Public anger on the rise as flood misery hits thousands

■ Northern England hardest hit after 'biblical' downpours batter region

PRESSURE was growing on the government this week to declare a national emergency after more than 1800 homes and businesses in northern England were left flooded following 'biblical' downpours which saw over a month's worth of rain fall within 24 hours.

And with more heavy rain expected as water levels continued to rise, Opposition leaders condemned the Government's response to the devastation in South Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire, Derbyshire and Leicestershire as "woeful".

Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn said: "If this had happened in Surrey instead of Yorkshire and the East Midlands, I think it would have been a very different story."

Leaders of councils across northern England called for "massive" increases in funding to deal with major incidents after more than 1,000 properties were evacuated. In Doncaster alone, 500 homes have been flooded. Hannah Booth, 36, from Doncaster, said she was warned it could be a year before she can move back in her home.

"When the water was pouring through my walls I stood in the lounge and cried but I've ran out of tears now," she said. Around 13,500 properties are being protected by flood defences, including nearly 5,000 in South Yorkshire. Most of the 700 residents of Fishlake, Doncaster, have left and those who stayed have faced waist-high floods. Annie Hall, former high sheriff of Derbyshire, died after she was swept away by water on Friday near Matlock.

'too little, too late'

In Lincolnshire, Henry Ward's farm in Barlings, near Lincoln, was cut off as a river burst its banks. More than 1,000 acres are under water in the county. The Environment Agency said it is installing barriers and delivering sandbags. On Wednesday night Boris Johnson announced special grants to affected councils after chairing an emergency Cobra meeting. He said authorities were working "flat out". Businesses will get up to £2,500 and another 100 troops will be deployed. A grant to local councils - equivalent to £500 per eligible household - will also help communities.

But angry householders hit out at the authorities for a lack of communication and support, with many claiming emergency services' warnings were "too little, too late".

Builder Mark Sengelow, 47, woke up on Saturday to find his house under 2ft of dirty water. He has been forced to seek refuge at a friend's house with his partner and three children. Mark said: "The rain we've had here, I've never seen anything like it. It was of biblical proportions. And what's left now? Floodwater. It stinks, the water is dirty and there's debris and sewage in it. It was heartbreaking to see the house ruined like that.

WET, WET, WET: the countryside outside Doncaster was particularly hard hit

"We had a brand new carpet laid and I kitted out the double garage as a cinema room for the kids. That's all gone."

New parents Dan Greenslade and Jade Croft cannot get back to their home after the birth of baby daughter Indie on Friday. The couple had spent around £5,000 renovating their house ahead of the arrival of their first child.

"All the heavy stuff, the fridge, the sofa, the furniture, will be ruined," said marketing manager Dan, 34.

"All the baby clothes and things are in the house and we can't get back to get them."

And at a funeral parlour in the village emergency workers found coffins floating around in flood water.

The mayor of the Sheffield city region, Dan Jarvis, described the flood-stricken village of Fishlake, near Doncaster, as having "the feel of a disaster movie".

As flood-affected families braced for further downpours, the leaders of six councils demanded immediate and long-term financial support to recover from the devastation.

The leaders of councils in Doncaster, Rotherham, Sheffield, Barnsley, Bassetlaw and Kirklees warned of "considerable and lasting damage on a wide scale", including to power plants and transport infrastructure, and called for funding increases to help them cope with future floods.

Farage election U-turn delivers early Christmas present for Johnson

■ Brexit Party to give Tories clear run in more than 200 seats

BORIS Johnson received a huge election boost on Monday when Nigel Farage said his Brexit Party will not challenge the Tories in more than 200 parliamentary seats.

In an announcement that electrified the Conservatives' campaign for the December 12th poll, Mr. Farage vowed to concentrate his fire on ousting Labour MPs, rather than splitting the Leave vote.

His climbdown dramatically raised the Prime Minister's hopes of securing a Commons majority that can pull the UK out of the European Union.

Mr Johnson denied making any deal with Mr Farage and said: "I'm glad that there's a recognition that there's only one way to get Brexit done and that's to vote for the Conservatives."

However, some top Tories still fear the Brexit Party will cost the Conservatives votes in a string of key target seats.

One Cabinet minister said: "So, Farage accepts that a vote for the Brexit Party is a vote for [Labour leader Jeremy] Corbyn and a second referendum.

"But he hasn't pulled out of the seats we need to win to defeat Corbyn and deliver Brexit."

Mr Farage made his dramatic announcement at a news conference in Hartlepool, where Brexit Party chairman Richard Tice is seeking to oust Labour's Mike Hill.

