They could have killed 30 more, claims Fred West's daughter

■ Speaking on Good Morning Britain, Mae West revealed how she would be locked up with bucket at night and the lightbulb would be removed from her room.

THE daughter of serial killers Fred and Rose West has revealed that she believes her parents killed 30 women more than those known to police.

Speaking of growing up in the "House of Horrors" at 25 Cromwell Street, Gloucester, Mae West, 46, said she was haunted by her mother's refusal to make a confession.

Ms West said: "People ask me this, 'Do you think he stopped?' and I don't think he did. I think he stopped using the house."

Asked how many women she believed her parents murdered she said "altogether maybe 30 more".

Ms West told how she was brutally beaten by her mother and sexually abused by her father as she grew up. The second of eight children the couple had together, her older sister Heather, 16, and step-sister Charmaine, eight, were among the 11 known victims of Fred West. Her father killed himself while on remand in prison on New Year's Day 1995. Rose West maintained her innocence, but was convicted of 10 murders and has been told she will never be released from prison

Ms West, a married mother-oftwo, kept in touch with her mother for 10 years after she was jailed in 1995. At first she convinced herself her mother was innocent, but she eventually faced up to the truth. Speaking to Susanna Reid on Good Morning Britain, she said: "I just wish mum said her part in it, confess to what her part is, just to give closure to everybody."

Asked if she ever feared she would be killed by her parents, Ms West said: "I was probably better off if just left on the street... You were not safe in that house."

Of sexual abuse by her father she said: "If you knew he was coming home you'd make sure you had jeans on, go to bed fully dressed, or we'd get up early in the morning dressed before, because he'd just come into the room and rip the covers off."

Describing life in the house and beatings from her mother who worked as a prostitute, Ms West told how she would be at home when her parents were "doing things" to other girls. She said: "They would lock us in the basement. These must have been times they were doing things.

"They would give you a bucket at night and the light bulb would be taken out and the doors locked. "We had tenants. It was normal to see people coming in and out. With Heather, we thought she had run away."

But she added of growing up in the house: "There was a lot of normality to it. Then there was the other side that wasn't and we didn't obviously see a lot of things."

THE MURDEROUS WESTS: Fred killed himself in prison in 1995; Rose, who has maintained her innocence, is serving a life sentence in a Durham prison

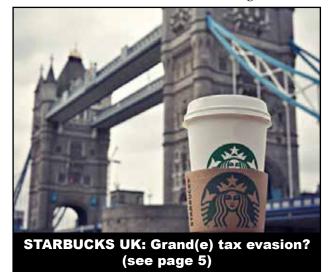

And Ms West said of her father: "Sometimes he was funny and we used to look forward to him coming home from work. I did think he was definitely strange." Ms West said her own son had never asked "Where's your mum and dad?" and that her daughter had "never really talked about it".

She said: "My daughter did go to a Halloween fancy dress ball and they [other party guests] went as mum and dad... they actually dressed as Fred and Rose West."

Gloucestershire Police said it would consider reopening the case if "new or compelling evidence" emerged. But Assistant Chief Constable Julian Moss said: "All reasonable lines of inquiry were explored at the time and there are no new ones for us to investigate."

Tottering Theresa swatted down by EU leaders yet AGAIN

■ PM ambushed as Tusk dismisses Chequers plan

Theresa May is battling to salvage her Brexit strategy and facing a fresh Tory revolt after being humiliated by European leaders on Thursday.

In an ambush that blindsided British officials, Donald Tusk, the European Council president, dismissed her Chequers proposals as unworkable after a private meeting of national leaders.

President Macron of France warned the prime minister that she must come up with "new propositions" if she wanted to rescue a deal.

The rejection at the Salzburg meeting triggered a crisis in government, with some cabinet ministers considering attempting to bounce Mrs May into abandoning Chequers within days.

Sajid Javid, the home Andrea secretary, leader Leadsom. of Penny House, the Mordaunt, international development secretary, and Esther McVey, the work and pensions secretary, are among those who believe a deal closer to that which Canada has with the EU would be preferable to the current government proposal.

"She needs to drop the language of Chequers," a cabinet minister said.

A pro-European Conservative MP said that the prime minister's domestic "credibility" had been badly damaged. "The question is, how on earth does she survive this? It strengthens the hand of the Brexiteers and calls into question her leadership in a way that wasn't the case 48 hours ago."

'positive elements'

David Davis, the former Brexit secretary, is to publish his alternative plan for a free-trade deal before this month's Tory conference in a move designed to further embarrass Mrs May.

Nicky Morgan, chairwoman of the Treasury select committee, said: "Chequers has been in difficulty for some time. We all hoped she would at least get engagement, if not agreement, in Salzburg."

The prime minister had sought to secure warm words from EU leaders about her Brexit vision but was instead warned that she must find a solution for the Irish border issue within three weeks or risk a no-deal Brexit.

Mr Tusk said:
"Everybody shared the view that while there are positive elements in the Chequers proposal, the suggested framework for economic co-operation will not work."

The Chequers plan would keep Britain following EU rules on goods but not services. Its customs arrangement would see the UK collect EU tariffs to avoid a hard Irish border.

