Another week, another EU showdown for May

■ PM wins approval for new Brexit deal - which Brussels has already promised to reject

CHILLY RECEPTION: The PM was told by both Michel Barnier and Donald Tusk this week that the Irish border issue was not open to renegotiation dramatic night in Westminster on Tuesday the Prime Minister defied expectations by gaining Commons approval for a last-ditch attempt to wring concessions out of the EU over the Northern Ireland border issue. MPs backed an amendment the Brexit departure to a Government motion tabled by senior Tory Sir Graham Brady calling for "the Northern Ireland backstop to be replaced with alternative arrangements to avoid a hard border". With Mrs May's support, it passed by 317 to 301 votes. She is now expected to head to Brussels to insist the EU must redraft key passages in the Brexit Withdrawal Agreement or face the UK leaving without a deal.

THERESA May is heading for a fresh showdown with Brussels after MPs this week gave her a mandate to renegotiate her Brexit deal.

Mrs May also crushed a Labour attempt to delay date. Her victory was a humiliating blow for Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn, who was forced immediately to drop his refusal to hold face-toface talks with her about Brexit. He suffered a damaging split when 14 Labour MPs defied him by rebelling. But Brussels responded by digging in and pledged to resist redrafting the Brexit deal. European Commission president Donald Tusk said the Withdrawal Agreement was "not open renegotiation".

But former foreign secretary Boris Johnson, a Brexiteer critic of the Prime Minister, said she had now received a mandate from Parliament with a "clear, unambiguous" message that the backstop has to be removed from the Withdrawal Agreement.

He said: "I hope that our friends in Brussels will listen and that they will make that change."

Mrs May's victory represented astonishing turnaround a fortnight after her Government suffered the biggest Commons defeat in history over her Brexit plan. During five hours of debate, a string of Tory MPs who had voted against the Prime Minister's Brexit deal two weeks ago promised to back her. Sir Graham urged MPs to vote for his amendment to signal to Brussels that "there is an cont. on page 2, col 1

Leave voters 'like armchair football bosses' says Blair

TONY Blair provoked fury among Eurosceptics this week as he compared 17.4 million Brexit voters to football fans who think they know better than the club manager.

The former Labour prime minister said MPs knew best on Brexit because running the country was their "day job".

Mr Blair's incendiary remarks came as MPs prepared to vote on a series of Brexit "plan Bs" on Tuesday night. At an event in London, Mr Blair, 65, said declining trust in mainstream politics and media made angry voters gravitate towards simplistic answers from Right and Left. He called for a "muscular centre ground" to provide evidence-based answers on issues such as immigration.

'day job'

But he shied away from advocating a new centre party, saying: "My hope is that my party comes back to a centre-Left position." He said when he had tried to explain the EU workings that made him oppose Brexit, one member of the public replied: "You're just trying to say to me that you know far more about this than I do." Mr Blair said: "I was prime minister for 10 years. I follow Newcastle

United – if a game is on the TV I will watch it, but I know that Rafa Benitez has forgotten more about football in a day than I will ever know.

"It's because that's what he spends his life doing. You send people to Parliament and that's their day job. It's not your day job. So if they study the detail and say this is a bad idea they are not squabbling children. They are doing what you sent them to Parliament to do."

Asked about potential civil unrest if Brexit does not happen, Mr Blair referred to France's 'gilets jaunes' [yellow vest] movement. He said: "If people are going to will take them seriously." Twitter user Gary Byrne said Mr Blair "disregards the views of more than 17 million people who voted for Brexit". He added: "He got a lot badly wrong when he was prime minister, so why should we trust his views now?"

agreement which can win majority support in the House of Commons".

After the amendment had passed, the Prime Minister said: "We will now take this mandate forward and seek to obtain legally binding changes to the Withdrawal Agreement."

She added: "If this House can come together we can deliver the decision the British people took in June 2016, restore faith in our democracy and get on with building a country that works for everyone."

But May is unlikely to find much wriggle room with EU leaders, as their chief negotiator Michel Barnier said the Irish backstop is "part and parcel" of the Brexit deal and will not be renegotiated.

Barnier Mr "Calmly and clearly, I will say right here and now - with this withdrawal agreement proposed for ratification - we need this backstop as it is.

"Rejecting the backstop as it stands today boils down to rejecting the solution which has been found with the British, but the problem remains."

Mrs May had a 45-minute phone call with the President of the European Council, Donald Tusk, on Wednesday evening, described as "open and frank" by one source, as Mr Tusk reiterated the withdrawal agreement was not up for renegotiation.

The source also said Mrs May was told the EU could not keep guessing what might work, so it was up to the UK to provide solutions that could get a majority in the Commons.

Shark and chips? Investigation finds endangered sharks routinely sold in high street fish and chip shops Endangered sharks are routinely being sold to unwitting customers at fish and chip shops, an investigation has found.

