Covid what? Carefree Brits hit the beach....

■ Locals horrified as beaches, streets and parking lots are jammed with bank holiday visitors

BRITONS cast aside their coronavirus fears this week by jamming popular seaside resorts.

Desperate to escape social distancing and eager to take advantage of hot, sunny weather, tens of thousands dashed to the coast for the bank holiday weekend.

Locals in the resorts have said they are "horrified" by the influx of visitors, with many apparently unconcerned about public health issues.

"Hundreds die every day yet people think it's OK to have a jolly on the beach," a walker in Southend said.

Norfolk Chief Constable Simon Bailey said he feared there was a perception that lockdown was "done and dusted".

Government guidelines in England allow people to travel for fresh air and exercise, as long as they keep two metres (6ft) from anyone they do not live with.

Mr Bailey said some parts of Norfolk had seen numbers typical of a regular summer bank holiday and he was concerned at the "lack of respect" for communities who had "done their best to protect themselves".

"We're dealing with far more people heading to the coast, and with the beautiful weather we're having that's not surprising," he added.

"What I do find surprising is a sense that lockdown has been lifted, we can do what we want and the coronavirus challenge has passed.

"I'm really concerned. That is simply not the case."

In Newquay, Cornwall, police said they moved on camper vans that had stayed overnight, while in Bournemouth the borough council urged people to go home if the beach looked too busy.

'Extremely difficult'

In Southend, where photographs appeared to show people crowded on to the beach on Wednesday, councillor Martin Terry said the local authority had been nervous in anticipation of the hot weather.

"We've had days where we've had over 300,000 people come down here," he said.

LOCKDOWN'S A BEACH: the scene at Bournemouth this week

"A survey was undertaken asking people what's the first thing you want to do when you come out of lockdown and 70% said 'I want to go to the seaside and buy an ice-cream'.

"All we can do is advise people [to] please, please be safe - stay apart and be sensible."

Tony Cox, leader of the Conservative opposition group on Southend Borough Council, said the authority had been "ill-prepared" and that better "people management" would allow them the space to distance.

But Labour council leader Ian Gilbert said the police and council did not have the powers to stop people coming to the area.

"From the moment the government guidelines allowed people to travel, sunbathe and take unlimited exercise we knew it was going to be extremely difficult to manage the situation," he said.

On Thursday morning, BBC reporter Richard Smith spoke to locals in Southend, with one, Simon Stenning, commenting: "I think it's disgusting, and I am so angry because we were told to stay home.

"The message of 'stay alert' is intentionally vague so the government don't have to take any responsibility.

"Hundreds die every day yet people think it's OK to have a jolly on the beach."

News From Britain

Bank of England makes history with negative interest bonds

■ Historic sale comes as Bank of England mulls interest rates cut into negative territory

The UK government has broken new economic ground by borrowing £3.8bn for three years at a price that means investors will get back less than they paid out.

Or as The Times puts it, "for the first time in history, investors have lent the UK government money for a lengthy period with the promise that they will not be paid back in full".

The issuing of government bonds, or gilts, with an effective negative interest rate of minus 0.003% on Wednesday came as Bank of England governor Andrew Bailey told MPs that plans to slash the base rate - currently at 0.1% - into negative territory were "under active review".

So what does it all mean?

A "negative yield" effectively means that investors "have to pay to lend money to fund the government's response to the Covid-19 pandemic", says The Guardian.

Gilts are seen as a "safe haven in times of financial stress", with expectations that "inflation will be close to zero or could turn negative" currently adding to their appeal.

Investopedia explains that during periods of extremely low interest rates, "large institutional investors" are often "willing to pay a little over face value for high-quality bonds".

These investors accept "a negative return on their investment for the safety and liquidity that high-quality government and corporate bonds offer", says the financial information site.

The practice has already been deployed in Japan and Germany, with Britain now joining the "topsy-turvy world

Gilts are seen as a safe haven in times of financial stress of negative rates on new government borrowing", adds The Times.

Aaron Rock, investment director at Aberdeen Standard Investments, predicts that regardless of whether the BoE's Monetary Policy Committee chooses to adopt negative policy rates due to low inflation,

"there will be continued demand for gilts at low and negative yields".

BoE boss Bailey last month ruled out cutting policy rates to below zero. But the ongoing crisis has "persuaded the Bank that it needs to consider all tools available to make credit cheaper for embattled businesses and households", according to The Guardian.

