Medical Cannabis legalized in the UK

Specialist doctors can now prescribe the drug on the NHS

Medicinal cannabis products is available on NHS prescription for the first time ever, as groundbreaking legal changes come into effect on Thursday.

Consultant medical professionals may prescribe products containing cannabis, cannabis resin or cannabidiol if they feel their patients could benefit from it.

Previously, all cannabis products were classified as unlawful drugs, and UK patients could only access cannabis-based treatments with a special Home Office licence granted by the Home Secretary. But now cannabis-based products can be prescribed, but only by consultant medical practitioners at hospitals, and only in a small number of cases, such as nausea caused by chemotherapy, muscle stiffness linked to multiple sclerosis, and for children with rare or severe forms of epilepsy.

New NHS guidance states that medicines containing cannabis cannot be prescribed by a GP, although they will be able to refer their patients to specialists to request prescriptions.

The new guidelines also state that cannabis products should only be made available "where there is a clinical need which cannot be met by a licensed medicine and where established treatment options have been exhausted".

therapeutic benefits

Home Secretary Sajid Javid's decision to ease legislation on medical cannabis followed a number of high-profile cases, including that of young epilepsy sufferer Alfie Dingley and Billy Caldwell, whose conditions appeared to be eased by the drug.

Dingley's mother, Hannah Deacon, previously travelled to Canada to procure the cannabis oil that she says controls his seizures, but was not allowed to bring it back into the UK. Deacon has welcomed the change to drug laws, saying: "I have personally seen how my son's life has changed due to the medical cannabis he is now prescribed."

Caldwell's mother, Charlotte, added: "For me, what started off as a journey which was about the needs of my little boy actually turned into something, proved to be something, a lot bigger. It proved to be the needs of a nation.

"Medicinal cannabis gave me back my right as a mummy to hope, but the most important thing medicinal cannabis has done is given Billy back his right to life."

An initial review by Dame Sally Davies, the UK's chief medical adviser, concluded there is evidence medicinal cannabis has therapeutic benefits.

The Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs, which carried out the second part of the review, ruled that doctors should be able to prescribe medicinal cannabis provided products meet safety standards.

The council recommended that cannabis-derived medicinal products be listed in Schedule 2 of the Misuse of Drugs Regulations 2001, meaning it can be administered to a patient by a doctor or dentist.

Cannabis had previously been classed as a Schedule 1 drug, meaning it was thought to have no therapeutic value but can be used for the purposes of research with a Home

Office licence.

The Government was eager to dampen down talk of national legalization, with Home Secretary Sajid Javid saying the decision was "in no way a first step to the legalisation of cannabis for recreational use".

That means possession of the class B drug will still carry an unlimited fine and up to five years in jail, with dealers facing up to 14 years in prison.

Yet calls for complete legalisation are growing, even in the most unlikely of quarters.

In an article for The Daily Telegraph in June, former Conservative leader William Hague called for the legalisation of cannabis for recreational use. He argued that the war on the drug had been "irreversibly lost" and that a change of policy was needed.

Licensing cannabis for medical use would be a "step forward", Hague said, before adding that the Conservatives should be as "bold" as Canada, which recently voted to legalise cannabis for recreational use.

■ Arron Banks - the son-in-law of a Russian state official - has consistently denied receiving money from Russia

FURTHER DOUBT has been cast onto the legitimacy of the Brexit vote this week as it emerged that one of the leading backers of the Leave campaign was being investigated for possible acceptance of funds from an illegal source.

Arron Banks, a millionaire businessman and leading Brexit campaigner, is the subject of a probe by the National Crime Agency (NCA) over claims that he hid the source of illegal donations used to fund the referendum campaign. The NCA said on Wednesday that it had been asked to investigate Mr Banks as well as Better for the Country, the organization that ran the Leave.EU referendum campaign, Leave.EU, and Elizabeth Bilney, the Leave.EU chief executive, by the Electoral Commission.

Mr Banks has denied any wrongdoing.

The elections watchdog has already spent months investigating Mr Banks and has decided there were reasonable grounds to suspect money given to Better for the Country came from impermissible sources, that Mr Banks concealed the true details of these transactions and criminal offences may have been committed. After the investigation, the commission said that it had reasonable grounds to suspect Mr Banks was not the true source of the £8 million loans made to Better for the Country. It also said it suspected that loans to Better for the Country, on behalf of Leave.EU, "involved a non-qualifying or impermissible company", Rock Holdings Limited, which is incorporated in the Isle of Man. That in turn implicated Jim Mellon, CEO of Burnbrae Asset Management, a shadowy billionaire investor who originally made his fortune in Russia post-Communist Russia and went on to live in the tax haven, which is outside the European Union.

