THERE IS NO BETTER DEAL, INSISTS MAY

■ PM says mum on resignation if MPs refuse to back her on Brexit

Theresa May has said the UK should not hope for a "better deal" from the EU if MPs reject her Brexit agreement.

She told a BBC phonein on Friday there would be just "more division and uncertainty" if Parliament voted against the agreement next month.

But she declined to say whether the UK would be better off outside the EU, saying only it would be "different".

Asummit of EU leaders to sign off the deal will go ahead on Sunday "unresolved" despite issues over Gibraltar.

Spain is seeking written assurances from the UK that it will be directly consulted over its future trade negotiations with the EU which relate to Gibraltar, British Overseas Territory.

Its prime minister Pedro Sanchez has said he won't decide whether attend Sunday's summit until these are provided.

He has said his backing for the overall deal cannot be taken for Emma Barnett Show that granted although no one country can block the withdrawal agreement on its own at this stage.

Spain's room for manoeuvre is limited as the "divorce" document only has to be agreed at EU level by qualified voting, majority meaning 20 of the 27 member states. And Fabian Picardo, the chief minister of Gibraltar, said the territory was perfectly happy to have "direct engagement" with Madrid over future trade relations but would not be "dragged" into doing so.

'not there yet'

Meanwhile, the leader of the DUP, Arlene Foster, has said she will "look again" at her party's deal with the Conservatives if Mrs May's Brexit bill passes through parliament.

"But we are not there yet," Mrs Foster added.

Mrs May told the

her job was to persuade MPs to back her but also to "explain" the merits of the deal to the public.

Asked what her plan B was, if MPs rejected the deal, she suggested there would be little point going back to the EU to ask for further changes.

"I believe if we were to go back to the European Union and say: Well people didn't like that deal, can we have another one? ... I don't think they're going to come to us and say: We'll give you a better deal."

Mrs May, who has previously warned about the dangers of the UK leaving without a deal or not leaving at all, would not be drawn on whether she would quit if MPs refused to back her deal.

Asked what was a more likely outcome in such an event - a no-deal exit or the UK remaining in the EU - she said "from my point of view, personally, there is no question of 'no Brexit' because the government needs to deliver on what people voted on in the referendum in 2016".

Asked by a caller called Michael if the UK would be better off outside the EU under her deal than staying in, she said that as someone who voted to Remain, she had never said the "sky would fall in" if Brexit happens.

"I think we will be better off in a situation which we'll have outside the European Union, where we have control of all those things, and are able to trade around the rest of the world," she said.

'divorce bill'

She added: "You say: Are we better off?... actually it's a different sort of environment, and a different approach that we'll be taking to things."

Pressed by Emma Barnett to answer the question, she said "it is going to be different," before adding: "We can build a better future outside the European Union."

Tories close ranks behind PM as rebellion fizzles

THE TORY REBELLION against Theresa May looked to have fizzled out this week after Sir Graham Brady confirmed that party rebels had so far failed to submit enough letters to trigger a confidence vote in May's leadership.

The MP, who is chairman of the 1922 Committee of Tory backbenchers, said the threshold of 48 letters had not been reached. Twenty-five Tory MPs have so far publicly claimed to have submitted letters. But it is not known whether any others have secretly joined the petition.

Sir Graham also predicted it was "very likely" Mrs May would win a vote if one was triggered. He said that under party rules she could then not be challenged again for another 12 months, which he claimed would be a "huge relief" as people would stop asking him about the letters.

"I can't tell you how many times I'm asked

Tory plotters trying to topple May have been likened to a scene from the BBC sitcom Dad's Army. Rees-Mogg has 'always admired' the Home Guard and Captain Mainwaring that question everyday," he said in a radio interview on Tuesday. "I get asked it in the supermarket, I get asked it walking down the street, and I'm afraid the answer to you is just the same as it is to everybody else

"I've become very nervous about counting, or saying numbers in case people think I'm referring to something that I'm not."

Dad's Army

Sir Graham confirmed that he had not even told his wife or his parliamentary assistant how many letters he had received. The two vice-chairmen of his committee had also not been told, he said. The Altrincham and Sale West MP said the issue of the letters was the only instance where he felt some Tory MPs could not be trusted to tell the truth

He said: "Some years ago, I certainly had the experience of someone claiming publicly to have written me a letter when they hadn't."

The Leave supporter also said he was "not happy" with every aspect of the Brexit deal, adding: "I think what I will do is look very carefully at the package as a whole."

And May's main opponent Jacob Rees-Mogg conceded he may not be able to get the required number of rebels on board after facing claims the plot was like a scene from the Dad's Army sitcom about a Home Guard unit during the Second World War. "I've always admired Captain Mainwaring", Mr Rees-Mogg replied.

