

NIGEL TO BORIS: MAK A DEAL OR IT'S WAR!

NIGEL Farage says Boris Johnson has 10 days to form a Leave election pact with him - or he'll destroy his dream of a majority.

The Brexit Party boss is urging the PM to do a deal with him – offering to give Tory candidates who strongly favor Brexit a clear run in the upcoming election, but warning that if Mr. Johnson does not agree, he will run Brexit candidates in every constituency and split the Leave vote.

Mr Farage said on Thursday: "There is still a chance of a leave alliance that can be put together. "There is still 10 days for

PM: No second Scottish vote

BORIS has slapped down Nicola Sturgeon's latest bid for another Scottish independence referendum as he ruled out permitting a poll while he is Prime Minister.

Mr Johnson said there was no reason to go back on assurances given by former SNP leader Alex Salmond and Ms Sturgeon that the 2014 vote was a "once-inageneration" event.

The current SNP leader and First Minister aims to make a formal demand before Christmas for the legal power to hold a second referendum.

Asked if he would ever hand her the powers for a

Johnson re-run while he is in No 10, Mr Johnson said: "No, I don't want to have one." Ms Sturgeon initially said Mr Johnson's "waffling" response stopped short of an outright pledge to block a poll. But she later appeared to concede he would maintain his veto, accusing the media of failing to "subject this unsustainable and undemocratic position to any serious scrutiny". The First Minister insisted the refusal is "not a sustainable position" if the SNP wins a majority of seats in the General Election. She praised Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn's willingness to cont. on page 2, col. 4 he does."

"We are going to score very highly, particularly in Labour Leave areas."

With more than a month to go until the General Election on December 12th, a clear meme has already emerged of the key voter that all parties must bring onside - that of Workington man, the imagined poster boy for "middle England" who likes rugby league and Labour who voted for Brexit and feels the country is moving away from his views. In reality Workington is a former mining town in Cumbria with strong Labour roots and a largely older, working class and white population. Workington Man is the creation of Onward, a center-right think tank closely allied to the Brexit Party, and Farage insists winning him over is the key to the Conservatives building a big enough majority to secure Brexit.

"This idea that Workington man are all going to go to the Conservatives is, I can promise you, nonsense," said Farage on Thursday.

"They are going to vote Brexit party in big numbers."

Farage himself says he will not stand in the General Election, because he wants to be free to travel the country campaigning instead of being locked into a constituency battle. In a sign of the bitter war to come, Mr Farage – who wants a no-deal Brexit ramped up the attack on withdrawal Johnson's agreement, describing it is a "gigantic con".

But even close allies turned on him for being "dog in the manger" about the deal and warned the MEP he was increasing the risk of splitting the Brexit vote – threatening the chance of Britain leaving the EU.

Mr Farage, an MEP who has lost seven attempts to win a Westminster seat, had previously hinted he would stand again. But as someone who has demanded a no-deal Brexit in return for an electoral pact with the Conservatives, Farage said he still hoped an agreement could be reached between the parties. But he claimed the UK will "never achieve independence" if Mr Johnson's deal is ratified. He said: "It doesn't work at any level. It is a gigantic con. "We should not sell out to this, it's a Remainer's Brexit. It's virtually worse than staying where we are, and if we go down this route we will finish up rejoining."

He added: "I promise you one thing, if Boris was going for a genuine Brexit then we wouldn't need to fight him in this election."

Spend, Spend, Spend!

■ Labour vows to splash the cash to 1970s levels Extra £55bn earmarked for infrastructure

Labour has unveiled plans to take public spending back to the highest level since the 1970s amid warnings that the scale of investment is so high it will be almost impossible to implement.

John McDonnell, the shadow chancellor, has announced plans for an extra £55 billion in capital spending a year to go on hospitals, schools and other infrastructure, funded by borrowing. His plans would see public investment spending almost double.

Labour has pledged £250 billion of investment over the next ten years for a green fund to invest in clean energy and insulation, and £150 billion over five years on a "social transformation fund" for investment in infrastructure The Institute for Fiscal Studies said that the level of investment was so high it would be "just physically impossible to get there that quickly".

Sajid Javid also ripped up the Conservatives' fiscal rules as he unveiled plans for an extra £22 billion a year in public investment as part of a "decade of renewal" for the nation.