Downing Street admitted that Mrs May had been caught off guard. Even in her private meeting with Mr Tusk, he had not given her any indication of the level of criticism he was about to make. "Maybe this was a ploy to get us to move further," a senior government source said. "But it is a mistake because we don't have the political space or inclination to change."

moderate stance

Mrs May was defiant in a tetchy press conference, insisting that her model of a UK-EU free-trade area was the only credible proposal on the table. She flatly rejected a European Commission backstop proposal for Northern

Theresa May at a photocall with European leaders in Salzburg on Thursday. President Macron of France told he to come up with a new plan if she wanted a Brexit deal Ireland to remain within the EU customs area after Brexit, arguing that this would draw a border down the Irish Sea. She will bring forward alternative proposals of her own in the coming weeks.

The tougher EU stance is being seen as a victory for Mr Macron against the moderate stance advocated by countries such as the Netherlands. Mr Macron went on to attack Brexit as a "choice of the British people pushed by those who predicted easy solutions . . . Those people are liars."

'Pedo' diver sues Tesla boss

THE BRITISH cave diver branded "pedo guy" by billionaire Elon Musk is suing him for defamation.

Mr Musk, 47, has made repeated accusations against Vernon Unsworth, who helped rescue 12 teenagers from a flooded cave in Thailand in July. He claimed Mr Unsworth was a "child rapist" and had moved to Thailand to find a child bride. The lawsuit seeks £57,000 in compensation and an injunction against Mr Musk to stop further allegations.

The document states Mr Unsworth, 63, was seeking "punitive damages" plus compensation "to punish Mr Musk for his wrongdoing and deter him from repeating such heinous conduct".

It states Mr Musk used Twitter and emails to "publish to the world false and defamatory accusations". The CEO of Tesla and SpaceX has 22.5 million followers. The action was filed in Los Angeles federal court and a separate suit will follow in London. After the original accusation in mid-July Mr Musk apologized and deleted the tweets. The row between the pair broke out over Mr Musk's offer of a mini-submarine to help with the rescue of the boys and their football coach. Mr Unsworth, who is from Lancashire but lives in Thailand with his girlfriend, 40, dismissed the offer as a "PR stunt". The boys were rescued after 18 days on July 10.

"Croydon cat killer" just cars, insists the Yard

Scotland Yard has closed the case of the so-called 'Croydon cat killer' after detectives concluded the killing and mutilation of cats could be attributed to cars and foxes, rather than humans.

Reports of decapitated cats with their tails hacked off first raised fears of a sadistic serial animal killer terrorising south London, and there were ultimately hundreds of reports around the country.

However, after a threeyear investigation the Met said there was no evidence that any of the cats had been killed by a human. Instead, detectives found CCTV evidence that foxes were responsible for some of the killings, and placed emphasis on expert opinion that wildlife was known to scavenge onroad kill, often removing the heads and tails of dead animals.

The Met tweeted on Thursday: "The cats were killed due to major blunt force trauma consistent with vehicle collisions. Scavenging foxes then mutilated body parts — especially heads and tails."

Fears of a serial cat killer were first raised in 2015 after up to 30 cats turned up mutilated in Croydon, some on their owners' doorsteps.

Martin Clunes, the actor who was educated in the borough, was among a string of celebrities who lent their weight to a public campaign to try to catch the killer.

He wrote in February 2016: "I read with horror that some of the cats had been decapitated and dismembered — this is the stuff of nightmares."

The Met said, however, no evidence of human involvement was found in any of the reported cases, and there were no witnesses, no identifiable patterns and no forensic leads that pointed to human involvement.

Good night for the Brits at the Emmys

■ Newton, Foy, Rhys and Brooker all pick up gongs in glitzy LA ceremony

BRITISH TALENT enjoyed another banner night at this week's Emmy Awards with Claire Foy and Thandie Newton taking top awards with other nods going to Stephen Daldry for directing The Crown and Charlie Brooker for Black Mirror.

Claire got the lead actress nod for playing the young Queen Elizabeth II in the hit Netflix show The Crown. She dedicated her Emmy to co-star Matt Smith, who played Prince Philip. And Thandie won best supporting actress in a drama series for her turn as the rebellious host Maeve in the sci-fi action thriller Westworld.

In the best one-liner of the night at the 70th annual Emmy Awards at the Microsoft Theater in Los Angeles on Monday, the 45-year-old accepted the accolade with the quip: "I don't believe in God, but I'm going to thank her."

Welsh actor Matthew Rhys won best actor for his part in the Cold War thriller The Americans.

Brooker attended the ceremony with his wife, British TV presenter Konnie Huq, while picking up the prize for a limited series, movie or dramatic special for his subversive Channel 4 series Black Mirror. Brooker has established himself as one of the hottest writers in the entertainment business with the show, whose three series of standalone episodes feature misuses of technology in a dystopian future. Brooker, who won two awards last year for the same show, got his start as a video game reviewer before moving onto the Channel 4 satire The 11 O'Clock Show in 2001. He met his current wife Huq, 43, in 2008 when she starred in an episode of his Channel 4 series Screenwipe.

