Veteran MP quits Labour over party's 'anti-Semitism'

Veteran Labour MP Frank Field has quit the party's group in Parliament, saying the leadership is becoming "a force for anti-Semitism in British politics".

The Birkenhead MP also blamed a "culture of intolerance, nastiness and intimidation" in local parties.

A month ago he lost a confidence vote in his constituency party, after siding with the government in Brexit votes.

Jeremy Corbyn has apologised for hurt caused by anti-Semitism in the party and pledged to stamp it out.

A Labour Party spokesman said: "Jeremy Corbyn thanks Frank Field for his service to the Labour Party."

But a Labour source claimed "Frank has been looking for an excuse to resign for some time."

'racist party'

The Labour Party says it is not possible to resign the whip and remain a party member, but Mr Field told BBC Radio 4's PM he hoped to stand as a Labour candidate at the next election, but would otherwise stand as an independent Labour candidate.

In a letter to chief whip Nick Brown, he said the anti-Semitism row in the party was reason enough to resign, suggesting the leadership was "becoming a force for anti-Semitism in British politics".

"The leadership is doing nothing substantive to address this erosion of our core values. It saddens me that we are increasingly seen as a racist party."

Mr Field has been a Labour MP since 1979 and is a specialist on welfare issues. He had a spell as welfare reform minister after Tony Blair became prime minister in 1997, but his brief to "think the unthinkable" ended with his resignation a year later.

Since then he has been a backbencher, and has chaired the Commons Work and Pensions Committee for the past three years.

Last month, Mr Field lost a confidence vote by his constituency party after voting with the government over Brexit plans.

In his letter to Nick Brown, Mr Field complained that intimidation and intolerance were now "sadly manifest within my own Constituency Labour Party" and referred to a complaint he had made "on a specific bullying issue" going back 18 months that, he said, "no decisive action" had been taken on.

He said he intended to remain MP for Birkenhead, as an independent Labour MP, adding: "Few events would give me greater pleasure than to apply to the Parliamentary Labour Party for the whip.

'wider plot'

"But great changes in the leadership's stance on the issues outlined in this letter will need to take place before I will be able to do so."

Later he told BBC News that his decision was intended as a "wake-up call to the Labour Party" and he had not spoken to other Labour MPs about it: "It is not part of a wider plot, Jeremy will see us into the next election."

Asked if he was "jumping before being pushed" following the confidence vote, he replied: "No, they're 30odd people who voted against me... the idea that 30-odd people could decide the fate of what will be the choice that Labour Party voters get next time is absurd."

Northern Ireland enters record books for lack of government

Finger pointing continues on both sides as province looks no closer to solving political deadlock

The DUP has accused Sinn Fein of boycotting the Northern Ireland assembly as the province reached an unwanted milestone for nongovernance this week.

At press time on Thursday it had been 591 days since the power-sharing executive collapsed — passing Belgium for the world's longest peacetime period without a functioning government. The unionist party unfurled a banner outside Stormont to mark the occasion, calling on Sinn Fein to end its "boycott" on governing.

Public protests were also held in cities and towns in Northern Ireland under the banner of We Deserve Better, a non-party group that has been calling for discussions between politicians to resume.

The rift between the two main parties has widened since Martin McGuinness, the late Sinn Fein deputy first minister, resigned on January 9, 2017 over a controversial renewable heating scheme and a number of rights-based issues for nationalists.

The executive collapsed a week later when the deadline for Sinn Fein to nominate a new minister expired. A snap assembly election which followed in March last year led to the DUP and Sinn Fein re-emerging as the largest parties but so far they have been unable to reach a deal to restore the institutions. Bradley, the Karen Ireland Northern secretary, acknowledged the "deep frustration" in Northern Ireland at the long period without a devolved government. Her spokeswoman said: "She shares the firm view that the current situation cannot be allowed to continue and is working on options to ensure the good governance of Northern Ireland.