Bob Posner, the Electoral Commission's director of political finance and regulation and legal counsel, said: "We have reasonable grounds to suspect money given to Better for the Country came from impermissible sources and that Mr Banks and Ms Bilney, the responsible person for Leave.EU, knowingly concealed the true circumstances under which this money was provided.

'criminal investigation'

"Our investigation has unveiled evidence that suggests criminal offences have been committed which fall beyond the remit of the commission. This is why we have handed our evidence to the NCA to allow them to investigate and take any appropriate law enforcement action. This is now a criminal investigation.

"The financial transactions we have investigated include companies incorporated in Gibraltar and the Isle of Man. These jurisdictions are beyond the reach of the Electoral Commission for the purpose of obtaining information for use in criminal investigations or proceedings."

There have long been concerns among British intelligence sources that Kremlin operatives played an outsized role in determining the outcome of the 2016 vote, with the help of a social media disinformation campaign powered by internet bots authorized directly by Russian President Vladimir Putin, who is keen to sow discord among Western European nations. To add further spice to the mix, it has emerged that is the son-in-law of a Russian state official and his wife – a former Russian beauty queen twenty years his junior – uses the numbers 007 in her email address. The family Range Rover's numberplate was MI5 SPY.

Mr Banks has a patchy record in business and was in effect barred from working as a company director in Gibraltar after an investigation into his financial business there. He is also listed as the honorary consul for the tiny Central American state of Belize, noted for its impenetrable offshore company registries. Mr. Banks also accompanied Nigel Farage to Trump Tower in New York when the Ukip leader became the first British politician to meet the newly elected president.

Trump connection

Mr Banks was long ago described by a Westminster watcher as "the most obnoxious man in politics", a title which he would probably relish. He called Douglas Carswell, the former Ukip MP, "borderline autistic with mental illness wrapped in" although he later apologised for the cruel insult. He entitled his memoirs The Bad Boys of Brexit: Tales of Mischief, Mayhem & Guerilla Warfare in the EU Referendum Campaign.

Mr Banks and Andy Wigmore, a former Belize diplomat who was head of communications for Leave.EU, met the Russian ambassador to Britain three times, and handed him the phone numbers for Donald Trump's presidential transition team in November 2016. The Russian ambassador to Britain also tried to help to set up a deal for Mr Banks involving goldmines. Mr Banks has denied any wrongdoing in his relations with the ambassador.

Raab expects Brexit deal within three weeks

The government expects to strike a Brexit deal within three weeks, Dominic Raab has told MPs.

The Brexit secretary told MPs he expects a deal to be finalised by November 21, adding: "The end is now firmly in sight and, while obstacles remain, it cannot be beyond us to navigate them."

Mr Raab made the claim in a letter to the Commons on Wednesday. He told the MPs that he would be willing to give evidence to them only "when a deal is finalised", adding that he "currently expect[s] November 21 to be suitable." The pound rose after the letter was released.

The comments will revive talk of a special summit of European leaders in November to sign off a withdrawal deal. The prospects for that summit appeared to have diminished after talks hit an impasse over the question of the Northern Irish backstop.

In the letter, Mr Raab wrote: "We have made a great deal of progress over the past few weeks. Taking all of this together, 95 per cent of the withdrawal agreement and its protocols are now settled, and we have made good progress on the structure and scope of the future relationship."

Speaking about the backstop, he said: "There are concerns on both sides: for us on our constitutional and economic integrity, and the protection of the UK's own single market; for the EU on the integrity of the EU's single market and customs union. Despite our differences, we are not far from an agreement on this issue. We agree on the principle of a UK wide customs backstop. An agreement on the details of that backstop should be possible."

Mr Raab continued: "We have resolved most of the issues and we are building up together what the future relationship should look like and making real progress. So we now need to acknowledge the progress that has been made and now work rapidly through the remaining issues and come to an agreement that works for both sides."

Harry ends Royal Tour with a touch of Maori - much to the delight of the locals

Harry and Meghan's overseas tour has ended as it began - with a surprise.

The Duke of Sussex on Wednesday drew gasps from his hosts as he gave a speech partially in Maori while wearing a traditional cloak of New Zealand's indigenous people.

A little over two weeks after it began with an announcement that the Duchess of Sussex was pregnant, the couple's first overseas trip as husband and wife ended with further surprise.

Their last stop on the tour was Rotorua on New Zealand's North Island, a town known for its geothermal activity and Maori culture, where the introductions were made almost entirely in Maori.

'beautiful cloak'

When it was the duke's turn to speak, he spoke for around a minute in the language, with gasps of awe and smiles when he used the word "whaiaipo", or sweetheart.

Heart attack Huddle hails live-saving BBC 'hero'

A TV soundman who saved the life of football legend and soccer pundit Glenn Huddle has insisted: "I'm no hero."