Konnie is well known in her own right, having been the longest-serving female Blue Peter presenter from 1997 to 2008 and is also a host of the Xtra Factor.

The couple married in 2010 at the Little White Wedding Chapel in Las Vegas after nine months of dating. They have two children - Covey, five, and four-year-old Huxley.

Brucie raking it in right to the end...

TV LEGEND Sir Bruce Forsyth was raking in a fortune to his last breath, accounts revealed this week.

The game show giant died in August 2017, aged 89, but his production company's accounts show that for the 12 months to October last year he had built up £5.56 million in cash.

His wife Lady Wilnelia took over control of Bruce Forsyth Promotions a month before he died. The move was all part of the TV funnyman's plan to have a last laugh at the taxman's expense. Bruce left £11.5 million to Wilnelia in his will while his son and five daughters inherited nothing. That is because money passed from husband to wife is not subject to inheritance tax. Wilnelia, a former Miss World who Bruce married in 1983, was then free to give away £650,000 without paying extra in tax. Bruce, who hosted Strictly Come Dancing, The Generation Game, Play Your Cards Right, The Price Is Right and Sunday Night At The London Palladium during a 75-year television career, had spoken out against inheritance tax two years before his death.

Bruce and Wilnelia

He told the Radio Times: "I think your inheritance should go to your children more than back to the country that you've lived in."

Bruce left £100,000 in trust to be split between his nine grandchildren when they reach the age of 21 and £20,000 each to two executors of his estate. Everything else in his £11,718,242 estate, after funeral and legal expenses, went to Wilnelia, 60.

A spokesman for his estate said previously: "All I would say is that I think 99.9 per cent of married people would do this."

Had the entertainer left his fortune to anyone other than his wife or charity, 40 per cent inheritance tax would have been due on everything over £325,000. That could have handed the taxman £4.57 million - reducing the amount Bruce's family would have inherited to £7.13 million. Bruce earned £650,000 a series while hosting Strictly and he continued to earn cash from re-runs of his old shows around the world. He once described hosting game shows as "money for old rope", adding: "You can do a series in two weeks then take as much time off as you like."

'It was awkward not to'

■ New book revewals why the Queen shook hand of ex-IRA chief Martin McGuinness

When the Oueen shook hands with the former IRA commander Martin McGuinness during a visit to Northern Ireland in 2012, it was a historic moment that symbolized the progress towards peace that had been made since the dark days of the Troubles.

Now, six years later, the Queen's thoughts on that symbolic gesture of reconciliation have been revealed.

Did she consider it a defining moment in history? An image that summed up the triumph of hope and understanding hatred and violence? A touching rapprochement between former foes?

No, she just thought it would be awkward if she did not shake his hand.

Her thoughts revealed by David Cameron in a new book about the Oueen by the journalist and broadcaster Robert Hardman. Mr Cameron, who was prime minister at the time, said he told the Queen that her encounter with McGuinness, then Northern Ireland's deputy first minister, at a charity event in Belfast during her Diamond Jubilee tour had been a great milestone of modern diplomacy. As he told the author: "I think it was the most transformative bit of diplomacy I have seen. It was amazing."

faintly embarrassed

However, the Queen's reply to Mr Cameron, wrote Hardman, summed up her "modest, nononsense approach" to a job she has been doing longer than most people can remember. "What was I meant to do?" she said. "Of course I shook his hand. It would be awkward not to."

Mr Cameron disclosed that the Oueen was faintly embarrassed by the adulation she received after her handshake with the man Hardman described "the leader of an organisation that had once been hell-bent on exterminating her entire family".

Mr Cameron said: "She was, as ever, not sure what all the fuss was about."

The book, Queen of The World, reveals how McGuinness was the one who was anxious to meet the Queen, with Sinn Fein making a specific request for him to be included in the official line-up. His enthusiasm was in contrast to Sinn Fein's attitude during her state visit to the Irish Republic the previous year - the first time she had ever been to the south - when its policy was to have nothing to do with the Queen.

When the Sinn Fein mayor of Cashel, Michael Browne. who terminally ill in 2011, shook hands with the Queen as she passed through the town on her way to Cork, the Sinn Fein hierarchy was so furious that he was suspended from the party.

Gerry Adams, who was

The meeting that Martin McGuinness, the former IRA chief of staff had sought. Years later he would tell the BBC: "I like her."

the leader of Sinn Fein, was sceptical at the time about the state visit, suggesting that Irish people were "disappointed" that the Queen had not fully apologised for Britain's role in Irish affairs.

Sir Julian King, then the ambassador to Dublin, told Hardman: "Sinn Fein recognised that they hadn't caught the mood because there were some huge approval ratings for the visit - 80 or 90 per cent. Among Sinn Fein supporters there was a massive majority too." There was often cynicism about big state occasions "but this definitely caught a moment. An Irish friend said to me that it was 'OK to feel good about the Brits' ".

In 2012 Sir Julian had become director-general of the Northern Ireland Office. Shortly before the Queen's visit to Belfast, he received an extraordinary phone call. Sinn Fein, it turned out, would not be hostile to the visit: in fact, they wondered if there might be any chance of a royal introduction.

