■ UK will not put officials at risk to rescue radicalized Britons, insists minister
■ Ben Wallace says 'actions have consequences' as schoolgirl who joined Isis is found in Syria

A FORMER British schoolgirl who fled the country to join ISIS will not be aided by the government in her wish to 'return home' to deliver her baby.

In a case which has divided the British public, Security Minister Ben Wallace on Thursday said he would not put officials' lives at risk to rescue UK citizens who went to Syria and Iraq to join Islamic State, insisting "actions have consequences".

"I'm not putting at risk British people's lives to go looking for terrorists or former terrorists in a failed state," he told BBC Radio 4's Today program.

He was speaking after it was revealed Shamima Begum, one of three pupils from Bethnal Green, east London, who left to join Isis four years ago, told the Times newspaper she wanted to return to the UK. Speaking from a refugee camp in northeast Syria, Begum, who is nine months pregnant with her third child, told the newspaper: "All I want to do is come home to Britain."

Her other two children have died from illness and malnutrition, with Begum saying she believed the third would be "taken care of –health-wise at least – in the UK".

Wallace said that as a British citizen, Begum had a right to return home, but anyone who joined Isis should expect to be investigated, interviewed and "at the very least prosecuted" on their return.

There are currently no British diplomats in Syria because of security risks. If Begum wanted to return to the UK, she would have "to make her way to Turkey or Iraq to consular services there", he added.

Questioned on whether the fact that Begum was 15 when she ran away might generate sympathy from the Home Office, Wallace said: "People know what they're getting into.

"This is a terrorist group, one of the worst ever in the world, that butchers people and has been responsible for the deaths of dozens of British citizens."

One of the other two schoolgirls from Bethnal Green academy who flew from Gatwick to Istanbul on 17 February 2015, Kadiza Sultana, is reported to have died in an airstrike on Raqqa, the

Two days ago, a new counter-terrorism act, which will raise the maximum penalty for some terrorism offences to 15 years' imprisonment, was given royal assent.

Farages launches new Brexit Party

P R O M I N E N T BREXITEER NIGEL Farage has declared himself as an "MEP for the Brexit party".

In the move, which came Wednesday afternoon, the former Ukip leader accused the government of "betraying Brexit" and called on people to join his Brexit Party, which was formally recognised by the UK's Electoral Commission last Friday 8 February.

Recognition by the Electoral Commission means the party can now contest elections in Britain – and potentially in the European Parliament if Brexit is delayed beyond 29 March.

"The party was founded with my full support and with the intention of fighting the European election on 23 May if Brexit has not been delivered by then," Farage told the Daily Telegraph newspaper.

He said he would stand for election, adding that the party had received "hundreds of applications" from other would-be candidates, and "significant" funds had been pledged.

"The engine is running," he said.

In December, Farage left the UK Independence Party (Ukip) which he had co-founded and turned into a hugely influential force as its leader.

He fell out with the current Ukip leadership after it appointed a farright activist, Tommy Robinson, as an adviser in December. The party is also languishing in the polls.

The Brexit Party "was registered on 5 February," a spokesman for the Electoral Commission told AFP.

It is led by Catherine Blaiklock, a former Ukip official and parliamentary candidate, who told the Telegraph she expected "thousands" of people from the Conservatives to defect.

"All they have to do is deliver a proper Brexit," said Farage of the two main parties trying to persuade MPs to support her plan for a negotiated withdrawal from the EU, but many of her own party want a cleaner break.

The continued political impasse has prompted speculation Britain could delay Brexit – something hardline eurosceptics oppose.

"I sincerely hope that this prospect is recognised by both the Conservative party and the (opposition) Labour party as a threat," Farage said of the new venture.

He added: "All they have to do is deliver a proper Brexit – the one which 17.4 million people voted for in June 2016. Otherwise, this threat will turn into a promise."

Manchester police, told Today: "The biggest challenge if she did come back will be how the police will keep her safe and how she wouldn't be some sort of lightning rod for both Islamic and farright extremists.

"If she still holds those views, that's clearly going to be an enormous challenge and you can understand why the government is not particularly interested in facilitating her return."

Commenting on the wider issue of foreign fighters a Whitehall source said: "There are no easy answers. You do not just have foreign fighters—you have foreign fighters' relatives, widows, spouses and of course children, and children who may not have any connection with British citizens.

"How are those children protected and looked after? It has not yet been fully worked through. This is all quite fresh and people are still working through what is the best thing to do.

"We cannot declare they are stateless, but we also said if they can be tried effectively where they are, that is good. There is no requirement for a British citizen to return to the UK if they can face justice where they are and the crimes were committed [there].

'ideologically damaged'

"That does not apply of course to non-combatants. We have got to make sure that if they do return to Britain, and it has not been possible to prove they were involved in fighting, they may be ideologically damaged by this. We are trying to rehabilitate people - adults will be in a different position to children because we will not have other reasons to detain people, so they are not a threat to themselves or other people."

Theresa May's official spokesman said: "Anyone who has travelled to Syria for whatever reason has put themselves in considerable danger but also potentially poses a very serious national security risk to the UK.

"Any British citizen who does return from taking part in the conflict must be in no doubt they will be questioned investigated and potentially prosecuted.

Rushanara Ali, the Labour MP for Bethnal Green and Bow, said: "At the time, when Shamima Begum and two other girls disappeared and it was feared they were heading for Syria via Turkey, I made representations to the then home secretary, Theresa May, and the head of counter-terrorism at the Metropolitan police.

"I appealed to them to work with the Turkish authorities to prevent the girls from crossing the border into Syria. Unfortunately, despite the efforts of the UK authorities, the girls did get into Syria and, as subsequent reports suggest, they joined IS [Isis].

"If it is the case that Shamima Begum is trying to return to the UK, it is now a matter for the UK police, security services and the Foreign Office, who will rightly need to consider public safety and our national security in cases such as these."

