Meghan turns to Kate 'after reaching wit's end' with father

The Duchess of Sussex, has forged a remarkable bond with her sister-in-law Kate as she deals with the fall-out from her father's public outbursts, it emerged this week.

Meghan has been accused of cutting off Thomas Markle in a spate of media interviews and has increasingly turned to the Duchess of Cambridge for support.

Meghan now sees Kate as a "pillar of support" in her new life behind the walls of Kensington Palace – and her husband Harry is relieved that they have forged such a close alliance.

The two Duchesses' blossoming friendship was evident in pictures of them watching Wimbledon together last month.

One insider said: "Meghan is at her wits' end over this."

'different characters'

Another source told Vanity Fair that Kate is well aware of what the new royal is going through and has "made a big effort to be kind to Meghan and look out for her"

Another insider added: "Kate's made a real effort to be kind to Meghan and to include her. They're quite different characters but they get along well."

The two women, both 36, have bonded over their love of dogs, tennis and the great outdoors.

Kate has also recommended the services of British-based New Zealand designer Emilia Wickstead.

The source added: "Kate's really busy juggling three kids, including her new baby Prince Louis. She has a lot on her plate and she has her own friendship group, but she has made an effort with Meghan.

"She's The source explained that Kate invites Meghan to her apartment at London's Kensington Palace for tea, with the two women speaking on the phone once a week.

Lighting director Thomas, 74, revealed that he has not spoken to his "beloved Bean" Meghan for more than 10 weeks.

Thomas, who has never met his son-in-law but has spoken to Harry on the phone, says the rift is "punishment" for him staging fake paparazzi pictures before the wedding.

He said: "I'm really hurt that she's cut me off completely. I used to have a phone number and text number for her personal aides at the Palace, but after I said a few critical words about the Royal Family changing Meghan, they cut me off.

Those numbers were disconnected, they no longer work. I now have no way of contacting my daughter. "It's her birthday on August 4 and I want to send her a card.

"But if I send a birthday card to Kensington Palace, or wherever she's living now, it'll just be one among thousands. She'll probably never see it"

TV interviews

He added that Meghan "would be better off if he died".

Meghan has had to deal with a number of family dramas since her relationship with Prince Harry, 33, came to light.

Her sister Samantha Markle has taken part in multiple TV interviews discussing the Duchess, which has lessened the chances of the family kissing and making up.

"A reconciliation is completely off the table at the moment," the source that Daily Mail describes as a "close friend" to Meghan told the outlet. "There's no chance right now—he's been a complete embarrassment."

Their issues are deeply rooted. "They've had problems for some time, from before she met Prince Harry," the source said. Not that what he's doing now is helping at all: "She's amazed by what's happened but is taking what he says with a grain of salt."

The Queen and co. are pretty unbothered too. "The Royal Family isn't as upset as you'd think," the friend continued. "Nothing any of them [the Markle family] say has any real consequence and they [Meghan and Harry] have more important things to focus on."

A source close to royal aides told The Mirror in a report published yesterday that there are three options the royals are considering for dealing with Thomas. "Firstly, Meghan could contact her father straight away and appeal to him directly to ask him to stop hurting her, but right now she's decided to cut him off," the source said. "There is a possibility an intermediary could meet with him and appeal to him to stop making such hurtful statements. The final option would be for Meghan to cut him off completely in the hope he will stop, but the situation is so precarious no one knows when that would be." PAGE 2 THE BRITISH WEEKLY, SAT. AUGUST 4, 2018

Labour racked by anti-semitism claims as Corbyn is urged to sack 'bully' over Jews rant

■ Controversial NEC member Pete Willsman admits 'lack of sensitivity'

LABOUR leader Jeremy Corbyn came under renewed pressure to act against anti-Semitism in his party this week after an influential ally was recorded making "disgusting" comments about Jews.

Pete Willsman, one of nine Leftwing elected members of the party's ruling National Executive Committee, told the committee that some Jewish critics of Labour were "Trump fanatics making up information without any evidence".

Jewish leaders want the party to expel Mr Willsman. They are also demanding to know whether Mr Corbyn and party general secretary Jennie Formby were at the meeting – and if so, whether they remonstrated with him.

Labour deputy leader Tom Watson described Mr Willsman as a "loudmouthed bully", adding: "He disgusts me."

