are being called upon to help ensure the event goes off without a hitch, as crowds will fill Windsor to catch a glimpse of the royals.

Thames Valley Police are preparing for around 100,000 spectators.

That will make it one of the force's largestever security operations, which will require reinforcements from other forces.

Since Prince William's wedding the UK has experienced a surge in terror threats, meaning the cost of Harry's nuptials outside of the city will be much higher. The couple's decision to invite more than 2,000 members of the public to attend celebrations at Windsor Castle has also increased security costs.

The entire bill is not being caught by the public, however, since the Queen revealed said she and the rest of the royal family will pay for the traditional wedding costs like the ceremony, flowers, music and the reception - but security is likely to be paid for by the taxpayer.

Cash can also be drawn from the public purse.

Duncan Simpson, policy analyst at the TaxPayers' Alliance told The Independent efforts should be being made to keep the cost low, while ensuring it is safe.

He said: "The Royal Wedding is an exciting moment in the UK. Whilst the couple and those out for the day in Windsor should feel safe with the public festivities, all efforts should be made to ensure that the costs of security are kept to a minimum." While many royal fans will argue the money will be made back in tourism, doubt has been cast on the argument.

The UK's national tourism agency Visit Britain said the country experienced a 7% increase in visitors between April and June 2011 compared to the previous year, but the good news does not appear to have hit the economy.

Figures from the Office for National Statistics (ONS) show the combination of an extra bank holiday and the warmest April for

Tributes flow for cancer victim Dame Tessa Jowell

Former Labour minister was pivotal in bringing 2012 Olympics to London

Former Labour cabinet minister Dame Tessa Jowell has died aged 70, her family has said.

Dame Tessa, who was diagnosed with brain cancer in May last year, suffered a haemorrhage on Friday, and had been in a coma until her death on Saturday.

She played a major role in securing the 2012 Olympics for London when she served as culture secretary.

In recent months she campaigned for more cancer treatments to be made available through the NHS.

She earned a minutelong standing ovation in the House of Lords in January for speaking about the issue.

"In the end, what gives a life meaning is not only how it is lived, but how it draws to a close," she said during her speech.

"I hope that this debate will give hope to other cancer patients, like me, so we can live well together with cancer, not just dying of it. All of us, for longer."

'decent and wise'

Leading the tributes to Dame Tessa, former prime minister Tony Blair said she was a "committed public servant" who was "always true and loyal and decent and wise".

"She knew she was dying and yet she was prepared to give everything she had in order to help people in the future," Mr Blair said of her campaigning towards the end of her life.

"If anyone wants to know what politics can achieve they can just look at her life and how she lived it, and how she ended it as a testimony to all that's best in politics."

He said her impact on politics was enormous and "everything she touched turned to gold in some way, whether it was advancing equal pay for women, starting Sure Start - which is an immense programme for children in our country or of course bringing the Olympics to Britain".

A statement from her family said it was "with great sadness and an enormous sense of loss" that they announced the news of her death.

She died peacefully at the family home near Shipston-on-Stour in Warwickshire shortly after 22:00 BST on Saturday, the statement said.

'unflinching tenacity'

"Her husband David and their children Jessie and Matthew were by her side, with Jessie's husband Finn, Matthew's wife Ella, and David's children from his first marriage.

"In chemotherapy radiotherapy, recent months doctors TESSA JOWELL: "In the end, what gives a life meaning is not only how it is lived, but how it draws to a close,' tried innovative new treatments which Tessa gladly embraced, but sadly the tumour recently progressed very quickly." The statement thanked people for the "overwhelming support" Dame Tessa and her family had received since she became ill.

A small private funeral will be held "in the coming days" and a memorial service "open to all" at a later date.

Minister Theresa May said the dignity and courage with which Dame Tessa had confronted her illness was "humbling' and "inspirational", and her campaigning was a "lasting tribute to a lifetime of public service". Lord Sebastian Coe, president of the IAAF and former chairman of the London organising committee of the Olympic Games, said London 2012 would not have happened without Dame Tessa.