"We've decided ourselves that we absolutely have to put country before party and take the fight to Labour," Mr Farage said. He admitted he had abandoned his plan for the Brexit Party to fight 600 seats across Britain and that his attempt to forge a "Leave alliance" with the Tories had "come to nought". Mr Farage said he changed his mind on Sunday night after Mr Johnson promised not to extend the Brexit transition period beyond the end of 2020, and to seek a "super Canada-plus" style free trade agreement with the EU.

"I think our action, this announcement today, prevents a second referendum from happening," he said.

"And that to me, I think right now, is the single most important thing in our country.

"Boris last night signalled a very clear change in direction. I thought to myself overnight, 'That sounds a bit more like the Brexit we voted for,'" he added. Mr Farage told his supporters in Hartlepool: "What we will do is concentrate our total effort into all the seats that are held by the Labour Party, who have completely broken their manifesto pledge in 2017 to respect the result of the referendum. And we will also take on the rest of the Remainer parties. We will stand up and we will fight them all."

Brexit Party MEP Ann Widdecombe said Mr Farage had made an "enormous concession" and former Tory party Farage said Johnson's plan: "...sounds a bit more like the Brexit we voted for".

leader Iain Duncan Smith described his announcement as a "good thing". But Mr Corbyn said: "One week ago, Donald Trump told Nigel Farage to make a pact with Boris Johnson. Today, Trump got his wish.

"This Trump alliance is Thatcherism on steroids and could send £500million a week from our NHS to big drugs companies. It must be stopped."

Lib Dem leader Jo Swinson said: "The Conservative Party are the Brexit Party now."

Labour anti-semitism row reignites

■ String of public figures say they can't vote Labour because of party's 'antisemitism'

The authors John Le Carré and William Boyd are among a string of public figures declaring they refuse to vote Labour because of its association with antisemitism.

In a letter to the Guardian, this week they said: "To ignore it because Brexit looms larger is to declare that anti-Jewish prejudice is a price worth paying for a Labour government."

Both Le Carré, whose real name is David Cornwell, and Boyd have previously expressed strongly anti-Brexit views. They joined others including Jimmy Wales, the founder of Wikipedia who has previously been sympathetic to Labour, the actor Simon Callow, and the historians Antony Beevor, Tom Holland and Dan Snow.

Trevor Phillips, a former Labour politician and ex-chair of the Equality and Human Rights Commission (EHRC), and Fiyaz Mughal, the founder of the Tell Mama group fighting Islamophobia, also said they could not vote Labour.

The letter said: "The coming election is momentous for every voter, but for British Jews it contains a particular anguish: the prospect of a prime minister steeped in association with anti-semitism. Under Jeremy Corbyn's leadership,

Queen sheds a tear for war dead

■ Her Majesty sets the tone for sombre Remembrance Sunday service

THE Queen wiped away a tear on Sunday as she joined other members of the Royal Family in solemn tributes to Britain's war dead.

The 93-year-old monarch summed up the national mood on Remembrance Sunday, as people across the country paid tribute to loved ones who made the ultimate sacrifice. All over Britain, the country fell silent for two minutes at 11am.

In Whitehall, the Queen watched from a Foreign Office balcony as her eldest son and heir, Prince Charles, led the tributes by placing a wreath on her behalf at the foot of the Cenotaph, the elegant monument erected 100 years ago as a focus for remembrance. In naval uniform, Charles, 70, laid a second wreath for himself and an equerry placed one on behalf of the absent Duke of Edinburgh, 98.

The Duke of Cambridge, Duke of Sussex, Duke of York, the Earl of Wessex, Princess Anne and the Duke of Kent all added their own floral tributes.

The Queen, dressed in black, watched alongside the Duchess of Cornwall and the Duchess of Cambridge, while on the next balcony the Duchess of Sussex stood with Prince Edward's wife, the Countess of Wessex, and Anne's husband, Vice Admiral Sir Timothy Laurence. It was a rare public outing together for the Cambridges and Sussexes after a year in which apparent tensions between the couples have been revealed.

They were not the only ones putting differences aside for the morning. Politicians took a break from the General Election campaign trail to participate in the service. Boris Johnson misread his cue and tried to lay his wreath too early. His girlfriend Carrie Symonds was also at the service. Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn, who missed the annual Festival of Remembrance at the Royal Albert Hall on Saturday night, smartened up after a furore over his decision to wear a grey anorak last year. The party leaders were joined by five former prime ministers – Sir John Major, Tony Blair, Gordon Brown, David Cameron and Theresa May. For the first time, the intelligence services were honoured with wreaths, laid by Foreign Secretary Dominic Raab and Home Secretary Priti Patel.