The chancellor announced new а "fiscal rule" that will enable him to invest 3 per cent of national income in infrastructure projects. He abandoned a traditional Tory measure of fiscal prudence - that government debt should fall as a share of national income year on year - and another fiscal rule limiting borrowing to no more than 2 per cent of GDP.

However, the chancellor also announced that he would balance his budget, meaning that a future Conservative government would not spend more than it can raise from taxes. It is likely to significantly limit Boris Johnson's ability to make further public spending pledges or tax cuts in the Tory manifesto.

Labour has also pledged to balance the current budget - day to day spending, excluding spending on infrastructure.

Speaking in Manchester, Mr Javid said: "Today I am announcing new fiscal rules that, if elected, will allow us to take advantage of the opportunity to invest in our future and our public services, but without squandering the hard work of the British people.

"There will be new hospitals, schools. railways, roads. better broadband, new connections and opportunities in every part of our nation. So I can confirm today we will borrow some more to invest."

Mr Javid said that the Tories could still afford

"some" tax cuts under the new fiscal rules, but did not disclose what they would be.

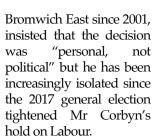

He said: "We can afford to do a lot. We can afford to live within our means. We can afford the infrastructure revolution. We can afford some tax cuts. We have worked out the numbers."

Tom Watson quits as deputy leader of Labour

Mr Watson had faced intense criticism in recent months over his role in Beech made false allegations of sexual abuse and murder about a group of MPs, generals and senior figures in the intelligence services. All were innocent, but his claims led to a £2.5 million police inquiry and prompted searches of the homes of the former Tory MP Harvey Proctor, the former chief of the defence staff Lord Bramall and the widow of the former home secretary Lord Brittan of Spennithorne.

Queen to go fur-free - sort of DESIGNERS will no longer dress the Queen in furs, it has been confirmed, earning praise from animal welfare groups.

The move was revealed by Her Majesty's dresser Angela Kelly in extracts from her book published in Vogue magazine.

Ms Kelly wrote: "If Her Majesty is due to attend an engagement in particularly cold weather... fake fur will be used to make sure she stays warm." Ms Kelly said an outfit from 2008 had mink but, she stressed: "The mink trim... will be replaced."

This week a Buckingham Palace spokeswoman said: "As new outfits are designed any fur used will be fake. "We are not suggesting that all fur on existing outfits will be replaced, or that the Queen will never wear fur again. "The Queen will continue to re-wear existing outfits."

It is not known whether the change will include her historic robe of state. which contains ermine and is worn at the State Opening of Parliament. Activists at Humane Society International/UK said the move tallied with #FurFreeBritain its drive to ban the sale of animal fur completely. Executive director Claire Bass said "We are thrilled that Her Majesty has officially gone fur-free. Queen Elizabeth's decision to 'go faux' is the perfect reflection of the mood of the public.

"The vast majority detest cruel fur and want nothing to do with it."

Controversial Seventies TV shows omitted by UK streaming service Britbox

■ Love Thy Neighbour and Till Death Us Do Part among the blacklisted classics

Politically incorrect 1970s television series such as Love Thy Neighbour and Till Death Us Do Part have been left off BBC-ITV's new streaming service because they are deemed unsuitable for modern audiences.

Britbox, which launched in the UK this week, styles itself as the home of British boxsets, offering classic series such as Porridge, Fawlty Towers and Yes Minister as well as more recent hits.

The service has mined the archives of ITV and the BBC, its founding partners, for vintage programming, but some well-remembered series have been overlooked.

Reemah Sakaan, the ITV executive leading Britbox, acknowledged that "changing tastes" were a factor in the selection process, and some material had not aged well.

That means no place for Love Thy Neighbour, the 1972-76 ITV sitcom about a black couple living next to a white couple, or Til Death Us Do Part, the long-running BBC comedy centred on Alf Garnett, a racist bigot.

She added: "We also recomply everything that goes on to Britbox, and the great thing about ondemand is that you're not forcing anyone to watch anything."

Britbox users will also see "bespoke warnings" before some programmes to alert them to potentially offensive content. "It's certainly something we think about and have a process for," Ms Sakaan said.

It was also announced that Channel 4 will provide more than 1,000 hours of programming to the service. The move means that Britbox is a now a true collaboration between all of the UK's public service broadcasters — Channel 5 signed up in September.