The former England and Tottenham player collapsed after a heart attack in a BT Sport studio on Saturday. Simon Daniels, 47, a first-aider and a special police officer, performed CPR and used a defibrillator on Huddle.

Huddle, who won 53 England caps, was recovering in hospital in London after having three stents fitted in his arteries Sunday night.

Mr Daniels, from Aylesbury, Bucks, played it down. He said: "The live

He said: "Thank you for the beautiful cloak you have so kindly gifted to myself and the duchess. We appreciate the skill of the weavers who made it, and the aroha (love) that has gone into its creation. This cloak is a taonga (treasure) that will be cherished in our family."

The duke was also presented with a tewhatewha — a Maori weapon featuring a point at one end and an axe at the other. It prompted Trevor Maxwell, of the local district council, to tell the duke: "I am sure you are going to Twickenham when the All Blacks play England on November 11. Make sure you don't take that."

The final 24 hours of the couple's 16-day tour, which has included dozens of engagements in Australia, New Zealand, Fiji and Tonga, also saw hundreds of people turn out for the pair's last walkabout.

Their 76th and final engagement was a visit to the Redwoods Tree Walk, where the couple met members of the mountain biking community before being pictured emerging hand-in-hand from the centuries-old forest.

Earlier in the week the Duchess drew plaudits for her technique during a "welly-wanging" contest. Harry and Meghan took part during a visit to a children's woodland charity in Redvale, near Auckland. In spite of heavy rain, the couple took turns throwing wellies — called gum boots Down Under — as schoolchildren cheered them on. Team Meghan emerged victorious after a deft underarm landed her boot close to the target.

Nelson Poll, 11, who was on Meghan's team said: "I think Harry's technique was better. It was straight forward instead of at an angle." But teammate Ryen Anderson, 10, said: "Meghan was asking us how to throw and we said it doesn't matter. "She didn't know she could throw that far and she surprised herself."

Suzy Lamplugh: police digging up the garden at suspect's former home

■ John Cannan, main suspect in the unsolved murder, told former girlfriend the missing estate agent 'was buried in concrete'

Detectives investigating the disappearance of Suzy Lamplugh waited until this week to dig up a garden linked to the main suspect despite knowing that he told a former girlfriend 16 years ago that she was "buried in concrete".

John Cannan, a convicted murderer and rapist, told Gilly Paige that Ms Lamplugh, who went missing 32 years ago, had been strangled and buried.

Ms Paige, a professional ice-skater, claimed in 2002 that Cannan had told her about Ms Lamplugh before he was jailed for the murder of another young woman. In letters that surfaced the same year to an unidentified pen pal, Cannan, now 64, bragged that he had been wearing a bloodstained coat when he laid the patio at his mother's house, which is now being examined by police.

Officers visited the house in Sutton Coldfield, West Midlands, in 2003 but did not begin digging up the patio or under a garden shed until this week, after a tip-off.

Ms Lamplugh, an estate agent, was 25 when she disappeared in July 1986 after meeting a client known only as "Mr Kipper" at an address in Fulham, southwest London. She was officially declared dead, presumed murdered, in 1994. No one has been convicted.

blood on his coat

Detectives took the unusual step in 2002 of naming Cannan, a suspected serial killer, as the prime suspect after the Crown Prosecution Service said that there was not enough evidence to prosecute him. Cannan insists that he is innocent.

Police were heard grinding through concrete in the garden and officers could be seen loading masonry into skips while forensic science officers scoured

Police have returned to the former home of John Cannan's mother in the West Midlands and have dug up the garden searching for the remains of Suzy Lamplugh the area. Green mats were rolled out near the back door, suggesting that the search area had been widened. A fifth blue tent has also been erected.

The owners of the property said that when officers first visited 15 years ago they had examined the patio and "discounted" it from the investigation.

In some of the 95 letters that Cannan wrote to a pen pal, published by the News of the World in 2002, he is said to have claimed that there was blood on his coat when he relaid his mother's patio a year after Ms Lamplugh vanished. One letter had a section titled: "The blood on my mac."

"There are several truthful reasons how mud and blood came to be on my mac," he wrote, variously blaming a nosebleed and an abscess. In a note written in 1990 he added: "I still have admissions to make, but to what end?"

Cannan was jailed in 1989 for the rape and murder of Shirley Banks, 29, a newly married factory manager from Bristol. She vanished in October, 1987, and he was arrested three weeks later. Detectives found evidence in his black BMW, which is mentioned in the letters as being used to pick up materials for the patio.

Detective Superintendent Jim Dickie, who led a previous investigation, said police were inundated with letters. "We had water diviners, mystics, all sorts of people sending us information," he said. "We investigated it all and a lot of it ended up in the rubbish bin."

