Putin hitman unmasked

- Salisbury poisoner is top spy honored by Russian leader
- Russia "sought to obfuscate through desperate fabrication"

ONE of the smirking assassins involved in the Salisbury nerve agent attack has been identified as a high-ranking Russian secret service agent.

The man, who used the alias Ruslan Boshirov to travel to the UK, was unmasked as Colonel Anatoliy Vladimirovich Chepiga, an officer who has received Russia's highest military award. According to an investigation, Chepiga is a 39-year-old who served in Chechnya and Ukraine and was made a Hero of the Russian Federation by order of President Vladimir Putin in 2014 during a secret ceremony.

The revelation emerged as Prime Minister Theresa May addressed world leaders at the United Nations Security Council in New York. Mrs May said Russia had "sought to obfuscate through desperate fabrication".

She told the gathering: have appropriate action, with our allies, and we will continue to take the necessary steps to ensure our collective security.'

The Government has accused Chepiga and Alexander Petrov, also believed to be an alias, poisoning former Russian spv Sergei Skripal and his daughter Yulia with novichok in March. Detective Sergeant Nick Bailey was also hospitalised after coming into contact with the substance at Mr Skripal's home. Local woman Dawn Sturgess, 44, died in June after being exposed to the same weapons-grade nerve agent after it was apparently discarded.

'ordinary civilians'

The Crown Prosecution Service has charged both men for the attempted murder of the Skripals, while an European Arrest Warrant and Interpol red notice have been issued for their detention.

Russia has always denied the allegations and claims the suspects are "ordinary civilians".

investigative agency iournalist Bellingcat has conclusive evidence that Boshirov is actually an officer in the GRU, Russia's military intelligence service. They trawled through old military yearbooks to find a likeness for the Bellingcattoldhowthey analysed a photograph of Far Eastern Military Command Academy graduates who received the Hero of Russia Award. Investigators identified Borishov on the far right of the group, then found his identity through a database listed on a military union website. Bellingcat said it believed that "Boshirov" was in fact Chepiga after obtaining documents relating to his passport. It said: "The passport file contained a photograph dated approximately in 2003, when this passport was obtained - that strongly resembled a younger "Boshirov" as seen in passport photos released by the UK police, with an even stronger resemblance to cover identity passport photo published in our previous publication on the Skripal suspects."

A passport application form listed a former residence matched up with the man they identified on the database. It also listed his place of birth as "Nikolaevka", further linking Chepiga to the Hero of the Russian Federation with the same

military career

Chepiga born was on April 5, 1978 and graduated into military following a stint at one of Russia's elite training grounds, the report said. His military career reportedly took him into the second Chechen war as part of a unit that played a "key role" in the conflict. The GRU agent is reportedly married with one child.

Chepiga and Petrov flew to the UK in March, travelling to east London and checking into a hotel where traces of novichok were found. They visited Salisbury twice by train and were caught on CCTV at a petrol station a short walk from Mr Skripal's home. Earlier month they appeared on Russian-state television and claimed they were tourists in Salisbury to visit its cathedral.

immediately comment on the development and the Home Office said it could neither confirm nor deny the reporting. But Defence Secretary Gavin Williamson briefly appeared to confirm the story, posting and then deleting a tweet that said: "The true identity of one of the Salisbury suspects has been revealed to be a Russian Colonel. I want to thank all the people who are working so tirelessly on this case."

Labour opens door to second EU referendum

■ 'All options on the table' insists leadership ahead of party conference vote

THE LABOUR Party has opened the door to a second EU referendum by approving a motion for delegates at the upcoming party conference pledging to keep "all options on the table" on Brexit.

The motion says: "If we cannot get a general election, Labour must support all options remaining on the table, including campaigning for a public vote."

It adds: "If the government is confident in negotiating a deal that working people, our economy and communities will benefit from, they should not be afraid to put that deal to the public."

And Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn said he would back a second referendum if Labour members voted for it at this week's conference, signalling a major shift in party policy.

Speaking to the BBC's Andrew Marr as the party faithful gathered in Liverpool, Corbyn said he would be "bound by the democracy of our party" were members to vote in favour of a second referendum, although he added he would wait and see what wording would be put in front of the delegates after a meeting on Sunday evening.

A debate on a second 'People's vote' was called for by over 100 constituencies.

According to a YouGov survey of 1,054 Labour members, commissioned by the People's Vote campaign, 86% wanted a final, public say on the outcome of Brexit negotiations, against 8% who opposed it.