"They realised they had misread the public mood," he said. "Gerry Adams and Martin McGuinness reached out - to say would it be possible to meet the Queen at some point?"

After the meeting was agreed Mr Adams said that it was about "moving beyond rhetoric to reach out" to unionists as a "gesture of respect". He said: "It is a very significant step and I think it may bring us into a different phase, into a new platform which can be built upon."

Years later McGuinness, who died last year, told a BBC documentary: "I liked her courage in agreeing to meet me. I liked the engagements that I've had with her. There's nothing I have seen in my engagements with her that this is someone I should dislike -

'murdered wife at sea to collect inheritance' British man

British murdered his wife and deliberately sank the couple's catamaran near the Bahamas in a bid to inherit her estate, prosecutors claimed this week.

Lewis Bennett, 41, was charged with seconddegree murder on the high seas in the May 2017 disappearance of Isabella Hellmann, 41, of Delray Beach, Florida, in February. Bennett and his wife were on a delayed honeymoon to St. Maarten, Puerto Rico and Cuba.

Hellmann's family allegedly bugged her apartment in Delray Beach to listen to Bennett's conversations because they believed he was involved in her disappearance, Guardian reported, citing court papers.

A Miami federal judge was asked to admit conversations between Hellmann and family, which they are believed to have discussed arguments over a potential move to Australia, financial struggles and the raising of their daughter, the newspaper reported. Prosecutor Benjamin Greenberg said the conversations show the couple were constantly arguing.

"Hellmann's murder would remove the marital strife from the defendant's life, allow the defendant to live his life as he pleased, and would enable him to inherit money from Hellmann's estate, all of which provide strong circumstantial that the defendant had a strong motive to murder Hellmann," Greenberg

Bennett would inherit Hellman's apartment and bank account should she be declared dead, according to The Guardian. Her body has yet to be found.

The FBI said in an affidavit in February that financial greed was the likely motive behind Hellman's murder. The document also noted that Bennett did nothing to search for his wife, but he did rescue a tea set.

Bennett told investigators the night Hellman disappeared he had gone below deck on their boat near Cay Sal Bank, Bahamas, to sleep around 8 p.m., activated autopilot and left Hellmann to keep watch. The FBI said he falsely stated she disappeared after the supposed accident. Investigators said they found evidence Bennett intentionally tried to sink the boat almost Bennett immediately got into a life raft with luggage and other items and took no actions to find his wife, the FBI said.

Prosecutors also said Hellman may have discovered he was in possession of rare coins stolen from a former employer in St. Maarten, which may have made her an accomplice to a crime. An argument over transporting the coins and was sentenced to seven months in jail.

Lewis Bennett with his late wife, Isabella Hellmann the coins "potentially led to an intense argument resulting in Hellman's murder, Greenberg

Bennett is set to go to trial in the murder case in December.

Huge rise in sex change requests

A DRAMATIC rise has been seen in the number of girls asking for a sex change to become boys.

Requests for female to male gender reassignment have increased by 4,000 per cent in the past decade.

Now a probe has been ordered by the Cabinet Equalities Minister Penny Mordaunt.

New official figures reveal the number of children referred for gender "transitioning" treatment – including hormone injections – has risen from 97 in 2009/10 to 2,519 in 2017/18. The biggest increase has come among girls with numbers up from 40 to 1,806 - a rise of 4,415 per cent – compared with 57 to 713 for boys. Forty-five of the children involved were under six.

A source in the Government Equalities Office said at the weekend: "There has been a substantial increase in the number of individuals assigned female at birth being referred to the NHS.

"There is evidence that this trend is happening in many other countries as well. Little is known, however, about why this is and what are the long-term impacts."

Another source said: "Is it, to put it crudely, that young girls simply think modern life would be easier to bear if they were boys?"

The issue of making it easier for children and teenagers to transition has come as the Government considers plans to reform the Gender Recognition Act. This will allow people to self-identify as a sex different to the one they were identified as at birth.

Who's bitter now? Village pub becomes first in UK to ban cash

A VILLAGE pub has become the first in the UK to ban cash, with drinkers having to pay for drinks and meals by card or on smartphones. But while many locals welcome the move, others say it is unfair to older people who prefer cash or don't have bank cards.

The Boot in Freston, near Ipswich, has reopened as a trendy gastro pub after it was derelict for nine years. Landlord Mike Keen this week insisted the cashless policy – which will slash business costs – has been "a huge success". But villager Tom Young, 25, said: "The general consensus is that it is a bit of a ridiculous move.

"It is no problem for me – but some older people were saying before the pub reopened that they did not have cards so they would not be able to go in.

"I heard of a family going for a grandfather's party and he didn't have a card so the people he was with had to sort out payment."

Parish council chairwoman Elizabeth Aldous, 72, welcomed the refurbished pub, which dates back to the 16th century. But she said there was concern that the cardonly payment system may result in people drinking more.

She said: "One mother did comment on social media that it might tempt young people going out with £20 in their pocket and then spending far more on their cards."