'full might of the State'

Plotters confidently predicted last week they would secure the 48 letters of no-confidence needed within days, and the lack of support for a leadership challenge was put down by former Brexit minister Steve

Baker to a "furious whipping operation". "We are up against the full might of the state and the Tory party," he said. Mr Baker admitted the situation had dented his credibility: "Obviously it has left me in a position today answering questions about my own credibility but my credibility is not the big concern of the United Kingdom right now."

Tory MP Nadine Dorries suggested Tory men in the party's European Research Group (ERG) of Brexiteers had failed to live up to their promises. "It's certainly not all mouth and no trousers from me," she said. "It certainly isn't for all the women in the ERG. All the women have put their letters in." Mr Rees-Mogg, ERG chairman, warned the party it would be stuck with Mrs May at the next general election, expected in 2022, unless they moved to get rid of her now.

May:

outlining how UK-EU trade, security and other issues would work.

The document, known as the "political declaration", is not legally-binding but will be the starting point for negotiations on co-operation after the UK leaves. It has been heavily criticized by many MPs for lacking detail.

This is a separate document to the legally-binding withdrawal agreement - setting out the terms of the UK's exit from the EU, including the £39bn "divorce bill", citizens' rights and the Northern Ireland "backstop" to keep the border with the Republic of Ireland open, if trade talks stall.

Former Brexit secretary
Dominic Raab said
what was on offer in the political declaration was inferior to EU membership, as it would leave the UK bound by the same rules but without control over them.

Meanwhile, EU officials are meeting to try to put the finishing touches to both the withdrawal agreement and the political declaration.

Tear up deal or else, say DUP

THERESA May was threatened with chaos parliamentary Wednesday night by the Democratic Unionist Party, who prop up her minority Government.

DUP deputy leader Nigel Dodds made clear that its 10 MPs from Northern Ireland were ready to vote against her unless she tore up her Brexit withdrawal plan. The DUP has a "confidence and supply" agreement with Conservatives which so far has given Mrs May a parliamentary majority. But on Monday night the party joined Labour in voting against the Government on a Budget measure and abstained in two other divisions in protest at the EU deal.

Mr Dodds said the DUP had "kept to our word" on supporting the Government until now but would only do so in the future if she rethought the EU agreement to protect Northern Ireland's place in the United Kingdom.

He warned: Government will require DUP support to deliver its domestic agenda."

To win that support, he said, the Government would have to "look beyond a withdrawal agreement which is people from uniting political the across spectrum against it, and instead work towards a better deal".

The party's Brexit spokesman Sammy Wilson said Monday's voting was intended to send a "political message" to the Prime Minister. He claimed she had breached "fundamental" assurance that Northern Ireland would not be separated constitutionally or economically from the rest of the UK.

"We had to do something to show our displeasure," he told the BBC. The EU withdrawal agreement has to be ratified by Parliament, meaning Mrs May will need the DUP's help to pass the legislation unless Labour MPs come to her aid. Monday night could have seen a Government defeat had Labour not bungled by failing to muster enough MPs, instead being five votes short. Jeremy Corbyn was among those absent.

Gazza facing sexual assault charge following 'selfie' train incident

DEVASTATED Gascoigne protested his innocence this week after being charged with sexually assaulting a woman on a train.

The former England footballer is due to appear in court next month in connection with one charge of "sexual assault touching" three months after he was detained at Durham railway station in August.

However, the 51-yearold said anyone who knew him "would know it is not true" and claimed the charges arose after he had been approached for a selfie on the York to Durham train on August

"What do I do when a woman wants a selfie and a kiss on my cheek?" he wrote on Twitter. "Do I say oh that's a sexual assault, if so, I'd be in court for the rest of my life." He later added: "I'm just sad about it as I respect all women.

"I've a mam, two sisters, two nieces, a daughter, so why assault.

"Just so pleased that everyone I know, they know it's not true."

He claimed the British Transport Police who questioned him about "asked the incident for a selfie, and if he missed football" claim categorically denied by the officers. Gazza, who now lives in Leicester, said they were only doing their job but that "deep inside I'm hurting". Ĥe again made reference to the case and stated he had done "* all wrong", in a message that was later deleted.

Gascoigne's agent Shane Whitfield, said the star intended to deny the allegations and stressed that he was "innocent until proven guilty".

"People are always trying to accuse him of some wrongdoing and

FALLEN IDOL: "I respect all women," Gascoigne told reporters this week put him down. It's unfair. He's staying strong because he's innocent,' he said.

"I don't know what happened but Paul says he didn't assault any passenger on a train.

"He's been charged and he'll have to go to court. Hopefully it won't set him back. He's told me he's innocent."