From spring 2020 a selection of Channel 4 shows will move to Britbox after 30 days on All4, the broadcaster's free on-demand platform.

Popular series including The Great British Bake Off will feature, Ms Sakaan said. Film4 will also supply a curated collection of British films.

ITV is investing more than £40 million in exclusive commissions for Britbox, but its launch archive is almost entirely made up of classic and repeats.

All 627 available episodes of Doctor Who from 1963 to 1989 will be released on Boxing Day, including animated recreations of missing episodes.

Britbox subscribers will also be able to stream two new episodes of Midsomer Murders before their broadcast on ITV, in addition to the detective drama's 20-series back catalogue.

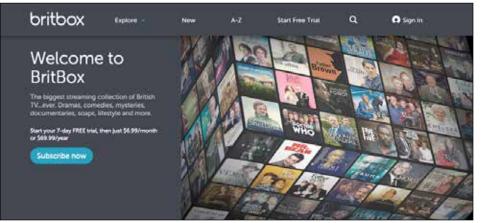

Analysts do not expect Britbox to become a true rival to Netflix, which has 10 million UK subscribers, because of the dearth of exclusive programming.

It will also be competing with new subscription services such as Disney Plus and Apple TV. Britbox costs $6.99 a month, the same as Netflix's basic plan, and has a 30-day free trial.

ITV and BBC executives hope the service will generate extra revenue and ensure that the burgeoning streaming market is not dominated by US-based players, while attracting older viewers who are not yet Netflix or Amazon members.

CHANGING TASTES? Love They Neighbor was deemed unsuitable for modern audiences

WELCOME HOME: BritBox, which launched in the USA in 2017 and currently has 650,000 subscribers, finally made its debut in the UK this week

Jewels in the Britbox crown include all six series of Downton Abbey, seven series of Only Fools and Horses and past series of Love Island, plus The Office, Happy Valley and Doctor Foster. BBC and ITV have been quietly pulling archive shows off Netflix, so they will only be available to stream on Britbox. However both broadcasters will still collaborate with international streaming rivals to fund and produce new drama series.

Ms Sakaan said that Britbox would make a virtue of its relatively small slate of programmes, offering "more time browsing, less time watching". She said that "familiar faces" would be at the heart of the service, allowing members to select shows according to who's starring in them, from Olivia Colman to Michael Palin.

China 'tries to gag UK universities'

The government of China has attempted to curb criticism on British campuses of its regime by pressuring universities into limiting academic freedom, MPs have said.

"Alarming" evidence of Chinese interference has been found by the Commons foreign affairs committee, which says that it appears to be coming from the embassy in London.

The MPs are particularly concerned that the battle for Chinese student fees and other investment "should not outweigh" longstanding international standards of academic freedom. In its report, "Defending Democracy in an Age Autocracies" of the committee found:

• A pro-vice-chancellor at an unnamed Russell Group university cancelled a speaker after contact from the Chinese embassy.

•Evidence that the state-backed Chinese Students and Scholars Association was being used to watch students in Britain. One witness, a Uighur Muslim, said that she was monitored and her family in China harassed after she became politically active. The MPs accused universities of "not being alive" to the risks to academic freedom that were caused by growing dependence on Chinese revenue. They said that government guidance on the problem was "non-existent".

There are more than 100,000 Chinese students at British universities, a number that has risen sharply in recent years. They are by far the largest group of overseas students, paying annual fees of up to £40,000. There are also many partnerships between British universities and Chinese institutions.

PC charged with murder over Atkinson death

■ Former footballer was 48 when he suffered cardiac arrest after being tasered

A police officer has been charged with murder over the Aston Villa footballer Dalian Atkinson, who died after he was Tasered and restrained.

The West Mercia constable, who has not been named, was charged with murder by the Crown Prosecution Service on Thursday.

A second West Mercia constable has also been charged with assault causing actual bodily harm.

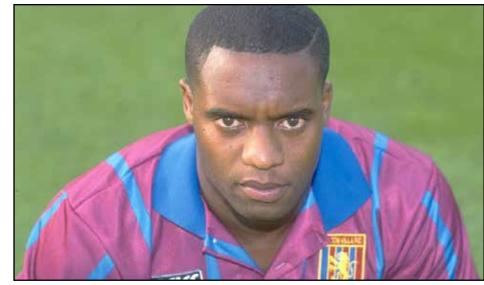

The CPS has declined to name both officers because their lawyers will apply for them to remain anonymous.