Obesity surge brings average bra size up to 36DD

WOMEN are buying bigger bras because they are getting fatter, new figures have revealed.

The average size in the UK has risen to a 36DD as the obesity crisis has resulted in larger breasts. Sales figures from Selfridges show the most popular size bought by women and girls is now up by one chest size and three cup sizes from a 34B 11 years ago. And in former decades, women who wore bras larger than a C cup were generally considered to have larger than average breasts. But more than half (53 per cent) of cupped bra sales are now a 34DD or larger.

Tam Fry, of the National Obesity Forum, said: "Dress sizes have gone up as women have increased their weight and the breast is an appendage to the body, so it follows that bra sizes will go up too. Six in 10 of women are no longer a healthy weight and the average dress size is now a 16.'

Adult obesity in England has risen from 15 per cent in 1993 to 26 per cent in 2016. The age group most likely to be overweight or obese is age 55-64. Prevalence of overweight and obesity is above 70 per cent among all age groups from 45 upwards. Obesity is one of the main drivers behind the biggest killers of the modern world: cancers, heart attacks, strokes and diabetes. The World Obesity Federation has said that unless action is taken, the cost of treating obesity-related ill health in the UK will rise from £14billion to £24billion per year in

World Cup hero Gordon Banks passes away at 81

THAT SAVE: Banks is best known for his astonishing point-blank save from Pelé in 1970 World Cup against Brazil in Guadalara, Mexico

THE FOOTBALL WORLD and beyond this week was mourning Gordon Banks, considered England's greatest-ever goalkeeper, who has died aged 81.

A World Cup winner in 1966, he also appeared in the 1970 World Cup finals, where, against Brazil, he was responsible for what is often cited as "the greatest save ever made" - a supremely agile effort from a close-range header by Pelé.

The scene of Banks's save famous was Guadalajara in Mexico, where England were playing Brazil in the group stage. Jairzinho, the fast and powerful Brazilian outside-right, crossed the ball after beating the England left-back, Terry Cooper.

Pelé, Brazil's most lauded player, met the ball with a downward, bouncing header, and was already shouting "Goal!" when Banks miraculously hurled himself across his goal, reached the ball with a flailing right arm, and turned it over his crossbar.

"As soon as I got my hand to it, I thought it was going in the top corner," recalled Banks later. "But after I'd landed on the hard floor, I looked up and saw the ball bounce behind the net and that's when I said to myself: 'Banksy, you lucky prat'."

great promise

Born in Sheffield, one of four children of Thomas, a bookmaker, and Nellie, Gordon was at first a coal-bagger and then a hod carrier after he left Tinsley County secondary modern school in 1952. Strongly built at 6ft 1in and weighing more than 13 stone, he had shown great promise as a goalkeeper with local sides, as well as for Sheffield Schoolboys, but had somehow escaped the notice of the big local clubs, Sheffield United and Sheffield Wednesday.

Chesterfield signed him and gave him his debut in the 1958-59 season. He played another 22 league games in his only season with the club before Leicester City snapped him up.

For Leicester he would appear in 293 league games and play a crucial role in their reaching the FA Cup finals of 1961 and 1963, both of which were lost, respectively to Tottenham Hotspur and Manchester United. In 1964 he helped his side to their first major competition win - a League Cup final victory against Stoke City.

By April 1967, however, Leicester had uncovered another fine goalkeeper in the locally born Peter he featured in Stoke's 1972 League Cup final win against Chelsea – still the club's only major honour – and in the same season he was voted Player of the Year in England. His playing career came to an early end when in October 1972, as he drove home from Stoke's Victoria Ground, Banks overtook a lorry and collided with a vehicle coming the other way. He suffered serious head injuries and was blinded in his right eye. Although he eventually made a good recovery, Banks could no longer catch a ball properly, and the accident put an end to his top-flight career. In all he had appeared 73 times for England since making his debut at Wembley in 1963 against Brazil, keeping a clean sheet in 35 international matches. He had also made 510 league appearances in all competitions for his three club sides.

In 1977, nearly five years after the accident, his improving eyesight allowed him to make a comeback in the North American Soccer League with Fort Lauderdale Strikers. Banks helped Fort Lauderdale to win the title in his first season there - conceding 29 goals in 26 games - and was voted the league's goalkeeper of the season.

Salisbury poisoning: website says it has identified third GRU suspect

A third suspect linked to the poisoning of the former Russian double-agent Sergei Skripal and his daughter in Salisbury has been identified as a high-ranking officer in Russian military intelligence by the investigative website Bellingcat.

Bellingcat reported that Denis Sergeyev, a graduate of the Military Diplomatic Academy, a training ground for intelligence officers, is the real identity of a man operating under the cover persona of Sergey Fedotov.

Two other Russian military intelligence officers – who were first identified by Bellingcat – have already been charged in absentia by the UK over the March 2018 attack.

According to the website, Sergeyev was in Bulgaria in 2015 when a businessman there fell into a coma along with his son and one of his company directors. All three survived the suspected poisoning, but the case was never solved. British investigators are on the ground to investigate any link between the cases, the Bulgarian PM told the Guardian on Thursday.

British authorities have not identified a third suspect, and the Bellingcat report acknowledged that "it is unclear what [Sergeyev's] role may have been, if any, in the preparation and execution of the poisoning operation".

Skripal, a former GRU officer, was convicted of high treason and jailed for 13 years in Russia in 2004, after he shared information on dozens of his fellow spies with MI6. He settled in the UK in 2010 after a spy swap.

Obituary: Albert Finney, a working class hero who loved wine, women and horses

Albert Finney, who forged his reputation as one of the leading actors of Britain's early 60s new wave cinema, has died aged 82 after a short illness, his family have announced. In 2011, he disclosed he had kidney cancer.

Finney died last Thursday (February 7th) of a chest infection at the Royal Marsden hospital, which specialises in cancer treatment, just outside London. His wife, Pene, and son, Simon, were by his side.