He said his client has several upcoming commitments and will be speaking about his life at next month's Evening With Gazza in Nottinghamshire.

Gascoigne followers on Facebook: "I deny this offence but on the advice of my legal team, I will not comment any further at this stage. Love GAZZA XXX."

The talented Gateshead-born midfielder rose to fame at Newcastle United in the 1980s before moving to Tottenham Hotspur. He found worldwide fame during his appearances for England at the World Cup 1990. He later played for Italian club Lazio, Glasgow Rangers, Everton and Middlesbrough but his career was dogged with claims of alcohol abuse and he retired from football in 2004.

However, he appeared to be making some progress in his longrunning battle with his addiction to drink and drugs earlier this year. He made a series of personal appearances during the World Cup, and spoke about how England had come close to glory following the team's semi-final defeat to Croatia in Moscow. But he was forced to leave Sky's Soccer AM show in August because he was unwell. He denied that he had been drinking and blamed his health problems on sleeping tablets. Gascoigne is due to appear at Newton Aycliffe magistrates, Co Durham, on December 11. He faces a maximum sentence of 26 weeks jail.

London cops get tough by ramming moped gangs

■ Cars knock suspects from bikes as new crackdown is launched

Police cars in London are deliberately running down moped-riding muggers during high-speed chases in a bid to stem an epidemic of crime in the capital.

Dramatic footage released this week shows Scotland Yard's "Scorpion" pursuit teams hitting mopeds and sending suspects sprawling over car bonnets and flying across the tarmac, a controversial new tactic that critics claim risks fatalities.

So far this year officers have knocked suspects off mopeds or scooters 63 times. The Metropolitan Police said that none of the suspects had been seriously hurt and no complaints had been made.

Critics said that the policy risked "death by police car" but the footage was defended by senior officers, who said that it had played a role in reducing mopedenabled crime by more than a third when compared with last year.

tactic The was introduced to combat the scourge of moped crime. The bikes are used in snatch thefts, knifepoint muggings, acid attacks and smashand- grab raids. This year 12,419 such offences were recorded in London, equivalent to an attack every half an hour. One particularly notorious gang in Battersea, just south of the River Thames, committed 103 thefts in just 18 days.

criminal claims

Amanda Pearson, Scotland Yard's commander for frontline policing, confirmed that its Operation Venice team would deliberately knock moped riders from their bikes even if they were not wearing helmets and that there was no upper speed limit for clipping a rider, known as tactical contact. "The tactic was always part of police conduct for pursuit," Ms Pearson told The Times. "With two-wheeled vehicles, that hasn't been widely used up and down the country."

Police pursuits already under scrutiny for high levels of casualties involving bystanders innocent and passengers. In 2016 pursuits led to the deaths of 28 people, two thirds of whom were bystanders, passengers or other road users, according to the most recent report from the IOPC police watchdog.

Legal experts warned that the Met was opening itself to civil and even criminal claims over disproportionate use of force, and Diane Abbott, the shadow home secretary, said that the tactic was "extremely concerning".

EPIDEMIC: there were more than 12,000 bike snatch thefts in London last year

James Strong, a lecturer in British politics at Queen Mary University of London, wrote on Twitter: "Apparently the penalty for riding a moped in a way that makes it seem like you might be a thief is now death by police car."

The new crackdown comes after concern that red tape was holding officers back. In May the Home Office changed rules allowing police to pursue violent moped criminals who had thrown off their helmets.

This followed criticism that officers were being held to the same legal standard as ordinary motorists.

Moped muggers were branded the "highwaymen of the 21st century" by one judge, who in June jailed two young riders who had stabbed a charity worker to death after robbing him during a spate of eight muggings in which they knifed three other people.

Outside Operation Venice, the tactic has been used in three cases that have been referred to the Independent Office for Police Conduct, including one involving a teenager and another in which the suspect, on a scooter, broke his leg during a chase in Hatton Cross, west London. Nick Freeman, a leading criminal defence lawyer dubbed "Mr Loophole", said: "Without question it's going to lead to compensation claims. [Police] are allowed to use reasonable force to apprehend; that doesn't entitle them to inflict injury."

UAE hints at resolution to Hedges spying case

The United Arab Emirates is considering a petition for clemency in the case of a British academic it accused of spying and jailed for life, its government said on Thursday.

Sulaiman Hamid Almazroui, the country's ambassador to London, said the case was unusual but insisted that Matthew Hedges had received due process after "compelling evidence" was laid against him. He added that the authorities were hopeful of reaching an "amicable solution".

"Under UAE law everyone has the right to appeal . . . and everyone can request a pardon from our president," he said. "Mr Hedges' family have made a request for clemency and the government is studying that."

Daniela Tejada, Mr Hedges' wife, said that she had submitted the clemency request on Thursday. "We will wait to see what happens," she said.