"The move would be unprecedented in the Bank's 325-year history and would leave only the US Federal Reserve among major central banks to rule out negative rates," the newspaper adds.

Coronavirus fading in London as major hospitals report no deaths in 48 hours

■ But Culture Secretary rules out regional variation in easing lockdown, stressing intention to move 'as a whole nation'

The Culture Secretary has hailed "promising" figures showing that only small numbers of people are now testing positive for coronavirus in London.

Oliver Dowden said the Government may consider lifting restrictions in "micro-hotspots" when track and trace is in place but ruled out regional variations, saying the intention was to still "move as a whole nation".

It comes amid growing unease that economically damaging restrictions are still in place in areas in which the virus has been virtually eliminated.

Last week, Public Health England (PHE) modelling suggested that fewer than 24 people a day were being infected in London, with the number halving every 3.5 days.

New analysis by Oxford University shows that six major London hospital trusts have reported no virus deaths in the past 48 hours.

Homerton, University College London, Hillingdon, North Middlesex, Whittington Health and Guy's and St Thomas', were recording up to 16 deaths a day at the peak of the crisis, and have totalled more than 1,000 deaths between them since the start of the epidemic.

New testing data released by PHE this week also appeared to show that nobody had tested positive on Tuesday, although the figures have since been revised to 14 cases.

Mr Dowden said the numbers were "promising" and "moving in the right direction" but, asked by ITV at the Downing Street press briefing whether lockdown could be eased regionally based on the PHE figures, he ruled out the idea.

"We have to be highly cautious about it," he said. "The Prime Minister set out the path that we will go down in terms of easing lockdown. The next stage... we said from the beginning of June.

"We want to proceed as fast and as we safely can, because clearly there are benefits for children and clearly benefits for the wider economy. I think it is best though, and the Government has said this repeatedly, that we move as a whole nation, and that would include of course the whole of England, in doing so."

There is increasing concern among some ministers - including the Chancellor - and many Tory MPs about the potential for long-term damage to the economy because of the number of people still off work.

The Treasury estimates that the coronavirus crisis will cost the economy almost £300 billion this year, and figures released this week showed that 10 million private sector workers are now relying on Government furlough schemes.

Getting the capital back to work is the key to minimising what Rishi Sunak describes as "scarring" of the economy, with London generating almost a quarter of the nation's gross domestic product. The south-east as a whole, including London, accounts for nearly 40 per cent of GDP.

The Oxford analysis, by Professor Carl Heneghan and Dr Jason Oke of the Centre for Evidence-Based Medicine, shows that there 41 of the 131 acute NHS trusts have not reported a single death from coronavirus in the past 48 hours to Thursday evening.

Overseas NHS workers exempted from surcharge

■ Boris U-turn as Tories threaten revolt

NHS staff and care workers from overseas will no longer have to pay an extra charge towards the health service after mounting pressure from MPs.

In an abrupt U-turn, Boris Johnson's spokesman said the PM had asked the Home Office and Department for Health to exempt NHS and care workers "as soon as possible".

Labour leader Sir Keir Starmer said it was "a victory for common decency".

The health immigration surcharge on non-EU migrants is £400 per year and set to rise to £624 in October.

The move to grant the exemption came after the PM's spokesman defended the fee earlier on Thursday.

Officials are now working on the detail and more will be announced "in the coming days".

'unfair and unjust'

But it is understood the plan will include exemptions for all NHS workers, including porters and cleaners, as well as independent health workers and social care workers.

The chief executive of the Royal College of Nursing, Dame Donna Kinnair, said the charge had created "an unfair and unjust financial burden", adding: "At last the government has agreed with us."

"This will ease the pressure on families who may be struggling financially or emotionally as a result."

Mr Johnson himself stood by the charge on Wednesday, telling MPs he "understood the difficulties faced by our amazing NHS staff", but said the government "must look at the realities" of funding the NHS.

It caused a backlash, with a number of Tory MPs joining opposition MPs in calling for him to reconsider - including the Tory chairman of the Commons public administration select committee, William Wragg, and his backbench colleague Sir Roger Gale.

It all happened pretty quickly.

'personal beneficiary'

On Wednesday when the Labour leader Keir Starmer pressed Boris Johnson to change his mind, the prime minister was firm. He was adamant, it was the right thing to stick with the plan.