Having shot to fame as the star of Saturday Night and Sunday Morning, Finney received five Oscar nominations, but never won, and refused a knighthood.

Speaking to the Guardian, Daniel Craig – who starred in Skyfall, Finney's final film, in which he played a gamekeeper from James Bond's childhood – said:

"I'm deeply saddened by the news of Albert Finney's passing. The world has lost a giant. Wherever Albert is now, I hope there are horses and good company."

The director of that film, Sam Mendes, added: "It is desperately sad news that Albert Finney has gone. He really was one of the greats - a brilliant, beautiful, bighearted, life loving delight of a man. He will be terribly missed."

'angry' cinema

Born in Salford in 1936, Finney grew up the son of a bookmaker as part of what he called the "lower middle class". Encouraged byhisheadmasteratSalford Grammar school, Finney got a place at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts, where he found himself in the same class as Peter O'Toole and Alan Bates. Having established himself as a theatre actor, Finney capitalised on the late-50s surge of interest in "northern" material, and found himself cast, first, in a small role in the film adaptation of John Osborne's The Entertainer (set in Morecambe) and then as the lead in Saturday Night and Sunday Morning, as rambunctious factory worker Arthur Seaton.

Directed by Karel Reisz and released in 1960, Saturday Night and Sunday Morning proved to be extremely popular as well as a key film in the "angry" cinema of the period. As described in The Guide to British Cinema, Finney exuded "a mixture of defiance and selfishness overlaid with a raw sexuality", and allied with his unarguable screen charisma, he became a major star almost overnight.

Finney then became the face of British cinema's international explosion after being cast in the title role of Tom Jones, directed by The Entertainer's Tony Richardson. Tom Jones, with its bawdy humour and rollicking atmosphere, was a hit in the US and won four Oscars (including best picture); Finney received the first of his four best actor nominations, but lost to Sidney Poitier for Lilies of the Field.

Roles followed in Karel Reisz's Night Must Fall and the Stanley Donen-directed Two for the Road, opposite Audrey Hepburn; Finney then turned director, with the 1968 release Charlie Bubbles. Written by Shelagh Delaney, the tale of a successful writer returning to his Manchester hometown was clearly highly personal for Finney, though it would prove to be his only directorial credit. He also used his increased clout and money – to supporting other British new wave figures, backing Lindsay Anderson's radical If... and its follow-up O Lucky Man!, as well as Mike mainstream

In the ensuing decade, Finney's status as an established star saw him appear in a wide variety of material, including a mainstream musical (Scrooge), a lowbudget crime comedy (Gumshoe, Stephen Frears' directorial debut) and the star-packed Agatha Christie adaptation Murder on the Orient Express, in which he played Hercule Poirot.

In the 1980s, Alan Parker cast him opposite Diane Keaton in Shoot the Moon, the 1982 study of a disintegrating marriage, while he played the ageing "Sir" in the Peter Yatesdirected The Dresser, for which he received an Oscar nomination. The adaptation of Malcolm Lowry's Under the Volcano, in which Finney played alcoholic exdiplomat Geoffrey Firmin, brought him his final best actor Oscar nomination though he would be nominated for best supporting actor in 2001 for the Steven Soderbergh-directed Erin Brockovich.

Finney twice turned down official honours - a CBE in 1980, and a knighthood in 2000 - and revealed in 2011 he had overcome cancer after successful treatment. He was married three times, to actors Jane Wenham and Anouk Aimée from 1957-61 and 1970-78 respectively, and travel agent Pene Delmage in 2006. He is survived by Delmage and his son Simon, from his first marriage.

Telling porkies: no, Peppa Pig is not giving American kids British accents

A British show for children is allegedly warping American toddlers' speech toward "Mummy" and "to-mah-to," according to several parents who have recorded their children speaking with an English inflection.

But according to linguistic experts, Peppa Pig effect, first reported by parenting website Romper, is less victory soft-power for anglophilia than toddler normal tendency to mimic new Peppa Pig, which first aired in 2004, features a town of animals speaking in Britishisms as "zeh-bra" "straightaway" In the Romper post, Janet Manley reported that her two-year-old daughter started calling her Mummy after bingewatching Peppa Pig on a 21-hour trip to Australia.

Other parents have shared similar observations online "The most entertaining aspect of my life right now is that my toddler has been watching Peppa Pig and now speaks with a British accent," wrote Twitter user Jess Steinbrenner.

But Dr Susannah Levi associate professor of communicative sciences and disorders at New York University, said that she's "suspicious" of this idea because typically, you would develop the accent of the community around you". For example, a toddler with British parents who lives in Texas will most likely have an American accent.

"You will learn the dialect that's around you, which is learned by interactions, not by watching," Levi said.

Meghan Markle is being vilified, claims Clooney

■ Hollywood actor, good friend of the royal couple, warns: We've seen how that ends."

GEORGE Clooney has claimed the Duchess of Sussex is being "pursued and vilified" in the same way Princess Diana was adding ominously: "We've seen how that ends."

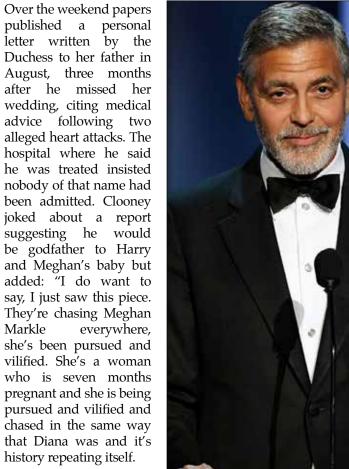

The Hollywood star also said the Duchess was getting "a raw deal" and suggested history was repeating itself over the media coverage of the two women.

Clooney, 57, is a friend of Prince Harry and Meghan and was a guest at their wedding at Windsor Castle last May with his human rights lawyer wife Amal. However it was not clear what prompted him to make the comparison with Diana as there has been no suggestion from Kensington Palace that Meghan is being pursued or harassed by paparazzi.