"She showed unflinching tenacity in persuading the prime minister and the cabinet that the government should throw its full weight behind the bid," he said.

Sarah Lindsell, CEO of the Brain Tumour

Charity, said the charity had started working with "wonderful ambassador" Dame Tessa towards the end of last year, and she praised her campaigning for cancer patients.

"Despite going through all of that and wanting to spend precious time with her family... she gave up so much of that time to continue to campaign, to ask for change, because it really matters," she told the BBC.

Former prime minister Gordon Brown said Dame Tessa would be remembered for her "courage, strength and compassion for others".

It's the end of old money: self-made billionaires top latest UK rich list

GONE are the days when old money ruled in Britain - almost all of the 1,000 richest people in the country are selfmade, it was revealed this week.

Ninety-four per cent of those on this year's Sunday Times Rich List built their fortunes, compared with just 43 per cent when the first list was produced in 1989. The combined fortune of the wealthiest 1,000 has risen to £724billion, up 10 per cent on last year's record of £658billion. List compiler Robert Watts said this was evidence that "Britain is changing". He said: "The aristocrats and inherited wealth have been elbowed out of the list and replaced by an army of self-made entrepreneurs.

"increasingly diverse"

"Britain's rich are getting richer but the cast of Britain's 1,000 richest people is an ever-changing and increasingly diverse cast of people."

The first Rich List dominated by was landowners, accounting for 57 of 200 names. But now, as the list celebrates its 30th anniversary, just 29 of the richest 1,000 rely on land ownership. Instead, food and drink are now the largest sources of wealth. Mr Watts said:

"Today's super-rich include people who have set up businesses selling chocolate, sushi, pet food and eggs. We are seeing more people from humble backgrounds, who struggled at school or who didn't even start their businesses until middle age."

Jim Ratcliffe, who this year became the first British-born industrialist to top the list with an estimated wealth of £21billion, is a perfect example - he grew up on a council estate. His sudden rise to the top of the list is because of an impressive £15.3billion added to his net worth since last year, when he was ranked 18th.

20 years to £20bn: how Jim Ratcliffe topped the lot

JIM WHO?

That was the reaction at many a breakfast table across Britain this week when the Sunday Times revealed their latest Rich List was topped by an industrialist who shrugged off humble beginnings to build a £21bn fortune in just two decades.

Jim Ratcliffe, who was born into a humble Manchester council house and attended the local grammar school, now stands astride Ineos, the vast chemicals giant he built, which boasts an annual turnover of about £45bn and employs more than 18,500 people at 181 sites across 22 countries.

Ratcliffe is well known by trade unions leaders for his tough negotiating stance, so much so that he was informally known as Dr No after one dispute. but there's no doubt that the UK's richest man champions the unloved.

Through buying up and turning around the cast-off parts of big business, the Mancunian has made his fortune.

Mr Ratcliffe, 65, has always been involved in chemicals and industry. graduating degree with а in chemical engineering from the University of Birmingham in 1974, he spent a very brief spell at BP before being fired due to a mild case of eczema – a skin disease which doesn't pair well with chemical manufacturing. Ratliffe jumped over to rival oil business Esso as a trainee accountant, and a decade later, armed with an MBA from the London Business School, moved to fabric and chemicals producer Courtaulds, before a career-changing step into the world of private equity when he joined Advent International in 1989.

'very focused'

Advent served as a platform for Mr Ratcliffe to learn the cut and thrust of doing deals.

But after just three years, he was already making a leap into coowning a business based on what would become a well-worn strategy.

He fellow and businessman John Hollowood decided to buy BP's chemicals division in Hythe, Kent for £40m in 1992.

By 1994, it was valued at £100m when it floated on the London Stock Exchange.