Mr Almazroui's confirmation that a pardon was being considered suggests both sides are moving fast to try to resolve the issue. The UAE government had always seen an application for clemency as the best way out of a dilemma that both countries have faced since Mr Hedges, a PhD student at Durham University, was arrested in May.

Several reports have claimed that Britain refused to engage with the UAE's preferred approach, because it would have implied acceptance that Mr Hedges was on the payroll of MI6, as the authorities in the UAE allege. He and the British government deny the claim. The UAE wanted Britain to "frankly apologize" and then Mr Hedges would "be on his way", Abdulkhaleq Abdulla, an academic who advises the Emirati government, said.

Mr Hedges was in solitary confinement for five months while the two governments made no progress at overcoming the impasse. The student, who had been researching UAE security policy after the Arab spring, also had contact with the British embassy, his phone records allegedly showed. However, the government, academics and journalists around the world have rejected the idea that contact of that sort amounted to spying.

Several academics have alleged that Mr Hedges was in fact being punished for inquiring too deeply into sensitive topics.

Mr Almazroui said that the UAE government "does not dictate verdicts to the court". Its officials have played down suggestions that the sentence was intended to send a political message to Britain or that he was being used as a bargaining chip.

Shoulder of mutton gets the chop to attract more vegans

A PUB has angered regulars by scrapping its Shoulder of Mutton name after nearly 70 years because it does not want to offend vegetarians.

The change was made after pub bosses feared its traditional name might affect plans to include veggie food on the bar menu. The traditional pub also did not want to upset newlyweds who might be put off holding a reception at a venue with a meat-based name. Known as the Shoulder of Mutton in Heworth Green, York, since the 1950s, it is now the Heworth Inn.

Landlady Stannard said: "When trying to market a business to a tourist hotel market, it has been shown that the name the Shoulder of Mutton isn't perceived particularly well. "As we are going to have a really keen focus on vegetarian and vegan cuisine, we think it is a tasteful, sympathetic and reasonable decision." She added the pub had become "tired" and due to her investment in the business a bold statement of change was needed.

But she added: "We also want to have an excellent vegetarian and vegan offering, so found the name slightly compromising of the idea".

Currently just a quarter of the menu provides a "no meat" option with traditional fare making up the rest. As for plans to be a licensed wedding venue in 2019, Ms Stannard said: "We imagined that many brides may not want the invites for their big day to be at a place called the Shoulder of Mutton.

Dominika Piasecka, of the Vegan Society, said: "We've heard of a couple of businesses going out of their way to exclude or annoy vegans, so it's nice to see the opposite happen."

A Vegetarian Society spokesman said: "A stronger vegetarian and vegan menu is a brilliant idea."

But a customer said: "Shame something like the name of a traditional pub has to change just because somebody doesn't agree with it. There's a lot if things I don't agree with but won't get changed, so things like a name of a pub with a non-discriminatory name should be left alone."

McQueen's bike makes great escape from the scrapheap

The Triumph TR6R was made to look like a Nazi machine for the 1963 war epic in which McQueen tries to leap barbed wire to get to Switzerland. When the movie was finished, the film company brought it back to England and sold it to a farmer, who used it to herd his cows before it ended up abandoned in a barn. It eventually spent two decades lying in a caravan park in Norfolk before enthusiast Dick Shepherd found it after years of searching.

Dick, 62, said: "When the farmer died he left it to his cowman. He had started to strip it to do it up but never got round to doing it."

Now the bike, restored using 95 per cent of its original parts, is to star in a special event commemorating the Historian Dan Snow with bike enthusiast Dick Shepherd and the restored Triumph outside London's Apollo Theatre, which will host a special event about the escape next March.

75th anniversary of the real escape. On March 24 1944, a total of 76 Allied prisoners made it out of a tunnel dug under Stalag Luft III camp in what is now Poland. All but three were recaptured and furious Hitler ordered 50 to be shot. Next March 24, TV presenter Dan hosts an evening at London's Apollo theatre where the bike will be on stage. The film will be shown at the same time in many cinemas. Dan, 39, said the escape was "a story about never submitting to defeat" but joked: "I certainly haven't been cast in the role of Steve McQueen – that would be an absolute disaster."

Vegans try to change village named Wool... as it 'promotes animal cruelty'

VEGANS are trying to change the name of the Dorset village of Wool because they think it promotes animal cruelty.

Members of animal rights group PETA are campaigning to get the 1,000-year-old village name changed to "Vegan Wool" much to the hilarity of residents.

Elisa Allen, a director at PETA, has written to Wool Parish Council with the "ridiculous" request, adding the village' current name "promotes cruelty to sheep". The activist said they would give a "cruelty-free" woollen blanket to 2,000 households in the village if they agree. She also said the people of "Vegan Wool" would be showing an act of "kindness to sheep" if they changed the name of the village.