Scientists tested fish passed off under umbrella names such as "huss", "rock salmon" and "rock eel", finding a majority came from sharks which are protected because of declining numbers.

The investigation also tested fin samples at fishmongers and fish wholesalers, finding evidence of imported hammerheads, which are subject to international trade restrictions because their endangered status.

The team at Exeter University, used DNA "barcoding" techniques to establish the provenance of samples, said their results show it is "impossible" for consumers to know what they are buying.

They called for more stringent food labeling so people know what species they are eating.

shark commonly found to be sold in the fish and chip shops investigated was spiny dogfish, a species that is illegal to catch intentionally in European waters.

The shark has been overfished for years thanks to its popularity, particularly in northern Europe, but is still favoured by takeaway shop owners because of its moist flesh and strong taste, the investigation found.

Dr Andrew Griffiths, who led the research, said vendors were deliberately confusing customers and regulators by labeling the product with ambiguous names that do not include the word "shark".

"Spiny dogfish have been pushed to really desperate levels and I spoke to customers who were totally shocked they were eating shark," he

"You just cannot tell." Dr Griffiths added eating unwittingly could pose a risk to pregnant women, because of the high levels of mercury in the meat.

Other sharks sold in fish and chip shops and fishmongers included smooth-hounds, starrv nursehounds and blue sharks.

The investigation, which is published in the journal Scientific Reports, also took fin samples from fishmongers and fish wholesalers.

Genetic testing found evidence of scalloped hammerhead sharks destined for the Asian restaurant market, which considers shark fin soup and related dishes a delicacy.

The team found fish wholesalers were charging up to £86 for just three shark fins.

"The discovery of endangered hammerhead sharks highlights how widespread the sale of declining species really is – even reaching Europe and the UK," said Dr

Contrite Philip opts for passenger seat after letter of apology is sent to car crash victim

PRINCE Philip has finally apologised to a woman injured in his Sandringham car accident.

The crash, which left Emma Fairweather, 46, with a broken wrist, called into question whether the Prince, 97, should be behind the wheel of a car. Before the letter arrived, Emma had spoken out publicly, claiming she was "lucky to be alive" and that the Duke had not said sorry.

She said: "It has been such a traumatic and painful time and I would have expected more of the Royal Family."

Prince Philip has since sent her a letter wishing her a "speedy recovery", while blaming the low sun as the reason for not seeing her car coming. He wrote: "I would like you to know how very sorry I am for my part in the accident at the Babingley crossroads.

"I have been across that crossing any number of times and know very well the amount of traffic that uses that main road.

"It was a bright sunny day and at about three in the afternoon the sun was low over the Wash.

"In other words, the sun was shining low over the main road.

"In normal conditions I would have no difficulty seeing traffic coming from

"I am very contrite about the consequences."

On Saturday, Prince Philip was spotted as an unhappy passenger being chauffeured around in a Land Rover. Since the crash he had been seen driving without a seat belt and sources suggested he was unwilling to give up his independence. However, his remorseful letter and these latest images as a passenger suggest he may have had a change of heart and could have decided the time has come to hang up his driving gloves. Norfolk police are still investigating the crash which resulted in the Duke's Land Rover overturning. Despite this, he was found to have suffered no injuries of his own after undergoing a full check-up at the Queen Elizabeth hospital in King's Lynn.

The accident occurred when Philip pulled out from a side road near the Sandringham estate in Norfolk on January 17. In the car with Ms Fairweather was the driver, a 28-year-old woman who suffered cuts to her knees, and a ninemonth-old baby who was uninjured.

Buckingham Palace will be hoping the Duke's letter will stem growing concern over the incident. Ms Fairweather had appeared on ITV's This Morning. She said good wishes she had received from the police liaison officer and the Queen's Public opinion had turned sour against the Duke, particularly when he was seen driving without a seat belt days after the accident, with many calling for him to face prosecution. Responding to these calls, a Norfolk police spokesman said "suitable words of advice have been given to the driver".

"This is in line with our standard response, when being made aware of images showing this type of offence," he said.

Dr Griffiths said that once shark fins have been processed they become difficult for inspectors to identify. The new paper follows a series of high-profile food fraud scandals in recent years, the most prominent of which were revelations of the widespread passing off of horse meat as beef in 2013.

Home Secretary introduces new orders to tackle 'senseless' knife crime

A CRACKDOWN on knifegangs "traumatising communities" across Britain was launched this week by Home Secretary Sajid Javid.

Suspects as young as 12 will face curfews, social media bans and could even be barred from certain streets to prevent more bloodshed.

But critics said they feared the proposals are "too little, too late" as knife crime has soared to record levels and fuelled rising homicide rates in England and Wales.

One former minister said these powers should have been introduced a "long time ago".