It was a high-risk move, Mr Ratcliffe admitted.

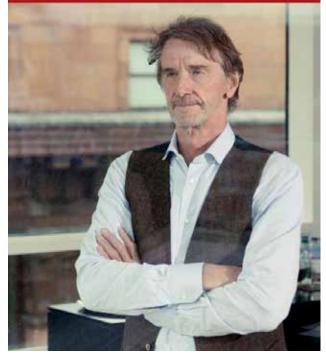

"I started the business in the days when you had to put all your worldly goods on the table," he told the London Business School in an interview.

"I had to put 100% of the equity that I owned at that stage on the line, so that was the house, savings and even the wife and children, which makes you very focused."

The business, Inspec, went on to acquire BP's speciality chemicals business in Antwerp, Belgium.

Mr Ratcliffe left Inspec to form his own firm, Ineos, in 1998 which bought the Belgian business for £89m. The company enjoyed rapid growth based on his strategy of buying "unfashionable or unsexy facilities owned by large corporations where you'd know they would be sloppy with the fixed costs".

From 181 sites across 22 countries, Ineos generates sales of around £45bn employs 18,500 and people. Its raw materials are used in everything from packaging for toiletries, medicines and food, to mobile phones and furniture.

Dr No moniker

Because of his decision never to float the company and thus have no City shareholders to consult, Mr Ratcliffe, who owns 60% of Ineos, has been able to move quickly on deals.

In its first 10 years, Ineos bought more than 20 operations from huge companies such as German chemicals maker BASF, Dow Chemical of the US and ICL once the biggest manufacturer in the UK.

Arguably, the most important of these deals was Ineos's £5bn takeover of Innovene, BP's petrochemical business, in 2005. Overnight, it quadrupled Ineos's sales to more than £18bn and doubled its staff numbers to 15,000.

Innovene also included the Grangemouth petrochemical plant and refinery in Scotland which, in 2013, became the scene of a tense standoff with trade unions threatening strike action over pay and pensions.

The dispute - which earned Mr Ratcliffe the Bond villain moniker of Dr No - led to Ineos announcing that it would close the petrochemical plant and cut 800 jobs.

Shortly afterwards, reversed its Ineos decision when the Unite union agreed to a survival plan to invest £300m in the plant to keep it open.

Ineos continues to expand either through acquisitions such as buying the Forties Pipeline System from which BP, delivers 40% of the UK's North Sea oil and gas or through investment into controversial areas such as fracking.

Meanwhile, Mr Ratcliffe took a surprising step away from chemicals when he announced plans to invest £600m to build a new vehicle based on the Land Rover Defender, which was discontinued in 2016.

Brits in LA Meet A Member: Sasha Gary

Meet Sasha Gary, half a Brit, twice the wit, from New Jersey, who moved to LA 17 years ago to pursue acting.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA? Growing up, I flew back and forth to Liverpool, England to spend time with family. My mum is from Childwall. I chose LA because of the entertainment industry. I came here to finish University by interning on a sitcom for my last two credits. After that, I never left.

What do you miss most from home?

I miss both Liverpool and New Jersey in each unique way! It comes down to being with family, and people you love the most. I love the humor of Liverpool, I love the people, I love being able to travel from the UK to other countries conveniently. I was very lucky to have to travelled back and forth to Liverpool growing up, as I was able to travel young, spend time with family, and be in the UK.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since?

I thought there was a great deal of opportunity here to pursue my dreams, and over the years it has changed due to the economy crashing, the entertainment industry shifting, and getting more expensive in the years I have lived here. I feel like there was more opportunity back then, and it's harder to find that same opportunity now, but not impossible.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus home? Liverpool and New Jersey is the history of Liverpool and being able to travel to NY and Philadelphia. Both places have history behind them, where Los Angeles has it's beach culture but not much else. I love the beauty of countryside in the UK, castles, and the history of Philadelphia being the oldest city in America. It contributes to the depth of the people, as well. Here it seems your only as good as you can help someone, where in the UK and New Jersey it's more about who you are as a person. There is a realness missing here in LA. I guess that's why I travel out of here during my time off!