A letter to the council penned by the activist reads: "I'm writing on behalf of PETA with a suggestion that would put Wool in the spotlight and promote kindness to sheep: renaming the village 'Vegan Wool'.

"Why make this animal-friendly update? Unlike wool that is stolen from sheep, vegan wool is good for animals and the environment."

Mrs Brooks added that because PETA made the suggestion in writing the matter now warrants discussion at the next council meeting.

Brooks Mrs also PETA blasted for getting their facts wrong on Wool, as the village name is derived from the ancient word 'welle', a water spring, and has absolutely nothing to do with the wool industry.

Other residents took to social media to mock Ms Allen's suggestion.

Leanne Welsh said: "So cheddar gorge could be Vegan Cheddar Gorge? Burgar in Scotland could be veggie burgar!"

Carol Harkin added: "Absolutely ridiculous! Never heard anything like it!" Jo Holloway said: "It's not April 1st yet surely!" Wool has a population of 5,310 and has its origins in the 11th century.

Solution to Puzzle #363

BRITS IN LA

I hope you all got stuffed...?

Hey Britlings!

Belated Happy Thanksgiving to you all. By the time you read this you will probably be slouching on the couch, watching football some pigskin), wondering why your pants are so tight.

As yet another classic American holiday goes into the books, it's only your patriotic duty to eat excessively, drink too much and be around family and loved ones...some of whom perhaps you would rather NOT see.

Now most you know what Thanksgiving is all about so I won't patronize you and for those that don't know much about American history - it's worth googling.

rather But than depress you about what our ancestors did to the Natives, I thought I'd share some fun facts about thanksgiving that you can share over dinner with your family.

Did you know that the first Thanksgiving/ or peace offering was in the 1621? Some years before America claimed its independence from Britain. (Another American holiday).

And did you also know that Abraham Lincoln was president who declared Thanksgiving as a national holiday in 1863?

Or that George H.W.

Bush was the first president to pardon a turkey. (How rude was it really?).

Not a lot of people know this one: an average of 4500 calories are consumed on T-Day per person...which will take on average 10 hours to burn off on the treadmill.

And finally for a sad fact: it has been widely reported that MILLION turkeys are killed around this time for us to feast on. Wow! I don't know about you but that seems like a massive sacrifice... whether you eat meat or not.

I gave up meat 18 months ago and so Thanksgiving is a tough one, because a lot of places don't think of a substitute so it's easy to stuff yourself silly on the carbs.

But thanks to Alicia Silverstone I learned "Celebration about Roast" available on Instacart and Amazon. It's amazing now how many plant-based alternatives there are now. As I'm getting older I'm feeling more conscientious about our planet and a greater empathy for all God's creatures.

I tried being full vegan and admit after six months found it quite difficult to keep up with the nutrients my body was missing. So I started to add a little dairy and some seafood back into my diet.

But now restaurants including BiLA's own Cecconi's on Robertson and local supermarkets are catching up with more plant proteinbased foods it's getting easier and easier to live vegan/vegetarian lifestyle. I hear even "Iceland" back home is stocking up.

THANKSGIVING IN PALM SPRINGS: we were thankful for the setting...

Now I know a lot of people don't want to give up meat but perhaps start by going meat free mondays, an initiative started by Paul McCartney to encourage us to be a little more conscious about what we eat.

Speaking of: avoid Romaine Lettuce as another break out of e-coli has been reported. But don't feel you need to mark yourself 'safe from Romaine' as few folks have done on social media. (I'm sure I'll get some messages about that).

Anyway, I truly wish you a great whatever weekend and wherever you are whether you celebrate the holiday or not.

Hope to see ya soon! Craig Young

Brits in LA

Meet a Member: Jimmy Akingbola

Meet Jimmy Akingbola who moved to LA twp years ago to pursue acting in the US and to set up the US arm of TriForce Creative Network (TCN).

Jimmy says TCN 'was built on a strong ethos of inclusion and access, opening up the industry to people from all walks of life and providing a trusted and viable avenue for the industry to discover diverse talent. We provide opportunities for actors, writers, directors, producers and crew through the following initiatives'.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I chose LA because I am a sun baby! I love the sun and the vibe and spirit of LA. I first came out here in 2010 for 3 months and even though I had zero auditions, I still loved being here. I just enjoyed living in North Hollywood for three months, plus I met many Brits that had successfully made the move such as Treva Etiene, Darren Darnborough, Eileen Lee and Craig Young.