"The UK government's priority is to secure a basis for political talks and re-establish a locally elected, democratically accountable devolved government at the earliest opportunity. In the absence of an executive, the secretary of state continues to take the necessary decisions to protect the interests of Northern Ireland."

Arlene Foster, the DUP leader who was first minister when powersharing collapsed, also

"There is only one problem party and let's call it out that's Sinn Fein,"said DUP leader Arlene Foster said she shared the frustration of the wider public. "There is only one problem party and let's call it out - that's Sinn Fein," she said. "And they need to end their boycott here in Northern Ireland. I share the frustrations of many today that we don't have a government here taking decisions on education and on health, on infrastructure and on the future of this country itself. So it's time to get back into government long past the time to get back into government."

Mrs Foster repeated her call for government to be restored while a parallel process to resolve outstanding issues was run.

Michelle O'Neill, Sinn Fein's Stormont leader, said that the executive would not be restored until public confidence was restored in the devolved institution, which she said had collapsed due to the DUP.

"We had an agreement in February which paved the way for the re-establishment of the executive, but the DUP reneged on this agreement and collapsed the political talks. The Tory government's response, with the full support of the DUP, has been to adopt a do-nothing approach to restoring power-sharing. The British government continues to facilitate the DUP's disgraceful denial of rights enjoyed by citizens everywhere else on these islands, language rights, marriage rights, women's rights and the right to a coroner's inquest," she said.

30,000 sign petition to remove Corbyn

More than 30,000 people have signed a petition demanding that Jeremy Corbynquit over his response to the antisemitism scandal engulfing the Labour Party.

The petition, launched on Saturday, condemns Mr Corbyn's personal conduct and accuses him of seeking to "defend, honour, assist and promote antisemites".

On Tuesday Jonathan Sacks, the former chief rabbi, called Mr Corbyn an antisemite who had "given support to racists, terrorists and dealers of hate".

The Campaign Against Antisemitism petition, which features an image of Labour's slogan doctored to read "For the many not the Jew", calls on the party's MPs to take action.

Itsays: "Jeremy Corbyn has lied, distracted, tried to twist the definition of antisemitism to exclude his past conduct, and issued false apologies pressure when mounted. We had hoped that the Labour Party might at some point rise to the defence of British Jews by removing Jeremy Corbyn or by demanding resignation, but his the institutions of the once proudly anti-racist Labour Party are now corrupted and will not act. Instead they merely persecute those members who stand up to antisemitism. For as long as the Labour Party is in Jeremy Corbyn's grip, it cannot be a force for good."

The Board of Deputies of British Jews wrote to Jennie Formby, Labour's general secretary, on Wednesday calling on Mr Corbyn to "offer a heartfelt apology to British Jews".

Last week a video emerged of Mr Corbyn making derogatory remarks about Zionists at a 2013 event supporting the Palestinian cause.

Lord Sacks told the New Statesman that the remarks were "the most offensive statement made by a senior British politician since Enoch Powell's 1968 Rivers of Blood speech".

Labour said Lord Sacks' comments were "absurd and offensive".

Harry wows 'em with short burst at 'Hamilton'

Prince proves a big hit at charity performance in London

The Duke of Sussex briefly burst into song at a charity performance of the hit musical Hamilton on Wednesday.

Taking to the stage to thank the cast and crew, he sang a line from You'll Be Back - assuming the role of King George III, his sixth greatgrandfather.

But he cut the song after singing "You say...", telling the audience: "That's definitely not going to happen".

Gesturing the to show's creator Lin-Manuel Miranda, Prince Harry added: "He did try, but I said 'no'."

duke The was accompanied by his wife Meghan, the Duchess of Sussex, at the musical, which raised £300,000 for Sentebale, the HIV charity he co-founded in 2006

He thanked audience for helping to "raise a huge amount of money to change the lives of thousands of children in Botswana and Lesotho and through that work that we're going to be doing now, we will be able to stop the generational... handdown of the stigma of HIV".