The Nepalese ambassador also placed a wreath marking the contribution Gurkha regiments have made to Britain's military campaigns for the past 200 years. Cheered by thousands lining the route, more than 10,000 veterans, their heads held high and their chests brimming with medals, marched past the Cenotaph. The oldest veteran marching was thought to be 104-year-old Ron Freer, from Kent, who returned home after the Second World War blind after being held as a prisoner of war by Japanese troops for four years.

In Kent, 750,000 poppies fell over the famous White Cliffs of Dover. They were carried in a battle-scarred Second World War Dakota plane, which

Labour has come under formal investigation by the EHRC for institutional racism against Jews. Two Jewish MPs have been bullied out of the party. Mr Corbyn has a long record of embracing antisemites as comrades.

"We listen to our Jewish friends and see how their pain has been relegated as an issue, pushed aside by arguments about Britain's European future. For those who insist that Labour are the only alternative to Boris Johnson's hard Brexit, now, it seems, is not the time for Jewish anxiety.

"But antisemitism is central to a wider debate about the kind of country we want to be. To ignore it because Brexit looms larger is to declare that anti-Jewish prejudice is a price worth paying for a Labour government. Which other community's concerns are disposable in this way? Who would be next?

"Opposition to racism cannot include surrender in the fight against antisemitism. Yet that is what it would mean to back Labour and endorse Mr Corbyn for Downing Street. The path to a more tolerant society must encompass Britain's Jews with unwavering solidarity. We endorse no party. However, we cannot in all conscience urge others to support a political party we ourselves will not. We refuse to vote Labour on 12 December."

Other signatories on the list include Frederick Forsyth, a Eurosceptic Conservative, Tony Parsons, the author who identified himself as "Tory scum" in 2015, and the actor Joanna Lumley.

There are also Liberal Democrat supporters on the list, including Maajid Nawaz, the broadcaster and founding chair of the Quilliam anti-extremist thinktank, and Oz Katerji, a journalist and filmmaker.

A Labour party spokesperson said: "It's extraordinary that several of those who have signed this letter have themselves been accused of antisemitism, Islamophobia and misogyny. It's less surprising that a number are Conservatives and Lib Dems.

"We take allegations of antisemitism extremely seriously, we are taking robust action and we are absolutely committed to rooting it out of our party and wider society."

'Cunning and manipulative' killer jailed for killing three year old

■ Seven years for mom's boyfriend who crushed tot with car seat

A former government minister's son who killed his girlfriend's toddler with a car seat has been jailed for seven years and six months by a judge who described him as "cunning and manipulative".

Stephen Waterson, the adopted son of the former MP Nigel Waterson, killed Alfie Lamb in 2018 in what police have said was the first case of death from crush asphyxiation as a result of an electronic car seat.

Alfie's mother, Adrian Hoare, 24, was jailed in May for two years and nine months for child cruelty after she was found guilty of putting the three-year-old into harm's way by placing him in the footwell of Waterson's Audi convertible.

Sentencing Waterson at the Old Bailey to five years and six months for the child's manslaughter, Mr Justice Kerr added two years for intimidation and 18 months for conspiracy to pervert the course of justice, to run concurrently with each other.

Previous hearings heard how the child collapsed on a journey home to Croydon from a shopping trip to Sutton, south London, in February last year. He died in hospital three days later.

Waterson had reversed the seat, squashing the child in the footwell behind. He was described by police as "arrogant, selfish and deeply unpleasant". He lied to officers about what happened and threatened his girlfriend and two friends who were also in the car.

Waterson and Hoare admitted conspiring to pervert the course of justice by lying to police, and Waterson was convicted of intimidating Hoare and another witness, Marcus Lamb.

He was convicted of assaulting a third witness, Emilie Williams, 20, who admitted conspiring to pervert the course of justice after being threatened and "coerced" into lying to police.

Labour promises full-fiber broadband for every home by 2030

Labour has promised to give every home and business in the UK free full-fiber broadband by 2030, if it wins the general election.

The party would nationalize part of British Telecom to deliver the policy and introduce a tax on tech giants to help pay for it.

Shadow chancellor John McDonnell told the BBC the £20bn plan was "visionary" but added that "other countries are having these visions and we're not".

Boris Johnson has promised £5bn to bring full-fiber to every home by 2025.