Mr Atkinson, who played for Aston Villa and Manchester City, was 48 when he died in 2016.

West Mercia Police said that officers were called to his father's house amid concerns "for the safety of an individual".

He had been outside when he was Tasered and restrained at 2am.

He went into cardiac arrest in an ambulance on his way to hospital

Although police officers have been charged with murder or manslaughter in relation to deaths involving police contact, none have been found guilty of either charge.

There have been ten murder or manslaughter charges against police officers in the past decade. In all cases, trials have collapsed or officers

1 have been acquitted by 1 the jury, according to s Inquest, the charity.

Jenny Hopkins of the CPS said: "Following the death of Dalian Atkinson in Telford on 15 August 2016, the Crown Prosecution Service has today authorised a charge of murder against a West Mercia police constable. second А police constable, from the same force, has been charged with assault causing actual bodily harm. Mr Atkinson's family has been informed.

"This decision was made following a careful review of all the evidence presented to us by the Independent Office for Police Conduct following an investigation.

"Criminal proceedings against the two police officers are now active and they have a right to a fair trial. It is extremely important that there should be no reporting, commentary or sharing of information online which could in any way prejudice these proceedings."

Scot suspected shark victim at Indian Ocean resort

A Scottish tourist is suspected to have died in a shark attack after his dismembered hand and wedding ring were found inside the animal. The 44-year-old man was last seen snorkelling off the French island of Reunion, near Madagascar, over the weekend.

It is believed he was on a week-long holiday with his wife in Saint-Gilles.

His hand, identified by his wedding ring, was found inside a tiger shark which was caught for research purposes.

Local resident Erick Quelquejeu told BBC Scotland the man had left his wife for just "a few minutes" to go for a swim.

He added: "His wife was really scared by what happened. Many helicopters, many planes, swimmers and boats went to try and find the guy in the ocean but couldn't find him for a few days.

"Apparently they found a shark a few days ago with his hand so we are really not sure how it happened."

Mr Quelquejeu said that many beaches on the west coast of the island were well signposted, warning people against swimming because of previous shark attacks. There were also warnings at the airports.

"There are a lot of shark attacks on Reunion island but we are quite aware about that now," he added.

"It's something we don't hide from anybody. All the places around the island where you can't swim - where there's not a natural reef - there are signs in front of the beach to warn people.

"Even at that you have a few boats that go around the west area of the island - because that's where all the beaches are - to protect them, to watch if anyone makes that mistake anyway."

The shark was among several caught on Monday and Tuesday in the Indian Ocean by the Centre de Securite Requin (CSR).

It was found just over four miles (7km) from the lagoon where the man was last seen. The shark was examined on Wednesday morning.

It is not yet known whether the man drowned and was subsequently eaten by the shark, or whether he was attacked by it.

A spokesman for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office said: "We are providing support to the family of a British man who died while snorkelling in La Reunion and are in contact with the local authorities."

There have been two fatal shark attacks this year at Reunion, which is in the Indian Ocean.

Local authorities have implemented a ban on swimming and water sports across almost all of the island's beaches following attacks in 2013. French President Emmanuel Macron said last month that he would like to see water sports reintroduced by 2022, but added that he wanted "to be sure" that it would be safe to do so.

Meet A Member: Jaspreet Sabrina Dosanjh

Meet Iaspreet Sabrina Dosanjh, born and raised in Birmingham, who moved to LA a year ago to pursue acting and "to satisfy my curiosity about Los Angeles".

Was there a particular reason you chose to live in LA?

I grew up watching TV and thinking LA was one of the coolest places ever. I chose to live here to satisfy my curiosity about the birthplace of Beverly Hills 90210, The A-Team and Grease, to find a car as cool as K.I.T.T. from Knight Rider and hang out with the Fonz. I've balanced art and science in my life, having worked in Britain for both the BBC and in Biochemical Engineering. When I was able to get a job out here in the science world which still left time to pursue acting, it was a dream come true.

What Do You Miss Most From Home?

Having custard with cake instead of ice cream. Not having your accent be a topic of conversation. Friends and family, of course. Oh, and the NHS.