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

I love driving to Malibu for lunch. When I feel like a long drive, I go to the county line, beginning of Ventura, to Neptune's Net. I have one cold beer, and excellent fish and chips. It's a great people watching melting pot of motorcycle riders, surfers, and families.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

Whereever you decide to move, find a neighborhood area that you can walk to easily, as you will find comfort in not getting in your car all the time. Plus, a great local bar you can meet new people. Make the effort to travel to the desert, San Diego and northern California. There is a lot you can do here.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

From my very first acting teacher, handed me this on a piece of paper "Persistence...Press on. Nothing in this world can take the place of persistence. Talent will not: nothing is more common than unsuccessful men with talent. Genius will not: Unrewarded genius is almost a proverb. Education will not; the world is full of educated Persistence derelicts. and determination alone are omnipotent" Calvin

Solution to Puzzle #336 Е C L N M т DOOR

ARIES: Although you seem to be in recess time, this does not mean you cannot pay attention to your life overall. You can thrive in this energy and you can make a lot of headway if you put your mind to it. This is just what you have wanted for some time.

TAURUS: If you feel like reaching out and asking someone for a helping hand in any area this is the time to go for it. Now that the very powerful (although unpredictable) planet Uranus is living in your life ensure you do not panic when things do not go the way you expect. Happy Birthday.

GEMINI: Time to deal with what has been on your mind recently, so the faster you take this in hand the better will be the results. With the end of your old year come new opportunities to own up to past mistakes and feel good in your own skin.

CANCER: A positive beginning of the next week would be to make peace or amends with anyone or anything that has caused you upset. You moon children like to hide away in your shell sometimes. Don't indulge yourself this week ahead.

LEO: Any trip taken before the end of this month will not go as planned, so take a rain check and take a later trip. With this in mind, plan for a better time frame. Family matters are in the limelight these next few days.

VIRGO: If any area of life currently is not going as smoothly as you expect you can let go of worry about the outcome, all will be well by month's end. Be confident when asked for your advice or opinion in a family situation.

LIBRA: The main lesson of this month is that it's not the time to begin anything you will not have time to finish up. Your conscience will not allow you to take chances so listen to it well. Expect someone to contact you from your past.

SCORPIO: Now that Uranus is sitting staring at you from your opposite sign Taurus you can expect the unexpected. This should not make you worried, however as you are a creature of habit it may spook you a little. Everything happens for a reason. Trust the process.

SAGITTARIUS: Your boss Jupiter is not very proactive in your life just now. Since he is on vacation for a few weeks you should be not just acting on your intuition. This means go with the flow and do not make any big decisions for a while.

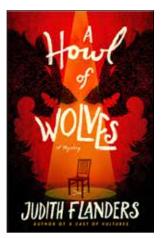

CAPRICORN: Your boss Saturn has brought a lot of the past up for you. Pluto has also been visiting you. This can be difficult or even downright unfair sometimes, however soon you will see that what has transpired has cleared away a lot of dead wood.

AQUARIUS: While your boss Uranus was in Aries he caused some problems, not only for you but for others in the world. Now that he has moved into more mellow Taurus, there is a light at the end of the tunnel.

PISCES: You may be feeling restless these past couple of weeks; however now the sun is in mellow Taurus life should be pleasant. You are in some kind of a rut - it is up to you to get out it. Stepping out of your comfort zone would help.

Howl of Wolves: on the scent of murder

■ Exclusive interview with author Judith Flanders discussing her new murder mystery in the Sam Clair series

"Women, particularly middle-aged women, are often overlooked," says A Howl of Wolves author Judith Flanders. "I could use that overlooking as a jumping-off point. If nobody notices you, then can you do things, see things, that, as a central character, with everyone looking at you, might not be possible."