Senior Labour MP Yvette Cooper said the comments were "appalling" and Mr Willsman should stand down. Jewish Labour Movement chairwoman Luciana Berger MP dubbed Mr Willsman's remarks "sickening". The Board of Deputies of British Jews said he had been let off lightly, compared with the swift threat of action against MPs Dame Margaret Hodge and Ian Austin for condemning Mr Corbyn and supporters over alleged anti-Semitism.

Mr Willsman last night apologised for his remarks, saying: "Having sat on the NEC for many years, I am aware of appalling instances of anti-Semitism within our party and am wholly determined to rooting it out of our movement.

"I do not believe anti-Semitism is 'widespread' in the Labour Party and that was what my comments were trying to refer to, but we do have a problem which needs stamping out.

"I recognise the offensive nature of my comments and that in diminishing the experiences of those who face anti-Semitism in our party and society I showed a lack of the sensitivity required for discussions around racism."

Meanwhile, the party has suspended Scottish councillor Mary Lockhart for suggesting Jewish newspapers attacking Mr Corbyn may be part of a "Mossad [Israeli secret service]-assisted campaign".

Fred and Lesley Higgins from Aberdeenshire celebrate their win. They are now looking to invest their jackpot in properties abroad

Shopworker tore up £58m lottery ticket

An Aberdeenshire couple was celebrating their good fortune this week after winning £58m in a lottery, after almost throwing their winning ticket away.

When Fred Higgins asked a shop assistant to check his routine lottery ticket, the young man behind the counter ran it through the electronic terminal only to declare it worthless. He ripped the ticket in half and threw it in the bin. Only an automatic alert from Camelot seconds later, that said the ticket was eligible for a major prize,saved the day. The assistant instantly retrieved the torn paper and handed it back to the Euromillions lottery player to take home and change his life.

Mr Higgins, 67, a retired car company administrator and his wife Lesley, picked up their check for almost £58 million but the path to collect the July 10 jackpot was not trouble-free.

As the ticket had been torn, although all the numbers were perfectly legible, a security team from Camelot had to check the CCTV from the Scotmid store in Laurencekirk, Aberdeenshire, to make sure that Mr Higgins's version of events was true.

Once confirmed, the couple, who have been married for 35 years, were finally able to celebrate their enormous win, which makes them richer than the pop star Harry Styles, the actress Emma Watson and the singer-songwriter Ed Sheeran.

Mr Higgins, who buys tickets every Tuesday and Friday, said: "I handed the ticket over and the young man put it through the machine, telling me it wasn't a winner. He ripped the ticket in two and threw it into the bin as they would with all non-winning tickets.

"But this time the terminal produced a chitty which said I needed to retain my ticket and call Camelot. The retailer immediately grabbed it out of the bin and handed it to me."

He took the ticket home to make the call.

"Lesley was snoozing so I thought I would look at the website to double-check the numbers and sure enough, the first matched, then the second matched, match, match; we had them all."

Teen jailed for 17 years after fatal acid attack

■ Innocent bystander dies following tussle between killer and another man

A teenager has been jailed for 17 years after what is believed to be the first conviction for an acid attack killing in the UK.

Xeneral Webster, 19, admitted the manslaughter of Joanne Rand, who was hit in the face and body with industrial-strength sulphuric acid when she was innocently caught up in a tussle between the killer and another man.

Rand, 47, a carer for people with dementia, was sitting on a bench in High Wycombe, Buckinghamshire, after visiting her daughter's grave, when Webster threatened the other man with acid.

The man knocked the open bottle from Webster's grasp and kicked it, sending a spray of acid over Rand, the trial heard. She screamed in pain and dashed into a fast-food restaurant to splash water over her face.

Rand was taken to Stoke Mandeville hospital for treatment of burns to her face, arms, upper body and lower legs. She died 11 days later of multiple organ failure after contracting septicaemia due to the burns.

heartbroken

CCTV footage showed Webster calmly putting a balaclava over his face after the incident, retrieving the empty acid bottle and cycling away. He discarded it and took a train back to his home in west London.

Webster, who had sustained burns to his face in an acid attack in which he was the victim two months earlier, was charged with murder, but partway through his trial at Reading crown court, he admitted an alternative charge of manslaughter, which was accepted by the prosecution. He was also convicted of offences including possessing ammonia and a samurai sword.

The court was told that at 4.50pm on 3 June last year, Rand was sitting in the sun in the Frogmoor area of High Wycombe, which was busy with shoppers. Webster was trying to wrest a bicycle from another man.