And Dr Adam Lynes, senior lecturer in criminology at Birmingham City University, said: "The right way to address this would be bigger budgets for the police, more money spent on communities, more for youth centres.

"My real concern is that they waited too long to help these young people and locking them up isn't going to make things better.

"It's like putting a plaster on a wound and it will just continue to grow and fester.

"You're not dealing with the real root causes and structural factors.

"They have waited too long to help these communities."

The radical new powers will help police catch drug dealers, thugs and gang members before they attack someone with a knife, experts said. And social media bans will prevent criminals from being able to "glamourise" their exploits while acting like an "online hero" on sites such as YouTube, Instagram and Twitter. Trading Standards officers will be given £500,000 to snare more shopkeepers illegally selling knives to children, a scandal highlighted by the Daily Express, officials confirmed.

Mr Javid said: "I have been clear that I will do everything in my power to tackle the senseless violence that is traumatising communities and claiming too many young lives.

"The police already have a range of measures they are using to keep our streets safe, but there is more we can do to help them in this battle.

"I have listened to their calls and will be introducing these new orders to stop gang members carrying knives in the first place."

More knives were used in killings, robberies and assaults last year, according to figures compiled by the Office for National Statistics. In the year to September, killings involving knives rose 10 per cent to 276, a fourth consecutive annual increase.

Patrick Green, chief executive of the Ben Kinsella Trust, said: "For want of a better expression, they appear to be a form of Asbo for knife carriers.

"Will they work? They will certainly help the police to disrupt the activities of habitual knife carriers by placing restrictions on their movement, contacts and social media activities.

"The Knife Crime Prevention Orders will allow the Police to intervene and arrest suspects earlier, when they breach their conditions rather than waiting for an offence to take place. I strongly welcome the increased measures in relation to retailers who break the law by selling knives to under 18s.

"We have spoken about this in the past and with one in five retailers failing to observe the law, more needs to be done to bring these rogue traders to justice. Slap on the wrist fines have not worked and the law does allow for custodial sentences to be applied for the illegal sale of knives. It is about time that this sanction was applied to retailers who repeatedly break the law."

Nearly 5,000 people sought hospital treatment for knife wounds from April 2017 to March 2018 – 15 percent more than the previous year – according to NHS fi gures. Overall, knife crime increased by eight per cent last year. Ministers will include the changes in the Offensive Weapons Bill currently going through Parliament.

THE Duchess formerly known as the actress Meghan Markle has paid her first official visit to the National Theatre since she took over from the Queen as its patron on January 10.

Director Rufus Norris joked that Meghan, 37, who is due to give birth to her first child in April, might not be up for a return visit too soon. "That's obviously a matter for Kensington Palace but obviously she has her own production to come," he said.

The Duchess of Sussex, looking peachy in a £1,728 Brandon Maxwell mini dress with a matching £2,004 blazer, £440 Aquazzura pumps and carrying a Carolina Herrera clutch, recalled the thrill of acting. "It's unbelievable to be out on stage: that whole sense of self that comes out...just so wonderful," she said. She revealed she had made a private trip there in December to watch a performance by primary school children on First World War themes. Meeting them again in one of the theatre's rehearsal rooms, Meghan told the pupils from Edith Neville Primary School in Camden, north London: "You guys did an amazing job when I saw you perform right before Christmas.

"I snuck in and watched. It was great, I didn't want to leave."

She told them she recognised some of their faces. And the pupils recognised her – though one was expecting someone else. Pupil Kroni Pacolli, 10, said: "We didn't know who was coming, just that it was a VIP.

Internet firms face ban after families blame them for teenage suicides

THIRTY families say they fear social media played a part in the suicide of their children, a charity said on Monday.

It follows the death of 14-year old Molly Russell in November 2017, described by her family as a 'gorgeous, happy, joyful' teenager who was found dead in her bedroom in November 2017 after viewing images of self harm on both Instagram and Pinterest.

Molly's father, Ian, who told the BBC last week that he believed Instagram "helped kill his daughter" by using algorithms that encouraged her to view more and more distressing material, was joined by about 30 other families who contacted the suicide prevention charity Papyrus to reveal that they believe social media was a factor in the deaths of their children too.

The distraught father said that other social media sites including Pinterest — usually associated with lifestyle, food and fashion — had suggested disturbing content to his daughter, possibly contributing to her death.

'profound effects'

"A week after she died I had an absolute desperate need for answers," he said. "It's such a mystery. She went to bed so happy. What could have caused it? The only thing she had access to were her two electronic devices. What had triggered her?"

For a year the family tried to get Molly's iPhone and iPod Touch unlocked to see what she was exposed to and what messages she might have received that night. They were rebuffed. Yet Ian and his oldest daughter could see some of the sites Molly had accessed on the family computer. They found her Instagram account and saw that among the hundreds of people she followed, including family, friends, pop groups and fashionistas, were 50 or 60 with tags such as "sad", "lonely" or "depressed".