In this fourth book in the Sam Clair Mystery series, Samantha Clair wants to support her neighbors and goes to see the play in the West End, accompanied by boyfriend Jake Field and a Scotland Yard detective. The play is quite gruesome. At the beginning of the second act there's a dummy hanging from the rafters. But it's not. It's the director of the play Campbell Davison.

The actors are horrified. Who killed Campbell? Jake starts investigating. Sam can't help but investigate too. As she learns more about Campbell she finds out the director was not well liked. The suspect list is long. "The inspiration for the series as a whole was the idea of a woman whose business is stories, an editor in a publishing house, becoming part of a story herself," says Flanders.

"The inspiration for A so outside anything I Howl of Wolves wasn't dissimilar. It was the idea of being at a play, in the audience, being a spectator, and suddenly becoming part of the story."

"We have this default notion that 'detective' = 'man', and that when it's a woman detective, we need to have that descriptor – 'woman' - in front of the word," says Flanders. "If I were writing about a policeman, and it were 1897, then that would be true, but it hasn't been the case for a very long time, so I think, as women do in every job every day, I should just get on with it."

"I did work in a publishing house," says Flanders. "And, I did get to go to a Paris fashion show, as Sam does in the first book of this series. It was so wild, had ever experienced, that I wanted to write it down. Then I realized I was, instead of editing a story, telling one. What I am doing with Sam is putting in the centre of the picture a person who conventionally is depicted on the side."

Flanders says she likes to pretend her research is arduous. "In reality, I have lunch with my publishing friends and listen to them talk. I haven't quite reached the stage of writing things down under the table, but it's come close a few times."

For A Howl of Wolves, Flanders read books on stage management and talked to many people working in theatre to learn the process of getting a play from script to stage.

"With all of the books, one of my big concerns is getting the vocabulary right," says Flanders. "I know when I read about publishing, or about writers, it's often not the broad outlines that are wrong, but a turn of phrase, a word here or there."

Flanders works as a historian writing about daily life in 19th-century Britain, and sometimes ranging further afield. "I write social history, the history of daily life, mostly about 19thcentury Britain, but sometimes ranging further afield," says Flanders. "So, in a way, it's the same job: I listen, I read, and I tell stories about what I've read."

Flanders was shortlisted for the Guardian First Book award for her first book, A Circle of Sisters, for the British Book Awards history book of the year for The Victorian House,

BOOK CORNER with Gabrielle Pantera

the Los Angles Times history book of the year for The Victorian City, and for the CWA nonfiction Gold Dagger for The Invention of Murder.

Flanders is based in London, where she was born. She grew up in Canada.

The Royal Marriage: we're finally getting over the finish line Warning, if you are already Windsor'd out you may want to turn the page now.

I recently claimed to be not too fussed about this Royal marriage. But that was before it turned into a soap opera, and now I am completely hooked!

Angeleno in Britain doesn't have quite the same ring as Brit in LA does it? But that is what Meghan Markle is, and from where I'm standing it doesn't seem half as appealing. I can only think that those of you who came here to seek fame and fortune are now a little hesitant after seeing MM catapulted into the spotlight? It's been more Trials and Tribulations than Glitz and Glamour. I always thought she didn't know exactly what she was letting herself in for, but now, after the past week's shenanigans I don't think any of us really had a clue either. Ok the plus side it is more apparent what H&M have in common, (I wonder if Hennes & Mauritz have approached them yet.?).

They both have parents who claimed to detest the press attention, but were actually in cahoots with journalists purely to 'improve their image'. They both have had very checkered love lives. Meghan was previously married with one resulting in divorce. Harry's romantic endeavors are very well documented And last but not least, they have equally inappropriate, outspoken, embarrassing relatives.