Clooney spoke out at an event in Los Angeles after a flurry of stories over a rift between Meghan, who is seven months pregnant, and her father Thomas Markle.

published a personal letter written by the Duchess to her father in August, three months after he missed her wedding, citing medical advice following two alleged heart attacks. The hospital where he said he was treated insisted nobody of that name had been admitted. Clooney joked about a report suggesting he would be godfather to Harry and Meghan's baby but added: "I do want to say, I just saw this piece. They're chasing Meghan Markle she's been pursued and vilified. She's a woman who is seven months pregnant and she is being pursued and vilified and chased in the same way that Diana was and it's history repeating itself.

"We've seen how that ends. I can't tell you how frustrating it is to see that. You're taking a letter from a daughter to a father and broadcasting it

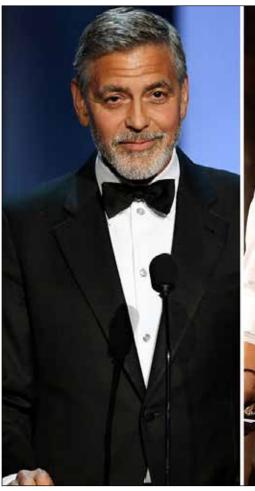

"She's getting a raw deal there, it's irresponsible. I'm sort of surprised by Clooney and his wife have 18-month-old twins, daughter Ella and son Alexander. Asked if he was going to be godfather to the royal baby due in late April or early May, he said: "No, I'm now a father of twins, I've got enough s. Literally, s."

Mr Markle, a former

'She's getting a raw deal," said Clooney of Meghan's media coverage

Relationship of father and Duchess now 'broken beyond repair'

THE Duchess Sussex's fractious relationship with her father is "broken beyond repair" with no hope of reconciliation, according to her family.

The feud between Meghan and her father, Thomas Markle, 74, is now "irretrievable" after he released a profoundly emotional private letter written to him by his daughter.

The bombshell letter tells him he broke her heart "into a million pieces" by not attending her wedding to Prince Harry last May.

Calling him "Daddy", Meghan, 37, who is expecting her first child in April, told him to stop "victimising" her, after he gave a string of interviews.

She told him she would "always love him" but was then left devastated when he responded by asking for a photo-shoot with her.

Mr Markle made the letter public after Meghan let five of her friends attack him anonymously in a US magazine last week.

'no trust'

Meghan's half-brother Thomas Markle Junior, 52, says his father's decision to release the five-page letter has sunk all hopes of a reconciliation.

He said: "There is no trust between them any more. Their relationship broken beyond "Between repair. them, they have made some abysmal choices.

Dad has spoken out in public when he should have done it in private. But then for Meghan to sanction her friends to give details about their breakdown is, after all this time, very difficult to understand.

'too painful'

"Backing him into a corner only results in one thing – he lashes out. Meg was naive to think otherwise."

Meghan's handwritten letter slams her father for giving press interviews and accuses him of fabricating stories and attacking Prince Harry.

The Duchess also accuses Mr Markle of not contacting her, shunning Harry's offer of help and being ungrateful for money she gave him.

award-winning lighting director, who lives in Rosarito, Mexico, said he kept the letter private or six months because it was "just too painful". But after reading the criticism by Meghan's friends, he felt compelled to defend himself. The Duchess also claims her father, who had a heart attack days before her wedding, did not tell her that he would not walk her down the aisle at Windsor Castle. But Mr Markle said: "The doctors absolutely refused to let me fly to the wedding. As soon as I knew, I texted Meg and Harry to let them know I couldn't be there." He believes Harry helped Meghan write the letter, citing the expression

"down the rabbit hole". He said: "Americans don't know what the hell it means. It's apparently to do with Alice in Wonderland. You Brits use it."

Ingrid Seward, editor in chief of Majesty magazine, said: "I don't think any daughter would imagine their father would allow a private letter to be published. He didn't need to do it. I don't think there is any way

But Ms Seward backed Mr Markle's assertion that Meghan's husband was involved in drafting her reply, saying: "I feel the hand of Harry on this. He clearly is very angry. She wouldn't do it without collaboration."

Brits in LA

Meet A Member: Adam Matalon

Meet Adam Matalon from London who moved to LA 9 years ago to continue work as a producer and director.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I'd been living in NYC

I'd been living in NYC for ten years and my kids were born there. I kept coming out to LA for work related reasons and always loved it here. It seemed a natural progression.

What do you miss most from home?

It's simple – Friends. Food items are great but nothing replaces people you can laugh with.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since?

I loved LA from the moment I landed for the first time. I love the lifestyle. My work can be high stress so the relaxed vibe off hours is good for my sanity, and I'm a sun baby so it's perfect.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus London?

London is all about bumping into people you know as you wander about. The car culture in LA makes that tough. LA can be a lonely city as a result if you don't build a life before you pursue your chosen career.

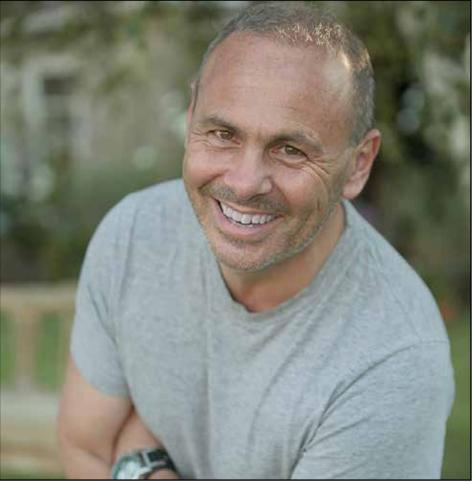

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us? My favorite Happy Hour is Sunset Trocadero. It always feels old school Hollywood, and cool and dingy enough to be exciting.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here? It's a fundamental part of the plan to assume it's going to take time to settle. You need to make sure that you are not expecting too much of yourself. Have the financial infrastructure to make sure you are not emotionally stressed and not driven by survival instincts.