The Sunday Telegraph says Corbyn's comments "pave the way for a significant change in Labour's Brexit policy", and came just two days after Theresa May urged the Labour leader to clarify his position on Brexit, "amid concern that a Labour U-turn could jeopardize any deal reached with Brussels and prevent the UK from leaving the EU".

The party has never formally rejected the option of a further vote but both Corbyn and his deputy, Tom Watson, have indicated they would prefer it to be resolved by a general election.

A YouGov poll conducted last week found the party could win enough extra votes to bring it to the brink of general election victory by backing a second referendum.

Thousands marched in Liverpool over the weekend calling for a second vote on the final terms of the Brexit deal, which has shown steadily growing public support in recent months as the government's negotiating strategy has floundered.

The Labour leadership has been under intense pressure to shift its position on a second referendum, led by a cabal of Remainsupporting MPs and, crucially, a growing number of unions.

Speaking to the BBC on Monday, Len McLusky, the leader of Britain's biggest union Unite which is also Labour's leading donor, threw his support behind a second referendum, but said the option of staying in the EU should not be on the ballot, and rather the public should choose between whether to endorse May's final deal or opt for no deal at all.

RED TIDE? polls this week indicate that support for a second referendum could give the Labour Party victory at the next General Election

Scottish teens call time on drinking

Teenage drinking has declined dramatically in Scotland over the past decade with one of the largest falls in alcohol consumption in Europe.

British teenagers were once among the biggest drinkers but are now among the most abstinent.

England had the largest decline in Europe, but there were similar improvements in Scotland and Wales, according to the World Health Organisation (WHO).

Only Malta had a higher percentage of teenage drinkers than England in 2002 and it remained the worst performing country in 2014.

Since 2002, the proportion of 15-yearolds having alcohol every week has fallen from 41 per cent to 11 per cent for girls and from 41 per cent to 14 per cent among boys. Nearly half (46.7 per cent) of English teenagers drank every week in 2002 but by 2014 this had fallen to less than a tenth.

The WHO report identifies a number of possible reasons including changes in household income, marketing and prevention approaches and shifts in adult norms and teenage culture. It praises "health-oriented pricing policies" such as increases in taxation or minimum pricing, saying that they were effective in cutting consumption among lowincome groups including teenagers who tend to have limited budgets.

The UK Department of Health said that it would consider introducing minimum unit pricing in England after the policy was successfully implemented in Scotland in May.

Problem drinking is more prevalent among low-income teenagers in Scotland while in England it affects more affluent teenagers.

The report said: "The largest declines in prevalence among boys were found in England, Wales and Denmark. For girls, the largest declines were seen in England, Scotland and Denmark.

"Declines in weekly drinking were observed among both genders and the gender gap narrowed over time in a number of countries and regions, but in most the decrease in weekly alcohol use was greater among boys, particularly in the Netherlands, Switzerland, Ukraine and Wales.

Concerns grow as Benny the Beluga goes upriver

Conservationists were on standby on Thursday to assist a beluga whale after it was spotted swimming in the River Thames for a third day.

The whale, nicknamed Benny, was first spotted in the Thames estuary near Gravesend, Kent, on Tuesday, "swimming strongly and feeding normally".

On Thursday, it was sighted slightly upstream of its previous location.

Experts said the whale appeared to be a sub adult - an older juvenile but not a fully formed adult.

Medics from the British Divers Marine Life Rescue (BDMLR) said it had been exhibiting foraging behaviour, likely feeding, as well as surfacing and diving consistent with a healthy animal.

The BDMLR and the Port of London Authority (PLA) have urged river users, including shipping companies, to steer clear of the beluga whale, which is thousands of miles away from its Arctic habitat.

BDMLR director Gavin Parsons said: "While this whale is visiting, both organisations will continue to monitor and plan for possible assistance scenarios and then will work cooperatively to ensure the best outcome."

The conservation charity said there were currently no concerns for its well-being and it would respond to any further sightings, but did not have enough volunteers to monitor the whale 24 hours a day.

Julia Cable, national co-ordinator, said: "It's possible that it lost its way after a navigational error, that it has taken a wrong turn."

Beluga whales can grow up to 20ft in length and are usually at home in the icy waters around Greenland, Svalbard or the Barents Sea.

Beluga whales were last spotted in the UK three years ago off the coast of Northumberland and Northern Ireland, but sightings were "extremely rare", the British Divers Marine Life Rescue said.

In 2006, an 18ft (5m) northern bottlenosed whale died after becoming stranded in the Thames.

Meghan makes it look easy on first solo engagement

THE Duchess of Sussex looked relaxed on her first solo royal engagement Sunday night as she sparkled in a £2,500 black Givenchy dress.

