ID THEN THER WERE TWO.

Jeremy Hunt will face Boris Johnson in the race to be the next Tory leader and PM, after Michael Gove was eliminated in the final ballot of the party's MPs on Thursday.

Environment Secretary Mr Gove was supported by 75 MPs - just two votes short of Mr Hunt's

Mr Johnson, who was backed by 160 Conservative MPs, said he was looking forward to "getting out across the UK" and to set out his Brexit plan.

He and Mr Hunt will now be put to a vote of around 160,000 party members.

The winner will be announced in the week of 22 July.

All 313 Conservative MPs voted - with one spoiled ballot recorded.

Mr Johnson's victory had been widely expected, but Mr Gove and Foreign Secretary Mr Hunt have been engaged for several days in a close fight for second place. In the previous ballot, earlier on Thursday, Mr Gove overtook his rival, only to see his lead reversed in the final MPs' vote.

Before the final vote, a source close to Mr Hunt warned against reigniting the "personal psychodrama" between Mr Gove and Mr Johnson - who spearheaded the Vote Leave campaign together in 2016, but fell out after Mr Gove abandoned Mr Johnson's previous leadership bid to launch his own.

Following the result of the final ballot, Mr Gove congratulated his rivals and said he was "naturally disappointed but so proud of the campaign we ran".

Former Foreign Secretary Mr Johnson said he was "deeply honoured" to have gained the backing of

JOHNSON AND HUNT: the final two contenders will be voted on by 160,000 party members nationwide

Tory MPs.

Meanwhile, Mr Hunt, acknowledged Mr Johnson as frontrunner to become party leader and prime minister, "I'm tweeting: underdog but in politics surprises happen as they did today."

He went on to praise Mr Gove as one of the "brightest stars in the Conservative team".

Mr Gove's campaign manager, Mel Stride, said he believed that Mr Gove's admission that he had taken cocaine during the 1990s had damaged his bid, adding: "It stalled us more than half of all and meant momentum was lost at that time."

> Mr Johnson and Mr Hunt will now take part in hustings in front of Conservative Party members around the country, before the votes are counted, with the final result expected to be announced towards the end of July.

pint of lager

They will also take part in a head-to-head debate on ITV on 9 July, following previous leadership debates hosted by Channel 4 and the BBC.

Labour's national campaigns co-ordinator Andrew Gwynne said: "What a choice: the man who broke the NHS or the man who wants to sell it to Donald Trump.

handful of unrepresentative Conservative members should not be choosing our next prime minister. People should decide through a general election."

The ballot of MPs earlier on Thursday saw Home Secretary Sajid Javid eliminated from the contest. Mr. Javid promptly downed a pint of lager with his campaign staff in a Westminster pub and thanked the remaining few reporters lingering around hiim for their attention.

Javid's hopes taking up residence in Downing Street ended after his fourth-place finish in the latest Tory vote and the result, while not as bad as some of his staff feared at one point, is nevertheless disappointing for a man who started the year as the frontrunner.

A source close to the MP said he had known the game was up early in the day as the results from an initial ringround of Rory Stewart's backers were reported at cont. on page 2, col. 1 an 8.30am meeting.

"There were a lot of warm words for Saj but Rory people were saying, 'Look, you are just too far behind. I want to back someone who is going to make the final two'," a campaign source said.

less sanguine

It has been one of the so-far unreported quirks of the leadership race that the campaign teams for Mr Javid and Jeremy Hunt were based on the fifth and sixth floors of the same block of serviced offices near St James's Park Tube

One stop down the line the home secretary based himself in his large Commons office to watch the results come in at 1pm. He had already made two decisions: he would not do any media and would not endorse anybody.

His team did their best to gloss over the result. "My view is that he entered the race as a middle-sized beast and has left it on the rank as just below the biggest beast,"one said.

Others involved are less sanguine about the outcome of a campaign masterminded by Matthew Elliott, previously the chief executive of Vote Leave, and Nick King, a former special adviser to Mr Javid.

key error

Initial missteps included a poorly executed video and an embarrassing admission that its campaign website included a privacy policy cut and pasted from that on Dominic Raab's site. The launch was chaotic, although his media team did a creditable job of turning repeated delays because of a Commons vote into an opportunity to charm waiting journalists.

The key error had been to fail to establish Mr Javid as the race's "change candidate" months earlier, according to an observer. It was only in the final stages that he found his voice — memorably saying that he was more Homer Simpson than Homer's Iliad.

"Elliott and King turned him from the favourite into someone beaten at one stage by a rank outsider like Rory Stewart," the observer said.