BT chief executive Philip Jansen said he was happy to work with whoever wins the election to help build a digital Britain.

But, he added, the impact of any changes on BT pensioners, employees, shareholders - and the millions of investors via pension schemes - needed to be carefully thought through.

Full fiber broadband, as it is known in Britain, is broadband carried only by fiber-optic cable including the critical final section from street junction box to the home. Copper has been the backbone of most of the UK's internet infrastructure, as it's used in the telephone network across the UK and goes into most homes.

But it's old and slower than fibre optic cable, which is made from glass or plastic and uses pulses of light to transmit data.

On the other hand, digging up and replacing copper with fibre optic cable to reach into people's homes is expensive and involves a lot of work.

Julian David, chief executive of TechUK, which represents many UK tech firms, said: "These proposals would be a disaster for the telecoms sector and the customers that it serves.

"Renationalization would immediately halt the investment being driven not just by BT but the growing number of new and innovative companies that compete with BT."

But Mr McDonnell said the Conservatives' funding plan for improving broadband was "nowhere near enough", and would leave the UK falling further behind other countries who already have fiber more widely available.

Broadband packages in the UK cost households an average of around £30 a month, according to broadband comparison site Cable - which people would no longer have to pay under Labour's scheme. According to a report from regulator Ofcom earlier this year, only 7% of the UK has access to full-fiber broadband - known as "fiber to the home" or FTTH.

FULL FIBER FOR REGULAR SURFING? Both parties are making promises

The government hit its target to bring superfast broadband to 95% of homes by December 2017 - at a cost of £1.7bn - but the internet speeds are significantly lower than those of full-fibre.

Mr McDonnell said Labour would add an extra £15bn to the government's existing £5bn broadband strategy.

"Everywhere I go they're saying [they have] either not got broadband at the speeds they need, holding our economy back, or it's actually impeding on people's social engagement," he said.

"We'll put the extra £15bn in [and] we'll ensure that broadband reaches the whole country."

'British Broadband'

The plan includes nationalising parts of BT - namely its digital network arm Openreach - to create a UK-wide network owned by the government.

"We're putting the money in and therefore we should own the benefit as well," he said.

A Labour government would compensate shareholders by issuing government bonds. Mr McDonnell gave a guarantee that no pensioner would lose out as a result of the nationalisation.

He said Labour had taken legal advice, including ensuring pension funds with investments in BT are not left out of pocket.

Queen is 'ultimate feminist', says Crown star Olivia

OLIVIA Colman has heaped praise on the Queen as "the ultimate feminist".

The Oscar-winning actress told how she found a new level of respect for the monarch, ahead of the screening of her portrayal in TV's The Crown.

Olivia, 45, said: "She's the breadwinner. She's the one on our coins and banknotes. Prince Philip has to walk behind her. She fixed cars in the Second World War.

"She insisted on driving a king who came from a country where women weren't allowed to drive [King Abdullah of Saudi Arabia, at Balmoral in 1998]. She's no shrinking violet."

Olivia told how it was "the hardest thing ever, to play someone much stronger emotionally than me".

The mother of three also revealed how she dealt with recording the visit to the Aberfan coal tip disaster, where 116 children were among the 144 who died in 1966.

She said: "When we filmed the scenes with the tributes and the flowers and the toys, the director would say, 'Pretend you're just judging a flower competition' – because if I thought about what it actually was, I couldn't cope. I can't do repression."

She added: "[The Queen has] been told all her life, 'Hold it in, don't show you're a woman'. It's an impossible situation.

"I couldn't do it. I hope she has a mountaintop Asked what she would do if she was Queen for a day, Olivia quipped in an interview to Radio Times: "I would make all companies pay all their taxes until the NHS is sorted out. The amount those massive companies avoid paying would fix everyone.

"Once that's sorted out, I'd grab a pony and go for a trot."

The third series of the Netflix period drama, which debuts on Sunday, stars Olivia as the Queen, Helena Bonham Carter, 53, as Princess Margaret, Tobias Menzies, 45, as Prince Philip and Josh O'Connor, 29, as the Prince of Wales.

Crock n' Roll! Sir Rod to have knee surgery

FOOTBALL-crazy rocker Sir Rod Stewart is to have a knee replacement operation next year – and blames his favourite sport.

The 74-year-old Hot Legs singer will have to take a break of at least six weeks for the surgery and recuperation. But the father of eight, currently on a UK tour, is promising to get back on the road once he is fit enough. Speaking this week, the star, whose early No 1 hit was You Wear It Well, said he will be forced to lay low for a while. Rod played for Brentford FC as a young man and has never missed the chance to play a game of footie since.