Just over four months after becoming a member of the Royal Family, Meghan passed a royal milestone when she attended the opening of a major art exhibition. And she even exchanged a Maori nose-rubbing greeting with a delegation of guests from New Zealand.

Her sister-in-law, the Duchess of Cambridge, waited for almost six months after her wedding before she went to a function without Prince William accompanying her. She stepped in for Prince Charles at a fundraising dinner in October 2011. But Meghan, 37, who married in May, is a more experienced performer on the world stage than Kate. She joined guests at the opening of an exhibition of works from the Oceania region, at the Royal Academy of Arts in London. The exhibition celebrates the art of Melanesia, Micronesia and Polynesia, and the Pacific region, including New Guinea, Easter Island, Hawaii and New Zealand.

Meghan, who is due to tour Australia, New Zealand and the Pacific nations of Fiji and Tonga next month with the Duke of Sussex, was shown art from all four countries on the visit. The exhibition marks the 250th anniversary of the Royal Academy, which was founded in 1768, the year Captain James Cook set out on his first Endeavour expedition.

UK's first air-cleaning bus launches

■ Diesel-powered prototype will filter polluted air as it drives around Southampton

The UK's first air-filtering bus has been launched as part of a nationwide campaign to combat harmful pollution.

Unveiled in the southern coastal city of Southampton on Thursday, the "Bluestar" bus features a filtration system installed on the roof that will filter and clean the air as the vehicle drives along its route, The Guardian reported. The bus is being pioneered by Go-Ahead, one of Britain's largest public transport operators.

The firm's chief executive, David Brown, said that if the trial is successful, the idea could be rolled out to Go Ahead's entire fleet of more than 5,000 buses up and down the country.

"We are going a step further in the potential for our buses to actively clean the environment," he added. "It's a huge development in our environmental leadership and we are also proud to be pioneering the prototype in the UK."

The success of the scheme will be measured by weighing the filter on the bus before and after the completion of the trial, to see how many particles of pollution have been trapped.

The filter's manufacturer, Pall Aerospace, said the device is designed to remove 99.5% of particles, the news site adds.

BBC bosses wiped old Caine show 'to save a few quid'

SIR Michael Caine has revealed that the BBC no longer has a recording of one of his earliest TV outings that helped launch his career.

The actor (above) recently tried to get hold of a copy of the 1961 television play, The Compartment, but was told the corporation had taped over it to save money. The 85-year-old Oscar-winner who has starred in more than 100 films including Zulu, Alfie and The Italian Job is not best pleased with the BBC's penny-pinching Caine said the missing film, co-starring Frank Finlay, was a "great little drama" about a suspicious-looking young man sharing a train compartment with a nervous businessman. It was written by playwright Johnny Speight who went on to create the classic sitcom Till Death Do Us Part. The Compartment was lauded by critics and Caine credits the play with raising his profile in the industry.

But he told this week's Radio Times that not everyone was a fan. "You know what the BBC did with it?" he said. "I was writing an autobiography and rang them and said that I'd forgotten about it and could they let me have a tape of it. "I was told, 'We don't have one. We don't have anything on the show'. They were going through an economy drive and had re-used the tape. I just thought, 'Bloody hell - taping over a great little drama just to save a few quid'."

Beckham swerves speeding charge

"Mr Loophole" blames tardy post office for failing to deliver charge notice in time

David Beckham will not be prosecuted over a speeding charge, a district judge has ruled.

Celebrity lawyer Nick Freeman, known as Mr Loophole, successfully fought the allegation for him on a technicality.

The former England football captain, 43, was accused of driving a loaned Bentley at 59mph in a 40mph zone on the A40 in Paddington on 23 Ianuary.

However, Mr Freeman had argued a speeding notice arrived one day too late.

Beckham, who did not attend the hearing at Wimbledon Magistrates' Court on Thursday, had previously entered a not guilty plea.

Mr Freeman said "very Beckham was relieved with the verdict".

The lawyer previously helped Beckham overturn an eight-month driving ban in 1999, after successfully arguing he was trying to escape a paparazzi photographer.

Mr Freeman suggested the more recent matter could have been a case of poor postal service, citing a subsequent letter sent first class by Bentley to Scotland Yard which took eight days to arrive.

He "Unfortunately and sadly some post attracts problems. There might be nobody at fault here."

District judge Barbara Barnes said a Notice of Intended Prosecution (NIP) was sent on 2 February and should have arrived at Bentley Motors Ltd, the registered keepers of the vehicle, by 6 February.

However, she was satisfied on the evidence heard it did not in fact arrive until 7 February - one day outside the statutory 14-day window.