But retired solicitor Tim McNeill, 69, of Sudbury, Suffolk, dining with his wife Kathleen, 68, said: "I use cards everywhere these days, so it is no inconvenience. In fact, I prefer using cards to cash."

Retired publisher Anne Ryland, 78, of Ipswich, said: "It is not a problem at all. I would have used a card to pay for lunch anyway."

Mr Keen, 49, added: "There are massive benefits in going cashless as it saves a lot of money.

"We do not actually have a till so people cannot pay us cash even if they want to, but there has been a positive reaction from customers.

"We have only had a handful of instances where people have found themselves unable to pay as they do not have a card with them."

Figures from UK Finance reveal that only 40 per cent of payments in the UK were made with cash in 2016, down from 62 per cent in 2006. The number is expected to fall to 21 per cent by 2026.

Scandinavian countries have been at the forefront of a cashless society a year or more, with a number of leading coffee houses in Sweden – including the market leader Espresso House – adopting a strict 'cash only' policy in 2017.

Brits in a froth as Starbucks pays just £4.5m tax on £162m profits

HIGH street coffee giant Starbucks was embroiled in a fresh tax row this week, amid new accusations it was not paying its fair share. The coffee chain's British-based business paid tax at a rate of just 2.8 per cent last year, it was claimed. Its UKbased European operation made a £162million profit and paid £4.5million in tax - but the UK corporation tax rate is 19 per cent.

But Starbucks Coffee Company (UK), which has four subsidiaries, said it had paid an effective rate of 25.3 per cent, equal to £13.7million. Critics say its mind-boggling business structure makes it almost impossible to work out if the correct amount of tax is being paid.

Tory MP Charlie Elphicke, a member of the Treasury select committee, said: "Shameless tax avoidance by big corporations leaves a bitter taste in the mouth.

"It's incredibly unfair on hardworking small business owners in high streets up and down the land who work tirelessly to make ends meet – and pay all their taxes."

Accounts to the end of October 2017, filed three months late, showed Starbucks' profits fell from £166million to £162million. The figure was boosted by a £114million dividend from a related company on which tax had already been paid. Filings for its main British business, Starbucks Coffee

Company (UK), showed a turnover of £372million but pre-tax profit was just £4.5million, which it blamed on "challenging" conditions and low consumer confidence. This part of the business paid £3.3million tax on the profits, effectively 73 per cent.

John O'Connell, chief executive of the TaxPayers' Alliance said: "Politicians need to stop waffling about tax evasion and simplify the law to make it easier to spot. The only way is radical reform."

Starbucks faced a huge backlash in 2012 after it paid just £8.6 million corporation tax in Britain over 14 years, despite racking up £3 billion in cumulative sales. As a result, it moved its European HQ from Amsterdam to London. Earlier this year Starbucks boss Howard Schultz defended the low tax payments, claiming it was "very hard to make money in the UK".

The gulf between profit and tax for the company's European arm – 3,000 stores in 40 countries – is partly explained by tax breaks from paying employees in shares and deductions on other expenses. A company spokesman said it met "all international tax standards and regulations", adding: "Starbucks' UK-headquartered businesses paid £13.7million of corporation tax in the year to October 2017, an effective tax rate of 25.3 per cent."

THE BRITISH WEEKLY, SAT. SEPTEMBER 22, 2018

Brits in LA

Meet a Member: Nancy Parry

Meet Nancy Parry from Detroit, who moved to LA 56 years ago to pursue an acting

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I was brought out here at age 12 because there was no work back east. (There's a longer, much juicier story about that, but I'll save it for my memoirs...)

What do you miss most from home?

The change of seasons! I love Autumn, and snow in Winter. Also, we had lots of maple products, and things like apple cider donuts in the Fall. Oh, please, I'm salivating... I also miss being able to go across the river to Canada (Windsor). SO beautiful. I loved it there.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? Published: 09/01/2018, 09/08/2018, 09/15/2018 and 09/22/2018.

Crazv! There were no residential sidewalks where we moved to (La Mirada). And people said, "Hi," on the street. Nothing like that in inner city Detroit. Yes - L.A. is a friendly place! Strangers do say "hi" and people hug a lot. When I come back from traveling, I can't believe how beautiful it is

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus _ Detroit?

The change of seasons. It's also way cleaner here. And more laid back than a big, bustling city like NYC or Detroit.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

My friend Amin is soon to be opening Pure Food Organic Kitchen, on Colorado Ave. - the Statement:

BEST falafel and healthy takeaway restaurant in Santa Monica. No better falafel ANYWHERE! Your mouth will thank you! And he's the sweetest guy in the world. Say hi for me!

What would you suggest to others who thinking about making the move here?

Bring money. Apartments are expensive. If you want an acting career, amass all of the credits AND film on yourself that you can before you come (or scripts, if you're a writer). Then you can hit the ground running. And bring sun block!

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

Re: taking action – "There are two ways to get to the top of an Oak tree. You can climb it, or sit on an acorn."

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment?

Google will point you in my direction (isn't EVERYONE up there???). I'm also on FB, Twitter and LinkedIn, and I have a blog site:

sexualharassment101. wordpress.com.