However, the main reason I chose LA, is that it is like the Champions League of acting. The best of the best are here... Like most actors, I always dreamed of working in Hollywood and so when I saw how possible it was I just made the jump. You get one life, right? A part of me wanted to test myself to see if I could actually work Hollywood, like my peers and friends Ashley Madekwae, Walker, Eamon Aml Ameen, David Ovelowo, Marianne Jean Baptise, Lenny James and Idris Elba. Also there was the growing issue about the lack of good roles for actors that looked like me in the UK. Apart from Luther, I rarely saw good lead character's for actors that looked like me. So instead of staying in the UK and risking my career hitting a ceiling and then falling away I came to LA.

What do you miss most from home?

I miss my family, friends and my nieces and nephews the most. Plus certain food dishes like Pie & Mash, Jollof Rice and a good Indian Curry. Oh and of course going to see brilliant Theatre.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since?

My first impression of LA was that it's beautiful, and anything is possible and there are no set rules. You have to be creative, driven and hard working. I suppose what has changed is that I did not really understand how tough it is out here. There's a big difference from being in LA for 2-3 months to living here full time. I love this place but some people just think it's sunny and easy... that's far from true. We're all on the sunny hustle out here.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus London?

Biggest difference is the lack of good public transport. You could be filming in Santa Clarita or Topanga but getting there is a challenge. No matter how many times I am told LA is a car town, the lack of good public transport always I would say do your and surprises me. Oh and fashion here is more laid back. Wearing a white t-shirt underneath a blazer out here is seen as too much.

JIMMY AKINGBOLA: "No matter how many times I am told LA is a car town, the lack of good public transport always surprises me."

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

few actually... dinner at Republique Breakfast at Blue Jam Café, and Tacos at Pinches Tacos... I'm a bit of a foodie.

would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here? If you're coming here to live and work then research and then get Green Card first. It will make things much easier for you. But do your research it's a big commitment and it affects you financially in the UK.

Lots of our members join our group 'Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given? Cliché but... find your LA Family, keep it small and tight.

GROWING IN STATURE: England skipper Joe Root

Root: Let's be bold in victory

IOE ROOT has asked his history-making winners to complete a first series whitewash in Sri Lanka after seeing his bold strategy reap huge rewards.

England clinched a 57run victory in Pallekele on Sunday to take an unassailable 2-0 lead in the series moving into Friday's Third Test in Colombo

In the space of just two Test matches Root has emerged fully out of Alastair Cook's shadow and led what is now undoubtedly his team to a series victory in the subcontinent and the first in Sri Lanka for England in 17 years.

And he has done it his way, with the help of two successful tosses and a group of senior players who have taken control of the side and are driving things forward.

Man-of-the-match Root pointed to the defeat in Auckland where his side were bowled out for 58 as the turning point earlier this year, after which a series of meetings in Christchurch allowed him to draw a line under a hellish winter and start again.

If that was the starting point, then the return of Ios Buttler to the side, the freedom of Ben Stokes to be himself again, and the retirement of Cook have all been staging posts along the way that have ensured a smooth transition into Root's team. Buttler is the player who embodies the way the captain wants to play, which is why he was named vice-captain so soon after his return. And with the more conservative and structured Cook, who continued the job in the style of Andrew Strauss, moving on, Root has taken the chance to do things differently with imagination and ingenuity and it has paid off.

"It is very special," said Root. "We said we were going to play in a certain manner and we've backed that up completely in the two games, and that's probably the most pleasing thing.

"We've stuck to our guns. We've been ruthless when we've had our opportunities to get ahead in the game and we've soaked up pressure well on occasions.

"It fits very well with the make-up of individuals in this part of the world. We've got to play to our advantage as much as we

"It felt like we had a breakthrough moment at the start of the Christchurch Test match, sort of turned a corner, and we've been on an upward curve for the last eight months, and it is important we drive it home next week and don't let up."

Root put his faith in his spinners on the final morning and Moeen Ali delivered two quick wickets before Jack Leach completed his first fivewicket Test haul. Leach, Sam Curran and Ben Foakes all delivered huge performances with 12 caps between them, with the 182 caps of Jonny Bairstow and Stuart Broad on the sidelines. But far from moving completely away from the experienced players on tour, Root is keen to emphasise the importance of the squad in future challenges.

"It's not only about the 11 guys, it's about the full squad. The work that they've done, the pressure they're putting on the guys in the starting XI to keep improving, they're driving the standards up all the time. Having that strength in depth has been a massive contributor to these wins."

At close of play in Colombo on Friday Engalnd were 312-7 in their first innings with Bairstow hammering a dominant 110 before being bowled by Sandakan.