What was your first impression of la and has it changed since?

first impression Mv was that the weather was beautiful, and quite surreal. But the city was very spread out and not as glamorous as I expected. I feel like I am still seeing so many different things in LA. It is like a maze with lots of little treasure troves to open. There is lots to learn and so many different things to see and I like it more every time I get out there to explore it.

What do you find the difference biggest is living here versus Britain? Having to explain my background and culture more and having to make

Be yourself - but your best self...!

Are you being the best version of yourself?

Los Angeles is very appealing to people who want to follow their dreams or reinvent themself. hence the nickname LALA Land. To outsiders we do seem a bit doollaly, but those of you who live here know that being different, adventurous or avant-garde is just normal . Every day I am cheered by so many of you who share your achievements, accolades or adventures and just as impressed by those of you who aren't afraid to share the low times too.

This was highlighted recently when fellow Angeleno, the Duchess of Sussex (aka Meghan Markle) expressed her frustration regarding the British stiff upper lip, and the damage that can be done by bottling things up. Of course the UK press mocked her for this, but she does have a very good point.

We have touched on this before, and I've mentioned that some of my most successful friends are often struggling to make ends meet or are battling with depression. From а distance everything integrated community when our history is so different. I appreciate the human connections and friendships much more than I ever did, as when the good ones are made they are amazing. I think I took a lot of this for granted when I was in England. Everyone was so close together, it was much easier. Here you definitely have to make more effort, and so when people make that effort, I value it.

Do You Have A Hidden Gem In La That You Want To Share With Us? Yes I do but I'm actually not going to tell you as the reason I love it, is that it is hidden. But one special place that's less hidden is Venice Beach Skate Park, go there to watch the skateboarding and eat ice cream. Such fun.

It's very easy to get caught up in keeping up with the Joneses, but it is a lot more pleasurable when you just relax and be the best version of you. This will allow you to follow your dreams more sincerely, and take you on a much more interesting path.

It will take time, but there is no reason why it would not ever happen. Just keep going.....and let me know if you find either K.I.T.T. or The Fonz - I'm still looking.

HOROSCOPE/PUZZLES

ARIES: Mars your boss is heading into watery Scorpio and although this can slow things down in some areas, be patient for the near future. Mercury is moving backwards also in Scorpio and can bring up unfinished business but nothing you cannot finish up.

TAURUS: Your finances could be a problem - or the lack of them more than likely. Try not to freak out over this as it is all temporary anyway. Most situations will stabilize with Mercury going forward soon. Be wise and keep a handle on your emotions and it will feel better by mid week.

GEMINI: You would be wise to not use up all your energy this week as by the weekend your boss planet Mercury will be in a backward motion. Whatever business you have going on is okay to put on hold. This is not a time to make long time plans, late in the month is better.

CANCER: You are in a good time frame for be letting go of what you have no space for in your life. Mars and Venus are both in water signs currently. There is no better time to do this than now. Look back over the last few weeks and take stock of what worked and what did not.

LEO: You may have felt a little out of sorts this past week. This is because a lot of action is happening to you water signs. Take stock of what you have achieved and what you did not, chances are you will understand what was important is complete and until then, rest easy.

VIRGO: This past week or so has not produced the progress you wished for. This is because everything seems hard work. This is due to your boss planet Mercury moving backwards. However next week starts out better and by Thanksgiving your life will be moving forward.

LIBRA: Without a doubt you have achieved a certain amount of attention lately (personal or otherwise). Make sure you take full advantage of your lovely boss Venus in your money house by next week. You will start seeing more of what you want in several areas.

SCORPIO: You have had some difficult life cycles recently. This week ahead will start a more balanced time when your boss Mars moves in to your life and will energize life for a while. Work and relationship opportunities are already gearing up for you. Happy Birthday.

SAGITTARIUS: This week ahead use your head (not your heart) to move through any uneasy situation, especially in family matters. There is help as your boss Jupiter is now in a good mood and however you look at your current situation you should put your attention on following through on your own plans.

CAPRICORN: There will be changes coming soon so do not rock any boats this coming week, be prepared to go with the flow at the same time do not take anything for granted. Try to not to put too much pressure on your self or you will not be able to move forward in areas that you should.

AQUARIUS: Some good news is on its way; just make sure your everyday life is in order before you take on anything else. Finances are still not as you want, however by midweek it's looking much more positive. Then you can let your hair down and enjoy life.