"The more I looked, the more there was that chill horror that I was getting a glimpse into something that was unknown to me and had such profound effects on my lovely daughter.

"We went to one [account] Molly was following and what we found was just horrendous. They seemed to be completely encouraging of self-harm, linking depression to self-harm and to suicide, making it seem inevitable, normal, graphically showing things like cutting, biting, burning, bruising, taking pills. It was there, hiding in plain sight.

'desperately concerned'

"We only looked at two sites because they were so harrowing and that's what began it. There's no doubt that Instagram played a part in Molly's death," he said.

Health Secretary Matt Hancock has threatened media giants including Facebook, the parent company of Instagram, with a ban unless they act to "purge" harmful content. And a spokesman for Papyrus told reporters: "The impact of social media regularly features in calls to our Hopeline UK helpline from young people seeking help especially the 12 to 21 age group who find it difficult to get away from [the internet] because it is the way they communicate. This week the charity has had a spike in calls related to social media from young people and others worried about young people they know."

Mr Hancock warned

that companies had a duty to act over harmful content, saying: "If we think they need to do things they are refusing to do, then we can and we must legislate."

He said he was "horrified" to learn of the girl's death and feels "desperately concerned to ensure young people are protected".

In a letter to Twitter,

Snapchat, Pinterest, Apple, Google and Facebook Mr Hancock said: "It is appalling how easy it still is to access this content online and I am in no doubt about the harm this material can cause, especially for young people.

"It is time for internet and social media providers to step up and purge this content once and for all."

RICHARD E Grant was moved to tears this week after Barbra Streisand replied to a letter he sent her – 47 years ago.

The Oscar-nominated star told Twitter followers he was a "lifelong fan" of the actress when he went for a sneaky peek of Streisand's sprawling California estate this week. After getting permission from security, the 61-year-old took a picture and shared his letter in which, aged 14, he offered the performer "two-week holiday, or longer" at his family home in Swaziland, where he was born. He assured the Funny Girl actress there was "no

Brits in LA

Meet A Member: Blaise Serra

Meet Blaise Serra who moved to LA one year ago from Connecticut to pursue a career in magic.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA? I was drawn to LA due to the entertainment industry here. Back home, I never met another magician until after I had already begun performing so I didn't know many like-minded people. When I received a letter from the Magic Castle informing me that my membership audition had been approved and I would have the opportunity to begin performing there, I knew moving to LA was the next step on this path so that I could collaborate with other artists and hone my craft in one of the biggest hubs of in entertainment.

What do you miss most from home?

I miss spending time with family the most, as I went from living with my parents to moving across the country at 18 and not knowing many people. Also, here specifically in Hollywood there definitely isn't the privacy and quiet that I was used to back home. But that doesn't reflect on all of LA, and right now I love the feeling of being right in the middle of the action and excitement.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? I was astonished at just the amount of people here! Especially Hollywood, wondered if I would ever feel the sense of community I had back in my small town. My impression has changed however, and I now realize that if I look through the sea of tourists I see the same familiar faces each day. I'm grateful for the new friends I have here, like those I've met through Brits in LA, which make this big city feel much smaller.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Connecticut?

I think the biggest difference between back home and LA, other than the fact that I'd never seen this much traffic before, is that there is so much to do here! You could go to a different restaurant or entertainment destination each night and still never experience all that this city has to offer.

PLAISE SERDA: "always he the same rerson whether

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us? This isn't really a 'hidden' gem, but I would urge anyone that hasn't been to the Magic Castle to jump at any opportunity to experience that incredible place. I love performing there, but I still enjoy going just to get brunch or see the array of talent put on display there every night. In order to go you do need to be invited, but you probably know a magician or a friend of one even if you don't realize it that can help you to gain entrance to this Mecca of magic.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

I've heard others give the advice of "figure it out when you get here." While some people have success with that philosophy, personally I don't work that way. My advice would be to visualize your goals and set a plan for achieving them so that when you arrive in LA you're ready to get to work. A quote I love by inventor Charles Kettering is "A problem well-stated is half-solved." If there is something you would like to change or attain, clearly define what it is and a plan of action will begin to take form. Once you can see where you're going and have stepped foot on the path, it's much harder to get lost.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

My father told me to always be the same person, whether I was being looked at "through a camera lens or a contact lens." I'm still early in my own journey but I do feel that in a city filled with many people that are trying to transform into what others want them to be, I've found that any opportunities I've had so far have been due to what I do differently as a magician. Genuine individuality and honesty (attributes that seem to be especially prevalent in Brits) are definitely traits I look up to and aspire to uphold.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment?