Webster reached into his satchel for an open bottle, told the man it contained acid, and made to throw it at him. Panicking, the man knocked the acid away. The spray reached Webster, whose face immediately began to burn.

Adrian Foster from of the Crown Prosecution Service said Rand was not the intended victim. "The prosecution was brought on the basis that by producing an open bottle of acid and raising it to the face of another man, Xeneral Webster intended to cause that individual really serious harm," he said.

"The man fighting with Webster acted reasonably, in the circumstances, by deflecting the bottle away. Webster was responsible for the death of Joanne and had he not planned to hurt the intended victim, Joanne would still be alive today."

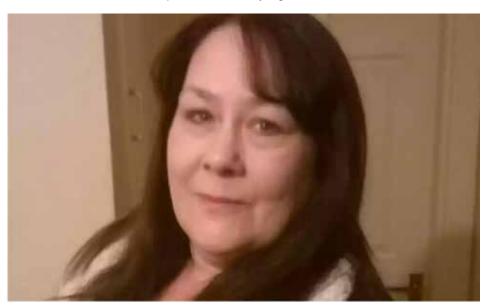

The court was told that Webster claimed the altercation happened because he had been sold the drug spice rather than cannabis.

Rand worked at Sir Aubrev Ward care home in Marlow, Buckinghamshire, and was described as "hardworking and passionate about her job" in a tribute from her family. Her daughter Charlotte had died in 2011. Her surviving children, Katie and Ryan, and her partner, Eddie, were described as heartbroken about her death.

In court, Rand's daughter, Katie Pitwell, 18, said: "I didn't just lose a mum, I lost a best friend. I don't understand how someone can do something so heartless and evil."

Addressing Webster

directly, she said: "You are the one who took her away, we had so many plans for the future."

House of Fraser on the brink of collapse

Chinese investor pulls £70 million lifeline offer

House of Fraser is teetering on the brink of collapse after a Chinese investor pulled out of a deal to buy a stake in the ailing department store and inject £70 million of funding.

In a fresh setback to the chain, which has been fighting for survival since last year, C Banner, the owner of Hamleys toy shop, issued a profit warning and abandoned its plan to invest in House of Fraser yesterday.

House of Fraser now urgently needs to find a new investor prepared to inject funding, with Mike Ashley's Sports Direct and Alteri, a specialist in retail turnarounds, thought to be in talks with the retailer.

Fears are growing that if House of Fraser is unable to find a new backer it could fall into administration in what would be the biggest failure on the UK high street since the collapse of BHS and Woolworths. About 17,000 people work in House of Fraser shops, including 5,000 directly employed by the retailer and thousands who work for brands with concessions in its stores.

Any fresh investment could hinge on the success of House of Fraser's company voluntary arrangement (CVA), an insolvency process it is using to try to shut 31 of its 59 stores and seek rent reductions on a further ten. However, the CVA is also in doubt after a group of five landlords challenged it in the Scottish courts, claiming it was prejudicial and unfair. A court date has yet to be set, which is only increasing pressure on House of Fraser at a time of extremely difficult trading conditions.

House of Fraser dates back 165 years but today is controlled by Nanjing Cenbest, a vehicle that is owned by Yuan Yafei, the Chinese billionaire. It bought House of Fraser for £155 million four years ago, promising a big expansion of the brand across China. That expansion has failed to materialise, while trading in the UK has become ever more difficult thanks to a heavy rent burden, rising costs and fickle

HOUSE OF FRASER: The struggling retailer has announced plans to shut 31 of its 59 stores and seek rent reductions on other outlets consumers increasingly shifting their spending to online rivals.

The present management team, led by Alex Williamson, hopes to save House of Fraser through the CVA, which will leave it with only 28 stores in Britain and Ireland and could lead to up to 6,000 job losses. When he announced the CVA in June, Mr Williamson said he was aware of the "brutality" of his decision but that there was simply "no alternative".

Sky News reported this week that House of Fraser could need new financing within the next four weeks to purchase stock ahead of the critical Christmas trading period if it hopes to continue operating.

Sports Direct, which already owns an 11 per cent stake in House of

have offered to invest

£50 million either as a loan or equity injection. If the sportswear retailer were to consider a full takeover, it would probably do so only with the full support of the pensions regulator and the retailer's pension trustees.

A spokesman for House of Fraser said it was in "discussions with alternative investors" and was "exploring options to obtain the required investment".

Housewife? That's a sexist word, say modern women

HOUSEWIFE could soon be a word of the past, after half of modern women branded the term outdated, sexist and embarrassing.