Hamilton tells the story of US founding father Alexander Hamilton, and features King George III in a scene-stealing comic role - peacocking around the stage as he expresses disbelief and frustration at America's battle for independence.

Michael Jibson, who plays the role in the London production, was standing next to Prince Harry when he launched into his signature song, You'll Be Back.

Posting a clip of the performance on Twitter,

Harry and his wife Meghan at the musical, which raised £300,000 for the HIV charity he co-founded in 2006.

he joked: "The moment I was upstaged".

Miranda told the audience how he written King had George's role during his honeymoon, adding: "Smash cut to 2018 I'm sitting next to his sixthgreat grandson".

He later told reporters 'you don't often get a direct descendent" to watch a show set in the 18th Century.

The duke and duchess of Sussex previously saw Hamilton earlier this year - while Meghan also watched the original Broadway production accompanied by actress Priyanka Chopra in 2016.

On Wednesday, the newlyweds sat among the audience in the royal circle at London's Victoria Palace Theatre, and went onstage to share their appreciation with the cast after the show ended.

Meghan told actors the energy on the night was "palpable", adding: "It was so engaging, every moment of it.'

Prince Harry said: "That was absolutely incredible."

the Salmond inquiry must be 'fair to all parties'

misconduct Sexual against claims Alex Salmond must be treated in a manner that is fair to "all parties concerned", Nicola Sturgeon has said.

The first minister said complaints could not simply be "swept aside because of the identity of the person involved".

And she said the priority should be ensuring "truth and justice prevail".

Mr Salmond, who strongly denies the allegations against him, quit the SNP on Wednesday evening. The former first minister is taking court action against the Scottish government over its handling of the complaints.

Mr Salmond also launched a crowdfunding appeal to pay his legal costs, which surpassed its £50,000 target in a few hours but has been heavily criticised by opposition parties.

He has said he intends to apply to rejoin the SNP once he has had an opportunity to clear his name.

Ms Sturgeon said on Thursday that the situation as a whole was "incredibly difficult" for her and the party she has led since Mr Salmond stood down in the wake of the 2014 independence referendum.

But she said women had to be confident that their complaints would be "treated seriously and fairly - and by fairly I mean fairly to all parties concerned".

Ms Sturgeon also said she wanted a culture where people are able to come forward with complaints regardless of "how senior, how powerful, how well known or what the political allegiance is" of the person involved.

She added: "Whatever any of us do and say in the context of this very high profile case, we must absolutely make sure we don't make it harder for or discourage women from coming forward in the future. I think that is an obligation on all of us right now."

Ms Sturgeon, who has described Mr Salmond as being her "friend and mentor" for the past 30 years, also urged people to wait for the legal process to conclude rather than creating "some kind of media circus".

Mr Salmond, who was Scottish first minister from 2007 to 2014, released a video on social media on Wednesday evening announcing his resignation from the SNP but has not been available for interview.

He said he was quitting because he wanted to avoid potential divisions within the party, which has faced calls to suspend him.

It follows allegations, which emerged last week, from two Scottish government staff members about Mr behaviour Salmond's when he was first minister.

He has described the allegations, which are now being examined by Police Scotland, as "patently ridiculous".

Finance manager admits £60k Grenfell Tower fraud

■ Jenny McDonagh took the cash using pre-paid credit cards then blew it on gambling and lavish holidays to Dubai and LA

A council worker has admitted defrauding around £60,000 from the Grenfell Tower victim fund.

Jenny McDonagh, 39, took cash meant for survivors of the tragedy and victims' grieving family members using pre-paid credit cards.

The Kensington and Chelsea Council finance manager spent the funds on trips to Dubai and Los Angeles, expensive dinners and online gambling.

McDonagh, described as a "serial fraudster", admitted fraud and theft. She obtained the money "while being neither a survivor or bereaved family member", Scotland Yard said.

After the fire, McDonagh withdrew £62,000 over 10 months, Westminster Magistrates' Court heard. Prosecutor Robert Simpson described her as a "serial fraudster" who "lives beyond her means and gambles".