You need to build a support structure and that includes as many locals as possible. I think it's very natural to want to surround yourself with the familiar and that often means other Brits, but you need to make friends outside of that pool.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

ADAM MATALON: London is all about bumping into people you know as you wander about. The car culture in LA makes that tough

I think I just expressed it, but follow your heart, involve yourself with good people and always be cautious of agendas. It's a cutthroat town and unfortunately that also means some people who are less than others.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment?

I'm very excited about two projects I'm currently involved with. The first is a short film – shot recently in the UK that I co-wrote produced and directed inspired by the true story of Stephen Endelman who is a wonderful film composer and who suffered dark issues as a child that he is now courageously sharing in this film. It is screening in LA for the first time Feb 15th at HRIFF and just won "Best Short Film" www.boymankite.com.

The other project is a feature documentary I'm making: In The Shadow of the Flag, which focuses on military veterans finding emotional peace after the return to civilian life from military service. Currently in progress the film follows 16 military veterans, company dancers, choreographers and external experts.

In The Shadow of the Flag is set against the backdrop of the creation of an original dance piece with spoken word, developed with Artistic Director Jacques Heim and his LA based Diavolo Dance Theatre – Architecture in Motion.

We just started a FB page I'll take all the likes I can get!

This Week's Pub Quiz Winners

After the closest finish in Brits in LA Pub Quiz history, with three tiebreakers needed to decide the winning team, it was Oh RLY, who emerged as the victors on February 12th.

The team are pictured with quizmaster Sandro Monetti, and secured their victory and the $75 first prize - by correctly naming Lourdes as Madonna's eldest child. Think you can pull off your own miracle by dethroning the champs? Then make your own pilgrimage down to the Cat and Fiddle on February 19th when they defend their title. (Photo by Frank L'e Sanford)

'Ancient Mariner' and 'Reading Gaol' readings at Westwood Branch Library

On Sunday, February 23rd at 2pm the Westwood Branch Library will continue their reading, lecture and discussion series with Joe Praml reading the narrative poems "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner" and "The Ballad of Reading Gaol."

Samuel Taylor Coleridge's "Rime of the Ancient Mariner" is a moving tale of an old seaman on a long journey of contrition after a mindless act of violence as a younger man, when he kills the benevolent Albatross and suffers the wrath of the vengeful sea.

"The Ballad of Reading Gaol" is the last great work of Oscar Wilde, Irish poet and playwright, written while in exile in Paris, after his release from prison where he witnessed the execution of another prisoner.

The Westwood Branch Library is located 1246 Glendon Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90024. Tel: (310) 474-1739. Validated parking is available. Or visit www.joepraml.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: You may feel more emotional than normal this week ahead. This is because your boss Mars is at odds with Venus. With your relationships of any kind this energy can make a lot of headway. Start with the easiest to make peace with it.

TAURUS: Write a list of priorities and start with the biggest as your ruler is in a positive sign right now. So if you feel like reaching out and asking someone for a helping hand, this is the time to go for it.

GEMINI: Time to deal with what has been on your mind recently, and the faster you take this in hand the better will be the results will be for yourself and others. Within the next few weeks in your overall life come significant opportunities to begin anew.

CANCER: The past signifies familiarity for you moon babies and you like to hide away in your shell sometimes. Don't indulge yourself this week ahead as chances are you will regret the time wasted. Move forward with positive thoughts.

LEO: Any trip taken before next week will not be as planned so take a raincheck and know that everything is on track for a later time. With this in mind expect and plan for a better outcome. Family matters are in the limelight these next few days.

VIRGO: If any area of life is not going as smoothly as you expect let go of worry about the outcome, all will be well by the end of the month. Be confident when asked for your advice or opinion in a family situation.

LIBRA: The main lesson of this month is that it's not the time to begin anything you will not have time to finish up. Your conscience will not allow you to take chances and rightfully so. Venus your boss is about to enter your financial area so expect some rewards.

SCORPIO: Now your problems in several areas should just about be resolved. This has been a long time coming - most of the past year in fact. Uranus has been visiting your area of health and finances and waking you up to certain situations that you may have ignored.

SAGITTARIUS: Your boss Jupiter is moving merrily forward now, ready to move into your own life with a lot of good prospects. So as he is always for your best good outcome get ready to assist him. This not a time for modesty; shine your light for all to see this next week or so.

CAPRICORN: Your boss Saturn has brought a lot of situations up for attention these past few weeks. You now have opportunities to sort things as never before. He has been digging up the stuff you may have buried deep. Soon you will see a light at the end of the tunnel.

AQUARIUS: While your boss Uranus is in Aries he has caused some problems, not only for you but for others in your life. There are no coincidences and he is always seeking to bring out the truth of situations. Now he is headed to a more stable place in earthy Taurus. With this in mind look at the positives. Happy Birthday! PISCES: You may be feeling like hiding away or at least spending time by yourself. This is a temporary feeling and is due to the shift in season. By all means take time away - go for a short trip or a walk in nature - and come back refreshed and ready for new opportunities.

BRITS IN LA

Taking the Waters in the local mountains

Greeting Britlings:

I don't know about you but I'm somewhat OVER all this rain. I guess I wouldn't be British if I didn't complain about the weather, right?

I love watching American local news around this time too. 'Storm watch'.

Really?

Back home our weather people are so calm about the weather, perhaps because for most of the year it's so damn bleak. But here the weather announcers are so perky, jacked up and thrilled that there is a pothole on the 405 causing major devastation. Now don't get me wrong, these rains for sure are causing major havoc and some people are losing their homes due to mudslides. So my heart goes out to those most affected. This month already we have had more days of rain, than not. And it's the most rain we've had all year since 1998 -where 13.68 inches of rain dropped and soaked downtown LA. On a positive note it means we have alleviated the drought conditions that plague us through most of the year leading to the catastrophic wild fires.