Mr Javid will want to take ultimate responsibility. He was too cautious and too wooden. Although he improved over the course of the race, putting in a strong performance during the television debate on Monday, it was from a low base.

'Clean electricity' set to dominate power supply

For the first time since the Industrial Revolution, Britain is set to obtain more power from zero-carbon sources than fossil fuels.

National Grid has revealed that the milestone will be passed by the end of the year.

By then, clean energy will have nudged ahead with 48% of generation, against 47% for coal and gas.

The rest is biomass burning and energy storage.

The transformation

reflects the precipitous decline of coal energy, and a boom from wind and solar.

National Grid projects that in the past decade, coal generation will have plunged from 30% to 3%. Meanwhile, wind power will have shot up from 1% to 19%.

Mini-milestones have been passed along the way. In May, for instance, Britain clocked up its first coal-free fortnight and generated record levels of solar power for two consecutive days. The shift is being driven by the need to cut emissions of the greenhouse gases that are over-heating the climate. The electricity sector was seen as the easiest place to start.

John Pettigrew, CEO of National Grid, said this week: "Over the last 10 years there's been real progress in decarbonisation of the energy system – but 2019 is going to be a key milestone.

"It's the first time since the Industrial Revolution Clean electricity is outstripping carbon-based Percent of Britian's electricity generation by source Biomass 100 Renewables Nuclear Zero-carbon 75 Coal Imports split 50 between carbon and zero-carbon Carbon 25 47% that more electricity has been produced from zero and low-carbon sources rather than fossil fuels. It's tremendously exciting because it's such a tipping point."

Source: National Grid

National Grid says it is confident to make predictions for Britain's whole year power generation based on figures so far and on historical patterns.

In years to come, more energy storage will be needed as the share of wind and solar energy swells further.

Mr Pettigrew also said that within a few years renewable energy generated when the wind is blowing or the Sun is shining will be stored in the batteries of people's electric cars for use later. The cars' charging systems will be reversed so their batteries can feed electricity back to the grid when demand peaks – like when people are cooking supper.

"One of key attributes of electric vehicles is they have a battery and therefore they can be used as a source of energy on to the network," he said.

"We could aggregate all the cars and use that electricity to support the grid when it's needed. It's going to be a really effective tool for us to keep costs down."

The firm estimates this vehicle-to-grid technology (V2G) could solve 10-15% of the UK's demand for storage.

Another way of filling in the gaps in energy when the wind's not blowing is by trading with continental neighbours.

BBC

National Grid expects that giant cables from continental Europe will soon supply enough to power eight million homes.

The firm says 63% of electricity imported through interconnectors this year has come from zero-carbon sources – much of it from French nuclear.

The zero-carbon share should increase to 90% by the 2030s as the UK trades more electricity with Norway's vast hydropower system.

Police visit army hero after Brexit coup tweet

A FALKLANDS hero has told of his shock at being questioned by police after posting a light-hearted tweet about Brexit.

Tony McNally, 57, quipped on social media that the only way to sort out leaving the EU was to organise a "military coup." The father-oftwo from Barrow, was when two stunned officers from Cumbria Constabulary visited him to discuss his proposed uprising.

Army mutiny

Now Mr McNally, who served in the Royal Artillery in Northern Ireland and Falklands, has slammed police for their response. On Tuesday Cumbria Constabulary defended their approach, saying: "We were made aware of concerns. Officers visited and gave advice regarding the post. No more action was taken."

Mr McNally had joked on Twitter: "Maybe it's time for a military coup to sort Brexit out!" He said he made the post after reading how a General warned that a Labour government under Jeremy Corbyn could face an Army mutiny. He said police compared his with threats of violence against MPs and brought up the murder of Labour MP Jo Cox before the 2016 Brexit referendum.

The veteran deleted the tweet after receiving abuse. McNally said: "I couldn't start a military coup. It was a waste of police time, totally unnecessary. The tweet was just a tongue-in-cheek, off-thecuff remark." He added: "I felt intimidated. I feel like it was an assault on my civil liberties. I'm not the enemy here. I served my country and I'm proud of it."

Trump blasts Mayor again as five are killed in six days in the capital

Donald Trump has once again attacked Sadiq Khan following further bloodshed in the capital.

In the wake of five attacks in less than 24 hours in London, the US president branded the Mayor of London a 'national disgrace' and a 'disaster' on Twitter. He said London needs a new mayor 'ASAP' as he retweeted a post from right wing commentator Katie Hopkins, which referred to the capital as 'Khan's Londonistan' and 'Stab-City'.