He said she used the stolen funds for a "trip to Dubai, Los Angeles, meals in expensive restaurants, hair appointments and personal luxuries for herself".

He added: "She spent quite a lot of money on online gambling. She spent £32,000, of which £16,000 was winnings and lost roughly £16,000 in online gambling."

McDonagh's marriage has since broken down, the court heard. McDonagh, of Abbey

Wood, south-east London, pleaded guilty to two offences of fraud, one of theft and another of concealing criminal property.

She was released on conditional bail with an electronic tag and will be sentenced at Isleworth Crown Court at a date to be set.

Senior District Judge Emma Arbuthnot said "custody is the obvious place to go" and ordered a pre-sentence report.

Scallop war ahoy?

Fisherman call for naval aid after violent French attack

British fishermen are calling for protection from the Royal Navy after being attacked by French boats while catching scallops in the English Channel.

A total of 35 French vessels surrounded five British boats that were fishing legally in the Channel early Tuesday. Rocks and other objects were thrown at the British boats, whose crews say a French gendarmerie patrol vessel failed to intervene despite being present at the scene.

There have been Franco-British tensions over scallop fishing for years but feelings are running high this summer because of a breakdown in talks that the French blame on Brexit. Derek Meredith, 50, the owner of two of the scallop boats involved in thew clash, the Golden Promise and Joanna C, which operate from the Devon port of Brixham, said: "The French crews were throwing rocks, shackles and flares onto the boats. They were throwing ropes in the sea to try and stop our boats escaping. Our crews were petrified.

"One of the shackles smashed a galley window which is serious because it means the boat isn't watertight. There has been a bit of trouble over the past couple of years but nothing as serious as this."

A spokeswoman for the French government office responsible for maritime affairs in the English Channel and the North Sea said that the British vessels were outside French territorial waters and acting legally. However, she added that even though the situation had been "very tense" the five gendarmes aboard L'Esteron, the patrol boat, had not "noticed any offences being committed". She said that the incident had ended when the British vessels left the zone and their French counterparts returned to port.

Mr Meredith said the patrol boat had done nothing but take photographs and had offered no help. "How would [the French] feel if we were smashing up all the French boats that are allowed to come up to six miles in our waters?"

James Bond's favorite carmaker is planning to go public.

Aston Martin said Wednesday that it's aiming to list shares on the London Stock Exchange later this year, marking another milestone in the revival of the British brand.

The sports car maker has been considering an initial public offering for some time. But the timing and location of the listing have remained under wraps. The company said Wednesday that it still has to make a final decision on whether to go ahead with the London IPO. It plans to publish more detailed information on the listing around September 20.

Aston Martin's cars have featured regularly in the movies about Bond, the fictional British secret service agent.

In going public, the company is betting that its growth story will help investors overcome fears over potential US tariffs on foreign autos and the disruption cont. on page 5, col. 2

Girlfriend furious at £75 compensation for vicious attack

Victim's asssailant receives only a 12-month community order at Teesside Magistrates' Court

A man who knocked out his girlfriend, leaving her streaked with blood in an attack that "could have killed" her, has been ordered to pay her just £75 in compensation.

27, Louise Reed, criticised the sentence imposed on Robert Jenney, 30, by magistrates as she revealed how she was forced to escape his beatings by climbing through her kitchen window.

The young mother, an administrator for the security company G4S, took to social media to vent her frustration his "disgusting" at sentence and posted a photograph of herself after the attack.

In a moving post she told how the "strong independent woman' she had always been disappeared the moment she was confronted by Jenney, who wore an "unforgettable look of hate and anger" on his face.

She said that when she regained consciousness, "there was blood everywhere" and she saw him "sitting rolling a cigarette".

She had to have the bridge of her nose glued after the attack.

Ms Reed and Jenney had been friends since the age of 13 and met each other by chance at a Middlesbrough football match last season. They rekindled their friendship and dated for three months until the relationship ended after two shockingly violent attacks, Teesside magistrates' court was told.