"Whilst in my heart I hope they do find remains there, my head tells me they won't."

Leicester mourns Vichai Srivaddhanaprabha, the Thai billionaire who made their dreams come true

Vichai Srivaddhanaprabha was hailed by heartbroken Leicester fans this week as the man behind the miracle, the billionaire businessman who turned an impossible dream into a glorious reality.

Just six years after he bought the club, delirious Leicester City fans were celebrating the Premier League title in one of the greatest shocks

But on Saturday that all came to an end after his helicopter crashed shortly after takeoff at the King Power stadium, killing the tycoon (pictured, right) and four others on board.

Mr. Srivaddhanaprabha won the deep affection of players and supporters since buying the club in 2010 for a reported £39.3million. Born Vichai Raksriakson (the new name is an honour bestowed by King Bhumibol) in Thailand in 1958, his first business was a handicrafts shop. Later, he won duty-free shop monopolies at Thai airports and built up a chain called King Power. Last year, it denied owing the Thai government £327million. A fortune of more than £2billion allowed him to indulge in his love of two sports poles apart – football and polo. The tycoon has played in the same team as Prince Charles and Prince William. In 2008, he was appointed president of the prestigious Ham Polo Club, London, a post he held for four years. In 2015, the side won the hallowed polo double: the Gold Cup and the Queen's Cup, which was presented by the Queen and Prince Philip.

Mr. Srivaddhanaprabha's ponies are based at his 100-acre estate outside Reading, Berks, with 80 ponies and 60 staff. His love of Leicester City began in 1997 when he watched as a last-gasp equaliser saved the club from defeat in the League Club Final at Wembley. He bought back their stadium, wrote off £103million in loans and bought new players. He would bring Buddhist monks who prayed for victory at games. After winning promotion to the Premier League in 2014, Srivaddhanaprabha treated the entire squad to caviar and vintage wines at an exclusive restaurant. He also gave them a £1,000 chip each to gamble at a nearby private casino. After the club's history-making title win two years later, each first team player got a £105,000 car. Srivaddhanaprabha was married to Aimon. Their children are Voramas, 37, Apichet, 36, Arunroong, 34, and Aiyawatt, 32.

Anger as Waitrose editor William Sitwell quits over vegan joke

Waitrose faced a backlash this week after the editor of its food magazine resigned for making a joke about vegans.

There was speculation that William Sitwell jumped before he was pushed because of the commercial importance of vegans to the supermarket chain. One of his supporters complained of a chilling effect on free speech and blamed Twitter trolls.

Mr Sitwell had apologised for sending an email to a freelance journalist in which he said that he would like to print a feature about "killing vegans, one by one". He described the email as a joke made in haste and said that he supported and respected vegans. The supermarket received calls for his dismissal, including one from the Humane Society.

Waitrose said that Mr Sitwell had resigned from his position and that it was the "right and proper move". The retailer said that it would be working with John Brown Media, which produces the food magazine, to appoint a new editor.

Selene Nelson, the freelance journalist who received Mr Sitwell's email after pitching a story about vegan food, said she had been shocked by the hostility of the message. "I've written about many divisive topics, like capital punishment and murder cases and domestic violence, and I've never had a response like that," she told BuzzFeed. Mr Sitwell said that he could not comment on the terms of his departure.

But several journalists jumped to his defence. Peter Osborne, of The Spectator, said that it was "a dark day for free expression" and that Mr Sitwell had been

Italian found in Edinburgh cathedral faked memory loss to escape mother-in-law

AN Italian man who collapsed in Edinburgh cathedral claiming to suffer from memory loss has finally admitted that he faked his condition and had run away to Scotland to escape from a domineering mother-in-law.

Salvatore Mannino, 52, a businessman from Lajatico, near Pisa, told police investigators he had pretended not to know who he was or how to speak his native language but had genuinely fainted while visiting St Giles Cathedral on September 20.

"My plan was to convince the doctors that I had lost my memory but for a few moments I really did lose it," Mr Mannino was reported as saying.

The former supermarket manager, who had set up a home nursing business, said he was feeling powerless within his family and wanted to see from afar how they got on without him. Police in Edinburgh managed to identify him - with the help of the Italians - from the tattoos on his arms.

"At home I felt powerless as a husband and a father," he said.

"My mother-in-law, who has been living with us since 2010, called all the shots and was constantly interfering. I wanted to re-establish my authority."

The father of four left €10,300 (£9,046) in cash for his family and a coded message that read: "Forgive me, I am sorry." It was decrypted by his eldest son, 18, a fan of mathematical puzzles.

Mr Mannino said he planned to return to his family after a few weeks, having organised a gesture of independence without any malicious intention.