I've been releasing much more content recently, especially on Instagram. My username on all platforms is @ blaiseserra, and my website is www. blaiseserra.com. worked closely with the 2018 America's Got Talent winner, Shin Lim, while he was competing. Now he is producing a collection of some of the advanced magic routines and techniques I have created to sell to magicians entitled "The One Armed Bandit," which will be available at www. shinlimmagic.com this month.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: It's time to finish up or let go of a situation that has been in flux for some time. While your have the boss of Aquarius visiting you now, your intuition will be on alert. The full picture will be clearer by the end of next week. With this knowledge life can be sweet.

TAURUS: You can be sure you are on the right track career-wise this month when you listen to your inner knowing. Pay attention to what your wants are rather than what you need. Maybe your life is somewhat hectic lately, so block out anything that is not relevant.

GEMINI: You have a lot of energy at your disposal this next week or so. However you should be careful not to let others pull the wool over your eyes. You have a lot of different areas you are dealing with currently and you can achieve a lot by taking some time checking things out well.

CANCER: Chances are you have been a bit reclusive of late. While this is often a normal way of life for you on occasions be sure you are seen out and about this next week. Saturn is waving at you and giving you some steam to get you motivated.

LEO: This is a time for being more proactive in your area of health as the presence of Uranus in your cousin sign of Aries as been disruptive for some of you. While life has its ups and down always remember the lesson in everything. Take care of you first.

VIRGO: It's time for you to be actively looking for a less stressful way to live life. Uranus will soon be entering your cousin sign of Taurus and will be taking notice of what is not working overall in your life. This month ahead gives you plenty of time to make changes.

LIBRA: Now that Jupiter has tuned in and settled in your area of communication it's possible things can turn in your favor in a few areas of your life. So do not be sitting around waiting for the opportunities to appear, be ready to open new doors to embrace them.

SCORPIO: You likely are having some challenges – probably more than most - to deal with right now. But things will improve very soon, so don't hesitate to take a time out if you need one. Your inner vibrations have been out of tune recently but by the middle of February things will be much more harmonious.

SAGITTARIUS: Now your boss planet Jupiter is going full speed ahead in your life it's time for you to take a big step and assist him to help you. This period is tailor-made for you adventurous souls, just remember to be sensitive to others' feelings as you move forward.

CAPRICORN: With Pluto living with you and slowly inching forward it is the best time to plan how you want to proceed for the foreseeable future. Saturn your boss also in your house is watching from the sidelines and keeping you on your toes in very subtle ways...so stay aware.

AQUARIUS: You are on the verge of a new cycle and you can actually achieve this week some thing you have looked to do for a while. Your boss Uranus is getting ready to move into a fixed earth sign Taurus and like you is not easily moved and will not take no for an answer. You are on notice.

PISCES: Life has been a bit boring of late for some of you, this will not last forever so put plans in order to change the energy up a little. Next week will be more eventful. Some times it is good to take a backseat and chill out. This week is the end of this cycle.

BRITS IN LA

No snow jobs at Sundance...

SUNDANCE was as snowy and hectic as ever this year, and in keeping with the mood of the times, the events was dominated by controversy.

The iconic film festival in Park City, Utah is always full of Hollywood movers and shakers (and plenty more wannabes) wandering up and down Main Street. Sundance is indeed a film festival, but you are likely to run into a ton of people who are not there to see films. For them it's all about the parties. And trust me when I say I hit my fair share but I was definitely there to see films too. In fact in three days I fit in a whopping 14 movies. The standouts for me in the narrative section were ADAM by director Rhys Ernst and SHARE by Pippa Bianco. Bianco's film tells the story of a high school girl who wakes up on her front lawn after a night of partying with her friends and can't remember how she got home. Cut to a few days later when she receives a ton of messages from her friends showing graphic footage the ordeal she suffered the night before. Starring newcomer and standout Rhinaane Barreto as Mandy, this movie sheds light on how a simple fun night out can turn sinister real fast and how it effects everyone, including friends, teachers and family members.

"Adam" stars Nicholas newcomer Alexander as a 16-year old with his lesbian sister in New York City in the mid 2000s and who happens upon a relationship with a bisexual girl who mistakes him for a trans boy. This indie comedy is an eye-opening account into the transgender lives and explores how not telling the whole truth can land you in hot water. Speaking of lies, one of my favorite documentaries was The Inventor: Out for Blood in Silicon Valley, which documents the story of young entrepreneur Elizabeth Holmes, founder of Theranos, company which raised huge sums from investors by promising to revolutionize blood testing, only to come crashing down when it emerged the company's 'groundbreaking technology' was essentially fiction. Holmes has been charged by the SEC with a "massive fraud", involving more than $700 million, as has former president Ramesh "Sunny" Balwani.