"In the new year I need to have a total knee replacement," he said.

"Playing football so much has caught up with me. I'll have six weeks off in January going into February and then I'll start again."

After the UK, he starts an American tour with Blondie before heading to Australia and New Zealand, and on to South America. He said: "I try to plan all my tours around the school holidays of my

The legend also said he wants to see a film made about his colourful life – and knows exactly who should play him. The superstar singer, this year celebrating his 50th year as a solo star, wants to follow in the footsteps of Freddie Mercury, Elton John and Judy Garland, who have all had recent biopics.

The Bee Gees are the latest music legends headed for the big screen and Rod, whose two youngest with wife Penny Lancaster are Alastair, 13, and Aiden, nine, revealed he's also been in talks.

"I would love my two youngest sons, who are similar looking to me, to be in it playing the young Rod," he said.

Santas desperately needed for Christmas...

BRITAIN is facing a Santa shortage this Christmas, with a boom in grottos but not enough Father Christmases to fill them.

Requests for Santas from shops, malls, theme parks and Winter Wonderland style events have reached 1,000 for the first time ever, according to the UK's only Santa School.

Many are trying to inject festivity as an antidote to the General Election, which they fear is overshadowing what should be a time of fun.

There has been a boom in grottos to cater for shoppers eager to find the magic of Christmas, said Santa trainer James Lovell.

But Mr Lovell, founder of the Ministry of Fun

Santa School, admitted that it has not been easy finding recruits. The right ones tend to be over 35, with a deep voice, not too thin and able to cope with children and their parents, he said. "Who wants an election at Christmas?" he added. "We don't want to vote, we want to sing carols, shop and see Santa. Let's be jolly!"

Feeling the pain at LAX

IF you haven't been down to LAX recently you're in for a surprise. And not a good one.

Two weeks ago I took an Uber to LAX. It was the first day that changes had been implemented there for drop off/pick up regarding taxis and ride share services.

Over the past couple of years travelers to Los Angeles via its major international airport could count on getting picked up by ride share services like Lyft and Uber, as well as taxis. And even after the airport made the switch to only allow pickups at the departures level at specific points – by blocking off the inside lanes in the arrivals level - it was rarely a hassle except on horrible traffic days. Now, ride shares are banned from curbside pickup and must go to a separate pick up location.

I first noticed how simple it was. We literally breezed up the ramp and was greeted with...absolutely no traffic. No bottlenecking, no honking. Well this certainly worked. Or so I thought.

Once on my United flight I could see the chaos building below in arrivals, I was over looking the newly built pick-up area and what looked like mayhem, I immediately dreaded coming back. I stared scanning my twitter feed and as suspected it seemed like the whole world was complaining.

One frequent traveler I know described the ride share pickup situation as a zoo, with some drivers claiming it takes them longer to travel the six blocks from the holding pen to the pickup location than it takes for jets to travel from San Francisco to Los Angeles.

But guess what? As usual the high rollers are not feeling the pain. If you can afford to call for a limo you can still walk out of your terminal like a celebrity, get curbside pickup and be whisked away in comfort. No shuttle or schlep to the pickup corral. No wasted time. No sweat.

Having traveled quite a lot this year I, I have noticed the different systems at other airports and by far Houston International airport is one of the best. They do have offsite Uber and Lyft but taxis are allowed to enter. But they also have a tram system in place to smoothly transport passengers from their terminals.

When the new metro service arrives in LAX it should help alleviate the situation, but we are still a ways off from that. So Christmas and Thanksgiving are sure to be fun. And for those traveling to the airport, take a pro-tip and try to take Century Boulevard, rather than Lincoln or Sepulveda, because where those two roads meet right by the In N Out it can often take 30 minutes to go 200 yards.

When I arrived back I thought it would be much easier to have a friend pick me up curbside (thanks friend) than having to deal with the commotion. He said it took two hours from Sherman Oaks, and the last quarter of a mile it was absolutely chaotic because of the back up of taxis and Ubers. The bottom line: it's still a long wait, but with the added nightmare of gridlock at the airport entrance.

IT'S NOT PRETTY: if you're going to the airport....leave even earlier

At the terminal there was another kind of chaos as the commuters were struggling where to go. The signage for Lyft/Uber and taxis was no where to be seen and the bus and shuttle drivers looked just as confused as the rest of us, apparently they have a designated inner lane and passenger pick up is on the outer one now. It took 20 minutes for my friend to arrive....and we then faced a two-hour trip back to Hollywood.