Jenney, of, Middlesbrough, escaped with а 12-month community order for the two assaults.

Ms Reed, who has a three-year-old daughter, Skyler-Mae, said: "The sentence he received is disgusting; he should have been sent to prison because he could have killed me. I suffer from nightmares and have trouble sleeping, I need to move out of my house and have a fresh start with my daughter. I am suffering from depression but he is free to get on with his life. It feels like he's been let off."

Jenney's punishment will be to do ten rehabilitation activity days. He was also handed a 12-month restraining order to stay away from his former girlfriend, and to pay £75 compensation to her and £165 court costs.

added: Ms Reed "I'm a fiery person, someone who stands up for themselves, but when you're faced with the person you thought you had a future with charging towards you with what I can only describe as an unforgettable look of hate and anger on their face, that strong independent woman disappears.

Being punched, thrown about and head butted in the face and being made to feel like a prisoner in my own home having to climb out of the window whilst pouring with blood to run for help is a memory that will stay with me forever.

She said that she felt manipulated to think "He isn't the man I that she was the problem, when "in actual fact, it's all mind games to break vou down".

Describing the attacks, she said that Jenney would "overreact" at the slightest argument and make her feel like it was her fault.

Meet a Member: Miranda Wilson

Meet Miranda Wilson San from Iose. California via 20 years in Lewes, East Sussex and London. Miranda moved to LA 35 years ago to pursue what became a three time soap star career, then married a Brit and did the barefoot and barmy period in the old country, and has just returned to the land of less humor. in order to relaunch her plan to swing from the Hollywood chandeliers. But wearing bigger pants this time....

Was there a particular reason you chose LA? When I left I did an Arnold. I literally said to my agent, "I'll be back." And meant it!

What do you miss most from home?

From England, I sorely miss the public transport! I've been driving for 40 years and I love it. But in the city, I LOVED even more the ease and availability of public transport.

What was your first impression of LA and

First impression; it was just another place to be. A great, big, wonderful, exciting, magical place. But, just a place. After having done that and left and now returned, LA is more like a game. There is so much more going on than when I ran around here before. So there's a mountain of new info to learn and play with. That's exciting in a whole different way than when I was a bright-eyed youngster.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Lewes?

When I walk down the High Street in Lewes, there will be 3 - 10 people, on any given day, that I'll know and greet and stop and chat with. And walking down the High Street was usually how I go into the center of town to buy food, go to the post office, meet a friend. So, this was almost daily. There is much more human contact there. People might not walk at each other, which was a bit jarring for me at first, but those who know you will make an effort to connect when they do see you. Here, even when I've been back for visits, everyone does seem to be so much busier and less available for simple interactions.

down the street smiling

And the other quality I miss is the sense of normalcy in going bonkers. Can you imagine ever being allowed to do a Lewes Bonfire Night, anywhere in the US?

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us? Well. In fact, I am a bit of a 'Hidden Gem' in the area of Dialect Coaching! I started coaching Brits back in London, when the casting director Robert Kelly asked me to coach the clients. I'm now here in Sherman Oaks starting up my one-to-one coaching. I coach those wanting to be proficient in General and all American, American dialects. Ask me about a BritsInLA

ARIES: Your planetary guest Uranus is no stranger to drama and your boss Mars is getting a little pushed around...which is NOT in his natures since he prefers to be in charge. So keep a cool head at all times and in all situations. Bear in mind nothing lasts forever. Try to use this down time to chill out. TAURUS: You need to listen to wiser souls who are directing you to a complete change. This can be in any area, however if it is your health and well being in the spotlight it must be at the top of your priority list. Follow the path of least resistance for a while.

GEMINI: With Mercury and Saturn going forward next week you are about to enact changes that have been on the back burner for too long. Keep some time these next couple of weeks to have an emotional change of heart.

CANCER: With the love planet Venus visiting, you be able to make some changes that have been long overdue. You might feel you have been spinning around with out any direction to focus on. That is about to change. Take a short trip with good friends or family and..... rest.