Police found he had visited websites giving information on how to disappear, how to feign memory loss, and a floorplan of St Giles Cathedral.

"I would have found the right words to make them understand the reasons for my departure. And perhaps I would have been able to set new rules," he said.

Mr Mannino has been recovering in the psychiatric ward of Pisa's St Anna's Hospital since his return to Italy on October 23. Hospital staff said he was still suffering from stress and would be kept in hospital for a few more days.

Antonio Falossi, a cousin of Mr Mannino's wife, Francesca, questioned the veracity of his relative's mother-in-law problems. The two were business partners and the atmosphere at home was perfectly normal, he told Corriere della Sera.

was still having difficulty in getting over the moment when she visited her husband in hospital in Edinburgh only to be asked, in broken English: "Who are you?"

Mr Falossi added: "My cousin has been destroyed by this. She can't find an explanation for what went on in Salvo's mind."

Salvatore Mannino said that he had felt powerless within his family

Brits in LA

Meet A Member: Jill Demby Guest

Meet Jill Demby, Guest, Anglophile, U.S. citizen and LA resident who spent a lot of time in the UK and felt it was her true home from the time she stepped off the plane at Heathrow some 30 years ago. She worked and lived in London during part of her college years and after and then married into a family where her father-in-law was a true Brit who then became Lord Haden Guest. She then became the Honorable Jill Demby Guest. Though now divorced, her name rests kindly in the pages of Burke's Peerage.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I born and raised on the East Coast in a beautiful New Jersey suburb, not far from Manhattan, but the city called and I began my career in the film business there. After being accepted to London Film School, my path took a detour into the NY film scene. I then worked in public television for years until Hollywood called and I made the transition to La La Land. Who could resist LA? Total paradise, right?

What do you miss most from home?

Even though England is not my true home, I miss the rich greenery of the landscape, the history and the architecture, the slower rhythm of life, the gardens, the shock of white roses in the gray mist; the poetry of the place. Also, the teatime ritual, the scones, clotted cream, the eggs, bread, all dairy products, back bacon and tartan wools in the winter.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since?

It was an architectural hodge podge with dark, windowless restaurants and no true food scene to speak of. The hodge podge still exists but now the buildings are taller and more city like and the food scene is amazing!

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus New York City

New York to LA is a transition but they're completely different places. It's whether or not you want a city life or a nature life. Lots of people vs lots of cars.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

My hidden gem is a Scottish breakfast/lunch place called John O'Groats. A Mom and Pop place with the best biscuits, pancakes, waffles and egg dishes ever. And the Scottish oatmeal is to die for! Everything is yummy! The place is family to me.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

Be sure you like warm weather and constantly sunny skies. There's only one mood here and it's sunny. Bring sunscreen. And lots of money.

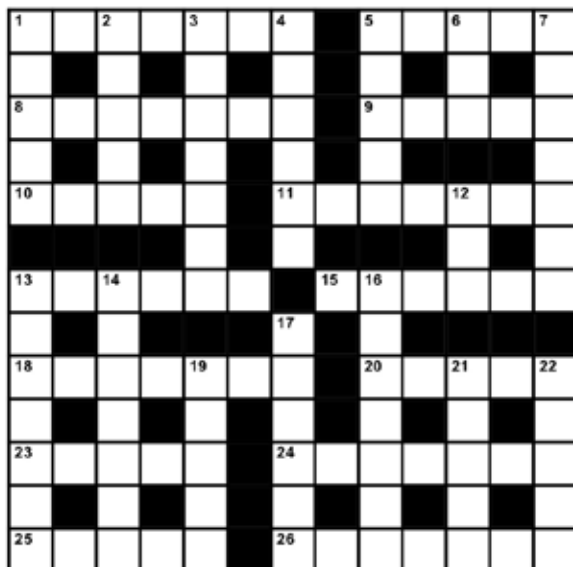

"Even though England is not my true home, I miss the rich greenery of the landscape, the history and the architecture, the slower rhythm of life," - Jill Demby Guest

Solution to Puzzle #360

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

Two things. Follow your own voice. Nobody knows anything.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you?

I just finished a documentary, "And Now, Love," about the life and work of Dr. Bernard Bail, a Jewish WWII vet who was captured by the Nazis and fell in love with his German nurse. He went on to become a doctor and psychoanalyst and developed a radical theory that strikes at the root of all mental anguish. And he's still alive to tell his tale! It's making the film festival and screening rounds now. We just won Best Documentary at the Sunscreen Film Festival. If you're interested and know any community who might host a screening, contact me. We've had sold out screenings and have very lively Q&A's. Check out our links at: andnowlovethemovie.com

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: You are no stranger to drama and your boss Mars is not too active. This is not what his nature is - he prefers to be in charge - so keep a cool head at all times and in all situations. Bear in mind nothing lasts forever.