I'm not too sure of what the answer is yet, but this clearly doesn't seem to be working. I'm looking forward to it being fixed sometime soon, but in the meantime, don't put your friends through hell to come and pick you up. Consider one of the super shuttles to get you home or if you are feeling flush, order a limoor here's a novel thought, take the bus. And practice your deep breathing!

Feeling confused about Healthcare? Help is at hand!

Healthcare in the United States can be confusing, daunting and costly in comparison to other countries.

Having to understand terms like deductibles, out-of-pocket maximums and co-pays are enough to send anyone into a meltdown trying to make sense of it all. My agency, Beach Financial Group, specializes in providing expats the assistance and guidance they need to make their health insurance enrollments a seamless process.

Open enrollment (the period during one may freely enroll in or change health insurance plan) this year began on October 15th and will proceed through January 31, 2020. If you are trying to enroll or make a change that needs to be effectuated by January 1st, you will need to make the change no later than December 15th, 2019.

Beach Financial Group works with all insurance carriers in the state of California. Anthem Blue Cross, Blue Shield of California, Molina, Sutter Health, OSCAR Health, Health Net, Kaiser, and Cigna. Depending on the size of your household and income we can also assist with verifying if you qualify for subsidies through Covered California. Covered California can provide tax credit relief/subsidies towards health care plans for individuals and families who qualify.

If you are presently a client of ours, please contact our office to schedule an appointment to review your renewal.

If you are not a client of ours and are in need of guidance or assistance please email Mark (assistant@beachfinancialgroup.com) or Christine (christine@beachfinancialgroup.com) to receive more information.

In addition, we would like to inform everyone of the most recent OSCAR Health change. To make premiums even more affordable for 2020 they have divided the network into two. One network will have UCLA while the other one will exclude UCLA. Of course, depending on your personal circumstances there are advantages to both. If you would like more information on the network split please email our office at info@beachfinancialgroup.com.

Anthem Blue Cross has also made some news! They made it back to the individual health insurance market for 2020. However, please note that they will only be offering coverage in certain areas of California and will not have all the plan options that other carriers will be offering.

Are you still a little confused? We've got you covered.

This coming Tuesday, November 12th at 12PM until 2pm - we will be hosting a Health Fair at the Bizhaus, El Segundo parking lot.

OSCAR Health, Blue Shield of California, Health Net, Covered California, John Hancock, and LISI will be coming out to provide you with all the 2020 open enrollment information for individual, small/large group health insurance and life insurance. There will be tacos, drinks, a raffle and giveaways - so it would be great to see present and future clients!

My goal for Beach Financial Group has always been to help other expats and citizens understand the complicated nature of the industry. Whether or pet insurance, our 2020! it is home, auto, health, team is here to help. business, group benefits, Here's to a successful - Adam Beach

FLASHPOINT: Sterling and Gomez go nose to nose in Sunday's Premiership clash

Southgate downplays Gomez - Sterling clash as tensions simmer in England camp

GARETH SOUTHGATE gave a press conference on Tuesday as much for his players as for the media at St George's Park after Raheem Sterling's ruck with Joe Gomez. His main message was a clear and unmistakable one – "I am the manager".

In the confused aftermath of the fight in the private area of the team hotel on Monday evening, an FA statement quoting Southgate confirmed Sterling would miss the game against Montenegro and claimed "the decision has been made with the agreement of the entire squad".

Although nobody was saying so publicly, it increasingly became clear that was not strictly true. Some felt the punishment was too severe, others that the matter should not have been made public at all. In front of the microphones, though, the message from Southgate was a very different one about who was in charge.

"I have discussions with all of my staff and discussions with the leadership group, absolutely," he said.

GARETH SOUTHGATE: "we have to keep as much as we can between ourselves."

"But ultimately, I'm the manager and I make the decision.

"I always have to find the right solution for the group and for how we will work moving forward. That's a very difficult line. You try to be fair at all times, like with all the players. I won't always get that right but, in the end, I'm the manager.

"I've made a decision and it was appropriate for how we want to work moving forward."

His leadership group consists of captain Harry Kane, with Jordan Henderson, Harry Maguire, Fabian Delph and Sterling himself – his trusted lieutenants. Although it is becoming increasingly clear that throughout the wider squad, trust is becoming something of an issue.

As a result, Southgate's second message was more in the subtext of all that he was saying. It is the fact that when push came to shove – or in this case throttle – he could not trust his squad to keep it quiet.