About 38 per cent of females felt the word is simply too old-fashioned for modern Britain.

A further 12 per cent deemed it the language of the misogynist, labelling the term sexist or inappropriate.

And 70 per cent of women admitted they lack the practical skill sets expected of their mothers and grandmothers as housewives.

The survey of 2,000 woman was conducted by MyNametags, who noticed a change in demand for traditional sew-on labels for school uniforms, with sewing once considered a traditional housewife's chore.

Other examples of home skills that women confessed to having no time to learn or carry out include filleting a fish, darning socks, putting hospital corners on bed sheets, polishing shoes, making bread and cleaning silverware.

Instead, 60 per cent of women believe they are highly accomplished with a range of new and important skills, such as being well-travelled, techsavvy and having financial independence.

Overall, 43 per cent claimed they felt more fulfilled than they suspect their own mother was at the same age.

The study also revealed 86 per cent feel the expectations of women had changed over the generations.

Some 40 per cent said earning a high salary was what determined an accomplished woman in 2018

Lars B Andersen, of My Nametags, said: "We were interested to find out what traits accomplished women have today in comparison to previous generations.

"That was prompted by seeing a surge in demand for stick-on name labels for school uniforms, rather than the traditional sew-on labels.

"The results show priorities have changed over time. Modern women are not as interested in learning traditional skills, such as knitting or sewing.

"Nearly 80 per cent said they would rather pay for convenience, such as buying birthday cakes instead of baking them at home

BYGONE AGE: 70 per cent of women admitted they lack the practical skill sets expected of their mothers and grandmothers as housewives.

"It seems we place less importance on these skills as being an accomplished woman today is much more about being happy, financially independent and having a good group of friends."

The survey comes as recent TV shows, such as the US's The Real Housewives franchise, have celebrated a more glitzy side of being a stayat-home wife.

In 2011, singer Lily Allen revealed her pride at being a stay-at-home mother at the time.

She wrote: "So let's hear it for the housewives. I'm thrilled to count myself among them."

Clinical psychologist Christine Langhoff believes a fear of "no longer excelling" is what now prompts high-flying millennial mothers to quit the world of work.

As women have children later – the average age of a first-time mother in the UK is now 28 – they are more likely to have already enjoyed career success, and so could be happy to take a break from working.

Harry Kane '£50,000' fiver spent in Merthyr Tydfil off licence

£5 note engraved with the image of England striker Harry Kane has gone into circulation in Merthyr Tydfil.

Micro-engraver Graham Short made six of the notes after Kane won the Golden Boot for scoring the most goals during the 2018 World Cup.

He used the note at a shop in Cefn Coed last Wednesday.

The artist previously etched Jane Austen on to new £5 notes when they were first circulated - and those have been valued at £50.000.

He uses very fine needles to scratch the images into clear sections of the notes. They remain legal tender - so it is up to sharp-eyed customers or shopkeepers to see if they have one.

Mr Short, from Birmingham, chose Merthyr Tydfil because his father was born in nearby Dowlais.

The shop's owner did not notice the image of Kane - and handed the note to another customer in change.

Mr Short's other notes were spent in Meriden in the West Midlands, and the Elephant House in Edinburgh - where JK Rowling used to write. A fourth note will be spent in Northern Ireland.

Mr Short gifted the other two notes to the Football Association and to Tottenham Hotspur forward Kane himself.

He said: "I wanted someone [in Merthyr] to find it who perhaps needed the money, and they can perhaps sell it for whatever - holidays or Christmas."

"I like the magical feeling of it and just want people to be as excited as I am," he added.

"It's just a bit of fun, but it also puts my art beyond the walls of a gallery. My art sells for a lot of money now and it's really out of reach for most people.

"But if they find this and sell it and make a lot of money, I'll be really pleased with that."

Manpreet Kaur, who owns the off licence where the note was spent - but failed to spot it for herself - said: "You don't think. Someone will give you a note and then another customer comes in and needs a five pounds note.

"That's why I missed it"

ENGRAVER: Graham Short said he will spend the notes all over the country

The image of the England striker Harry Kane means the £5 note is now worth £50,000

Man who threw baby out of window in Luton jailed

A man who threw a seven-month-old baby and its mother out of a window has been jailed for life.

Sean Ziemelis also gouged the boy's eyes and strangled him after using cannabis, Luton Crown Court heard on Thursday.

The baby suffered superficial injuries after he was caught by a crowd which gathered underneath the window of the first floor flat in Luton on 1 August 2017.