TAURUS: You need to listen to a wiser souls who is directing your overall change. This can be in any area, however if it is your health and well being in the spotlight it must be at the top of your priority list. Follow the path of least resistance for a while.

GEMINI: With Mercury your boss going backwards soon and Mars moving faster it's very possible you are about to make more of the changes that have been on the back burner for your overall life. Keep some time this next couple of weeks to have an overdue visit.

CANCER: Venus the love planet visiting your cousin Scorpio and going backwards can move you to make some changes that have been long overdue. You might feel like you have been spinning around without any direction to focus on. This about to change soon. Take a deep breath.

LEO: As the new month begins you could find yourself less restricted in several ways. Your priority should be your own highest good overall. You have been holding on to outdated thoughts and ways for too long. It is time to trust that you will be taken care of now.

VIRGO: Be on the safe side - make family and friends your priority and the reward will be a sense of pride for completing anything in this area and putting things to rest. If you know someone who is resisting do not get upset...just let it go for now. It will all look better mid-month.

CAPRICORN: It is time to tell the people in your life to back off and give you some space. Whatever is lurking in the shadows of your mind will not come to the light to be healed or changed if you bury your head in the sand. Be sure that you give yourself some space to do this inner work.

Radiant Vermin: where a moral vacuum picks up the pieces

Theatre Review by Catherine Siggins

HOUSING. A topic on everyone's lips. From Los Angeles to London, in every capital city, affordable homes or rental properties are becoming more scarce, and for an increasing portion of the population, out of reach.

So imagine if one day you got a letter from a government agency saying you are being given a home, in an abandoned development, gratis. All you are responsible for is the repairs and improvements. Better still, if you sell it you get to keep all the money. You'd take it, right? You'd be happy with just that, right? According to provocative British playwright, Philip Ridley, you might not. Wouldn't you want a sports car in the garage, a home cinema, the landscaped garden too? What would you be prepared to do to have your dream home?

In this pitch-black satire, a young couple Jill (Britt Harris) and Ollie (Kapil Talwalkar) impart the story of how they found themselves in possession of said free home, care of a government program called Social Regeneration Through the Creation of Dream Homes. Within the first few nights, they discover that there is a way for them to renovate and redecorate that doesn't involve any trips to Home Depot or DIY on their part. The catch being they must do some terrible, shocking things, to some vulnerable people, namely the homeless who live around them.

For this couple, what starts as an understandable desire to escape their tiny flat in the "crime capital of the universe" and provide a safe home environment for their new infant, gradually morphs into unquenchable materialism and conspicuous consumption, ending in a complete moral vacuum. With each new shiny toy or interior they acquire, they chip off another piece of their humanity, rationalizing that it's "all for baby".

The stage set, a bare house frame, lends itself well to the magical needs of the story and it's a perfect jungle gym for the energetic and physical performances of lead actors, Britt Harris and Kapil Talwalkar. Their command of the space never falters even when it reaches a crescendo while reenacting "the birthday party from hell", where they portray all nine of their neighbors. Hardly stopping to draw breath, both Harris and Talwalkar fluidly move from character to character with ever growing hilarious results. It is a bravura performance on both their parts.

With great poise and wit, Laura Faye Smith plays Miss Dee,

the government rep who encourages and manipulates them like a devilish Mary Poppins into signing away their very souls. Smith also makes a moving second appearance as Kay, a sad fly caught in the couple's web. To top it all, the American cast nails all the different UK accents. Funny and appalling in equal measure, what makes this play additionally engaging for the viewer is that they don't get to just sit back and judge. True to Ridley's "in-ner-face" style, the fourth wall is broken, as all the characters directly address the audience, creating the feeling that they are colluding. It produces some wonderfully uncomfortable laughter and silences.

This is a radiant first offering from the newly transplanted Portland theatre company, Door Number 3, under the artistic direction of Tim True.

Where: Odyssey Theatre, 2055 S. Sepulveda Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90025. Performances Thursday, Fridays, and Saturday at 8pm; Sundays at 2pm. Ends Nov. 18

BRITS IN LA

Open Enrollment is back!

The Open enrollment window for health insurance is now open. It's not the most exciting topic but it's got to be discussed... if you truly can't bear it I give you permission to skip to the end where we have another concert ticket Giveaway courtesy of Goldenvoice.

Now for those of you who are interested enough to stay.

Open enrollment means if you are not lucky enough to have a job that provides insurance coverage then this is time to evaluate your current plan, if you have one.