Raging torrents....

Last week in a brief reprieve I took the dog for a walk to Switzer Falls in the San Gabriel Mountains with my pal, the magician Paul Roffman. In order to see the magnificent waterfalls you have to cross a series of babbling brooks But this time the brooks were more like roaring angry rivers and unfortunately there was just no way to cross this time.

The engineer in me got busy and I did try to build a makeshift bridge using rocks and fallen tree branches, but the strong waters soon carried them downstream and I gave up...but not before getting in a good workout!

They say it's best to visit in the falls in early spring after the rainy season when the wild flowers and blackberries are blooming.So I'll definitely be going back and I highly recommend it to any adventurers out there, too. The trip is about 20 minutes east of Hollywood, it's easy to find on Google maps, but be careful as the 210 is incredibly steep and windy, definitely stay focused during this leg of the drive!

Clubbing it....

Speaking adventures....the h Club on Vine Street has finally opened its doors for a soft opening. Founded in London by Paul Allen, global philanthropist co-founder of and Microsoft, and musician Dave Stewart, h Club an international private members' club 'facilitating creatives to Connect, Collaborate and Create'. The official opening date is Feb 27th with a ribbon-cutting ceremony with our very own Mayor Eric Garcetti. I can't say too much but the place is fantastic, and the major points for me include a gym, a pool, a screening room and a rooftop restaurant with major views of the Hollywood sign and the Capitol Records building. I believe they are still membership taking applications at this time www.hclubla.com if readers are interesting in applying.

Ready for the Toscars?

And finally.....can the Oscars get any more controversial? First we had the Kevin Hart debacle, from deciding to go with no host this year, the kerfuffle about how many songs and performers they were going to allow. And now deciding four awards will not air live on the telecast (nominees and their colleagues from the commercialbanished categories of cinematography, makeup and hairstyling, film editing, and live action short). This measure hopes to keep the runtime of the show to a brisk three hours. Oi! Social media has been all abuzz with #boycottoscars and prominent filmmakers including Guillermo Del Toro and Alfonso Cuaron calling it a slap in the face. My take? How can you say that editing and cinematography are NOT an integral part of the filmmaking process? I can understand perhaps with the shorts.... here's an idea, what if they become a part of an another academy show?

How about calling the The Short Oscars and stream them live?

On the flip side if you are joining the boycott you can always come to THE TOSCARS instead. In case you'd forgotten, The Toscars are BiLA's annual short film awards paying homage to the 'real' Best Picture nominees. It's only a twohour show with a cocktail reception beforehand. You get to see all the movies and the awards show all in one night. Guaranteed laughs with our slew of talent and host Stephen Marcus. Tickets can be found on Eventbrite.com and it's this Thursday (Feb. 21st). So come and see what influence (if any) we have on that other awards show.

So with out further ado....good luck to all of our nominees and may the best TOS(C)ARS win!

Hope to see you there... Craig

Rachel tells all on snogging Olivia!

The Favourite's Rachel Weisz was awarded Best Supporting Actress at the BAFTAs Sunday night for her role as Lady Sarah Churchill, long-term lover of Olivia Coleman's Queen Anne, and has spoken about what it was like sharing intimate scenes with the actress.

Speaking backstage at the BAFTA press conference, the 48-year-old star told reporters: "When I snogged Olivia Colman, you want to know how I approached that?

"You know, my mouth met hers, and our mouths just opened. There's not much preparation... My character was in love with hers, and they had been lovers since they were teenagers. There wasn't an age of consent for women – it didn't matter as women... No preparation, Olivia is just gorgeous and lovely."

Colman – who also won Best Actress at the BAFTAs for her role as Queen Anne – has previously recalled what it was like kissing Weisz in the eccentric lovetriangle period drama, telling The Sunday Times: "Snogging is fine, because snogging Rachel Weisz is like you've won the lottery."

Meanwhile, Weisz admitted she felt "a bit shell-shocked"after winning her award, 13 years after winning the BAFTA Britannia Award for British Artist of the Year, and revealed where she'll be keeping her golden statue.

"I'm a bit shell-shocked actually," she said. "It's a massive, tremendous honour. I'm talking about things a bit shell-shocked. I'm incredibly proud, but I'll put it somewhere private. I have a study, I'll put it in my study."

The Favourite swept the boards at the BAFTA ceremony, winning seven awards including Outstanding British Film, Original Screenplay, and Costume Design.

A True Brit in LA...how Brian Chatton Rolled with Rock Royalty!

Knowing the author of any book certainly changes the way you view it.

Rolling with Rock Royalty by Brian Chatton, is no exception. I loved it! I read it from cover to cover and couldn't put it down until the very end!

The well-known L.A.-based British keyboard player has delivered a humorous and witty debut that covers his fifty-plus years in the music industry, which saw him rubbing shoulders with some of the biggest names in pop and rock music.

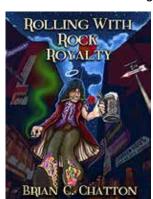

Beginning with his first live performance in 1965 at the world-famous Cavern Club in Liverpool, Chatton's memoir takes us on a journey from his humble beginnings in Lancashire to life on the road, and the glitz and glam he experienced while living the rock-and-roll dream.

This book is the result of being encouraged for many years to finally commit to paper the story of his amazing journey, which is replete with numerous "Brianisms," that many music icons came to be associated with over the years. Plus a healthy dose of British self-deprecation. And we all love a bit of that!

Since the 1960s Chatton, has lived and breathed a rocker's life. In the book he details his many escapades and encounters through the decadent decades, and appeared to enjoy everything that rubbing shoulders with rock royalty had to offer. Along the way Chatton, had the opportunity of working and partying with music gods including Paul McCartney, Ringo Starr, Ronnie Wood, Jimi Hendrix, Phil Collins, Meat Loaf, Joe Cocker, B.B.

King, Jon Anderson and YES. And this list merely scratches the surface.