The first thing you notice about Elizabeth is her lack of blinking. She can literally look at you for five minutes without blinking. Interviews with former employees and journalists tell the cautionary tale of how trying to 'fake it till you make it' can have very serious repercussions.

But the hottest ticket by far was the controversial documentary "Leaving Neverland", a disturbing four-hour documentary that can be seen on HBO and Channel 4 in the UK in March and is bound to cause some worldwide upset, not only for survivors of abuse, but also from the diehard fans of Michael Jackson. The screening had heavy security, including sniffer dogs and metal detectors. And we were advised going in that there are many graphic and upsetting moments and that if anyone needed to leave there would waiting counsellors

On a brighter note there is now far more support for abused kids than ever before, especially from the Craig replacements. 'To say this film left an impression is an understatement. I was a huge Michael Jackson fan and when he went to trial a year before he died, I, like many others, thought his accuser was simply looking for a payday. But as these now grown men shared gut-wrenching stories I was filled with an overwhelming TICKETS ARE ON SALE NOW about CHECK EVENTBRITE.COM innocence lost. Liam's date with Naomi sets tongues wagging!

Former One Direction singer, Liam Payne and Supermodel Naomi Campbell, have been spotted on a date just days after their flirty Instagram messages were revealed.

The stars stepped up their romance and enjoyed a night out at London's O2 Arena on Monday, where they watched Nigerian singer Davido perform.

Liam and Naomi were swamped by fans inside the venue as they left their private VIP suite.

Excited bystanders shared videos online that reveal Liam guiding Naomi as she dodges cameras and leads the way.

The supermodel stunned onlookers, dressed head-to-toe in denim and wearing her hair in tight, bouncy curls.

An onlooker told the Daily Star Online: "Liam and Naomi were keen to keep a low profile.

"They entered and exited the arena via the back door and were quickly whisked up to a VIP suite on Level 3."

The sighting comes after former One Direction star Liam commented on the beauty's Instagram post – calling her "perfection".

He included a rose emoji in his message, as well as the blowing-a-kiss and eyes emojis.

Upon further digging, it transpired that Liam's affections were reciprocated on one of his smouldering Instagram posts.

The father-of-one is shirtless and staring into a mirror in the sexy snap, with Naomi simply writing: "Beautiful soul" alongside a heart emoji.

The flirty social media exchanges was noticed by Liam's fans, who took to Twitter to speculate he and Naomi are dating.

One fan wrote: "Naomi Campbell is literally the last person I ever expected Liam to have a thing with fhfdfdf I'm screaming."

Another added: "I'm not ready for a Naomi Campbell and Liam Payne relationship, I'm really not."

A third said: "Liam dating Naomi Campbell is the evidence we need to say we're living in a simulation."

The 23-year age gap is unlikely to faze Liam, who previously showcased his love for older women with ex-girlfriend Cheryl, 35

The pair split in June last year after two and a half years together – but have remained friends for the sake of their 22-monthold son, Bear.

Cheryl and Liam's relationship stunned fans when they first went public, with Cheryl initially meeting Liam when he was just 14 years old and auditioning for The X Factor for the first time.

Ben's gone Hollywood!

BohoRhap star 'Hardy' likely to make Albert Square return!

EastEnders fans were left gobsmacked earlier this week after seeing television character Peter Beale attend the 2019 Screen Actors Guid Awards.

Actor Ben Hardy, who played the much-loved character, was nominated for an award at the Shrine Auditorium in Hollywood, for his role in Bohemian Rhapsody in which he plays Queen drummer, Roger Taylor. Ben was nominated for outstanding performance by a cast in a motion picture, which is the ceremony's equivalent of the best picture award.

Hardy's appearance at the prestigious event stunned EastEnders fans watching at home, many of whom could not believe the TV star was at the event and flooded Twitter with comments about his attendance.

After seeing Ben on the red carpet, one individual wrote: "Seeing Peter Beale at award shows will never feel right to me."

Another person penned: "Awww look at Peter Beale."

Fans should probably get used to seeing the 28 year old in Hollywood after getting roles in several hit movies under his belt.

Last year he revealed he has ruled out a return to the long-running BBC soap. Asked if he considered returning to Albert Square, she said: "Probably not, to be honest with you."

I don't blame him!

Peter Crouch makes surprise return to Premier League

Stoke City striker Peter Crouch has signed for Burnley until the end of the season as part of a deal that sees Sam Vokes go the other way. Vokes, 29, has joined Championship Stoke for an undisclosed fee on a three-and-a-halfyear deal.

Speaking at a news conference, Clarets boss Sean Dyche said Crouch is having motivated still "has a hunger to come and make a mark".

He added: "We know he's a good character and he still has a desire. The main thing for me

CROUCH: 108 Premier League goals

Crouch, who turned 38 on Wednesday, has made 462 Premier League appearances for six different clubs, scoring 108 goals.