Summing up, she said the law allowed for the "vagaries" of the postal

She said: "What I find is the fact it did not arrive in the post room of Bentley Motors Ltd until 7 February and therefore was one day outside the legal limit.

The defendant in this case cannot be convicted." Solicitor Nick Freeman has been dubbed Mr Loophole for his success at using legal technicalities to get celebrity clients acquitted of driving offences.

His clients have in the past included cricketer Andrew Flintoff. explorer Sir Ranulph Fiennes and golfer Colin Montgomerie.

In 1999 Mr Freeman defended successfully former Manchester United manager Sir Alex Ferguson, who had been accused of driving down the hard shoulder of a motorway.

His defence? Sir Alex was simply looking for a toilet because he had an upset stomach.

How happy is your town?

■ New poll reveals most cheerful - and saddest - places in Britain

THE happiest place to live in Britain has been identified as a rural district fewer than 50 miles from London.

An area of north-east Hampshire which is home to around 95,000 people scored 8.35 out of 10 compared to a national average of 7.7. Conservative-run The borough of Rushmoor includes Aldershot. famed for its Army connections, and Farnborough, home to an international air show

One reason why Rushmoor may be the happiest place in the UK could be because of its life expectancy – even though it does not top the charts.

Baby girls born today in the Rushmoor area can expect to live until they are 83.4 years old, compared with England's average of 83.1. Baby boys there are expected to reach 80.2 years old – above the 79.5 average for England. In comparison, Fenland scored worse than the average for England in both life expectancy charts. Tributes flow for John Cunliffe, creator of Pat the Postman, dead at 85

Cunliffe's agency confirmed the news after an obituary for the author, who also created the ragdoll characters from ITV series Rosie and Jim, appeared in the Ilkley Gazette.

"John left his Ilkley home in a deluge of rain on Thursday, 20 September, never to return," the tribute read. "Even the skies wept for John the gifted creator of Postman Pat, Rosie and Jim and author of many earlier published collections of poetry and picture storybooks for children."

'generations of children'

"John's last poetry collection, significantly entitled Dare You Go, has now come to fruition for John has dared to go and he has gone."

Cunliffe was also the author of about 190 books for young children, including five volumes of poetry, as well as picture books and collections of stories.

Cunliffe created Postman Pat in 1981 and it went on to become a cultural phenomenon, with almost 200 episodes made, a spin-off series and a film in 2014.

His famous creations

"were loved by generations of children, who grew up on the tales of Pat and his black and white cat, Jess, in the fictional village of Greendale", said Sky News

Cunliffe wrote the show on an old Triumph typewriter in the back bedroom of a house in Kendal and teamed up with the animator Ivor Wood, who had worked on the Magic Roundabout, The Herbs, The Wombles and Paddington Bear.

He also appeared in Rosie and Jim as the rag doll pair's narrowboat driver, who they referred to as "Fizzgog".

Director of BBC Children's Alice Webb said Postman Pat's enduring popularity speaks to the genuine charm and warmth that John imbued in the characters that populate Greendale.

"It's a world you'd like to be part of - a community that cares, is full of heart and full of fun - and that is a lovely thing to show audiences, both young and old."

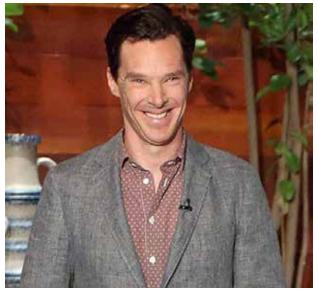

"John created a real and relatable world that will continue to entertain our audience for a long time to come and I count myself lucky to be one of millions of children whose childhoods were enriched by John's creations."

Robbery hero? I just got in the way says humble Cumberbatch

ACTOR Benedict Cumberbatch has told how he did not think twice about intervening to save a delivery man from being mugged.

He even asked his Uber driver to block the road and stop traffic so other people would witness the incident in London last year. But he did not think about how events could have escalated with "knives or acid or any of the other things that can be part of that situation".

Cumberbatch told how the victim "looked like he was about to fight for his life". But he refused to take credit for stopping 100-year-old vows to wed toyboy 'before it's too late'

A "TOYBOY" aged 74 plans to tie the knot with the 100-year-old partner he met dancing "before it's too late".

Young at heart Malcolm Yates has been with Norah Witkiss for more than three decades. Until this year they had never thought of getting married but have now decided to become man and wife before time gets the better of them. Former school cook Norah, who turns 101 in December, was whisked off her feet by Malcolm when they started tripping the light fantastic together. The widow, who has been married twice before, said: "Malcolm and I have been together for 30-odd years and we just thought we'd get married now before it's too late.