But if the president looked a bit closer to home, he might realise there are more than 50 US cities with a higher murder rate than London. There were 132 murders in London last year, leaving the capital with a homicide rate of 1.5 per 100,000 residents. When you compare this with Baltimore, Detroit, New Orleans and St Louis, London starts looking a whole lot safer.

In 2017, 205 people were murdered in St Louis, Missouri, which has a population of just 318,000. That's like nearly double all of London murders happening in just one

No more delays on knives - Javid

SAJID Javid has said officials must "act now" to stop children arming themselves with knives.

The Home Secretary this week allocated £35million to set up violence reduction units (VRUs) in a bid to end the bloodshed on Britain's streets. He said the work of a similar unit in Glasgow had seen a "considerable reduction in murders". Mr Javid also reiterated his support for stop and search and told how, as part of his new Public Health Approach, teachers. social workers and healthcare professionals will have a legal duty to report any concerns children are being groomed by violent gangs. The funding for VRUs, which will be set up in 18 different locations, is part of a £100million boost for police forces, as previously announced by Chancellor Philip Hammond.

The rest of the money will pay for extra police patrols in knife crime hotspots.

higher than London.

In response to Trump's recent outburst, spokesman for mayor said: 'Sadiq is focusing on supporting London's communities over-stretched and emergency services. 'He has been in regular touch with senior Met police officers last night and throughout the day. 'His thoughts are with the victims' families. He is not going to waste his time responding to this sort of tweet.'

time Trump has used London's violence to lash out at the Mayor. He called Khan a 'stone cold loser' just minutes before he touched down in the UK for his three day state visit earlier this month.

Trump criticised the London mayor's height and said he had done a 'terrible job' and should 'focus on crime'. The president tweeted: '@ SadiqKhan, who by all accounts has done a terrible job as Mayor of London, has been foolishly 'nasty' to the visiting President of the United States, by far the most important ally of the United Kingdom. 'He is a stone cold loser who should focus on crime in London, not me.' It was in response to Khan saying the UK should not be rolling out the red carpet for the president, while comparing Trump to a '20th century fascist' in an opinion piece for the Observer.

Jail for Neo-Nazis who urged attack on 'race traitor' Harry TWOneo-Naziteenagers have been sentenced for encouraging a race-hate attack on Prince Harry over his marriage to Meghan Markle.

Student Michal Szewczuk, 19, posted online an "abhorrent" image of the Duke of Sussex with a pistol held to his head against a bloodspattered background, a court heard. The picture, which also featured a bloodsmeared swastika, was shared on a far-Right site last August, soon after the Prince's marriage to the mixed-race former actress. The post included the phrase "See Ya Later Race Traitor".

Szewczuk, of Leeds, was ordered to be detained in a young offenders' institution for four years after he admitted two counts of encouraging terrorism and five counts of possession of terrorist material. He also wrote an "extremely violent and aggressively misogynistic" blog which attempted to justify the rape of women and children in the pursuit of an Aryan race.

Oskar Dunn-Koczorowski, 18, who was said to hold "deeply entrenched views in support of this extreme Right-wing ideology, admitted two counts of encouraging terrorism. He was handed an 18-month detention and training order.

Judge Rebecca Poulet QC told the Old Bailey: "The posts I have seen and read are abhorrent as well as criminal by reason of their clear intention to encourage terrorist acts."

The defendants, who appeared in court via a video link from Belmarsh Prison, were both said to be of Polish descent but had only ever met in online chatrooms. Neither gave any reaction when they were sentenced. Dunn-Koczorowski, of west London, was 17 at the time of the offences and was living at home. Szewczuk was arrested at his halls of residence during his first year studying computer science at Portsmouth University

Royal convoy 'going too fast' when it hit gran, 83

■ Pensioner in serious condition after brush with police escort bike

ROYAL bodyguards have been accused of driving too fast by the sister of an 83-year-old badly injured in a collision with the Duke of Cambridge's motorcycle escort.

Distraught Joyce Shore, 86, said widow Irene Mayor "could have been killed" when she was knocked to the ground by an officer shadowing William and Kate. The grandmother was flown to a London hospital after suffering a broken pelvis, two broken arms, a broken leg and a head injury. The royal couple - who were being driven from London to Windsor for a service for the Most Noble Order of the Garter – are believed to have sent flowers and asked to be updated on the victim's condition.

Mrs Shore, of Woking, Surrey, said Monday's accident in East Sheen, south-west London, could have been avoided. "The police outriders have to slow down," she said. "My sister is lying in a hospital bed and she could have been killed. She could so easily have been killed."

Mrs Shore added: "I do like the royals, but the way my sister's life has been endangered is completely unacceptable. These outriders need to slow down.