Right now, I'm in search of work while I prepare the remaining books that I've written to go up on Amazon. I usually work as a technical writer/ advertising copywriter/ journalist/copy editor/ desktop publisher, etc. But I'd be happy to take another acting job - I acted professionally for 14 years! Or sell one of my ten scripts and get started as a screenwriter! (One script was optioned, years ago,

'bring money' - Nancy Parry on moving to LA and some have placed in competitions, but no sales yet).

Otherwise, I've been a photographer, event planner, project coordinator, lecturer, crafter, secretary (oh, those survival jobs!), and DJ, among other things - I like to be diverse! A hard working, ambitious Capricorn. I currently have 8 e-books up on Amazon (fiction and non), with four more to come (I'm editing, formatting, etc.). My author's page is under Nance Hope Parr on Amazon. Lastly, in November please vote Yes on Proposition 10 (for rent control in California).

Thanks!

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: The financial problem that has been around for a few weeks now will still take a few days more to sort out. If you can let go of what the outcome and what you expect it to be the solution will manifest quicker in a positive way.

TAURUS: Lucky Jupiter opposite you in the sign of Scorpio will bring a situation that is unresolved to the surface. This is a long-standing situation and can be in any part of your life. Therefore it's best to deal with this in a calm and cool manner.

GEM INI: You will complete what has remained incomplete in your life in the next few days. You will be dealing with making decisions as Uranus in Taurus now will likely bring up memories of past people and events in some areas of life.

CAN CER: Be strong and all the hard work you put in recently will bear fruit this coming week. Jupiter is in your cousin sign of Scorpio and he will enhance several areas in your life that may need a little boost. Take time in nature.

LEO: Financial issues could hold you back from enjoying your life. Do not assume that it will be easy, but tackle what you can and stop worrying over what you cannot change.

VIRGO: As this coming month unfolds you will benefit from having both Mars and Venus near you. If you try to push for completion you may not get what you want done. Keep calm and be ready for last minute changes of plans.

LIBRA: Work-related plans may not go as planned, however there is a reason for everything under the sun. With this in mind go forward with an optimistic outlook and expect some positive outcomes in general. Happy Birthday!

SCORPIO: You are one of the most intuitive signs and so you need to listen to what your physical body is telling you. If you are feeling stressed or out of sorts (which is likely) listen and take action to repair it. You are ready for changes.

SAG ITTARIUS: We all deserve the finer things in life although it is not always possible to indulge yourself. This week ahead at least treat yourself as though it is. You will feel better overall for pampering yourself for a change.

CAPRICORN: You may be feeling downcast recently and some of you may be dealing with family situations. This is a time of reflection and it will pass in a few days. Stay away from others who can upset you more than you can handle.

AQU ARIUS: If you refuse to acknowledge something it does not mean it will disappear. It will probably not be as bad as you think. Instead take the bull by the horns and get going on sorting out the problem. Remember to reward a good turn as it will help you and them.

PISCES: If you don't keep up with the times they move on and that is not a good idea for you. You have the power this week to transform something in to a positive outcome for all. Look and acknowledge the good things in your life.

BRITS IN LA

Battling those beastly robocalls...

My phone has not stopped ringing recently. Nine times out of ten it is one of those horrid robocalls.

I am registered on the Do Not Call Registry (donotcall.gov) but that doesn't seem to help very much, as they can only try to stop legitimate businesses from contacting you. But they can't prevent the scam calls which seem to be drastically on the rise. This summer, it was mostly the 'IRS' threatening legal action and telling me that if I didn't pay immediately I would be arrested. I smelled a rat straightaway, especially as I had just filed and paid my taxes. I can imagine it could be quite believable and scary if you were fairly new to the USA, or you actually did owe a big chunk in back taxes.

Telemarketers definitely getting craftier and it doesn't help that the advances in technology have given them the capability to make millions of autodialed calls daily. They can mask their identity too, so it appears on the caller ID as the official number of whoever they are claiming to be! These tricksters once phoned me from my own number! This months top nuisance caller is claiming to be 'Apple Support' . So far I have let them go to voicemail even though it is very tempting to answer and give them a piece of my mind. The worst thing about these masquerade artists is that you can't block them as their real number is usually hidden

It got to the point where

I usually kept my phone on silent unless I was expecting a call. But it turns out that there are a few things you can do to combat these swindlers. Firstly, try not to answer as this then confirms that the line is active and in use. If you do, just make sure to never give out any personal information. When in doubt just hang up. And always use the company's website to find an official number if you need to call them back. One of our members recommended nomorobo. com. This is a paid service but apparently works very well. But do make sure to check with your provider first as I just found out that mine (AT&T) offers the free fraudulent call blocker 'Call Protector'. Also worth checking out is the free app 'Hiya' (hiya.

If you find yourself receiving a lot of spam text messages, you can forward the message to the number 7726 (spells SPAM on you dial pad). It won't block the number from texting you right away, but it will allow your carrier to look into where it came from and put eventually put an end to it.