"I was worried about me getting older and I didn't want to lose the opportunity. I'm sure we'll be happy."

Norah has already got her dress and hat sorted for the ceremony and the couple's wedding rings are on order. They will be joined by close friends and family for a meal after they take their vows in a ceremony at The Beaches hotel in their home town of Prestatyn, North Wales, on October 16.

Former bus driver Malcolm recalled how they met at modern sequence dance classes in the nearby village of Meliden. He said. "I couldn't dance but Norah was very good at it. She more or less taught me and helped to bring me on.

"We went travelling a lot and would dance on holidays to Torquay.

"We liked the Cha-chacha the best. We're always out and about together."

Norah, who marked her centenary last year with a birthday party and a card from the Queen, added: "I don't dance any more because I can't turn and I'm afraid of falling over."

Manners on the Tube not to Nigella's taste....

NIGELLA LAWSON is not impressed by the kindness of strangers on the underground. The celebrity cook says it's no relief being offered a seat on an overpacked Tube when it's a result of folks confusing your natural curves for her being with

"I have had people offer me a seat thinking I am pregnant when I am not," complained the domestic goddess. Her rail rage doesn't end there, she also hates people using their mobile phones on public transport. "What annoys me is people that watch videos on their phones behind you and you can hear that noise coming out. I am very bad at other people's noise pollution," the 58-year-old told an audience at the Leicester Square Theatre. "I do a lot of turning around (glaring)... I have many talents and moaning is one of them. I could carry on for a very long time."

Meet a Member: Paul Walmsley

Meet Paul Walmsley from I ended up living at Blackburn, Lancashire who moved to LA 22 years ago to coach soccer....for six weeks!

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I was a full-time Financial Advisor and a part time soccer coach in England. My agent secured a six week soccer coaching opportunity at the Squaw Valley Soccer Camp in Lake Tahoe. One of the kids on the camp told his club about me and they invited me down to Los Angeles when the camp ended.

a big fancy house in Rolling Hills. Not IN the big fancy house, but in a stable at the bottom of its garden. For "free" accommodation I had to feed the horses twice a day and scoop up the dog poop in the garden. But here's the key, I did what I had to in order to pursue my dream coaching soccer in the USA. I went on to build my own soccer business with a turnover of $1million a year. I sold that in 2006 and became a college soccer coach for 5 years.

I miss the banter, the humor, the walking into your local knowing who will already be there and where they'll be sat or stood. I miss the fact that no matter how tough of a day you may have had, within a couple of minutes you're either laughing at something one of your friends have done, or you're sharing what you did today and your friends are laughing at

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? What do you miss most I remember looking out aircraft on my night flight down from Reno and just being in awe of how big the city was with all the lights and all the lines of cars. I thought it was going to be just an urban jungle. But now I love the diversity of the city, being able to hike in the wilds only 20 minutes away or be at the beach in 30 minutes.

of the window of the

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Lancashire?

Back home nobody cares what you do or where you live. Here the lifestyle is much faster and more stressful. I do get a kick out of seeing tourists visit here and then I realize that I actually live here.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us? My local pub is The 3rd Stop opposite Cedars Sinai. I remember walking in there for happy hour and it was full of doctors and nurses in their scrubs. I realized there and then that I was probably the dumbest person in the room! But the food is good and the staff think I am called "Stella." -As soon as I walk in they say, "Hi....Stella?" then pour my favorite

PAUL WALMSLEY: "in awe of how big the city was"

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here? You need to get your finances in order or pretty soon you'll be too stressed about money to enjoy living here.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

When I was a Cadet Pilot in the RAF I learned that the aircraft sat on the pan outside the crew room waiting to be flown had more stresses on their airframe than when they were up in the air flying. So that's how I live my life, I'm always on the go and flying my airframe as hard and fast as I can.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment?

My team and I at Bank of America Merrill Lynch help clients create and manage their own 'financial game plans'. My goal as a financial advisor is to understand as much as I can about a client's situation so that I can align their goals with appropriate investments to help meet them. Eric Idle to appear live in Culver City former Python Eric Idle will appear at the Frost Auditorium at Culver City High School on Thursday, October 11th in conversation with Bob Saget, discussing his memoir, Always Look on the Bright of Side Life: Sortabiography.