'lots of injuries'

"Irene may not get through this. She is just an ordinary lady who minds her own business and then this happens. We are waiting for surgery to take place, it is going to be a long process."

Mrs Mayor's daughter Fiona, who lives with her mother just 300 yards from the scene, added: "She's got lots of injuries. They are just keeping her stable at the moment."

The accident – involving Scotland Yard's special escort group – will be investigated by the Independent Office for Police Conduct. Royal sources said the Cambridges did not see it and were kept moving, in line with standard procedure. Witnesses said the outrider clearing the route for the car went into the oncoming lane. They claimed Mrs Mayor, who has devoted herself to church work since losing her husband Walter, was sent "spinning to the ground" when a motorbike wing mirror clipped her. She was ferried to hospital by the air ambulance, but it had to hover for about 20 minutes to find a landing place. Photos from the scene showed a white police motorcycle on its side on the wrong side of the road near a pedestrian crossing. A witness said the injured woman tried to sit up, telling helpers, "I'm fine – I'm not hurt". The witness added: "The outrider was not going fast but the lady stepped out and was clipped by the bike's wing mirror.

"Her daughter was with her and became so distressed she accidentally pushed the motorcycle that hit her mother on to the floor. That's why it is lying on the ground."

She said she felt sorry for the police motorcyclist who "was grey and in complete shock" but waited for the doctors to arrive.

Irene Mayor was struck by police outriders in East Sheen, south-west London

Giles Oakley, 73, Mrs Mayor's neighbour, said: "She's a really sweet person, she's very well liked. It's very sad. I hope that she recovers." The injured woman was listed in a serious but stable condition on Friday. Kensington Palace said the Cambridges were "deeply concerned and saddened". The couple "sent their very best wishes" to the victim and "will stay in touch throughout every stage of her recovery".

Trans rights campaigners have rallied outside Holyrood to call for reforms

Scots will delay controversial gender change law

Controversial plans to make it easier for people in Scotland to change their legally recognised gender have been put on hold.

The Scottish government has stressed that it is still committed to updating the Gender Recognition Act.

But it said the new legislation would only been introduced after further consultations are held to build "maximum consensus".

The reforms have faced heavy criticism from several prominent SNP politicians.

'Valid concerns'

The concerns have largely focused on the potential impact of allowing people to selfidentify their gender in single-sex spaces such as changing rooms, and women-only shortlists.

Social Security Secretary Shirley Anne Somerville told Holyrood on Thursday that she was "acutely aware of how divided opinion is".

And she acknowledged that "there may be many people who are not happy with what I'm proposing, either because I'm not going fast enough in the proposals or because they don't want us to do anything".

She told MSPs that the government remains committed to reforming the rules so that trans people can get a gender recognition certificate "unnecessary without stress".

But she said she wanted "build maximum consensus" and address "valid concerns" before formally tabling legislation.

She said a draft bill would be published later in the year, but would not be fully introduced to parliament until there has been a "full consultation on the precise details".

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Take this week's energy and make it work and then you can see future plans emerge. The fact is that although your boss Mars is in a water sign it should not be an excuse time slack off; it can bring many opportunities for you. This last week of the month will bring some problem to an end.

TAURUS: He or she who hesitates is lost should be your mantra this week ahead if you are tempted to waste time remembering how things used to be. The planets are forcing you out of that old comfort zone. Best to let the past go and move to a positive future.

GEMINI: It seems as though all around you are procrastinating, but not you. If you make a decision this week it will be resolved by month's end. Regardless of how much or little you do to prepare you have apparently super powers to work for you.

CANCER: Now that Mars is moving through your sign be ready to make changes. In order to get the best results going forward it is good to make time to think outside the box. Be sure to put forth positive seeds in preparation. Happy Birthday!

LEO: You have a busy week or so ahead so this weekend take time out and get away from the hustle and bustle. By the middle of the week ahead you will be fit and happy and be ready to be on the go. Health problems which may have held you back are ready to be resolved.

VIRGO: You may be feeling somewhat puzzled this week ahead when people around you are act out of character or make no sense to you. You cannot second guess anybody with this planetary energy and it is best to not assume the worst.

LIBRA: How you set your course for the new month ahead depends on how much you desire to change things. Your boss Venus will help you get over your current indecision.

SCORPIO: The recent full moon in your own sign brought up some past memories. This is clearing out old repressed feelings from the past year. Just move through the short time it will take. Then you will find room to make positive changes. Work and the changes you need are on your mind now.