LEO: As the new month begins you could find yourself less restricted in several ways. Your priority should be your own highest good overall. You have been holding on to outdated thoughts and ways for too long....it is time to trust that you will be taken care of now.

VIRGO: Be on the safe side this week - make family and friends your priority and the reward will be a sense of pride for putting things to rest. If someone is resisting you, do not get upset, just let it go. It will all look better by mid-September. Happy Birthday.

LIBRA: Saturn is finally progressing in your area of communications and learning. This means you can expect help in enacting changes, especially relating to others. Ask for any assistance that you can get and make the next month a winning period.

SCORPIO: Pressure in several areas may have got you down and feeling blue recently. This is not surprising, especially in the area of relationships and finance. However, with Jupiter's help within a few days you can expect to be back in the good graces of the Universe.

SAGITTARIUS: Whatever way you look at your life it's a bit of a balancing act currently. The good news is now your boss Jupiter is moving in a positive way, which will balance out sooner than later for you. However do not take any short cuts as you are still dealing with Saturn, who is keeping a watchful eye on you.

CAPRICORN: It is time to tell the people in your life to back off and give you some space. Whatever is lurking in the shadows of your mind will not come to the light to be healed or changed if you bury your head in the sand. Seek to overcome your self-made shadow and be sure that you give yourself some space.

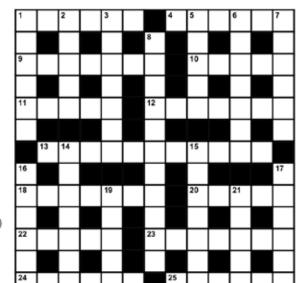

AQUARIUS: Meetings of the minds is starred this coming week for you in work areas. There will be the much on your agenda these next few days or so. Be open to what you hear from others. It will be much to your advantage to listen and not react.

PISCES: This month ahead be ready to take a trip at a moment's notice. It may bring the change you have asked for and if nothing else you will feel much more in control and ready for anything. Word of warning: put your own wants and needs first.

are thinking about making the move here? Get all of your tools in order, as soon as you can. They actually still print out headshots here! During the recent four year period working in London, I was never once asked to bring a headshot in on a casting. Self promotion is a massive part of being an actor. It takes loads of time. Make that time. Behave as if the dice are Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment?

I've recently been going around to film festivals where a short film I star in is screening. 'An American Attorney In London' was filmed in London by Darrell Alden, a graduating student of the Raw Talent program at Raindance. And we've just won two awards in Lafayette, Louisiana at the Cinema On The Bayou Film Festival!

When it's pouring in WeHo, don't get soaked.....

Okay so we all know how fun a night out with the lads (or girls) can be.

In the UK we bar hop and can easily plough down ten drinks in a night plus a few shots thrown in for good measure. The next day's hangover is a badge of honor and a reminder of a good night out.

In LA? Not so much...

For those newbies to LA, the first thing I'm gonna point out is that most bars in LA offer a free pour (no premeasured shots here) in a very large glass. And Weho (that area referred to as "boystown" which runs the stretch of Santa Monica Blvd between Fairfax and Robertson) is no exception. In fact a fun night out can turn Many a night I've been there with friends only to wake up the next day, half clothed, on the couch, not remembering how the hell I got home with my Uber rating considerably downgraded, blearyeyed while calling my friends to help me fill in the blanks.

"Last thing I remember was (fill in inappropriate activity here), usually followed by a variant of: "dude, I've no idea, we surely didn't drink that much."