Idle shot to fame in the late 1960s as part of the iconic British comedy troupe, appearing in all 45 episodes of the ground-breaking show, which ran from 1969 to 1974 on the BBC. Idle also appeared in the Monty Python and the Holy Grail (1975), Life of Brian (1979) and The

Actor, comic, author and Meaning of Life (1983), as well as creating, writing and directin The Rutles, the world's firstmockumentary, ever and well as the Tony Award-winning musical Spamalot (2005) In book Idle reflects on the meaning of his own life on a journey from his childhood in an austere boarding school through his successful comedy, career in television, theater, and film. Coming of age as a writer and comedian during the Sixties and Seventies, Eric stumbled into the crossroads of the cultural revolution and found himself rubbing shoulders with the likes

BRITS IN LA

The answer my friend, is blowing in the wind...

After after 19 years of living here it recently dawned on me that most folks in these parts don't possess a washing line.

What? I hear you ask, well it's true, most households or apartment units have a washer/dryer. That got me delving into asking why people wouldn't be more ecofriendlier here. I mean why wouldn't the place that sells more electric cars per capita air dry their clothes? I'd heard through the grapevine that it was in fact illegal to line dry your clothes al fresco.

So I decided to investigate... the first thing I found was a 20009 LA Times article titled: "Is Your Clothes Line Legal?" in which Alexandria Abramian Mott examines a move to bring air drying back in vogue, revealing that that tumble drying accounts for at least 6% of all electricity usage. And real estate broker Margaret Goedeke of Newport Crest, a cluster of beachfront condominiums where open garage doors, flag poles and clothing lines are all prohibited, chimes in: "We're not even allowed to hang a towel outside...Once in a while we'll dry something on our deck, but we hide it. We're very controlled."

These kinds of rules drove British film producer Steven Lake to make "Drying for Freedom," a documentary on line-drying in the U.S. that he said is in preproduction.

"The matter of wasted energy is something that draws my attention to this topic," he said. "But mostly it's the fact that in America, which to the rest of the world is considered to be the land of the free, citizens are banned from something as simple and silly as hanging out their washing."

If you own a house with a yard you can do pretty often what you want, unless you belong to a gated community with strict homeowners association guidelines. Condos and apartment buildings are much toucher and routinely ban air drying, forcing some renters and condo owners to post tips about undercover linedrying on websites such as laundrylist. org. A deeper dive led me to discover Project Laundry List, a grass roots organization whose mission statement is 'making air-drying and cold-water washing laundry acceptable and desirable as simple and effective ways to save energy'. Believe it or not, in 2014 a resolution was passed at the California State Grange convention in San Luis Obispo to legalize air drying laundry across the state. On the basis that, "The clothesline is an easy and cost effective way to bring down energy use and lower the carbon footprint of the individual household".

THE HUMBLE CLOTHESLINE: a common sight in Europe; here? not so much

The result was that Governor Jerry Brown signed a bill back in 2015 that gave Californians the right to hang their laundry on clothelines. On Jan. 1, 2016, California became a "right to dry" state.

Which brings me back to the real head-scratcher: why do so many people still prefer the smell of a febrile drying sheet to the scent of the fresh and clean great outdoors? Could it be that LA still has one of the biggest air pollution problems? Maybe that clothes or towels especially tend to stiffen more here in California? Perhaps its the critters like squirrels, raccoons are likely to steal or chew that nice new Gucci t-shirt of yours.

A new search sent me to quora.com where I found the following question..."Why do Americans use clothes dryers to dry their clothes, even in the middle of summer?"

Michael Sidney Timpson, Composer, Music Professor answered "I may be one of the best people this question, because I have a lot of experience in this. As someone who has lived in multiple countries in east Asia and am originally from the US, I can tell you there are three appliances that Americans really want: 1) Clothes Dryer, 2) Dishwasher and 3) Garbage Disposal (#4 may be Oven since that is not everywhere too.) Why?

BiLA:

It's a convenience that saves time. I remember one of my Asian friends asking me, "I don't understand why you need a clothes dryer? I can just hang up my clothes and they are druy overnight..." and my response is, "Really? Overnight? If I put them in the dryer they are dry in less than ONE HOUR!" Also, in fact, NOT everything is dry the $next\ day, some\ items\ seem$ to take almost two days to dry."

In the end it comes down to convenience. Because Americans tend to work more hours per week than the rest of the civilized world, they don't want the hassle of having to hang clothes, wait for them to dry and then iron them all afterwards. But speaking personally I do miss the feel and smell of the "Lenor" fabric softener and air-dried sheets blowing free in the wind. Therefore I did my duty this week, went to Target and bought my clothes line, (avec wooden pegs) between pounding the keyboard for this article I am enjoying watching my sheets blowing in the wind, evoking nostalgia for my happy childhood, running through the neighborhood, watching everyone's sheets (and often underwear too) blowing in the wind...