I hope Ms. Markles knows that even the most recent dramas don't trump the Camillagate Tape. I do feel for her, as we all have skeletons in our closet. Fortunately most

THEIR CUPS OVERFLOWETH? Once our royal slumber party is over, it will be back to business as usual with our Brits in LA Breakfast and our fabulous Pub Quiz/Trivia Night of us get to keep them behind closed doors. No doubt 'Keeping up with the Markles' or 'The Only Way is Windsor' will make its debut on a TV channel soon. If betting was legal in California (which it might be very soon), I would put money on the phrase ' If anyone here present objects/ speak now or forever hold your peace' is omitted from the ceremony. We all know the old adage about not being able to choose your relatives, but it might have been a bit easier for all parties if Meghan had kept her enemies closer! If you have made it this far I will assume you are not quite sick of hearing about the Royal family. So I have a little competition for you! We have some Brits in LA Royal Wedding commemorative mugs to give away - all you need to do is email us at BritsinLA@gmail. com to enter. The only requirement is that you live in the USA, as we have to pay for the shipping!

Winners will be chosen at random next

VOLKSWAGEN SANTA MONICA

Wednesday at noon and will be notified via email.

Don't forget that our Craig is in a play next month, at the Hollywood Fringe. There are only eight performances so don't delay and get your tickets today by visiting hollywoodfringe.org and search for Old Frenemies. Use the discount code BRITSLA. There are other Brits in LA members in the cast too, including Richard Rennie, Nick Hardcastle, Lisa Gorgin and Wendy M. Bain.

Lastly, congratulations to this weeks Brits in LA Pub Quiz winners 'the Doctors Companions'. If you think you can knock them off their pedestal come along to the Cat & Fiddle Pub next Tuesday at 8pm. Get there a few minutes early if you need to join a team. Introduce yourself to our quizmaster Sandro Monetti and he will take care of you.

Rachel, with a bun in the oven, snapped in the Big Apple...!

Pregnant film actress Rachel Weisz showed off her growing baby bump while out in New York earlier this week.

The glowing star, 48, looked radiant in a long dress boasting a pink floral pattern. She kept things comfy by teaming the dress with a pair of flat white trainers.

The acclaimed British actress could be seen walking to Manhattan home she shares with husband Daniel Craig.

Bond star Daniel was also spotted arriving at the couple's home on the same day. Last month Rachel announced that the couple are expecting their first child together.

Rachel recently told the New York Times: "I'll be showing soon. Daniel and I are so happy. We're going to have a little human. We can't wait to meet him or her. It's all such a mystery!"

The couple started dating in December 2010 and tied the knot in the Big Apple the following year.

Speaking about their marriage she said: "It's very personal, it's very private.

"I don't think mine's particularly exceptional apart from that we're both in the public eye.

"But I never thought I would get married.

"It was not an ambition of mine. It was the opposite." Love this couple!

Holmes Again! Law and Downey to team up again in third Sherlock outing

Nearly seven vears after Sherlock Holmes: A Game Of Shadows hit cinemas. Warner Bros Pictures says a third installment of the Sherlock Holmes franchise is coming in 2020.

The movie studio confirmed that Robert Downey Jr will reprise his role as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famed detective, alongside Jude Law as his sidekick Dr Watson.

Sherlock Homes was a box-office hit for the studio when the film was released in 2009. A sequel followed in 2011. Combined, the two movies grossed more than a billion dollars.

Big Sam: I knew they'd fire me

Former Everton manager Sam Allardyce says he knew he would be sacked before it happened, and maintains more fans backed him than wanted him out.

post on Wednesday, six months into his tenure, after finishing eighth in the Premier League.

He had a year left on the contract he signed in November, but says he learned of his fate before

"This acquisition builds on our recent project to acquire objects to tell the story of dayto-day life in 20th and 21st century Egypt."

Salah also played a key role in Egypt's qualification for the World Cup and is set to feature for them in Russia this summer.