PISCES: You should surround yourself with people who only have your best and highest good at heart these next few days. You are very intuitive usually and you will get to use it for your own benefit soon. The next couple of weeks lay low and by the month's end it's time for fun galore.

Michael Enright: the British expat who left Hollywood to fight Isis. Now the USA won't take him back...

SAN IGNACIO, Belize: Michael Enright is finding this sleepy town south of the border to be a long way from Hollywood. A very long way.

If the name – and the face - seem familiar, it's because for more than two decades Michael Enright was a colorful local figure among the British expat community in Los Angeles. But through a series of events that seem more Hollywood than real life, Michael left his comfortable life on these shores to fight alongside Kurdish forces against Isis in Syria, risking his life on countless occasions, only later to find himself unable to get back to America, the country he loves, and the country for which he said he would gladly have died to fight Islamic terrorism.

Michael first came to our attention on the set of The Brit Pack – 1993's best-forgotten, lowbudget soccer hooligan movie which featured a cast of mostly local British expats. Michael was running a hostel in Venice at the time, and although he projected the image of a spiky, outspoken Mancunian jack-the-lad, he had a thoughtfulness about him that set him apart from his mostly non-actor cast mates.

Over the next two decades Michael found regular work as an actor, appearing in movies including the Tom Cruise vehicle Knight and Day and snagging a guest starring role on the television series "Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D." the product of As tough working а background he class considered himself to be living the dream, he was then, as he remains, very patriotic and very pro-American.

So the events of September, 11, 2001 affected him deeply. He became fascinated with the battle against Islamic terrorism, frequently considering taking up arms in order to, in his words, 'give something back to the country that gave me so much.'

The tipping point was the 2014 beheading of journalist James Foley by Mohammed Emwazi – the Kuwait-born but British raised terrorist better known as Jihadi John.

"That video filled me with so much horror, so much fury," Enright told the BW this week. "The fact that a British person could do so such a thing was unbelievable. It made me, also a British man, determined to do what I could do to fight back against that kind of mindless evil."

A few months later Enright flew to Heathrow and from there to Sulaymaniyah in Iraqi Kurdistan. Arriving at 3am with no friends and no idea what lay in store, he checked into a lowbudget hotel and tried to reach the one contact he had made before departure, a shadowy Facebook figure who claimed to be part of the YPG - the Kurdish militia at the forefront of the battle against Isis in neighboring Syria.

"When do you arrive?" came the response.

"I'm already here!" Enright wrote back.

That afternoon, a man called the hotel asking for Volunteer fighter Michael Enright during the 2017 battle of Raqqa, then an Islamic State redoubt in Syria.

him. "You want to join the YPG?" the voice on the other end of the line asked.

"Yes." Then, a familiar query: "Are you willing to die?" "Yes."

From the hotel Enright i was whisked across the c Syrian border to a training f camp where he spent six weeks learning how to fire an AK-47 and many other arts of war. With his Hollywood background he was soon appointed his unit's cameraman, having a Go-Pro fixed to his helmet to capture his two harrowing tours of duty in the war-torn region. His days alternated between firefights with local Isis units to humanitarian work and intelligence gathering. In the course of his time there Michael gained a good working knowledge of Arabic and abiding affection for the people of the region.

Yet when it was time for him to go home, Michael found he could not. His visa overstay three decades ago led CONT:/

to him being flagged by US immigration on the Southern border, and despite his demonstrated services to his country and what he claims is a treasure trove of intelligence gathered on the front lines, so far his attempts to navigate the byzantine pathways of the U.S. immigration system has met with failure.

Because he fears returning to the United Kingdom, where some British volunteers with the Kurdish militia have been arrested and accused consorting with of terrorists, Michael finds himself, essentially, a man without a country. As the Washington Post put it in a recent, extensively fact-checked profile, 'now he wanders, flopping ... in slum apartments or couch-surfing in Belize and elsewhere in Latin America in the homes of people he meets in the streets or online. He hauls a thin pad to sleep on, a backpack, a handful of tank tops and shorts, and a clunky, old laptop, hoping against hope that someone, anyone, will help him get back to Los Angeles.'

Despite his frustration, Enright, now 56, his hair cropped short and graying, has repeated the same phrase over and over in hours of interviews with The Post: "I don't regret a thing, mate. I'd do it all over again."