But overnight, there was disquiet - some chatter among Tory MPs - a few of them breaking cover to say they thought it was the wrong thing to stick with the charge.

And, lo and behold, just after four o'clock Thursday, Downing Street announced that the prime minister would be thinking carefully.

For the government's critics, of course, it has been portrayed immediately as a screaming U turn.

A way for Downing Street to close down a political row.

But many people who thought it was the wrong thing might be pleased that the prime minister, in their view, has seen sense on this occasion.

Earlier, No 10 defended the levy, saying the money "goes directly back into the NHS to help save lives".

But now Mr Johnson's spokesman has said: "[The PM] has been thinking about this a great deal. He has been a personal beneficiary of carers from abroad and understands the difficulties faced by our amazing NHS staff.

"The purpose of the NHS surcharge is to benefit the NHS, help to care for the sick and save lives. NHS and care workers from abroad who are granted visas are doing this already by the fantastic contribution which they make."

The change was welcomed by Labour, as the party had been planning to seek an amendment to the Immigration Bill to secure the exemption.

'common decency'

Sir Keir tweeted: "Boris Johnson is right to have u-turned and backed our proposal to remove the NHS charge for health professionals and care workers."

"This is a victory for common decency and the right thing to do. We cannot clap our carers one day and then charge them to use our NHS the next."

Mr Wragg also praised the decision, saying the PM had "shown true leadership, listened and reflected".

The leader of the SNP in Westminster, Ian Blackford, said he was "pleased to see the change of heart after pressure", while the acting leader of the Liberal Democrats, Sir Ed Davey, called it "a great cross-party win".

The change was also welcomed by of Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants.

But the charity's chief executive Satbir Singh added: "It's depressing that it's taken nearly two months for the government to listen."

The surcharge is currently paid by non-European Economic Area (EEA) nationals coming to the UK for longer than six months.

POLLWATCH: Starmer closes in on Bojo

■ Labour leader's popularity increasing as public support for government's handling of coronavirus crisis plummets

Boris Johnson's approval rating has fallen by seven points in less than a fortnight, as rival Keir Starmer's popularity continues to grow, latest polling figures show.

A Times/YouGov survey found that when asked who would make the best prime minister, 39% of the public backed the man already in the job - down from 46% in early May.

By contrast, the number backing Starmer (pictured, above) rose from 22% to 27% in the same period. The increase in the Labour leader's popularity follows a series of strong performances against Johnson at Prime Minister's Questions.

Starmer's questioning has left the PM "rattled", according to The New European. Indeed, "Johnson was left looking exposed and diminished" after their first Commons encounter, says The Guardian.

The swing in popularity also coincides with a drop in public approval for the government's handling of the coronavirus outbreak.

YouGov data "shows that at the end of last week 49% thought the government was doing badly, and 47% that it was doing well", reports Sky News.

of the resort were so busy "you probably couldn't swing a cat", and she said she avoided the beach when out for a walk.

"It really is bad. The traffic starts at 9 o'clock and it's like a school holiday. We are dreading the bank holiday."

The amount of litter dumped near overflowing bins or strewn across beaches and promenades has also become a matter of concern.

Mark Husmann, who did a beach litter-pick at Tynemouth, North Tyneside, said: "I'm pretty horrified."

"There were masses of people on the beach who seem to think that a global pandemic is less serious in the sunshine."

Visit Blackpool recently rebranded as "Do Not Visit Blackpool" to discourage visitors as lockdown restrictions were eased.

Hotelier Lyndsay Fieldsend said she had seen a "surge of day-trippers" since then and beaches full of litter."

Giles Harrison gets creative making a living amid challenge of Covid-19

ONE OF Santa Monica's most recognizable Brits made the New York Times this week.

Celebrity photography Giles Harrison – or tall, dark and handsome as he is known in our offices – was featured by the Gray Lady, as the paper is known, in an article highlighting the challenges faced by paparazzi in a world where everyone seems to be wearing a mask.

But Giles seems to be taking the current situation in his stride, telling the Times that widespread mask wearing has actually not impeded his ability to recognize celebrities on his daily drives around the target-rich environment of LA's westside.

"I'm really good at spotting people," Giles is quoted as saying. "I'm pretty phenomenal. I can literally spot somebody from behind - just by their walk, their hairstyle, body language."