In the book, Chatton recollects his many globetrotting antics as an A-list musician, while performing the smash-hit "I Wanna Be a Cowboy" with his band Boys Don't Cry.

Chatton has crafted, not only a unique book, but he's also working on a tour that will include music, and storytelling, with video projection and audience interaction.

His engaging storytelling has a level of expertise that has served him well with colleagues, friends and fans around the globe. Plus, my mother was a huge fan of his. So that stands for something, I'd say!

Stokes and Wood ready to take on the Aussies

ENGLAND will head into the Ashes with a spring in their step thanks to a dynamic Durham duo who are just about the only positives to take home from the 2-1 Test defeat by the West Indies.

England completed a consolation win in the Third Test by 232-runs on Tuesday, which just the tonic after two abject displays, and it was built upon Ben Stokes and Mark Wood, who should have a big say in England's attempt to regain the Ashes this summer.

The re-emergence of fast bowler Wood is an unexpected bonus since he was not even picked to come on this Test tour in the first place and had his lucky break when Olly Stone went home because of a stress fracture in his back. But England coach Trevor Bayliss believes it is the return to the swashbuckling style of Stokes that could be the most important aspect of the whole trip after scores of 79 and 48 not out in this final Test.

"We saw Stokes go back to his free-flowing style, trying to dominate the attack," said Bayliss. "That is what is best for him. Over the last 12 months we have seen him trying to play in the way that everyone wants him to play Test cricket or remembers what Test cricket is like.

"I think he is trying to work out what is that best for him. Will he get the best rewards if he plays what suits him best?

means doing some hard work, but we saw the benefits of his approach."

The last year has been the most difficult of Stokes' life, with a late night Bristol incident causing him to miss six Test matches thanks to a suspension and a court case, including the 4-0 drubbing in Australia. Since his return in the summer he has found it difficult to hit the same sort of heights as before the whole saga and Bayliss believes it could have had a greater effect on him than he has been letting

"From the outside it looks a little like he's back to his pre-Bristol form," said Bayliss.

"It might have been a tough thing to go through. You don't know how that affects people.

"He can be fairly hard to read sometimes.

The extra pace of Wood will be a huge asset to go with the skills of James Anderson and Stuart Broad, while Moeen Ali is in the bowling form of his life. The problem, as ever, remains with the top order, and even though Keaton Jennings, Joe Denly and Rory Burns have failed to set the world alight, they are all still in the mix for the summer.

There was no Stokes for the Aussies to cope with last time and it showed as they romped to the 4-0 win on their own patch, but things are set to be different this summer despite England's defeat in the Caribbean.

"The are some names out there who can score heavily in the county season to give us a choice to make," said Bayliss.

"We have had our problems but so too have Australia. We beat India 4-1 at home last year and they have just been beaten by India at home. It should be a good series."

United left with a mountain to climb as PSG ease to victory

Manchester United must mount a miraculous recovery operation to keep their Champions League campaign alive after they were overpowered by Paris St-Germain at Old Trafford on Tuesday night.

Second-half goals from Presnel Kimpembe and Kylian Mbappe secured victory for the French champions, with Paul Pogba sent off for two yellow cards late on.

United's revival with 10 wins in 11 games under interim manager Ole Gunnar Solskjaer raised hopes that this was the night they could reclaim their place in Europe's elite.

Instead, they were outclassed by PSG to suffer their first European home defeat by a margin of more than one goal and will now need to produce something remarkable in Paris on 6 March to stand a chance of advancing to the Champions League quarter-finals.

Solskjaer's hopes were hampered by first-half injuries to Jesse Lingard and Anthony Martial but PSG made light of the absence of injured Brazilian superstar Neymar and striker Edinson Cavani.

Former Manchester United misfit Angel their di Maria was tormentor, his 53rd minute corner allowing Kimpembe, arguably fortunate to still be on the pitch, to escape the attentions of Nemanja Matic and sidefoot past David de Gea.

And it was fitting that the brilliant Mbappe, whose searing pace was a threat all night, enhanced PSG's position of superiority when he turned Di Maria's inviting cross past the exposed De Gea on the hour.

If United's plight was not bad enough already, it was made worse when Pogba was sent off for a second yellow card in the final minute of normal time and will miss the second leg.

Di Maria's frustrating spell at Manchester United after a then British record £59.7m move from Real Madrid was reflected in the barrage of jeers that accompanied him throughout this Champions League tie. The Argentine, often poorly utilised by manager Louis van Gaal, lasted only a year before leaving United for Paris in a £44.3m deal having never produced his finest form.

Here, to their pain, Manchester United and their fans witnessed exactly what they could have had.

Di Maria shrugged off the abuse, and a needless barge from Ashley Young that sent him flying painfully downhill and into Old Trafford's cinder track in the first half, to make contributions of real significance in PSG's win.

And how he enjoyed it. It was his corner that fell to Kimpembe for the opener and he showed what he was really all about when he outpaced United's retreating defence and put the second on the plate for Mbappe as he arrived with perfect timing.

Di Maria was given a standing ovation by PSG's fans when he was replaced late on after finally showing his real worth at 'The Theatre Of Dreams'.

Ramsey pay bonanza breaks record for British player

Arsenal midfielder Aaron Ramsey has signed a precontract agreement to join Juventus in the summer in a deal that will earn him over £400,000 a week.

The 28-year-old has agreed a four-year contract that will see him join the Italian champions as a free agent, ending his 11-year spell with Arsenal.

Ramsey passed a twopart medical in January, having picked Juve following talks with a host of European clubs.

He will be the highestearning British player ever based on basic salary.

The Wales international's Arsenal contract expires on 30 June and the Gunners will receive no fee when he leaves.

In confirming the deal, Juventus said the club would incur costs of 3.7m euros (£3.2m) but did not specify what the fee was for.

Arsenal said Ramsey had made a "fantastic contribution" during his time at the club and will "have a special place in the hearts and memories" of fans.