Real British sausages back on the menu? Jolly Good!

Good news for fans of real British sausages! Ye Olde King's Head Pub and Shoppe, which has owned the rights to Jolly Good meat products since 2016, recently secured their USDA seal of approval to ship to customers across the country.

Longtime readers and fans of British bangers will be familiar with the Jolly Good brand, which was founded by Cheshire-born Martin Lunt in 1983 and was available in many local British shops and pubs before Martin's retirement in in 2016. At that the time Martin's recipes and the rights to the Jolly Good name were bought by Donal Tavey at Ye Olde Kings Head Shoppe, which has been selling the uniquely British sausages, chipolatas, sausage rolls and pork pies ever since. Thanks to their new USDA certification, they can reach the wider audience they deserve.

Outlets interested in stocking Jolly Good products should email Donal directly at dtavey@aol.com

Hamilton still hungry for more after securing sixth driver's title

Lewis Hamilton says his hunger for success is undimmed after securing his sixth Formula 1 drivers' title.

The 34-year-old (above) has celebrated his Mercedes team's recordbreaking sixth consecutive drivers' and constructors' championship double at their UK bases.

Hamilton said he was "living my dream" and that he "never in a million years thought I'd get to six".

"We must keep pushing because I know we have more to do - more championships to win, more races to win," he said.

"I grew up watching Formula 1 and I always wanted to do something like Ayrton [Senna]. If I could get to F1, that'd be great; if I could get three titles, that'd be incredible. And now we've doubled that - it's truly unbelievable."

Hamilton has two more races to go before the end of the season and he said after clinching the title at the US Grand Prix in Austin, Texas, on Sunday that he was determined to do as well as possible in Brazil and Abu Dhabi, with a particular focus on qualifying, which he has said is the one area he is less than satisfied with this year.

"In my mind, I'm just too competitive," he said in Austin. "So I'm thinking: 'OK, we've got two more races to go, how am I going to do a better job, how am I going to improve in qualifying? There's two more qualifyings to try and get pole, how am I going to see if I can potentially pull out a lap like I did in Singapore last year? How am I going to work it that

"I'm always just looking to improve and I really love being in this sport. I'm so grateful to this sport for giving me a life and giving my life purpose." At the celebration event, held at the Mercedes engine base in Brixworth and then the F1 car headquarters in Brackley, both in Northamptonshire, Hamilton thanked the Mercedes team "for continuing to push every year".

Jones at a loss to explain England's final loss Monday Results Sky Bet Championship STOKE (0)......0 WEST BROM (1)

Eddie Jones says he cannot explain why England came up short after his side failed to achieve their goal of winning the World Cup in Japan.

England were beaten 32-12 by South Africa in the final in Yokohama on Saturday.

It came a week after England knocked out three-time champions New Zealand in the semi-final in one of the best performances in Jones' tenure as coach.

"I'm not sure why we came up short today, sometimes you never know," said the England head coach.

"Sometimes you can investigate but you'll never know why it happened. We're going to be kicking stones now for four Captain Owen Farrell kicked four penalties for England, but Handre Pollard replied with six for South Africa before tries from Makazole Mapimpi and Cheslin Kolbe put the game beyond Jones' side.

The Australian has a contract with England until 2021 but said it was "not the time to discuss" his future after the defeat.

"We are the second best team in the world," added Jones, who lost the 2003 final to England while coaching the Wallabies but was a consultant to South Africa the last time the Springboks won the trophy in 2007.

in the world, but we are the second best team in the world, so I think that's how we should be remembered.

"The players prepared tremendously well for this World Cup. I thought they played with a lot of pride and passion, and we got caught short today.

"These things happen, but we can't doubt the effort of the players. I thought they were extraordinary.

"The only thing I am worried about now is having a few beers, and that's the only thing we will worry about.

"And then after we have a few beers today, we will probably have a few more beers tomorrow and maybe Monday, and then maybe we will have to pull up stumps."

JUMPERS FOR GOALPOSTS? Kyle Walker went between the sticks for Manchester City in the Champions League this week after goalkeekper Claudio Bravo - who had substituted for first choice Ederson at half time - was sent off Wolves on the brink of the Europa League knockout stages as his injury-time strike secured victory against Slovan Bratislava at Molineux.