And even if the celebrity he spots is less than hot right now, it doesn't stop him from snapping them anyway. A case in point for the Times article, Tim Robbins, actor and Santa Monica resident, whom Harrison spotted in Venice recently. The shots may not sell for much now, but they are something, and they could bring in revenue down the line if Mr. Robbins starts a new relationship, say, or shares a controversial political opinion online.

"I'm really good at spotting people," - Giles Harrison

"Everybody's one story away from having their picture be worth something," Mr. Harrison said.

Coronavirus has hit Giles and his ilk hard, with celebrity photo sales to top outlets like Us Weekly, TMZ and The Daily Mail down to about 15-20% what they were, pre-pandemic, according to the Times.

But like the adaptable Brit that he is, Giles has rolled with the punches. In 2019, he started an app called MoPho — "money photo" — that allows everyday people to submit photos they catch of celebrities or other newsworthy subjects in the wild.

If they're good, Mr. Harrison sells them and pays the user a commission. The app has helped his business "tremendously," he said, especially in this time, when fewer photographers want to go out and shoot.

Ten Weeks In: what we can do to stay strong

Here we are still... ten weeks in and like most I was finding it hard to be inspired.

I've had my ups and downs emotionally during these times, more so lately as it seems like until there's a vaccine we will be limited to moving around. As a social person who loves to travel it's especially hard.

As you probably know, we have been hosting our breakfast club and pub quiz on Zoom and Tuesdays has now become my new weekend. It's the day I get to see our members and catch up and pretend everything is seemingly normal. This week BiLA member Andrew told us about the website "JamKazam.Com" it's a site where you can play with other musicians in the virtual space. On Tuesday nights of course there is our Zoom trivia contest where I double team with host Sandro Monetti as teams or individuals test their knowledge, getting their drink on between rounds, of course.

But what to do for the rest of the week?

Wouldn't it be a shame if when this is all over and the only thing we can talk about is all the things we didn't do during the corona time? So I've come up with a list of things that you might want to try, remember it's never too late to learn.

Online courses: In a panic buying mood I thought it would be fun to purchase a drone. Thinking when this is all over it could be fun to become a drone operator. Well after I bought it I realized I will need a license to fly it commercially for filming purposes. So I've been bogged down studying for my drone operator pilot's license. The course is $180 and it's actually quite fascinating. I'm now halfway through.

Play: Some of you are still working from home and I'm hearing how incredibly tough it is trying to do your job, home schooling and also trying to entertain bored children. I feel for you. There are some really fun interactive things on-line to get your kids involved in to make learning fun. We did a fun challenge with my niece and her friends through texting. A virtual scavenger hunt of sorts. Where I texted mini challenges to them all and the first one to post a picture of them with the completed task will win the point. Tasks like: gather five different items that contain the color red. Draw a picture of your favorite Disney princess. (Extra

COMFORT FOOD: The Biscuit Box from British Corner Shops feature all your British favorites

(points for creativity) are taking up this great pastime.

Dress up in either your mum and dad's clothes and take a video with your best impression of them. Decorate an egg. Video yourself pulling funny faces. Paint your face. And my favorite "fix mommy or daddy a cocktail" you'll be surprised how much they get into it and how many memories you will make for them and you.

Exercise: On the down days, try to at least get some fresh air, whether it's a stroll around the block (mask on of course) or a full-on hike. I heard bike sales have gone through the roof, and more and more people

Read-a-book; put your phone down for a bit and get your head in a book, I know I've tons of books lying around the house that I've not yet started, but this weekend I just might take the time.

Learn a new language: I can't tell you how many times I've promised to start learning Spanish, French, Italian and ASL (sign language) well no more. There are many online apps like "Duolingo" which is great, its fun and interactive and truly helps you learn a new language with levels reached and entertaining challenges along the way. I'm learning with my mum, who's stuck indoors in England. Another great way of keeping connected.

Random acts of kindness:- Send a friend or a family member something unusual. I found this great website called Cocktail Courier that will send all the ingredients needed for a fancy cocktail for two for $33. The online resource British Corner Shop are doing "britkits" stocked with lots of your favorite products from home like a biscuit box which includes Hobnobs, Custard Cremes, Digestives and Rich Tea. Or the chocolate box with is full of Cadbury's goodness. Visit britishcornershop.co.uk and use the code BRITSINLA15 for $15 off all orders over $75.