109-9 (20 overs); Bangladesh 79-5 (20 overs), South Africa (2pts) win

Celtic midfielder Beram Kayal stunned the home support in the ninth minute when he curled in a shot from 30 yards. However, Hoops winger Forrest, who had scored his first two Scotland goals in the 4-0 win over Albania on Saturday, netted twice in the first half before grabbing a third in the 64th minute with another assured finish. Midfielder Eran Zahavi reduced the deficit with a fearsome drive in the 75th minute and, in a nervy finish, only a great save from Scotland keeper Allan McGregor denied the visitors.

"It was a great night," the 27-year-old Forrest said. "Going behind after 10 minutes took a lot out of the boys and we showed a lot of character. It was credit to all the boys.

"I just keep working hard and keep grounded and keep going."

When asked about his goalscoring form, the Celtic midfielder said: "In the position you play, that's part of your job. It's a great night for everyone."

Scotland finished with nine points from 12 and can park their play-off fixture until March 2020 to concentrate on the European Championship qualifiers, which take place next year, with the draw on December 2.

Kayal's cross had been turned into his own net by Kieran Tierney for the winner in Israel but this time the first goal was certainly his. Scotland began to build momentum and Forrest was on hand to fi re low past Ariel Harush after Stuart Armstrong's drive had been blocked. The home fans came to life and their mood was lifted when Ryan Christie ran on to a Steven Fletcher header and played in Celtic team-mate Forrest, who was again unerring in his powerful finish. An incisive Scottish attack down the left after the break ended with Ryan Fraser cutting the ball back for Forrest to side-foot in from eight yards. The Tartan Army saw Israel pull one back but their side held their

ERIKSEN: Spurs are facing a battle to hold on to their midfield star

French top dogs eye Spurs' great Dane

PARIS Saint-Germain are ready to battle Real Madrid for Tottenham midfielder Christian Eriksen, say reports from London.

The Dane, 26, has yet to sign the new deal he has been offered by Spurs and has only 18 months left on his current contract. Eriksen has been in negotiations since last season about an extension to his £70,000-a-week deal and wants parity with the top earners, having seen Dele Alli sign a £150,000a-week contract and

Harry Kane also pen new terms. Sources close to the club says the Dane has also been unhappy at some of the positions manager Mauricio Pochettino has asked him to play in this season. Real are looking to Eriksen as a long-term replacement for Luka Modric - and the Spanish side are also reportedly interested in Manchester United's young England forward Marcus Rashford. PSG have been long-time admirers of Eriksen and were linked with a move for him last summer. That interest has not waned but Tottenham do not want to sell.

Liverpool were have been handed a boost with news that PSG could be without both Neymar and Kylian Mbappe for their Champions League clash in Paris next Wednesday. Neymar limped off with an apparent groin injury eight minutes into Brazil's 1-0 friendly win over Cameroon in Milton Keynes and Mbappe was forced off with a shoulder injury in France's 1-0 home victory over Uruguay.

Carroll may return for City showdown

WEST HAM have been handed a major boost with striker Andy Carroll declared fit to play his first game of the season against title favourites Manchester City on Saturday.

Manager Manuel Pellegrini has been carefully nursing his £15million injury-prone forward back to fitness and he came through 45 minutes in a behindclosed-doors friendly against Brentford last week with no problems. Carroll, 29, is now likely to be on the bench against City. The former Newcastle and Liverpool star has had a wretched time with injuries and needed surgery on an ankle problem in pre-season.

Pellegrini is keen to strengthen his squad in the winter transfer window and the club is expected to make a £5m January bid for Olympiakos left-back Leonardo Koutris, 23.

McCarthy set for Irish return

Mick McCarthy is set to be unveiled as Ireland's manager agreeing in principle to a £1m deal.

The 59-year-old will return to the role he left in 2002 and it's believed he will be assisted by his long term lieutenant Terry Connor and Ireland's record goalscorer Robbie Keane.

McCarthy was the FAI's first choice to replace Martin O'Neill, who was fired this week along with his assistant Roy Keane after a dismal run of results in the Nationsl League. The FAI also sounded out Dundalk manager Stephen Kenny about the position - he was the only other candidate that was considered and believed he was in the frame. The FAI had previously offered Kenny the U-21 job, but he said that he was only interested in the senior role.

It's possible that the Barnsley man will be unveiled as early as Sunday afternoon as the FAI bosses re keen to have a new man in for Sunday week's qualifying draw in Dublin.

McCarthy's first spell as manager began in 1996 when he replaced Jack Charlton and gradually introduced a more attractive style of play while assembling a new squad. He won 43% of his 68 games at the helm. The highlight of his reign was qualification for the 2002 World Cup from a group featuring Holland and Portugal but the experience infamously turned sour when the manager and his then captain, Roy Keane, had a furious row on the eve of the tournament.

Ireland reached the knockout stages without Keane but the episode left the country's football community bitterly divided and when criticism of the manager intensified following a poor start to the Euro 2004 qualifying campaign, McCarthy walked. Now he is set to go back on a mission to guide his country to Euro 2020.