SAGITTARIUS: Jupiter your boss planet is moving slowly right now. With this in mind take a chance and make the changes that you want to. You are in the spotlight so get ready to make a new beginning. You must not hesitate when new opportunities are in front of you.

CAPRICORN: The recent full moon should have made you aware of something lacking in your overall life. This does not mean you missed out on something It simply means you are ready for changes. So now we are entering a new season, be ready to grab and go for the chance coming up.

AQUARIUS: You will be ready and hopefully waiting for the moment to take some kind of action. Wait until you feel it is the right time for you and it will make the difference. Your powerful boss Uranus in Taurus means that if it is right for you it will be around for a long time ahead.

PISCES: The Sun in your cousin sign Cancer this week will bring you peace of mind and some kind of completion. How you deal with this new energy will be the focus for the rest of the month. You can do this if you really want to.

Brits in LA

2020: Riffing on the early running.....

So while that orange McMuffin over-inflated cheesy wotsit is still running things in that VERY White House, there are many a murmuring that he may actually be re- elected by appealing to his base - again!

This week Trump held a kickoff rally for reelection in Florida which was reminiscent of a chorus of chanting monks - or incoherent monkeys in the jungle. Cue the usual jabbering battle cries of "Lock her up" after the obsessed leader baboon again mentioned the unmentionable Hillary Clinton. They do realize she's not running again? Who cares anymore? LEAVE HILLARY ALONE!

Meanwhile in the land of Democracia there is a resistance forming, led by wise owl Uncle Joe B. Democracia is under seige and needs help to be heard, but leading the rallying cry are the women freedom fighters Warren the Warrior and Harris the Herald. Ranged alongside Bernie the Ballbuster and Pete the Prefect and 15 others, we will get to see what these candidates are indeed made of in the first battle rounds of The Voice, whoops sorry I mean "The Debates", Twenty Davids will talk it out, push their agendas and try to convince us they are the right candidate to take down Goliath.

Samantha Bee, the Daily Show alumna and current political pundit on TBS is urging some of the less-known candidates to instead run for the senate, currently with a republican majority in place, that is over-run with older established career politicians that should have retired a long time ago. I'm looking at you, touché turtle Mitch McConnell.

Why is it important the Democrats take the senate? Well that's the place where stuff gets done. They're the ones who vote on our Supreme Court Justices, the highest court of the land to which Trumpaloompa is sending his nominees. He's already gotten two elected, including a whiney former frat bro who loves women's bodies so much, he wants to decide what they can do with them. I'm talking about Brett Kavanaugh. A reminder that when President Obama had six months left to run, Mitch vetoed any nominee he put forward, stating that it needs to be the incoming president to determine that. And he won. Mainly because the republicans also had he majority in the house and senate at that time.

So as the White House Hunger Games kick off next week on MSNBC I'll be watching with an eagle eye to see who has the best shot of becoming America's next best president. Seems the UK is copying the American format and having some quite interesting debates of their own as the Tory hopefuls - and now it's down to two - vie to replace tired Theresa May. Tiegate anyone?!?

With all the political spite in the world it's nice there's still room for some romance. Last Wednesday at Crustacean restaurant in Beverly Hills, the wonderful PR maven that is Christine

FUN TIMES AT CRUSTACEAN: our British singles night had a good turnout, and a surprise guest appearance from Joni Mitchell (below)

Peake hosted a British singles night for us, and quite a few sparks were made. It was an early soirée and so quite a few of you couldn't make it. Sodding work always getting in the way! But don't despair as we are shooting to make this a monthly thing.

There's still hope for you hopeless romantics yet. No matter what age. Even Joni Mitchell joined us, enjoying the music and looking for some good company...;)

In the meantime Brits Breakfast and Pub Quiz are still happening every Tuesday. So if you can't be lucky in love, be lucky in your belly and lucky at the Cat and Fiddle.

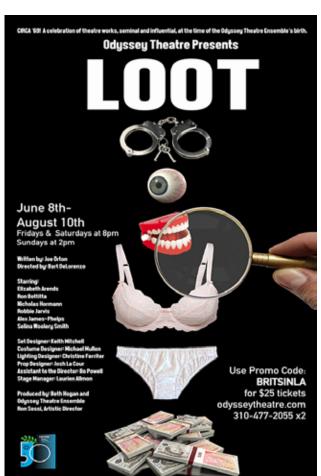

Cheers! Craig

Beach Workouts: so much fun and SO good for you!

With the local weather FINALLY warming up many of you will be turning your minds to the beach and thinking, is my body 'beachready?'