Ziemelis, 31, of Reginald Street, Luton, admitted attempted murder.

He also pleaded guilty to causing actual bodily harm and common assault.

Prosecutor James Lofthouse said Ziemelis had taken cannabis the previous night.

At 02:00 BST on 1 August, the child's mother found Ziemelis with his thumbs in the baby's eyes. She screamed for help and he started to strangle the boy, the court heard.

The 31-year-old then produced a knife and was hit with a piece of wood by the baby's grandmother before throwing her across the room. The baby's mother was punched until she fell in and out of consciousness.

cuts and bruises

Mr Lofthouse said: "He dangled him out of the window for a couple of minutes.

"A crowd had gathered because of the commotion. People were shouting not to hurt the baby."

The court heard Ziemelis threw the baby away from the crowd, but a man managed to catch him.

He then threw the mother out of the window. She sustained cuts, bruises and a loose tooth after her fall was broken by bins which neighbours had placed underneath the

Members of the public dragged Ziemelis out of the window and he was hit with fists and bottles.

When police arrived, he told them he did not remember throwing the baby or the mother.

Psychiatrist Dr David Bond said Ziemelis' risk of causing serious harm to the public was increased when he used cannabis.

Sentencing him to life in prison with a minimum term of 12 years, Judge Richard Foster said: "I do not need a professional to tell me you are dangerous. Anyone who could do that to a child is dangerous.

"The appropriate sentence is life imprisonment. Any other sentence would not be adequate to reflect what happened"

Ziemelis will be treated under the Mental Health Act at Brockfield House before returning to prison.

Brits in LA

Meet A Member: Herb Ankrom

Charlottesville, Virginia, who moved to LA 24 years ago to pursue film and TV producing.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA? I originally went to NYC for one year after college, but soon realized the majority entertainment production came out of LA at that time, so I moved west.

What do you miss most from home?

I mainly missed my family when I moved as Meet Herb Ankrom from I only had one friend in growing, LA. It takes a few years to really feel at home here but I got there! Now of course I see my family quite often as I travel home a lot and take my parents on trips, etc.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since?

My first impression was WOW there is SO much to do and I would constantly be out and about! I think the biggest change is just in the amount of people, it seems to always keep

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Charlottesville?

The biggest difference if for sure opportunity, Charlottesville is a beautiful little town, but it has no real opportunity to be in the entertaiment business.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us? It's not really a hidden gem but if you want really good sushi - the original Katsuya in Studio City is the best sushi in town in my mind!

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

Make sure you have some money saved as getting started in this town takes a beat or two – so come prepared to be able to survive a little while you work getting settled in.

Lots our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

HERB ANKROM: "Make sure you have some money saved as getting started in this town takes a beat or two."

NEVER burn a bridge, this town may seem really big but it's actually quite small. The person who is working as an assistant today could quickly be your boss the next - so you never know! Reputation in the business goes a long way and can be really helpful or kill you!

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment? The best way to know more about me I guess would be to hunt me down and ask!

I am currently in an overall deal with STX Entertainment to produce scripted and unscripted projects.

Plus you can also see most of the projects I have worked on over the years at the website IMDB.com

THE BRITISH WEEKLY, SAT. AUGUST 4, 2018

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: The financial problem that has been around for a few weeks now will still take a few days more to sort out. If you can let go of what the outcome IS and what you expect to be it will manifest quicker in a more positive way.

TAURUS: Lucky Jupiter opposite you in Scorpio will bring a situation that is unresolved to the surface. This is a long-standing situation and can be in any part of your life. Therefore it's best to deal with this in a calm and cool manner.

GEMINI: Time to complete what has remained incomplete in your life these past few weeks. You will have bills to pay so make it your priority. Secrets are uncovered with Jupiter in Scorpio, so it's best to be upfront.

CANCER: Be strong and all the hard work you put in recently will bear fruit this coming week. Jupiter is in your cousin sign Scorpio and will enhance several areas in your life that may need a little boost. Take a short time out.

LEO: Financial issues could hold you back from enjoying your life. Do not assume that it seems unlikely to resolve the situation with ease. Do tackle what you can and stop stressing over what you are unable to complete - it's all you can do. Happy Birthday!

VIRGO: As this coming month unfolds you will benefit from your boss Mercury going backwards along with low energy it's not a time to get in any discussions about future situations. If you push for completion you may not get what you want done.