The former England forward was part of the Stoke squad relegated from the Premier League last season.

Crouch has also played in the top flight for Tottenham, Aston Villa, Southampton, Liverpool and Portsmouth.

Vokes, who played for Wales at Euro 2016, has been at Burnley since July 2012 and has this season started 10 league games for the Clarets, who are 17th in the Premier League.

Stoke manager Nathan Jones said: "Sam is a player of real pedigree, he has been promoted from this level and an experienced international and Premier League player.

"To get it done is something totally different to anything we have and we think he's a marquee player for this level."

Manchester City captain Kompany Vincent will not be awarded a new contract purely for sentimental reasons, says manager Pep Guardiola.

THE BRITISH WEEKLY, SAT. FEBRUARY 2, 2019

Magpies break transfer record to land Almiron KLOPP:

their transfer record to sign Paraguay playmaker Miguel Almiron from MLS side Atlanta United for about £20m.

It beats the £16m they paid Real Madrid for Michael Owen in 2005, and also breaks the MLS transfer record.

The 24-year-old has featured in the MLS team of the year for the past two seasons and scored 13 goals as Atlanta won their first MLS Cup last term.

"I'm very happy and eager to start and to meet my new team-mates," he said.

"The league is very competitive, this is a historic club, and Rafa Benitez himself were the main reasons why I am here now.

"I think it is a great responsibility, something beautiful for me, and I will try to offer the best I can to repay the trust the club put in me."

Capped 13 times by his country, Almiron is highly regarded in his homeland for his football intelligence, pace and left

He started his career at Cerro Porteno in Paraguay before moving to Argentina's Lanus.

And he was one of only six players to record double figures for both goals and assists (11) in Major League Soccer in

MIGUEL ALMIRON: 13 goals for Atlanta in the MLS last season

Unlike the signing of Owen, Almiron was not greeted by 15,000 supporters at St James'

Park, but the fee does represent a shift from the club's relatively modest outlay in recent times.

Martin Dubravka, Ki Sung-yueng, Fabian Schar, Yoshinori Mutu and Federico Fernandez all joined in the summer for a total of about £22m.

half-time Αt the match Liverpool groundstaff only cleared snow in the half of the pitch towards the Kop, the end the Reds were set to attack.

Klopp's side started the game in explosive fashion as they sought to capitalise on Manchester City's defeat Newcastle and took an early lead when Mane finished off a sublime 30pass move in the third minute.

But Harry Maguire deservedly equalised in front of the Kop at the end of the first half after the hosts failed to deal with a free-kick carelessly conceded by left-back Andrew Robertson.

Low key transfer window as Premier League clubs stand pat

Premier League January spending fell for the first time since 2012 with a quiet deadline day capping off a relatively low-spending window.

Deadline-day January spending were less than half of last year's totals, with 12 deals on 31 January totalling £50m - bringing the month's spending to

Kompany:

He has made just 14 appearances for the club this season and is currently sidelined with a muscular problem.

"He's incredible but the reality is in the last five years he's played few, really few," said Guardiola.

"So that is the situation we have to put on the table and the club will discuss it with his agent and make the best decision for both.

"We don't have any doubts about his quality - we miss him when he is not able to play.

"He's important, he is our captain and on the field he gives us extra that few central defenders around world can give us."

according to figures from the Sports Business Group at Deloitte.

January 2018

£430m spent by Premier League clubs, with £150m on deadline day alone. The biggest deal on deadline transfer saw Newcastle break their record to sign £20m Paraguayan playmaker Miguel Almiron from MLS side Atlanta United as well as signing Monaco defender Antonio Barreca on loan.

Wolves signed Atletico Madrid full-back Jonny Castro Otto for £15m after a successful loan spell. The next highest fee was £7m as Ante Palaversa moved to Manchester City but immediately returned to Hadjuk Split on loan.

Leicester signed midfielder Monaco Youri Tielemans on loan - sending Adrien Silva the other way. Fulham confirmed the signing of Liverpool winger Lazar Markovic on a short-term deal 90 minutes after the deadline passed, having signed Hoffenheim midfielder Havard Nordtveit on loan earlier in the day.

Crystal Palace signed Chelsea striker Michy Batshuayi on revealing the news after midnight.

Peter Crouch will have the chance to add to his 108 Premier League goals after joining Burnley from Stoke, with Sam Vokes going the other way. Cardiff spent £4m on Reading midfielder Leandro Bacuna.

The only other Premier League signings saw Brighton recruit two youngsters and send them back to their clubs on loan.

League Sunderland have agreed a £4m deal with Wigan for striker Will Grigg - a move which would be in the country's 10 most expensive signings of the window if it is confirmed on 1 February.