The good news is that the beach is actually a great place to work out, so whether you're in balmy Southern California, like most of my readers, or (like me) here at the Body Camp in Ibiza and Mallorca, we have reintroduced our wildly popular "Baywatch Beach" workout to classic 80's/90's dance tracks.

Here are 8 reasons why you need to hit the beach - or visit The Body Camp in 2019!

1.Encouraging new fun movement patterns!

Exercising on sand instead of grass or a hard surface encourages different muscles to fire and function within the body, the legs and the core. When exercising on sand the human body has to deal with the uneven and soft sandy surface which challenges many different muscle groups. Movements such as skipping, sprinting, pushups on sand, bodyweight exercises like planks, bear crawling and even crab walking for the more advanced are all fantastic for toning up and fitting into that bikini and mankini (men!)

2. A great break from footwear!

problem for many people and most footwear, in general, restricts the feet in many ways – especially over use of high heels in my experience! A big factor with footwear to think about also is "earthing" the body and connecting to the earth's core when this is possible. There is plenty of research to suggest that daily barefoot walking or exercising, especially at the beach is good for the mind and soul.

3. Gets you out of the local gym!

Spending your precious time in another building (a box) after a day at work (another box) is okay – if that's your only choice available. When you are outside the box - walking, running, exercising and challenging vourself on the beach, the five senses are activated and encouraged be developed. Not to mention the fresh air and the opportunity to jump into to the sea and cool down after!

4. Develops core stabilizing muscles in the body!

Using the beach for bodyweight exercises on the sand instead of the treadmill or machines in the gym will require the body to adapt in many different and fun ways. Due to the unstable surface, the weaker core muscles are now activated because of the sand and this reduces potential injuries, strengthens the skeletal system and increases bone density in a low impact way!

5. Maximal oxygen uptake improves (you improve breathing!)

In a recent study, two groups of fitness classes took part in an experiment. The first group took part in a sandy beach workout for eight weeks, twice a week. The second group took part in two classes a week on a grass surface. After 8 weeks the results came in – the fitness group who exercised at the beach improved their maximal oxygen uptake by 10%. That's 10% higher than the group who exercised on grass!

6. Less impact and stress on the body!

Due to the softness of the sand, the body is not impacted as much as the firm ground normally used in other challenging workouts. This leads to less muscle damage and subsequent soreness. You can also fall down, dive around, have fun and not worry about hurting yourself!

7. Burn more fat!

There's no doubt exercising on the sand burns more fat because of the intensity involved in the movement of the body across the beach. Being outside at the beach and not indoors also greatly increases the temperature of the body and tests its ability to adapt to the Exercising to 80's music outside environment – on the beach in the sun not the case at a cosy, airconditioned gym! Exercising to 80's music on the beach in the sun is one of life greatest pleasures, for example,

8. It's fun – especially with 80's tunes!

Exercising to 80's music on the beach in the sun is one of life greatest pleasures, for example, burpees for four minutes in the sand to "Danger Interver"

Zone" by Kenny Loggins" is wonderful – why deny yourself!?!!!

ALL SMILES: Andy Murray is back...for now

Doubly impressive: Murray back in action at Queen's

Britain's Andy Murray came through his first match since a careersaving hip operation with an impressive victory in the Queen's doubles on Thursday.

Murray, 32, wa seemingly set for retirement before having his hip resurfaced in January. Five months later the Scot was back on court alongside Spain's Feliciano Lopez at the Fever-Tree Championships.

The pair won 7-6 (7-5) 6-3 against Colombian top seeds Robert Farah and Juan Sebastian Cabal. "It was brilliant. I enjoyed it a lot," Murray told BBC Sport. "I was a bit slow at the beginning and got better as the match went on.

"I'm fortunate to be back playing again.

"Leading up to the match I was quite relaxed but I was a bit nervous when we started walking to the court.

"You want the nerves and the butterflies in the stomach and I had that."

For three-time Grand Slam champion Murray this was not about the result. This was simply about whether his new metal hip could stand up to the rigours of competitive tennis.

But he could not hide his delight - or indomitable competitive spirit - in clinching victory over one of the world's best doubles pairs at the west London club.

Murray's face cracked into a broad grin as a return into the net secured the match, Lopez then standing back on the sideline to allow the former world number one to take the acclaim of an adoring crowd.

"I learnt quite a bit tonight," added Murray. "I expected to be the worst player and to not feel particularly good on the court, which was probably the case in the first set.

"But then I think I started to play better in the second and started to serve a bit better, see the returns a little bit better and things.

"I have zero discomfort in my hip after the match. Nothing. And if I had done this last year, I'd be here aching, throbbing, and feel bad the next day.