Cheers! Craig

DOMESTIC BLISS: Daniel Craig, Rachel Weisz and their new daughter were spotted out and about in New York this week

And Baby Makes Three: Craig, Weisz and new daughter spotted in Big Apple

British actress Rachel Weisz and Daniel Craig were spotted out with their daughter for the first time earlier this week in New York.

The 48-year-old star welcomed her baby girl at the start of September – and Rachel and hubby Daniel have kept a low profile since then.

The famous couple are said to be "very happy" with the latest addition to their family with actresses close friends revealing she is "simply gushing" over the birth. In a recent interview Weisz said, "Daniel and I are so happy. We're going to have a little human. We can't wait to meet him or her. It's all such a mystery."

A source previously said: "It's not surprising that they want a child together. They are both smart and secure and having a child is a natural next step even though both have children from other relationships.

"They admire each other and want to keep their marriage alive and exciting. She is independent and their marriage is solid. Having a child is a natural desire. They have been married long enough to know each other which is a mature step to be sure nothing goes wrong."

The birth of Rachel and Daniel's little girl marks the second child for them both. The Oscar winning actress, who skipped out on attending the 2018 Venice Film Festival where her upcoming film The Favourite was Fashion Designer Victoria Beckham was spotted looking chic earlier this week wearing a plunging white shirt at Paris Fashion Week.

The former Spice Girl looked seriously "posh" as she stepped out in the French capital, contrasting the shirt with a black trouser suit. Victoria is in town to catch the latest round of catwalk shows following her own debut at London Fashion Week earlier this month.

Although she's been a fashion designer for a decade, Victoria has only ever shown her collections in New York until this year.

premiering, has 11-yearold son Henry with director Darren Aronofsy. And Bond star Craig himself has 25-year-old daughter Ella Craig with actress Fiona Loudon.

Rachel started dating Daniel in December 2010 and the loved-up couple tied the knot in New York City in June 2011.

The brunette beauty previously admitted that she and Daniel have made a conscious effort to keep their romance "private".

Rachel explained that she'd never had an ambition to get married before she met Daniel.

Of their relationship, she said: "It's very personal, it's very private. I don't think mine's particularly exceptional apart from that we're both in the public eye.

"But I never thought I would get married. It was not an ambition of mine. It was the opposite."

Congratulations you two!

Mou vs Pog: looks like they're stuck with each other...for now

José Mourinho and Paul Pogba will be forced to keep working together with Manchester United determined that both should stay at the club. The pair's escalating feud reached new heights when footage of an argument at training on Wednesday went viral on the internet.

Ed Woodward, the United executive vice-chairman, has no plans to get rid of the club's manager nor their record signing, despite their frosty exchange at Carrington.

Sky Sports cameras captured the conversation between Mourinho and Pogba, and by press time the original clip, which is two minutes long, had been viewed almost ten million times.

In the footage,

Mourinho confronts Pogba about a video he posted on Instagram of himself, Andreas Pereira and Luke Shaw laughing in the stands at Old Trafford during United's Carabao Cup defeat by Derby County on Tuesday.

Pogba, who was rested for the match, shot the footage during the game but it did not go online until 10.30pm. It is believed that the delay owed to the fact that the France midfielder's phone was not connected to the Wi-Fi and 4G reception at the ground is bad on match days because tens of thousands of people are using their phones there. It was only when the crowds had left that Pogba's video went live.

Mourinho brought the Instagram post to Pogba's attention at the start of training, when the Sky cameras were present. United did not comment but the video appears to show that after Pogba had shaken the hands of the assistant manager Michael Carrick and John Allen, one of the club's communications officers, Mourinho went to quiz him about why he had posted the video after the defeat.

Despite the surprise defeat by Derby, it is understood that Mourinho retains the support of Woodward, who has no objections to the decision to strip Pogba of the vice-captaincy. Only if United's form deteriorates drastically over the next few months will he consider sacking Mourinho, who has 18 months left on his £15 million-a-vear contract.

It is understood that Pogba has serious concerns about some of Mourinho's manmanagement methods and would be open to a move to Barcelona. The clubs reportedly spoke in the summer but Barcelona were told that he was not for sale.

Despite Woodward's backing, the manager's worsening relationship with Pogba is causing concern in the United boardroom. senior figures feel it was unedifying for the club to have footage of a trainingground spat seen around the world. Members of the hierarchy want Woodward to organise a meeting between Pogba and Mourinho so they can settle their differences.

Joshua: Wilder needs the payday

BOXING: ANTHONY JOSHUA is confident he will eventually fight Deontay Wilder because the American wants the "payday".

The WBA, IBF and WBO heavyweight champion retained his belts with a seventhround stoppage Alexander Povetkin at Wembley on Saturday night.