1966 hero Wilson dead at 83

Ray Wilson, a member of England's World Cup-winning side, has died, aged 83.

At 31, the left-back was the oldest player in Sir Alf Ramsey's starting XI which overcame West Germany 4-2 in the 1966 final at Wembley.

He spent most of his club career at Huddersfield Town before moving to where Everton. he helped the Toffees win the 1966 FA Cup. Derbyshire-born Wilson. who also played for Oldham Bradford and City, had been diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease.

The Terriers said in a statement they were "devastated" to learn Wilson's death of and added: "He was a regular supporter home matchdays at alongside his eldest son Russell despite battling Alzheimer's disease."

Everton also paid tribute to their former player, saying Wilson "unquestionably was one of the finest footballers to wear the royal blue jersey". Former Toffees striker and manager Joe Royle, who made his Everton debut the year Wilson helped them to FA Cup success, said: "He is a World Cup winner and played in the last England team that had four, maybe five, worldclass players. He was certainly one of those.

"He was the best of his kind at the time.

"And he was a top guy, always there with a smile or a helpful word. I played a few reserve games with Ray and it was like listening to a maestro. He knew his stuff."

SOUTHGATE: trusting youth 'no gamble'

England manager goes for young guns; no place for Joe Hart or Jack Wilshere

England's World Cup squad is not a gamble despite it being their third youngest in the tournament's history, says manager Gareth Southgate.

He named a 23-man squad for Russia on Wednesday, including uncapped 19-yearold defender Trent Alexander-Arnold.

"I don't see it as a gamble and I don't think being free of inhibition is gambling," said Southgate.

England start their Group G campaign against Tunisia on 18 June, before games against Panama and Belgium.

Southgate countered former England captain Gary Lineker's suggestion the tournament should be seen as nothing more than a learning curve.

"I don't think when you play or are involved with England you can ever write off any game or any tournament. That wouldn't be acceptable," he said.

"We think this is the best group of players available, we think they can be very exciting now and even more exciting in the future.

"I don't want to limit what they think is possible because they're young and hungry and they want to have a go at things."

In his first news conference since announcing the squad, Southgate also said that he would discuss the captaincy when the players meet up on Sunday. He also stressed that it was "not the end of the road" for goalkeeper Joe Hart, who was left out of the squad.

Southgate accepted England will lack the experience of tournament favourites Brazil, Germany, Spain and France, but lamented the

Midfielders: Dele Alli, Eric Dier (both Tottenham), Jordan Henderson (Liverpool), Jesse Lingard (Manchester United), Ruben Loftus-Cheek (Chelsea).

Forwards: Harry Kane (Tottenham), Marcus Rashford (Manchester United), Raheem Sterling (Manchester City), Jamie Vardy (Leicester), Danny Welbeck (Arsenal).

New City deal for Guardiola

Manchester City manager Pep Guardiola has signed a new deal which will keep him at the club until 2021.

The 47-year-old Spaniard led City to the Premier League title with a record 100 points last season.

The contract extension means his deal with City is the longest commitment the former Barcelona and Bayern Munich boss has made to a club since starting his managerial career in 2008.

"I am so happy and excited. It's a pleasure to work here," he said. "I enjoy working with our players every day and we will try to do our best together in the coming years. As a manager, you have to feel good to be with the players - and I feel good."

Guardiola's side won the League Cup in 2018, beating Arsenal 3-0 in the final, before claiming the league title by 19 points from rivals Manchester United.

City scored 106 goals and claimed 32 wins, both

Premier League records, as they dropped only 14 points in the league all season.

belief," he said.

They were beaten by Wigan Athletic in the fifth round of the FA Cup and were knocked out by Liverpool in the quarterfinals of the Champions League.

"Twill focus on the desire of my players to become a better team and every day that's what I will try to do - to improve on the pitch and improve our players," added Guardiola.

GARETH SOUTHGATE: "We think this is the best group of players available."