You have only a few weeks to shop around and switch to a more favorable one. But get cracking as the deadline is December 15th. If you miss the cut-off you could well be stuck with your current plan for another year. When I say 'current' it doesn't necessarily mean it will be on the same terms. The monthly premium is bound to increase and so may the coverage. I was with Blue Shield last year but had to switch as the cost rose by 30% and my GP no longer accepted it.

Don't feel dumb if you find the American system confusing, I've been here over 20 years and I still don't fully understand it. I've finally grasped that 'deductible' sort of means 'excess', but still get a little confused with the term 'out of pocket', as it seems I am always 'out of pocket' whenever I use my insurance, but then get told that's just a 'co-pay'!

It really pays to get advice from an expert. Many of you may already know Adam Beach of Beach Financial Group. We highly recommend him. He has advertised with Brits in LA for many years and helped hundreds of our members with everything from insurance to financial guidance. The best part of all is that using an insurance broker shouldn't cost you any extra. So save yourself the headache and go to a pro.

However, there is still a bit of homework for you to do. Before signing on the dotted line you will want to check that your preferred doctors/clinics accept your plan. Then reconfirm this with your insurance company, preferably in writing. I found out the hard way (to the tune of $700!) when my dermatologist assured me they were 'in my network'. They took a copy of my insurance and charged me a co-pay, seemingly oblivious to the fact that I wasn't covered.

I recently discovered yet another thing to be aware of. I received a bill for over $300, all because the doctor sent my lab work (blood tests etc.) to a facility that wasn't 'in network'. Fortunately, this time the insurance company (Oscar) came to my rescue. They wrote off the entire amount as a 'surprise bill'. Appropriately named, as I was not expecting that outcome at all. For those of you thinking you can pop back to the UK if you need medical attention, think again. We recently had a member who broke their neck when swimming in the ocean. They had let their insurance lapse as they had never used it, then one day at the beach ended up costing them $150,000! So at the very least get some kind of catastrophic coverage, and hope that you never have to use it.

We would love to get your feedback, especially if you like your insurance provider or have any advice you think your fellow members would benefit from. Email us at info@britsin.la

Don't forget the clocks fall back this Sunday, this is also a good reminder to change the batteries in your smoke detectors. If you have friends or family not as able as you why not offer to change theirs too?

Now it's time for the Goldenvoice Giveaway! We have a pair of tickets to see Mercury prize winners, Young Fathers at the Fonda on November 9th. Email us at info@Britsin.la to enter. Make sure to include your name on your photo ID. Winner will be picked at random and notified via email on November 7th.

Make sure to keep an eye on our Facebook or Instagram pages as that is where we announce last minute competitions.

Lastly, we will have Remembrance poppies available at Breakfast Club - all donations go to the Royal British Legion. Huge thank you to Michael Barnes who organizes this every year.

Cheers!
Eileen

Sour Spice: Mel B takes a swipe at VB!

Mel B appeared to take a swipe at her former Spice Girls bandmate Victoria Beckham, by dressing up as Posh Spice for Halloween.

Oo-er! The singer, who was known as Scary Spice during her time in the group, and whose real name is Melanie Brown, wore a Posh Spice mask, red heels, and the little black dress that has become synonymous with Beckham's look.

Mel B also carried an "axe" which bore the words: "No I am not going on tour," in an apparent reference to early reports that the original members of Spice Girls, with the exception of Posh Spice, would reunite for live shows this year.

She was accompanied by her friend - hairdresser Gary Madatyan - who dressed up as Victoria's husband David Beckham in an LA Galaxy football shirt, blonde hair and sunglasses. Madatyan had a sign which read: "Please please please do it for the Spice fans."

The pair were attending the annual Halloween party thrown by model Heidi Klum in New York. Klum herself attracted praise for her extravagant transformation into Fiona from the film Shrek.

Oo-bloody-er... Over to you Victoria!

Jude Law is perfect as 'manipulative' Dumbledore, gushes Potter star

Harry Potter actor Evanna Lynch is excited to see Jude Law's take on the future Hogwarts headmaster, Albus Dumbledore, in Fantastic Beasts: The Crimes of Grindelwald.

Lynch, who played Luna Lovegood in the original Harry Potter films, says Law is perfect as the 'manipulative' Dumbledore.

Oo-er! "He is so perfect as Dumbledore. He totally captures that serenity, that inner peace. He captures the manipulative side of Dumbledore. Dumbledore's a kind person - he's nice. He's not manipulative in an evil way. He wants to get people on his side, fighting for the right thing.

"You see that in book six, and that's really shown more, explored more, in this movie. From what I've seen, I think he's perfect," Lynch told The Hollywood Reporter.

Crimes of Grindelwald is not only a sequel to the first Fantastic Beasts installment, but is also a prequel to the original Potter saga. Written by author JK Rowling and directed by David Yates, the film will explore the backstories of Dumbledore and Grindelwald (Johnny Depp), as well as more minor characters from the canon, including Lord Voldemort's snake, Nagini, in her human form.