The game looked to be heading towards a stalemate after Bratislava goalkeeper Dominik Greif kept out Ruben Neves' penalty early in the second half.

However. Jimenez headed in Adama Traore's cross to take the points.

Wolves are second in Group K with nine points, five ahead of Bratislava in third with just two games remaining.

Nuno Espírito Santo's side need just a point to progress to the next round.

The winning goal came in the second of 12 minutes of injury time, which was as a result of a lengthy period of treatment for Bratislava's Kenan Bajric, who had been caught by Jimenez's boot when he attempted an overhead kick.

Bajric had to be taken off on a stretcher after appearing not to move while on the pitch but was reported to be conscious when he was assessed further by medical staff in the tunnel.

Super Spurs Smash Serbs

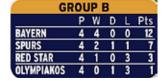

Son Heung-min scored twice following a difficult few days to take Tottenham towards the Champions League knockout stages by thrashing Red Star Belgrade on Wednesday.

Spurs lie second in Group B, four points clear of Red Star in third, knowing one victory from their final two games will ensure progression to the last 16.

Forward Son, who was left "devastated" by his foul that led to a horrific ankle injury for Everton's Andre Gomes on Sunday, netted twice in the second half, lashing home a finish from an angle and tapping in from close range.

The South Korean did not celebrate his first goal; instead he clasped his hands and bowed his head.

Mauricio Pochettino's side went ahead in the first half courtesy of the impressive Giovani Lo Celso, who clipped home a finish on his first start for the club following an almighty goalmouth scramble in which Spurs hit the post and bar. Christian Eriksen added a fourth late on.

Red Star had chances of their own but could not find a way past Paulo Gazzaniga, with the Spurs goalkeeper saving sharply off Milan Pavkov and Rajiv van La Parra.

It was Spurs' first away win since their thrilling Champions League semifinal comeback against Ajax last season.

Tottenham's overall form this season has been poor, losing four of their 11 matches in the Premier League and suffering a 7-2 humiliation at home by Bayern Munich.

But the north Londoners have recovered from that demolition in outstanding fashion, scoring nine goals in back-to-back games against Red Star.

Their victory in Belgrade was all the more impressive as the home side tend to provide a stern examination for the visitors, losing just twice in their previous 21 games in Europe at the Rajko Mitic Stadium, including an impressive victory over eventual winners Liverpool last season.

Son was sent off for tripping Gomes in the 1-1 draw at Goodison Park on Sunday and was visibly distraught by the injury but Pochettino said he was "in a very good way" to play and his two goals showed it.

For the first, he received a pass inside the area from Dele Alli, worked it onto his left foot and smashed a finish into the roof of the net. With the events of Sunday still on his mind, Son opted to remain subdued.

His second finished off a neat team move, converting from close

Europa League Roundup

Manchester United cruised past Partizan Belgrade on Thursday to reach the knockout stages of the Europa League with two games to spare.

First-half goals from Mason Greenwood and Anthony Martial were followed by a powerful finish from Marcus Rashford after the break to complete United's biggest home win since August.

The result keeps Ole Gunnar Solskjaer's men top of Group L. Victory in their final match against AZ Alkmaar on 12 December will ensure a top seeding in the last 32, no matter what happens when they go to Kazakhstan to play Astana in three weeks.

They are the only side in the competition not to concede a goal this season. It also extended their unbeaten run in the Europa League to 15 matches, three short of Chelsea's tournament record of 18.

It wasn't all good news for United, though. Scott McTominay hurt the inside of his right foot in an innocuous challenge and although the Scotland midfielder tried to continue, he had to be replaced by Jesse Lingard 15 minutes from time.

• Olivier Ntcham's dramatic stoppage-time strike earned Celtic a stunning win over Lazio and a place in the Europa League last 32 with two games to spare.

Serie A's top scorer Ciro Immobile had given Lazio the lead with an unopposed back-post volley, but James Forrest lashed in his 11th goal of the season just before the break to level.

Neil Lennon's side had to defend stoutly after the break and looked like they would earn a point until Ntcham ran on to an Odsonne Edouard pass to secure Celtic's first win in Italy.

It is the second time in two weeks that the Scottish Premiership side have stunned Lazio with a late winner, Christopher Jullien's header earning victory in Glasgow two weeks ago.

It also means that their games with Rennes at Celtic Park and against Cluj in Romania will now only decide whether they win the group or not.