"There seems to be all sorts of info being passed from so many different areas," he said.

"This is a consequence of the England football team now and that is a very difficult situation, one we have to think about moving forward.

"The team getting out, information getting out, there seem to be so many voices in the background." "I am not prepared to go into detail," he said. "The detail is not for me to take further. I have said what I think needs to be said publicly but we have to keep as much as we can between ourselves."

Davies: Welsh united ahead of vital Euro 2020 games

BEN DAVIES says Wales' stars would never let club differences cause lingering animosity – because they don't look back in anger.

The Welsh squad are counting down to their final two Euro 2020 qualifiers as they aim to secure automatic qualification – and they really are singing from the same song sheet.

Their close rapport was shown on Monday night when they took a break from their match preparations to see former Oasis frontman Liam Gallagher play locally in Cardiff.

The unity is in contrast to the England camp, which has seen Raheem Sterling dropped after his clash with Joe Gomez, and Davies says he could not imagine club allegiances causing so much division in the Welsh camp.

"Sometimes these things happened in football," said Davies, 26, who has 50 Welsh caps. "But if it happened in this camp, it would be fine the next day. It is a man's game sometimes. You just shake hands and get on with it. We have a good team spirit here. A few of the boys got to go to a very good gig.

"There was eight or nine of us – the boys had a good time. I loved it, I thought it was brilliant.

Wales meet Azerbaijan in Baku on Saturday before hosting Hungary next Tuesday, knowing six points are likely to secure second place in Group E.

Record-scorer Gareth Bale bagged his 32nd international goal in the 1-1 draw against Croatia last month. But the Real Madrid star has not played since suffering a calf injury late in the clash on October 13. The 30-year-old trained with the rest of the squad in the past two days, and Davies said: "I think it was up in the air about his fitness, but he is here for us now.

DAVIES (right), on Gareth Bale: "Hopefully, he is fit enough to get through two 90 minutes"

"Hopefully, he is fit enough to get through two 90 minutes and he can keep showing the quality he always does for Wales.

"For us to see him this week and see him training was a big boost. He looks fine."

The double-header will be the biggest games so far for Wales under manager Ryan Giggs, but Davies added: "As a group we have to be pretty good this week – emotions can't get in the way. We need to trust the process of how we are going to play. We are confident as a group that, if we do what we know we can, we can win."

Rangers consider taking legal action after HMRC says £50m penalty was 'too high'

Rangers are considering taking legal action against HM Revenue and Customs after it appeared to admit that it was wrong to have claimed £50million in penalties from the club's former operating company, which went into liquidation in 2012 and triggered one of the biggest club crises in Scottish football history.

The revised figure is understood to be around £20million, a liability which – had it been agreed in the first place – would have made the Ibrox club more attractive to buyers of genuine substance.

In such circumstances, according to former Rangers chairman John McClelland, former owner Sir David Murray would not have been forced to sell the club to venture capitalist Craig Whyte, who triggered liquidation by failure to pay taxes.

"At the time of the sale of the club in 2011, had the tax claim been at the level now being reported then, in my opinion, the outcome would have been different," McClelland told The Times.

"I believe there would certainly have been a much higher level of interest in acquiring it and therefore more potential buyers."

The original issue was Rangers' use of Employee Benefit Trusts (EBTs), a tax avoidance scheme, the scale of which was first flagged in 2006 when the club's annual report disclosed that £9.2million had been paid into the trusts as part of staff costs totalling £28million.

In April 2010, HMRC began an investigation into Rangers' use of EBTs to players from 2001 onwards. The club – then owned by Murray – declared that they would 'robustly defend' their position in what became known as the "big tax case".

Later that year, legislation was introduced to outlaw the use of EBTs by companies seeking to avoid tax payments.

HMRC's initial claim in respect of EBTs was for £74million, a sum that, when combined with an £18million overdraft at Ibrox, forced Murray to sell the club for £1 to Whyte in May 2011, on condition that Whyte would accept responsibility for the bank debt.

Whyte's regime soon ran into financial trouble and the business was placed by HMRC in administration for non-payment of VAT and PAYE in February 2012.

Liquidation followed that summer and Rangers were accepted into the Scottish Football League, beginning life anew in the old Third Division.

The "big tax case", meanwhile, was ongoing and BDO oldco – Rangers' administrators – won appeals against HMRC in First and Upper Tier tax tribunals.