Last Wednesday was another random spurof-the-moment night, as a few of us went bar hopping and I woke up Thursday with my newly purchased Barney's Bum Bag (fanny pack to you Yanks) missing. All my money, credit cards, keys gone. Trying to get hold of the bar seemed impossible. ("Press 3 for lost and found" – followed by a full mailbox). Before cancelling every card I thought I'd check with the bar in person. To my surprise my bag was there with everything still in it. Talk about lucky. Apparently I'd left it on the bar and walked off. But back to the point — we only had a few cocktails and we all blacked out. How is this possible? For years I'd put it down to the fact that nothing ever good can happen by stepping into Weho. But the reality is that as we age the harder it is for our bodies to process the effects of alcohol. A friend of mine recently recounted a similar story on social media - but with a far more devastating outcome. Here is a snippet: "I feel obligated to tell you all what happened to me on Saturday night/Sunday morning while out with friends in West Hollywood because something very similar happened to a friend of mine a few weeks back that it can't just be a coincidence. I tell this story in hopes this doesn't happen to you.

We had all gone to a birthday party and decided to go to The Chapel (a popular bar on Robertson Blvd) for a nightcap. Slowly people started going home until it was just me and two other friends. I remember having a conversation with them but as if in mid sentence my brain cuts to me waking up on Sunday morning in an unknown Prius on my street but two blocks to the south. As you can imagine, I was very disoriented and took me a good five minutes before I could assess even what neighborhood I was in. My wallet, phone, glasses and shoes had been taken off of me. The only thing left in my pocket were my house kevs

My debit card shows that I had two charges at The Chapel and my friends said I was talking to a drag queen for whom I purchased a drink but she had left by the time they took their leave. I then have an $8 debit charge at Motherlode (another nearby bar) but I have no recollection of ever entering that bar. My brain goes from talking to my friends at Chapel and then waking up in the strange car.

It's the memory lapse

ALL FUN AND GAMES: until that last cocktail kicks in....

that is making me most upset. What went on between 1am-2am on Sunday morning? How did I end up in that car? Did the robbers put me in the vehicle? Was I running away from someone and found an unlocked car to hide out in and passed out? I don't have those answers but did end up talking to the owner of the vehicle today.

So - I'm left with a mystery of possibly being drugged/roofied or at the very least taken advantage of in a drunken state, robbed and left with only my clothes and my keys in my pocket.

I should thank my lucky stars that it wasn't worse. It definitely could have been much much worse.

But something very similar happened to a friend recently so I can't help thinking this isn't a coincidence. Does this happen a lot of people who frequent WEHO? Is it the bartender over-Cont. on page 11, col. 1

But not of course for Elton John, and husband David Furnish who are 'winding down' their summer by lapping up some sunshine with David and Victoria Beckham who swapped south-west London for the south of France and to join "uncle" Elton for a boating trip.

Burnley turfed out of Europe

Burnley failed to make it to the Europa League group stage after wasting a string of chances in their play-off round second leg against Olympiakos at Turf Moor on Thursday night.

Trailing 3-1 from the first leg in Greece, Sam Vokes spurned two great goalscoring opportunities before hitting the post, while Ashley Barnes and 18-year-old Dwight McNeil also went close.

The Clarets were punished when Daniel Podence fired into the roof of the net after a counterattack before substitute Matej Vydra scrambled an equaliser.

However, Burnley lost on 4-2 on aggregate and, after securing a return to European football for the first time in 51 years, are out after just 36 days and six games.

Celtic salved some their European disappointment by easing into the group stage of the Europa League.

The Scottish champions dropped into the continent's secondtier competition after being knocked out of Champions League qualifying by AEK Athens. But Leigh Griffiths' 100th goal for the club, and strikes by Callum McGregor and a 4-1 aggregate win over Lithuania's Suduva. Celtic will join Rangers in Friday's group stage draw. Steven Gerrard's nine-man side survived a frantic second-half Ufa onslaught to clinch their place in the group stage.

Kristoffer Ajer, secured

The Scottish Premiership side remain unbeaten in 12 games under Gerrard despite playing the final 24 minutes with a two-man deficit after Jon Flanagan received a second booking.

Alfredo Morelos had earlier been shown his second red card of the campaign - this time being given a second yellow for dissent after being cautioned for kicking the ball away.

At that stage, Rangers were ahead 2-1 on aggregate after Ovie Ejaria's curling shot was cancelled out by Dmitri Sysuev's leveller.