"So I'll just keep pushing and see how it goes. But I feel optimistic about the future. I don't know how long it will take to get to that level, but, hopefully not too long."

England will 'give everything' for World Cup win, says Moeen

All-rounder Moeen Ali says England "can't miss" the opportunity to win the World Cup for the first time.

The hosts, who entered the tournament as favourites and top of the world rankings, will move to the brink of the semi-finals if they scure victory against Sri Lanka on Friday.

"We know we have been great - not just good, but great - for four years," Moeen told BBC Sport. "We want a trophy to

"We want a trophy to top it all off. We'll give everything for it."

E n g l a n d 's transformation from being dumped out of the 2015 World Cup in the first round has been built on the power of their batting line-up.

That was evident in Tuesday's win over Afghanistan at Old Trafford, where captain Eoin Morgan hit 17 sixes

Moeen hit an unbeaten 31 from nine balls against Afghanistan on Tuesday as part of a team total of 25 - both records for one-day internationals.

"Once we get going, it's almost unstoppable and that's the great thing about the team," added Worcestershire's Moeen.

"The likes of Morgan, Jos Buttler and Jason Roywe have so many players, almost everybody in the top eight can do it."

Moeen returned to the side for the defeat of Afghanistan having been left out of the victories over Bangladesh and West Indies.

He struck an unbeaten 31 from nine balls and is in line to play his 100th ODI at Headingley.

"When I look back,

I think back of the fun that I've had," said the 32-year-old. "All of a sudden, 100 games have come almost in the blink of an eye. It's been an amazing journey and hopefully we can finish it off with the World Cup."

Moeen's time out of the side coincided with the birth of his second child, a daughter named Haadiya.

"It's obviously amazing, great to have an addition to the family," he said. "She is sleeping, but I've not seen her a for a few days. My wife is doing all the hard work.

"It has added an extra bit of happiness in my life with everything that is going on. It is an amazing miracle and you realise how important family is to you.

"You know how hard it can be for the mother and you have to be there to be supportive. You put cricket and the World Cup to the back seat as much as you can."

A win on Friday would be England's fifth from six World Cup games and would put them on 10 points, possibly enough for a place in the semis.

From Leeds, they move on to play Australia, India and New Zealand.

Women's World Cup

Revenge is sweet as Lionesses maul Japan to march into last 16

THE LIONESSES marched out of Group D with an unblemished record after yet another dominant show this week at the Women's World Cup.

Ellen White struck twice as England beat Japan 2-0 to ensure Phil Neville's much-changed side chalked up their third win on the spin. The forward produced a super-cool finish in the 14th minute as England earned revenge against the country who knocked them out of the semifinals four years ago in such heartbreaking fashion. And White followed that up by finishing off a superb one-touch move six minutes from time to cap a thoroughly impressive display. England will now travel to Valenciennes to face Cameroon in the round of 16 on Sunday.

In one sense, it was a familiar story as the Lionesses again found themselves on the end of inspired goalkeeping from the visitors. Against Scotland, Lee Alexander had an evening to remember. It was veteran Vanina Correa who came up trumps for Argentina. And on Tuesday night it was Ayaka Yamashita who made strong claims for the player-of-thematch award.

The 23-year-old stood in the way of countless attacks as England went in for the kill. The Lionesses' goal had not been put under sustained pressure in either of the opening two Group D fixtures but it took only eight minutes for keeper Karen Bardsley to prove her worth as the last line of defence. England had conceded a free kick a full 30 yards from their own goal. It looked ambitious when Kumi Yokoyama tried her luck. The striker could not have placed her shot more accurately in the top corner but Manchester City's shotstopper palmed the ball on to the woodwork and behind. It was a high-class save. That served as a warning because Neville's side started sluggishly. However, they sharpened up and forced Japan to surrender possession inside their own half.

Georgia Stanway had been bright and lively and she held off Nana Ichise and threaded a ball through to White. The striker had her angles worked out beautifully and found a lovely clipped finish. That sparked England's best period of the half. And Japan had their keeper Yamashita to thank for a string of saves by the interval. She was at full stretch to deny Jill Scott, who tried her luck from distance. Then a corner routine ended with Stanway cracking a vicious strike that wobbled in the air before it was parried to safety. After the break, the pattern of the match initially remained the same. England looked composed and comfortable in possession and cut through the Japanese ranks again. Lucy Bronze centered and the ball was met by Toni Duggan but Yamashita was again in a position to block. After a couple of close shaves, the game was finished when White rounded off a crisp move that left Japan chasing shadows.

including Portsmouth, Southampton, West Ham, Tottenham and QPR - revealed he had personally told Derby chairman Mel Morris to hire Lampard, who he says "wasn't even on the radar".