Further hearings in the Court of Session in Edinburgh and the Supreme Court in London favoured HMRC and Murray responded with a statement which read: "I am hugely disappointed that the Supreme Court has upheld the decision of the Court of Session, reversing the decisions of the specialist tax First Tier Tribunal and the Upper Tribunal in this matter.

"The decision runs counter to the legal advice which was consistently provided to Rangers Football Club, that on the basis of the law and legal precedent at the time, the contributions made to the trust were not earnings and should not be taxed as such.

Last December, Rangers oldco's liquidators revealed that they had won a reduction in HMRC's claim to £68.3million and forecast an ultimate total pay-out to creditors of £1million.

When reports of the reduction of HMRC's claim to £20million became public, reaction from aggrieved Rangers fans was predictably fierce.

Tax barrister Jolyon Maughan QC said on Twitter: "Lots of noise about HMRC and Rangers. But this seems to be the nub of the story. Rangers seems to have persuaded HMRC its tax conduct wasn't sufficiently culpable to attract a penalty. But HMRC doesn't seem to accept it assessed Rangers to the wrong amount."

The club made no comment on Thursday but it is understood that they intend to undertake a forensic examination of tax and company law in respect of HMRC's recalculation and its impact.

Seventh heaven as England breeze through to Euro 2020

■ Hat-trick for Kane as young guns wallop Montenegro, 7-0

England celebrated their 1,000th game in style as they secured qualification for Euro 2020 and won Group A with an emphatic 7-0 demolition of Montenegro at Wembley on Thursday.

Captain Harry Kane moved to fifth in England's list of leading scorers as a first-half hat-trick took his tally to 31, while Alex Oxlade-Chamberlain opened the scoring on his first start for 18 months and Marcus Rashford was also on the scoresheet in that 45-minute barrage.

As England and the Football Association enjoyed this landmark occasion, with a parade of legends and 1966 World Cup winners in attendance, Montenegro proved the most amenable of opponents, particularly in the opening half when Kane and company ran riot and the visitors' defending was shambolic.

Oxlade-Chamberlain finished superbly to begin the rout while Kane quickly added two headers, with all three goals created by Leicester City defender Ben Chilwell. England's captain and Rashford were also the beneficiaries of Montenegro generosity before the interval.

It was also in evidence in the second half when Aleksandar Sofranac diverted Mason Mount's shot into his own net for England's sixth.

To complete a perfect night for Gareth Southgate and England - who by qualifying automatically ensured they will play all three Euro 2020 group matches at Wembley - the manager was able to give a debut to Leicester City's James Maddison, while substitute Tammy Abraham scored his first full international goal.

The introduction of Liverpool's Joe Gomez appeared to be bizarrely greeted by some jeers from England fans after the clash with Raheem Sterling that saw the Manchester City forward dropped as a disciplinary measure, but otherwise Southgate's side marked this gala occasion and qualification with a flourish before Sunday's final game in Kosovo.

best medicine

It has been a testing week for Southgate as he had to handle the fallout from the altercation between Sterling and Gomez at St George's Park on Monday, 24 hours after Liverpool beat Manchester City in the Premier League.

Southgate dropped Sterling but he could sit back and relax as England answered any remaining questions with a first-half performance that ended this game as a contest in short order.

England's players provided the best medicine with a victory that once again demonstrated their ability to destroy vulnerable opponents with a potent attack, as they have done throughout this qualifying campaign.

Now they must finish the job with victory in Kosovo as they try to ensure they are seeded for Euro 2020. Greater tests then lie ahead.

This was England's youngest starting line-up for 60 years, with an average age of 23 years and 255 days - and while the opposition was poor, this was a very promising glimpse into the future.

Leicester City's Chilwell demonstrated his growth as a player of international stature and his rounded game as he created those first three goals, while Wembley cheered the arrival of his Foxes team-mate Maddison as the gifted midfielder finally got his debut.

Abraham's development into a striker and poacher of growing quality was emphasized by his clinical near-post finish for England's seventh, and his young Chelsea team-mate Mount was unlucky not to get on the scoresheet.

Mount is 20, while Chilwell, Abraham and Maddison are all still only 22, so they can be part of England's plans for years to come.

Liverpool's Oxlade-Chamberlain may be one of the older brigade these days even though he is still only 26 - but he has endured a lengthy absence from the England scene because of injury. He has been in rich goalscoring form this season, as proved by his powerful, low finish that set England on their way. Southgate will be delighted to have him back at his disposal.

Harry Kane's hat-trick lifted him past Alan Shearer, Tom Finney and Nat Lofthouse into sixth place on England's all-time goalscorer list