LIBRA: In for or a penny in for a pound is a good mantra this week ahead. Travel plans may not go as planned, however it is true there are no coincidences. With this in mind go forward as far as you can.

SCORPIO: You are, if you listen to that inner voice, one of the most intuitive signs and in the next few days with Jupiter cruising forward you should be prepared for a lot of good action in several areas. Do not give time to negative thoughts - you do not need them.

SAGITTARIUS: We all deserve the finer things in life although it's not always possible to indulge yourself. This week ahead at least treat yourself as though it is. The sun in your cousin sign Leo is beaming on you, so expect fine times and fun.

CAPRICORN: You may be feeling downcast recently and some of you may be dealing with family problems. This is due in part to your boss Saturn, currently going backwards. While this is a reflective time it will pass soon. Stay away from negative people.

AQUARIUS: If you refuse to acknowledge something it does not mean it will disappear. It will probably not be as bad as you think. Instead take the bull by the horns and get going on sorting out the problem. Doing a good turn for another – it will help you and them.

PISCES: If you don't keep up with the times they move on and that is not a good idea for your life overall. You have the power this week to transform something into a positive outcome for all. Jupiter is looking over your lucky shoulder.

This Week's Pub Quiz Winners...

THE FANTASTIC FOUR! The Superheroes of trivia God Save The Team have become the first in the history of Brits in LA pub quiz to win the fun contest four weeks in a row.

They saw off 10 other teams at the Cat and Fiddle on July 31 to claim the historic victory, squeezing past River's Rebels by 1.5 points.

After the triumph, team captain Janae Williams addressed the whole bar, saying, "We all met here at trivia, we all love it and we never thought we'd pull this off."

Who can stop them? It could be you when quizmaster Sandro Monetti,)pictured here with the victors), returns to host trivia on August 7. (Picture by Glenn Kinsey)

BRITS IN LA

How often do you make time for the fun stuff without niggling thought telling you that you should really be doing something productive instead?

I'm notorious for declining invitations with the usual response

"I'm too busy" . Which is completely true but only because I don't manage my time as well as I could.

As a result I don't take full advantage of all the lovely gifts that Los Angeles has to offer us.

But surely I'm not the only one with an Idris Elba set to star opposite Dwayne Johnson in Fast & Furious spinoff!

British star Idris Elba is in final negotiations to play the main villain in Hobbs and Shaw, the Fast and Furious spinoff.

Oo-er!

"The Rock" Dwayne Johnson will lead an all-star cast star in the feature, playing his "Fast" character, one of the franchise's primary bad guys Deckard with Shaw Jason Statham reprising his role as the Diplomatic Security Service agent Luke Hobbs. Crown actor Vanessa Kirby will also star.

The Fast franchise's veteran scribe Chris Morgan is writing the script, with Deadpool 2 director David Leitch set to helm.

Neal H. Moritz will produce via his Original Films, alongside Johnson and his Seven Bucks Productions partners, Dany Garcia and Hiram Garcia.

Statham and Morgan will also produce with Kelly McCormick, Steven Chasman, Amanda Lewis, Ainsley
Davies and Ethan
Smith exec producing.

Mark Sourian and Jay Polidoro will oversee the project for the studio.

Elba, who was last seen in theaters in Avengers: Infinity War, will next lead the fifth season of Luther and is currently in production on the Netflix comedy series Turn Up Charlie, which he created and will star in.

Universal is set to release Hobbs and Shaw on July 26, 2019.

British star to exit Walking Dead!

During a San Diego Comic-Conpanel in Hall H Friday, The Walking Dead star Andrew Lincoln confirmed that he's exiting the show in Season 9.

Boo-hoo-er!

"There seems to be an elephant in the room," Lincoln told the audience, according to The Hollywood Reporter.

"This will be my last season playing the part of Rick Grimes."

Gasps can be heard far and wide!

British star Lincoln has played the show's starring role since its pilot. Rumors that he's leaving the show began circulating in May. (AMC reportedly offered Norman Reedus "substantial compensation" to stay.)

It's unclear how the series will send off its leading man. "I love this show. It means everything to me. I love the people who make this show. I'm particularly fond of the people who watch this show." Lincoln said.

"I'm really, really excited about this season. No one is bigger than the story, and the story this year is unbelievable."

But one thing has eluded this entire conversation. Why? Why is he leaving the starring role in cable's most popular show?

Here is, straight from Andrew Lincoln's mouth (via EW), the reason. And it's one that we might have guessed at:

"I have two young children, and I live in a different country, and they become less portable as they get older," Lincoln says. "It was that simple. It was time for me to come home."