Ufa registered 26 attempts as they pushed late on but they found Allan McGregor and his defence a formidable barrier, with an injury-time strike ruled out for offside.

Rangers now visit Celtic in Sunday's Old Firm game having reached the group stage of a European competition for the first time since the 2010-11 Champions League.

Vardy calls time on England career

■ Leicester striker cites country's focus on youth, but may return in event of injury crisis

Jamie Vardy has all but retired from playing for England after informing Gareth Southgate he believes the time is right to focus solely on club football.

The Leicester striker, who will be 32 in January, says a number of factors have influenced his decision, including his age and a desire to spend more time with his family. He also accepts he is unlikely to feature much for England even if he remains part of the squad.

Vardy, who has 26 caps and has been in every England squad since his first call-up in May 2015, spoke to Southgate just before returning from the World Cup finals in Russia, to explain he was thinking of stepping aside. He confirmed that was still his intention during a telephone conversation with Southgate a fortnight ago, when the England manager wondered whether Vardy might have changed his mind before the internationals against Spain and Switzerland next month. Southgate told Vardy

he felt the striker "still had a lot to offer" but the manager also understood the thinking behind the player's decision. With not exactly England with blessed striking options, Southgate and Vardy have agreed to "not shut the door completely", although he would return only if there were an injury crisis.

"To be honest with you, this has been on my mind for a while," Vardy said. "I'm not getting any younger and you can see, to be fair to the gaffer, he wants to make it more youthful, which obviously had its benefits during the World Cup. We got to the semi-finals and finished fourth, which is equal to the furthest we have ever been on foreign soil. So I just said to Gareth I think it's probably best from now on, especially with the way he wants to go, to bring youngsters in who he thinks have got the ability and start nurturing them into international football."

Asked whether the prospect of travelling with England but not playing much had affected his decision, Vardy replied: " I think that had an impact. When you get selected you want to be playing. If you're playing week in, week out for your club, you want to be going to England to play as well. And if it's not happening, then for me personally now, at this age, it's better to be at home, spending that time with my family and training with my club, preparing for the next game after the international break.

"I explained it all to Gareth and he was fine with my decision. I mentioned it to him after the World Cup had finished, out in Russia, and then I spoke to him on the phone a couple of weeks ago.

Gary Cahill also spoke with Southgate after the World Cup and indicated

VARDY: "I'm not getting any younger and you can see, to be fair to the gaffer, he wants to make it more youthful, which obviously had its benefits during the World Cup."

that, after eight years and 61 caps, he felt the time had come to concentrate on club football. The 32-year-old centre-half, who has played under five England managers and captained the team on five occasions, is aiming to break back into the Chelsea side under Maurizio Sarri.

"In terms of my international future, I think it is time I take a step back and now I feel that is the right moment," Cahill told Chelsea TV. "I have been hugely honoured to have played for my country and I would never shut the door if I was needed in the future. I had a good chat with the manager and he could see where I was coming from."

United still behind Mourinho

Manchester United manager Jose Mourinho still has the club's backing despite Monday's 3-0 home defeat by Tottenham.

United have lost two of their first three Premier League games for the first time since 1992-93.

However, senior figures at Old Trafford are convinced Mourinho can turn the situation around.

Mourinho, 55, remained on the pitch to applaud fans after the game at Old Trafford and praised them in TV interviews.

Asked about United's defensive problems in the post-match news conference, he raised three fingers and said: "Do you know what this means? Yes, it means 3-0, but it also means three Premier Leagues and I won more Premier Leagues alone than the other 19 managers put together. Three for me. Two for them."

MELTDOWN: Mourinho's press conference following United's 3-0 loss on Monday to Spurs was a car crash

As he got up to leave, Mourinho told a journalist: "Respect! Respect! Respect man!"

The Portuguese last week said had "no problem" with United executive vice-chairman Ed Woodward, amid cont. on page 19, col. 6