I'm not sure that it will override the 'Presidential Alert' texts that FEMA (fema.gov/emergencytest-alert) are due to be testing out on us on October 3rd either. The small print on their website says theory a great idea as it will quickly notify us of national emergencies, but of course lots of people are speculating that Trump may get a bit trigger-happy. Which isn't that far fetched if his Twitter account is anything to go

"Users may opt out of receiving alerts in the imminent threat and AMBER categories but cannot opt out of receiving Presidential alerts."

Let us know if you have any tips, or if you have heard of any new scams we should be on the look out for. It is very easy to fall for them these days, so don't be too embarrassed if you do become a victim. Just make sure to report it, in the hope that you can help stop it happening to anyone else.

the beginning of the end

First peek at Coogan and Reilly as Stan and Ollie!

British comic Steve Steve Coogan has had what most would consider a hit or miss career... But after seeing the first trailer for Stan & Ollie, do Oscars beckon?

Oo-er!

The trailer for Stan & Ollie was unveiled earlier this week - and it offers a sneak peek at Coogan and Academy Award Nominee John C Reilly in their portrayal of the legendary "black and white" comic duo. The film is directed by John S Baird, best known for his 2013 Irvine Welsh adaptation Filth, and written by Bafta-winner Jeff Pope.

It reunites Pope with Coogan for the first time since they co-wrote the Oscar-nominated screenplay for 2013's Philomena.

Set for release in January next year, the biopic follows Stan Laurel (Coogan) and Oliver Hardy (Reilly) as they embark on a tour of Britain during the later stages of their career.

And I have to say, after watching it, the trailer definitely captures the magic of Laurel and for the pair as it was far less successful than they had anticipatedwith the comic legends being forced to confront some of their oldest gripes with each other as they play at half-empty The story follows the venues.

> In the first trailer, we're given a brief look at their arrival in Britain, before it focuses on the eventual turmoil that follows.

Laurel and Hardy made more than 100 films together from 1921-1951, before abandoning the screen for the stage, touring music halls around Britain Ireland.

The film is set to debut at the closing night premiere of the London Film Festival next month, before a wide release on January 11 2019.

Meanwhile, it was confirmed earlier this year that Coogan will reprise his most famous comic creation, returning to the BBC in 2019 with This Time With Alan Partridge.

Poch fury at media 'disrespect'

Mauricio Pochettino accused iournalists of "disrespect" after Tottenham began their Champions League campaign with a 2-1 defeat at Inter Milan.

Christian Eriksen put Spurs on course to win in Italy but a late collapse saw Mauro Icardi and Matias Vecino goals give the hosts all three points on Tuesday at the San Siro.

And the Argentine manager took issue with being asked about leaving Kieran Trippier and Toby Alderweireld at home.

"Against Watford and against Liverpool, they were on the pitch," he

[It's] easy to talk about the players that aren't here. I think we need to talk about football. Because, you know I think you force me to say something that is not good.

"You disrespect the that showed players better qualities than the opponent."

World Cup semifinalists Trippier and Alderweireld were two of five changes that Pochettino made to his starting XI from Tottenham's Premier League defeat by Liverpool on Saturday.

While they stayed in England, the other three players omitted - Danny Rose, Harry Winks and Lucas Moura - were all introduced as substitutes at the San Siro.

Pochettino's changes did not prevent Spurs from slipping to a third consecutive loss for the first time since he took over in 2014.

Warming to his theme in the post-match media conference, Pochettino demanded: "Why disrespect the players that aren't on the pitch?

say, 'Gaffer, you were so, so rubbish in your selection of the starting XI'. But please don't disrespect the players who were playing, because it's my decision. Kieran Trippier, Toby Alderweireld - we have 25 players.

"And you believe that and sometimes you behave like you ask me with your question, that you can play only 11, and the other 13 or 14 players are rubbish.

"Sorry, but I am so disappointed because I am a person that respects you a lot and the players. When my decision is to play with an XI, you must respect my decision because I am the manager.

"I don't understand. Sorry. It is so painful to hear when some people are not here, and you judge in that way, and you kill players who give their

Roberto Firmino's injurytime winner gave Liverpool a dramatic victory over Paris St-Germain in their opening Champions League Group C game at Anfield on Tuesday night. Firmino was only fit enough to be on the bench after suffering an eye injury in Liverpool's victory at Tottenham on Saturday but he emerged on 72 minutes to secure a win that manager Jurgen Klopp may have thought was slipping away after Kylian Mbappe's late equaliser threatened to rescue a point for PSG.

Reds

thriller

Daniel Sturridge, Firmino's replacement in Liverpool's starting line-up, headed them in front from Andrew Robertson's cross on the half hour, James Milner adding a second from the spot six minutes Georginio later after Wijnaldum was fouled.

Thomas Meunier pulled one back for PSG before half-time but, with Brazil superstar Neymar and Mbappe subdued, Liverpool were in control, seeing a Mohamed Salah goal ruled out for a foul.

Klopp's side were stunned when Mbappe pounced in the area to beat Alisson with seven minutes left - but Firmino made it a perfect start to Liverpool's League Champions campaign by beating Alphonse Areola with a low, angled drive deep into stoppage time.

And Klopp told reporters after the final whistle that "loved" Firmino's celebration of his winner.