In September he was asked about one day returning to the Ireland job and he nailed his colours to the mast. "If their [O'Neill and Keane's] contracts come to an end in two years' time and the job is available and I'm out of work, I'd love it again," he said.

While O'Neill and Keane were responsible for some memorable nights, they have paid the price for a dismal 2018 that yielded just one win. Ireland never recovered from a crushing 5-1 home defeat by Denmark in the second leg of a World Cup play-off a year ago. Fans turned against them and the pair have been taking flak since.

MCARTHY: returning to the role he left in 2002

Last week Ireland were relegated to the third tier of the Nations League. They blew second-seed status for the Euro draw and will be in the third pot, with just the top two teams qualifying from each group.

O'Neill said it was with a heavy heart that his time with Ireland had come to an end after an FAI delegation met him on Tuesday night. In a statement O'Neill said: "I've had the great honour of managing the Republic of Ireland football team for the past five years.

"It's with a heavy heart that I leave. It was one of my lifetime ambitions to take charge of the Irish senior squad. "I will not forget the night in

Lille when we beat Italy to secure the nation's best-ever achievement in the Euros, the terrific night we beat the world champions Germany at home in Dublin, or James McClean's goal in that euphoric win against Wales in Cardiff that put us through to the playoffs for this year's World

N'Golo Kante has signed a new five-year deal to keep him at the club until 2023.

Chelsea won the league title in Kante's first season Stamford Bridge and he was named the Professional Footballers' Association Player of the

"It has been two beautiful years and I wish for more to come," he said.

"Since I came, I have completely improved as a player, challenged myself and got some awards I never thought about.

"I like the city, I like the club and I am happy to be here for more time.'

Kante has 36 caps for France and was a member of their World Cupwinning squad in Russia this summer.

FIVE YEAR DEAL: N'Golo Kante

Marina Granovskaia said: "When he arrived, we knew we had signed a special player - but he has astounded everybody with his tireless and unselfish displays.

"Off the pitch, he remains a dedicated professional and a humble human being, despite the fact he is a world champion and a two-time Premier League winner.

"We now look forward to five more years with N'Golo at the heart of the Chelsea midfield."

Speaking at his news conference on Friday, Chelsea boss Maurizio Sarri said Kante's new deal was very "important".

"N'Golo, for us, is not just an important player," he said.

"I'm very, very happy with the new contract - very, very pleased for him. It's very important news, I think."

■ England youngsters confident after booking semi-final date in Nations League

GARETH SOUTHGATE says his England kids believe they can become the first winners of the biggest trophy in international football.

At 2ft 4in high, the UEFA Nations League trophy is almost exactly twice the size of the iconic World Cup. Even the Henri Delaunay Trophy, awarded to the champions European remodelled 2008 because it was considered too small, is now dwarfed by 4in. Southgate managed to avoid answering whether he knew what the Nations League trophy even looked like, but its stylish spiralling curves are very much the focus of the young players who have lifted the whole nation by reaching their second semi-final in the space of 11 months. Because they have been winning competitions at junior levels, England's young lions believe there is no reason why they cannot emulate that success at senior level.

"The young players have been winning at world level and been winning at European level, so they do have a slightly different feel and a different view of what's possible," said Southgate. "What this year has shown us is that you mustn't be weighed down by previous beliefs or nobody would have thought the final four in the World Cup would be the final four. That might be the same for this tournament - there are new countries emerging."

Holland hit back from 2-0 down to draw against Germany in Gelsenkirchen Monday night and the Dutch now join Portugal, Switzerland and England in the last four. The semifinals and final in Portugal in June will decide the inaugural champions.

"We've still got two high-quality games to go," said Southgate. "We've given our supporters

Pep rules out quick de Jong move

Pep Guardiola has ruled out making a January bid for rising Dutch star Frenkie de Jong.

City are understood to be well placed to buy the Holland midfielder, 21, from Ajax, despite competition from Barcelona, and are willing to meet the clubs reported £75m asking price.

However, Guardiola thinks his squad is strong enough to see him through the rest of the season.

City see De Jong as the long-term successor to Fernandinho, who the manager has described as "extraordinary" this season. The Brazilian 33, midfielder, started all of City's 12 Premier League games, and Guardiola has acknowledged that he will have to be rested during a frantic December, during which his side face nine games across three competitions.

However, he would rather field academy graduates if his squad were to be stretched to breaking point by injury, a move that is likely to give young players such as Phil Foden more of an opportunity.

De Jong's price tag is considered exorbitant for a player with such a short track record but Ajax feel they can demand it because of the growing interest and the fact that De Jong is under contract until June 2022.