English youngsters Reece Oxford (West Ham to Augsburg) and Emile Smith-Rowe (Arsenal to RB Leipzig) completed loan moves to the Bundesliga.

Scottish champions Celtic signed Borussia right-back Dortmund Jeremy Toljan on loan as well as Ukrainian winger Maryan Shved and American defenders Manny Perez and Andrew Gutman but have loaned the three youngsters back out.

threatening

Maguire had earlier escaped a red card after deliberately fouling Mane 40 yards from goal when the winger looked to sprint clear, while Pereira's foul on Keita added to Klopp's frustration.

"I think everybody agrees there could have been a penalty and maybe should have been a penalty," said the Liverpool boss. "I don't know why it was no penalty."

Liverpool could have gone seven points clear with victory over a team that had lost their previous three league and cup games.

But Leicester were threatening throughout and are only the second team to leave Anfield suffering without defeat in the league this season, following Pep Guardiola's side on 7 October.

"We have a point more than before - it not exactly what we wanted to have, but still everything is fine," added the former Dortmund Borussia manager.

completes China move

Manchester United have reached an agreement with Chinese Super League club Shandong Luneng over the transfer of midfielder Marouane Fellaini.

The Belgium player (pictured, right) has already passed his medical and the transfer was finalized Thursday night.

Fellaini, 31, joined United from Everton for £27m in 2014 when he became the first significant signing after Sir Alex

Ferguson's departure as manager.

He signed a new twovear deal last summer that was due to run until 2020.

However, Fellaini has managed just three minutes of Premier League action in seven top-flight games under interim boss Ole Gunnar Solskjaer.

Having been signed by his former Everton boss David Moyes after making Premier League appearances, where he scored 25 goals and had 14 assists, Fellaini also played under Louis van Gaal and Jose Mourinho at United, scoring 22 goals in 177 appearances in all competitions.

Fellaini helped United win the 2016 FA Cup final as well as the Europa League and League Cup in 2017.

Battered Blues in Sarri state

Fans see red as Cherries rout dismal Chelsea in shambolic second half Chelsea manager Maurizio Sarri conceded "maybe I am not able to motivate these players" after the Blues suffered their heaviest league defeat for 23 years this week.

Wednesday's 4-0 loss at Bournemouth saw Chelsea slip to fifth in the table.

Sarri kept his players in the dressing room for more than 40 minutes after the game, later explaining he wanted to "talk to them alone, without anybody".

Sarri had previously said his team were "difficult to motivate" - after a 2-0 defeat by Arsenal earlier in January.

The Italian accepted responsibility for the defeat, saying it was "my fault", but after his side dominated possession in the first half Sarri said his players did not play as a team after the break and they "found it difficult to accept" going behind.

Two goals from Joshua

King and one apiece from David Brooks and Charlie Daniels sent Chelsea to a second consecutive league defeat, while the Cherries climbed to 10th.

At the end of the first half it was impossible to think the second would be a disaster and I want to understand why," said Sarri.

"Just like two months ago when we had to face difficulties, we lost our identity and played as 11 individuals."

Former Napoli boss Sarri replaced Antonio Conte as Chelsea boss in the summer. His side were unbeaten in their first 12 matches but have lost four of their past 12.

Sarri thought the "situation was apparently solved" when they beat Tottenham in the Carabao Cup semi-final last week.

But he said defeat at the Vitality Stadium means his players "need to change something in the mentality".

"You can concede but you need to play because the match was under control in the first half," he said.

"I am frustrated, of course, and it is a very strong setback because we knew this match was very important."

Ćhelsea's debutant striker Gonzalo Higuain cut a largely anonymous figure on the pitch. The Argentine star was brought in to replace Alvaro Morata, who has endured a difficult time in the Premiership and on Thursday moved to Spanish club Atletico Madrid on loan until the end of the 2019-20 season.

Morata joined Chelsea from Real Madrid in July 2017 for a then clubrecord fee of £60m on a five-year contract.

He has made 47 Premier League appearances for the Blues, scoring 16 times.

Morata played for Atletico as a youngster before joining Real Madrid.

Snow to blame for slip, says Klopp

Liverpool manager Jurgen Klopp believes snow on the Anfield pitch contributed to a frustrating night for his Premier League leaders as they were held to a draw by midtable Leicester City on Wednesday.

Liverpool extended their advantage over nearest rivals Manchester City to five points yet failed to build on Sadio Mane's early goal on a pitch that Klopp believes made quick passing more difficult.

"You saw that the ball didn't roll really," said the German, whose side were denied a secondhalf penalty when Naby Keita was fouled by Ricardo Pereira.

KLOPP: "I don't know why it was no penalty."

"If you then have the ball pretty much for 70 to 80% of the time it makes life really uncomfortable.

"The only problem is if it stays on the pitch and that was actually the cont. on page 19, col 6