Joshua, 28, posted a poll on Twitter on Monday asking fans to vote for his next opponent.

Wilder faces Tyson Fury on December 1 but both Joshua and his promoter Eddie Hearn want the American to agree to an April 13 date at Wembley before he faces the selfstyled Gypsy King.

And Joshua believes Wilder will step up at some point even if their fi ght is not in April.

"It will happen sooner or later for sure, that fight will happen. We'll find out who the best is sooner or later," said Joshua.

"I don't think he wants to avoid me for too long because he's getting towards the end of his career.

"What age is he? Thirty-two? What has he got left? Two or three years? This payday is his

"I don't want to wait until December for him to win the Fury fight, have his rest and then start negotiating, because I'll start training for the fight in early January."

Hearn claimed they would be happy to agree terms for the fight "subject to Wilder beating Fury".

Hazard hailed as one of world's best

■ Belgian star the difference as Blues upset Reds at Anfield

Eden Hazard is "one of the best in the world", Chelsea assistant manager Gianfranco Zola said after the forward scored a stunning late winner against Liverpool in the Carabao Cup Wednesday night.

The Belgium international's finish into the far corner with five minutes remaining sealed victory as Chelsea came from behind to end Premier League leaders Liverpool's perfect start to the season and reach the fourth round.

Hazard was introduced as a substitute in the second half and although he was quiet for much of it, he burst into action by beating Alberto Moreno and smashing home.

"It's a fantastic goal. Not only the beauty of it but for the time he scored it," Zola said.

"Not only is Hazard one of the best in the Premier League - if not the best but he is one of the best in Europe and the world.

"In my opinion we haven't seen the best of him yet. He is remarkable."

The Blues had been the better side in the first half with striker Alvaro Morata somehow striking a shot across the goalline and the Spaniard also nodded a free header over the crossbar.

Liverpool, who had won all seven games this season, took the lead through Daniel Sturridge's well-executed hooked finish, just minutes after the England international missed a completely open

Chelsea levelled the contest through Emerson close-range Palmieri's finish which needed the intervention from video assistant referee (VAR) to check for offside before being awarded.

Liverpool will looking for revenge when the two sides meet again in the league on Saturday, while the fourth-round draw takes place on the same day at 21:00 BST.

Despite winning the FA Cup last season under Antonio Conte, Chelsea replaced the Italian with compatriot Maurizio Sarri, who left Serie A side Napoli for Stamford Bridge.

The Blues were way off the pace in the league last term, finishing fifth, but have begun the new campaign in impressive style under Sarri.

They lost Community Shield with poor performance against Premier League champions Manchester City, but have shown

HAZARD: scored the goal which dumped Liverpool out of the Carabao Cup quick progress by being unbeaten after six games in the top flight and lie two points adrift of leaders Liverpool.

Midfielder Fabregas controlled the play in the middle of the park early on and fellow Spaniard Morata - who looks bereft of confidence - should have taken one of his chances

Having fallen behind, the Londoners did not panic and turned the game around with two goals in six second-half minutes, the second of which was an unstoppable strike by Hazard past goalkeeper Simon Mignolet.

Hazard, who five league goals so far, collected the ball wide on the right before drifting into the box, nutmegging Moreno and arrowing a thunderous shot into the

New £12m deal for Southgate

Gareth Southgate is close to agreeing a new fouryear contract with the FA worth at least £12 million which would take him through to the end of the 2022 World Cup finals.

The proposal was due to be put before the FA board for approval after press time, but given the England manager's feat in guiding them to the World Cup semi-finals in Russia, it would be surprising if there were dissenting voices. Losing Dan Ashworth, who has resigned as FA technical director to take up a similar role with Brighton & Hove Albion, is likely to make the board even keener to put Southgate on a longer contract.

While the FA has previously been criticised for extending deals which led to costly pay-offs for

Southgate, in trademark waistcoat, celebrates World Cup victory over Sweden last summer

Sven-Goran Eriksson and Fabio Capello, there is a beliefamong the hierarchy that it is necessary to give Southgate a substantial pay rise or risk losing him after the 2020 European Championship finals, or even before. The hope that 2022 is when many of England's brightest young prospects will be at their peak is another reason for tying Southgate to a new contract and seeking continuity.

Southgate been earning a basic salary of around £1.8 million a year since his permanent appointment in November 2016. That is less than half what English managers in the Premier League such as Eddie Howe at Bournemouth are paid. The new deal, which would replace Southgate's contract that runs until 2020, is expected to include an increase of at least £1 million a year to around £3 million, and take him to the end of December 2022 when the World Cup is staged outside the summer for the first time in Qatar.