On his Instagram page, Ramsey thanked Arsenal's fans and said he will "continue to give the team 100%".

He wrote: "You

welcomed me as a teenager and have been there through all the highs and lows I've encountered during my time at the club.

"It is with a heavy heart that I leave after 11 incredible years. Thank you."

The Juventus website welcomed Ramsey by stating he will become the third Welshman to represent the club, following John Charles and Ian Rush.

Ramsey, who joined Arsenal from Cardiff City in 2008 for a fee of about £4.8m, held preliminary talks with Barcelona and also received an offer from Paris St-Germain.

Bayern Munich, Inter Milan and Real Madrid also showed interest, with Real forward Gareth Bale understood to have encouraged his Wales team-mate to link up with him in Spain.

Europa League Round Up

Alexandre Lacazette was sent off as Arsenal slumped to a disappointing first leg defeat against Bate Borisov in the Europa League last 32 on Thursday.

Stanislav Dragun nodded home Igor Stasevich's free-kick for the game's only goal just before half-time.

Lacazette had a goal disallowed early in the second half before being sent off for elbowing Aleksandar Filipovic.

A resolute Bate held on for the win, their first over an English side at home in European competition.

The Belarusian champions will now take a slender lead to Emirates Stadium for the second leg next Thursday.

It was no more than Bate deserved as Arsenal faded quickly after a bright start on a bumpy pitch and subzero conditions in Belarus.

Aliaksei Baga's side were playing their first competitive match since December and doggedly held on to their lead in the second half.

Arsenal, in contrast, managed just three shots on target despite enjoying nearly 77% possession.

CHELSEA claimed a narrow victory over Malmo in the Europa League after they were greeted with a rousing atmosphere in Sweden for the first leg of their last 32 tio.

Ross Barkley poked in a curling cross from Pedro to score in the first half.

Olivier Giroud flicked in the second after Willian cut the ball back having beaten his opponent in the box.

Malmo ensured it was a nervy ending for Chelsea as Anders Christiansen slotted home in the 80th minute.

Victory eases the pressure slightly on manager Maurizio Sarri who said his "job was at risk" after Chelsea were thrashed 6-0 by Manchester City in the Premier League on Sunday.

Chelsea remain unbeaten in the Europa League this season before the second leg at Stamford Bridge on 21 February.

But CELTIC have a mountain to climb to salvage their Europa League dream after Valencia coasted to victory in Glasgow on Thursday.

In a below-par performance the Scottish champions rarely troubled their visitors in the last 32 first leg.

Ruben Sobrino beat the offside trap and fed Denis Cheryshev, who had an easy finish to give them the lead.

The two then switched roles, Cheryshev's cross inch-perfect for Sobrino to knock in the second.

It leaves Celtic with it all to do in the second leg at the Mestalla stadium next week in their bid to reach the last 16.

■ Poch in dreamland as Dortmund are destroyed

Tottenham a magnificent secondhalf display to humble Bundesliga leaders Borussia Dortmund 3-0 Wednesday night and take control of this Champions League last 16 tie in the first leg at Wembley.

Mauricio Pochettino's mounted remarkable revival to advance from the group stage - and they made the most of that hard work to establish a perfect platform to reach the quarter-finals.

Spurs were irresistible after a first half in which they were lucky to stay on level terms, with Son Heung-min breaking the deadlock two minutes after the interval with a side-foot volley from Jan Vertonghen's cross.

Dortmund, regarded by many as favourites with Spurs missing injured talisman Harry Kane as well as Dele Alli, failed to respond and the home side rammed home their superiority in the last 10 minutes.

outstanding The Vertonghen slid in to convert Serge Aurier's delivery and substitute Fernando Llorente headed in Christian Eriksen's near-post corner - with Spurs also keeping a clean sheet to enhance their chance of progressing.

Lots of eyes were on two young talents in the Dortmund line-up, with 18-year-old Jadon Sancho a big future England hope and 20-year-old Christian Pulisic on his way to Chelsea in the summer in a £58m deal

But this was not the night to make any serious judgement as Dortmund were ultimately overpowered by Spurs.

Sancho, who delayed Dortmund's flight London by forgetting his produced passport, showed flashes of pace and quality in the first half but disappeared from view as Spurs assumed total control.

> Pulisic was a peripheral figure throughout and it is clear he will arrive at Stamford Bridge very much as a work in progress.

> Pochettino made some vital tactical changes at the break, most notably ordering his men to press much higher up the pitch - which brought dividends within a minute of the restart, with Spurs winning possession and Jan Vertonghen finding Son unmarked in the box with an inch-perfect cross.

> The goal completely changed the complexion of the game, with Dortmund struggling to contain the Spurs pressing game and unable to find the outlet ball to Sancho which had been so effective in the first half.

> But the visitors defence remained well drilled and the tie was finely balanced before Vertonghen again intervened as Spurs again regained possession high up the field, this time the Belgian defender met Aurier's delicious looping ball to guide an unerring volley into the net for the decisive second goal.

And minutes later it was three, as substitute Fernando Llorente made a quick impression, making a vital clearing header in his own box before a notching a third goal from a Spurs corner barely two minutes later. Cue delirious scenes among the Spurs faithful as they serenaded both the team and manager to the final whistle a few minutes later.

match The the Pochettino paid tribute to his players, saying: "It was a fantastic second half. The first half was difficult. It was a difficult game from the beginning. It was difficult to find what the best position was in both directions.

"When we had the ball we struggled to play in the way we wanted to play. The team started to feel comfortable, then we scored. And afterwards we played with more confidence.

But Pochettino still believes there is "a lot of work to do" to progress to the quarter-finals.

The second leg is on 5 March at Dortmund's Westfalenstadion Germany.

"3-0 is a very good result but at the same time I think we need to think that we need to finish the job," he said.

"Always when we play this competition and against a good side like Dortmund it is very difficult."