You will be missed Andrew... the show won't be the same without you!

Lamps and Barton open careers on the touchline

After illustrious playing careers, ex-England midfielders Frank Lampard and Joey Barton will make their managerial debuts when the new football season kicks off this weekend.

Lampard's first competitive game in charge sees the Rams kick off the new Championship season against Reading at the Madejski Stadium on Friday.

After a glittering playing career that included three Premier League titles and the 2011-12 Champions League with Chelsea, Lampard hopes to build on a promising preseason campaign by ending Derby's decadelong absence from the top flight.

"It's a difficult question, but of course promotion is the target - every club in the Championship has the same target," said the 40-year-old.

"But we will go step by step. We want to finish as high as we can, we want to get promoted, because this is a Premier League club.

"We must start with those intentions, the players know that. We all want it together here, the staff, the whole building, want to get this club into the Premier League."

Lampard promised his team would be hardworking.

"I want them to be aggressive, I want them to play good football, fast football. I don't mean beautiful tiki-taka football, but I want there to be an energy in the team, where they play and excite the fans. I want energy, hard work and aggression," he said.

Opposing Lampard in the Reading dugout will

Lampard and Barton manage Derby County and Fleetwood Town, respectively be his old Chelsea coach, and former Derby boss, Paul Clement.

"I've sent a couple of texts to Frank Lampard — first when he got the job and then when the fixtures came out," Clement said.

"I'm looking forward to coming up against him, as I do with all the managers. This a bit more because I've worked with Frank before so it will be nice to see him."

Over at Division One Fleetwood the always controversial Joey Barton made headlines last month by lambasting England's tactics in their World Cup semi-final loss to Croatia.

And he was at it again this week, telling reporters the key criteria in his recruitment policy is simple: have the right attitude or get out of Town.

"It's just like training a dog," Barton told reporters of his approach to players attitudes. "If they pee on the carpet, you correct them. If they keep doing it, you ship them out."

Spurs end US tour with a win

■ But uncertainty still surrounds transfer aims

French winger Georges-Kevin N'Koudou gave Tottenham a 1-0 win over AC Milan in their final US tour game this week.

The 23-year-old finished a driving run by firing a shot past Gianluigi Donnarumma in the 47th minute, for his second goal of preseason.

It was Spurs' second win in three games, having beaten Roma and lost to Barcelona on penalties on the tour.

They face Girona in a friendly on Saturday, before their Premier League opener Newcastle on 11 August. Spurs started academy players in Minneapolis - Luke TJ Eyoma, Amos, Anthony Georgiou, George Marsh, Oliver Skipp and Kyle Walker-Peters.

Christian Eriksen and Son Heung-min both came on for the final half-hour. While Spurs had more possession in front of 31,000 at US Bank Stadium, their Serie A opponents had three times as many shots.

Patrick Cutrone went closest for the Rossoneri, with Michel Vorm palming away the Italian's point-blank header. Jose Mauri sliced a shot wide in injury time.

Meanwhile, Son will miss South Korea's games against the Philippines and Kyrgyzstan in January, as well as an international friendly in November.

Spurs and South Korea have agreed a compromise which will see Son playing at the Asian Games, which run from 18 August to 2 September

And manager Mauricio Pochettino insists he does not know if the club will sign any players before the transfer window closes on 9 August. Spurs have yet to add to their squad this summer, despite Pochettino saying the club had to "take risks" to improve at the end of last season.

"I don't know if we are going to sign or not. We're working on that," said the 46-year-old Argentine.

"I cannot tell you if we're going to sign one, zero, two or three or four."

He added: "We're working. It's true it's so close, the transfer window is so close, but the club's doing everything to help the team and add some players, more quality, and try to help us in the season to achieve what we want."

Pochettino has led Spurs to fifth, third, second and third-placed finishes in the league in his four seasons in charge.

There was uncertainty over his future after he

POCHETTINO: "I cannot tell you if we're going to sign one, zero, two or three or four."

said Tottenham "need more time with me or another" after their FA Cup semi-final defeat by Manchester United in April.

But he signed a new five-year contract in May and is still in charge, despite speculation he could move to Real Madrid after Zinedine Zidane left as manager.

The transfer window for Premier League clubs closes before the start of the season after a vote by top-flight sides, yet it remains open for continental European sides until 31 August.