"To come off the bench after his injury at the weekend is incredible really," said Klopp.

Klopp also had words of praise for the injuryblighted Sturridge, who had probably his best game for the Reds since his heyday during the Brendan Rodgers era.

"Daniel played a super game," Klopp added.'

"I have never seen him as fit as he is in the moment. Then you can bring Bobby Firmino on and that helps a lot. I can't say enough good things about Bobby."

third last term.

They did, though, muster consolation goals via captain Vladimir Chesnakov's left-footed shot from 18 yards and Vyacheslav Sharpar's strike moments before the final whistle blew.

Elsewhere in the Europa League, Willian's early goal was enough for Chelsea to beat PAOK Salonika and maintain their winning start to the season.

The Brazilian returned to the side for Chelsea's first Europa League game since winning the competition in 2013.

And he sidefooted home from Ross Barkley's lay-off in front of a raucous sold-out crowd in their Group L opener.

Alvaro Morata and Pedro missed chances to make the win more emphatic as Chelsea dominated in Thessaloniki.

Chelsea's victory - their sixth in a row this season, after a Community Shield defeat against Manchester City - puts them on three points in Group L, level with BATE Borisov of Belarus who won 2-0 away at Hungarian side Vidi.

Rangers twice came from behind to earn a stunning draw with La Liga side Villarreal in their opening Europa League group game on Thursday.

Steven Gerrard's side - fourth seeds in their section - maintained their unbeaten record in nine European games this season thanks to Kyle Lafferty's 76thminute equaliser.

Moreno Gerard had restored Villarreal's lead just two minutes after Scott Arfield cancelled out Carlos Bacca's firstminute opener with Rangers' second shot on goal.

Rangers survived heavy pressure from a side who showed nine changes from their weekend domestic win and Arfield had a great chance to steal a shock win in the closing moments but was denied by goalkeeper Andres Fernandez.

The Ibrox side host Rapid Vienna in their next Group G outing, with the Austrians having beaten Spartak Moscow 2-0 at home in their opener.

A wasterful Celtic had Leigh Griffiths to thank after he headed in with three minutes remaining against Rosenborg to give the Hoops their first European group stage win in 11 games.

Brendan Rodgers' hosts were blunt for much of this Europa League contest, with Odsonne Edouard, Tom Rogic and Mikey Johnston all spurning chances.

UEFA Champions Lge

But substitute Griffiths was deadly, racing into the box and nodding home.

It was the Scottish champions' first group triumph since beating Astra of Romania in 2014.

And it was Celtic's second win over Rosenborg this season, having beaten them at Celtic Park in the Champions League qualifiers before being knocked out by AEK Athens.

Celtic now travel to face RB Salzburg, who beat RB Leipzig 3-2 on Thursday, in their second Group B fixture.

City mauled by Lyon

Manchester City's League Champions campaign got off to a poor start as the Premier League champions suffered a surprise 2-1 defeat against Lyon at the Etihad Stadium on Wednesday night.

Maxwel Cornet drilled the French visitors ahead after Fabian Delph failed to cut out Nabil Fekir's cross.

City, who are favourites to win this season's competition with some bookmakers, fell further behind before half-time -Lyon captain Fekir finding the net from 25 yards after Fernandinho gave the ball away inside his own half.

Bernardo Silva gave the hosts a lifeline after being picked out by Leroy Sane, but City - lacklustre for long spells - were unable the season.

With Group F rivals Shakhtar Donetsk and Hoffenheim drawing 2-2 in Ukraine earlier on Wednesday, City are bottom of the group.

They also became the first English side in Champions League history to lose four consecutive matches in the competition having also been beaten in last season's last-16 second leg by Basel, as well as both legs of the quarter-final against Liverpool.

defender French Aymeric Laporte headed against the outside of the post from Ilkay Gundogan's cross, while Gabriel Jesus and Sergio Aguero were denied by excellent saves from Anthony Lopes.

to avoid a first defeat of City, however, appeared to miss Pep Guardiola's from direction sidelines.

> The City boss watched side's wretched his performance from a seat high in the stand as he served a touchline ban following his sending-off in last season's Champions League quarter-final defeat against Liverpool.

> Assistant coach Mikel Arteta took over duties in the dugout but the former Arsenal midfielder oversaw a disjointed performance which was as flat as the atmosphere inside the ground.

> Silva's goal, Sane had glided past ex-Manchester United defender Rafael midway in the second half, reinvigorated his side.

However, City now find

Europa League: Aubameyang double, Chelsea and Celtic win

Pierre-Emerick Aubameyang scored twice as Arsenal opened their Europa League Group E campaign with a comfortable win over Ukrainian side Vorskla Poltava on Thursday.

Until Aubameyang's opening goal it had been a laboured performance from the Gunners, who had struggled to break well-drilled through opponents.

However, the Gabon striker - the club's record £56m signing last January - changed the dynamics of the contest by steering Alex Iwobi's pass into the bottom left corner after the visitors overcommitted in attack. Itwasonly Aubameyang's sixth touch of the game, and Arsenal's first shot on target but it allowed them to cut loose after the break.