"The second movie goes so much deeper into the world. It really gives much more texture to all the characters that we know and love as the secondary characters - the adults who were running Hogwarts - so I'm so excited.

"A lot of bombshells are going to be dropped in this movie, which I can't wait for the rest of the fans to find out," Lynch said.

Fantastic Beasts: The Crimes of Grindelwald will hit the theatres on November 16.

De Bruyne injury mars City win

An injury to Kevin de Bruyne took the shine off a convincing win for Manchester City as the Carabao Cup holders eased past Fulham 2-0 to advance to the quarter-finals on Thursday night.

Spanish teenager Brahim Diaz scored in each half with his first senior goals to set up a last-eight meeting with Leicester or Southampton.

But there was concern before the end for De Bruyne, who grimaced as he limped off three minutes from time.

The 27-year-old Belgian midfielder was making only his second start of the season after suffering a ligament injury to his right knee in August.

"He is being checked by the doctors," said City manager Pep Guardiola. "We don't know if it's nothing or if it's something serious."

De Bruyne had put in a typically impressive and energetic performance but went off after going to ground clutching his left knee, and disappeared straight down the tunnel for treatment.

The Premier League leaders had made 10 changes from the team which beat Tottenham on Monday but still outclassed a full-strength Fulham side, managing 27 shots to five from the visitors.

Diaz broke the deadlock after 18 minutes, meeting Vincent Kompany's knock-down with a first-time shot that took a huge deflection and spun past Sergio Rico.

He added his second on 65 minutes after Rico had tipped a Gabriel Jesus shot on to the post, with the 19-year-old following up to hammer his shot into the roof of the net.

City will find out their quarter-final opponents on 27 November, when Leicester host Southampton.

Their fourth-round tie was originally meant to be played on Tuesday but was postponed after Saturday's helicopter crash at King Power Stadium that killed Foxes owner Vichai Srivaddhanaprabha and four others.

De Bruyne's industry and effort had stood out on an otherwise low-key evening at Etihad Stadium, as he roamed across the pitch and helped set the tempo as City took charge.

He had played only 150 minutes in total in 2018-19 before this game but did not look tired, as he continuously drove his side forward and also worked hard to win the ball back.

With seven tackles and three interceptions, De Bruyne played a big part in pegging Fulham back in their own half, and the Cottagers - 18th in the Premier League - often struggled to clear their lines.

With five more matches to come in a busy November that includes the Manchester derby at home on 11 November, Guardiola will hope that De Bruyne's injury is not a serious one.

Next result 'not important' - Puel

Leicester manager Claude Puel says the result is "not important" when they play Cardiff on Saturday - their first match since the club's owner died in a helicopter crash at the weekend.

Vichai Srivaddhanaprabha and four others were killed in the crash outside King Power Stadium on Saturday.

Puel says it was the Leicester players' decision to go ahead with the Premier League match in Cardiff.

"Playing football has not been at front of our minds this week," he said.

"But for this weekend, and all the matches thereafter, we play to honour a man who did so much for our club.

"The result is not important, but our desire, our actions to give our best on the pitch to honour our chairman, is the most important thing. I'm confident after I saw my players at training that they can give their best."

Leicester goalkeeper

Kasper Schmeichel was one of the first players on the scene after the helicopter crashed.

"Kasper... he lives this situation and he saw a lot of things," says Puel. "Kasper, like the other players, has a lot of history with the chairman and they are all devastated.

"We have a responsibility about the memory and work he [Srivaddhanaprabha] put in place. It was first words from Kasper, we have this responsibility."

Tuesday's Carabao Cup tie between Leicester and Southampton at King Power Stadium was postponed in the aftermath of Saturday's crash, and has been rearranged for Tuesday, 27 November.

All Premier League matches this weekend will be preceded by a minute's silence, and players will wear black armbands.

Puel started his news conference by reading a statement, which began: "This has been without doubt one of hardest weeks in the history of this football club.

"The tragic loss of five lives has left us numb and in shock. He [Vichai] leaves a legacy and his vision for the club we take forward."

The Frenchman said Leicester's players and staff had been offered counselling by the club, and a meeting was held on Monday to "speak and share" their feelings.

"It was important not to forget but talk among ourselves and share this difficult moment," he said.

The players were given the choice whether they wanted to train or not on Tuesday, and Puel said all 27 took part.

"I was not surprised but it was a fantastic feeling to see all my players on the pitch," he said. "All of them were ready to train and give 100% for the honour of our chairman."

Srivaddhanaprabha's funeral will begin in his native Thailand on Saturday and could last a week.