If Lampard was to return to Stamford Bridge, where he won three Premier League titles and the Champions League as a player, Redknapp says there would be little pressure on him.

"It's a no-lose situation unless he finishes outside the top six. Anything in the top six would be ok, but the Champions League would be a good season," he said.

"No one is expecting him to finish first or second, third maybe. If he makes the Champions League next year, he's going to be a success."

Redknapp, 72, added: "He's a true legend at Chelsea, one of the greatest players in the club's history.

"It may not come along again, you never know in football, the opportunity is there for him to go back now.

"He has a house around the corner from the training ground, his wife works in London."

Former Arsenal forward Freddie Ljungberg has been named firstteam assistant coach to Gunners manager Unai Emery.

The Swede is replacing Steve Bould, whose new role includes taking charge of the under-23 team. Ljungberg, who played 214 games and scored 46 times for Arsenal, says he is "really excited" to work with Emery.

The former Sweden international was part of Arsenal's 'Invincibles' side under Arsene Wenger.

Since starting his coaching career, 42-year-old Ljungberg has also been in charge of the club's under-16s squad.

Bould, meanwhile, is to take up a new role back in the academy, which he ran for 11 years before becoming Wenger's assistant manager in 2012, staying on to work alongside Emery last season.

The former Arsenal defender, 56, will also help oversee the under-23s and under-18 'phase programme' with current Arsenal Academy manager Per Mertesacker.

Walker signs new two year deal to stay at City

Manchester City's Kyle Walker has signed a twoyear contract extension that will keep him at the Premier League champions until 2024.

Walker, 29, became the world's most expensive defender when he joined City from Tottenham in a £53m deal in 2017.

The England full-back made 65 league appearances as the Blues won back-to-back titles under Pep Guardiola.

He also started the FA Cup and Carabao Cup finals last season as City claimed an unprecedented domestic treble.

"I'm thrilled to have signed a new deal," Walker said. "Playing for City has been everything I'd hoped it would be and more.

"It was an easy decision.

I want to be competing for trophies, playing at the highest level, and I feel I have improved hugely as a player during my time here."

Pogba on his way out?

Unsettled star hints at United exit

Paul Pogba says this summer "could be a good time to move elsewhere".

The France World Cup winner has been linked with a big-money move to Spanish giants Real Madrid or former club Juventus, the Serie A champions.

However, the 26-yearold midfielder, who was named in the PFA Team of the Year in 2018-19, is contracted to the Premier League club until July 2021.

"I am thinking of this: To have a new challenge somewhere else," Pogba

"For me, I have been for three years in Manchester and have been doing great; some good moments and some bad moments, like everybody. Like everywhere else.

"After this season and everything that Manchester United's happened this season, with my season being my best season as well... I think for me it could be a good time to have a new challenge."

> Despite the views of their record signing, it is understood Manchester United believe Pogba will still be at Old Trafford next season.

> Pogba moved back to Manchester United after four years at Juventus for a then-world record £89.3m fee in August 2016, after originally progressing through the youth ranks at Old Trafford.

Pogba has made 89 league appearances in his second spell at United, scoring 24 goals. In April, United manager Ole Gunnar Solskjaer said he expected Pogba to stay at the club next season.

Also at United, midfielder Juan Mata has signed a new two-year contract to stay on until 2021 - with an option to remain for another year.

The Spain international joined United from Chelsea for a then club record £37.1m in January 2014 and has scored 45 goals in 218 appearances.

"I have been at Manchester United for five years and I am proud to call Old Trafford my home," Mata said.

Mata, who scored in the 2016 FA Cup final win against Crystal Palace and has also won the Europa League and EFL Cup with the club, said manager Ole Gunnar Solskjaer had a "truly exciting" vision for club.

"I am so happy that I will be a part of that," he added.

Solskjaer said: "Juan is the ultimate professional and one of the most intelligent players I have worked with.

"As well as everything he brings on the pitch, we have some fantastic vast experience young players and I know that Juan's help them to reach their potential over the coming seasons."

Lamps Blues return 'will happen'

Lampard Frank Chelsea becoming "looks like manager it's going to happen", says his uncle Harry Redknapp.

Derby boss Lampard, 40, (above) is the favourite to replace Maurizio Sarri after the Italian left Stamford Bridge to take charge of Juventus.

Lampard led the Rams to the Championship play-off final last season - his first year in management.

"If Chelsea come calling, it's a difficult one for him to turn down,"

Redknapp BBC told Radio 5 Live.