Red and yellow cards will be issued to managers and coaches for misconduct in the technical area this season.

Premier League bosses will receive verbal cautions for "irresponsible behaviour" in the 2018-19 campaign.

But in the FA Cup, Football League, EFL Cup, EFL Trophy and National League, they will be shown cards.

Accumulating cautions will also lead to various suspensions, with four bookings warranting a one-match ban up to 16 resulting in a misconduct charge. Previously, match officials only had the power to warn officials before sending them to the stands for more serious incidents.

Cards can be issued for actions including inappropriate language or gestures towards match officials, kicking or throwing water bottles, sarcastic clapping and waving imaginary cards.

Another Tour win for Britain!

■ Geraint Thomas succeeds Chris Froome as Brits clinch sixth win in seven years

Geraint Thomas became the third Briton to win the Tour de France when he crossed the finish line in Paris this week.

The Team Sky rider, 32, follows Sir Bradley Wiggins in 2012 and four-time Tour champion Chris Froome as Britain celebrates a sixth win in seven years.

Alexander Kristoff won the final sprint finish on the Champs-Elysees as Thomas crossed the line arm-in-arm with Froome after three weeks of racing.

He beat Dutchman Tom Dumoulin by one minute 51 seconds, with Froome third.

The Welshman, who rode in support of Froome in each of his four wins, had built up that lead over the previous 20 stages and Tour convention dictates that the yellow jersey is not challenged on the final stage.

"When I rode on the Champs-Elysees for the first time in 2007, that was insane - just to finish the race and just to be a part of it," Thomas told ITV.

"To now be riding round winning it is just incredible. It's just a whirlwind. I seem to be floating around on cloud nine.

"Maybe when I'm 70, sat in a corner of a pub telling some 18-year-old what I used to be, it will sink in. It's incredible, the stuff of dreams."

Froome was heavy favourite to become the fifth rider to win a recordequalling fifth Tour de France title. He came into the race as defending champion and holder of all three Grand Tour titles, having won the Vuelta a Espana last September and the Giro d'Italia in May

However, he was only cleared to race the week before the Tour started, after his anti-doping case was dropped by cycling's world governing body, the UCI.

The 33-year-old was under investigation after more than the permitted level of legal asthma drug salbutamol was found in his urine during his Vuelta victory.

But his hopes of matching Eddy Merckx's record of four consecutive Grand Tour victories were ended in the Pyrenees mountains in the final week as Thomas proved the strongest rider.

The final 116km stage began in Houilles, to the north-west of Paris, and the riders took a leisurely pace into the capital before embarking on eight laps of the city centre.

Team Sky led the peloton into having allowed France's Sylvain Chavanel to ride clear for one lap in his final Tour in recognition of his achievement of completing a record 18th race.

Six riders attacked off the front of the peloton and built an advantage of about 45 seconds, but they were eventually reeled in on the final lap, with 6km remaining.

World champion Peter Sagan's Bora-Hansgrohe team-mates did the bulk of the chasing, hoping to help the winner of the green points classification jersey to a first win in Paris, but Norwegian Kristoff outsprinted

Frenchman Arnaud Demare and Germany's John Degenkolb after Yves Lampaert's late attack failed.

Thomas rode over the line a few seconds later, alongside Froome, the man he dethrones as champion.

Celtic ease into next round

Celtic set up a tie with AEK Athens by eliminating Rosenborg in the Champions League second qualifying round on Wednesday.

A goalless draw in Trondheim meant Celtic's 3-1 first-leg win was sufficient to beat the Norwegians.

The hosts dominated the first 45 minutes, Marius Lundemo having a powerful header saved by Craig Gordon with the best chance of the half.

Celtic were much better after the break, Odsonne Edouard and Scott Sinclair coming closest to scoring.

Tore Reginiusses was denied a late goal when he was adjudged to have fouled Gordon as the two contested an aerial ball.

Rosenborg were tidy, but blunt in attack mercifully for Celtic. They enjoyed the bulk of the first-half possession and pressure, but scarcely made it tell.

Gordon did have to make one vital intervention in injury time, springing upwards and pushing Lundemo's looping header over the Celtic looked to be within playing well themselves. The onus was not on them to take the initiative and it was not until the opening minute of the second period that they threatened a potentially decisive away goal.

Edouard combined down the left with Callum McGregor before deftly gliding away from two defenders, only to curl his shot narrowly wide.

Celtic still have several first-team players working their way to full fitness and will be in a better place when AEK Athens visit Glasgow.