For those friends or family back home you can go to a local supermarket website like Iceland.co.uk and go shopping for them and have items delivered free. And if course flowers are always welcome too.

These are just a few suggestions, I'm sure you have some of your own. If so please feel free to share them with us on the Facebook group.

However you use your time, use it wisely and have fun!

Meet a Member: Julie Gray

Meet Julie Gray from Glasgow who moved to LA 8 years ago to pursue less disruption in her travel schedule... and sunshine!

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

When I first moved to the US 13 years ago, I chose NYC – I loved the energy, the walkability, and Broadway. However as a consultant I was travelling weekly and just got sick of my flights being diverted, particularly in winter, and spending my Friday nights in airport hotels. So I was looking for somewhere the weather wouldn't curtail my time at home and I could still enjoy film and theatre. I had spent time in LA as a student on a Work America program and attended some seminars at UCLA while completing a Certificate in Screenwriting. I loved seeing so much blue sky, the tall palm trees, the miles of beaches and the ocean – in Manhattan the skyscrapers really kind of box you in.

What do you miss most from home?

Of course I miss friends and family, but also the architecture, and the history. I was fortunate with my career in that I got to travel all over Europe. I love the work of Charles Rennie Mackintosh in Glasgow, and of Gaudi in Barcelona, the Arrondissements of Paris and the Canals in Venice, to name a few.

What was your first impression of LA and ## has it changed since?

My first impression was as a student at 19 years old. I was staying with relatives of a friend and what struck me at that point was that people did not walk anywhere, not even to the grocery store a quarter of a mile away. We did the Walk of Fame and other tourist attractions, but it was very much in and out, get back in the car. I think people do walk more now, and feel safe doing so.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Glasgow?

In Glasgow there is a real sense of belonging – people are born there, go to local universities, find jobs and stay forever. And I don't blame them. It's a fantastic city. When you walk around you hear mainly Glaswegian accents, which I love. It has a very definitive identity and culture. LA is very different – people come and go from everywhere in the world. It is much more diverse, as a whole and as you go from one neighborhood to another.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

I am not sure that they are hidden, but my favorite two places are Runyon Canyon Park and The Last Bookstore. The first time I went to Runyon Canyon I took a blanket, a picnic and a book – I quickly realized it wasn't that kind of park! I love the sense of achievement of getting to the top, the stunning views, and the fact that pretty much everyone there is smiling. I have the added advantage of being able to walk there so the limited parking is not a problem. If you want to know why I like The Last Bookstore just go!

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

Do your homework – get on Brits in LA and find out what part of LA is right for you – in terms of the neighborhood, and your commute. And make sure you understand how everything works from social security numbers, bank accounts, the DMV and healthcare.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom – what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

Get out and explore. Don't just stay in your little neck of the woods. There are so many wonderful neighborhoods with different culinary delights and hidden gems.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment?

Right now, like so many others, I am 'seeking new opportunities'. My company basically lost 80% of our business overnight – my job involved travelling to client sites all over the US to provide executive coaching, leadership development and

LEO: You of all people can present a positive face to the world. It is this gift that will help you in the future. You can be a big force for helping others get through life.

VIRGO: There are some things you cannot change and some things you can. Focus on the here and now and see the light at the end of the tunnel. Worry is not going to help you now.

LIBRA: Venus your boss planet in your cousin sign is changing how you look at life currently. Upbeat and ready to go at a moment's notice should be your mindset. Some work should be available this coming week.

SCORPIO: You should be doing a lot better than the recent past. You are likely picking up pace in your daily life. Make each day be a new beginning .You are stronger than you think and this quality is what will get you through.

SAGITTARIUS: You may feel that there are some things and even people not worth spending time and energy on. Just do not cut off your nose to spite your face.

CAPRICORN: The recent planets lining up in your money house and going backwards will complete some long-standing problems. Just keep positive in thought and deed in all situations now.

AQUARIUS: You are innovative in most everything – which is no surprise to those who know you. With your boss in practical Taurus now get that brain working and really surprise them .

PISCES: You are one of the most intuitive signs. However, while you may feel weary and have not much energy in this time you also know nothing lasts forever, so plan accordingly.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF JANNE TYLDUM

Case No. 20STPB03563
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of JANNE TYLDUM

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Morten Tyldum in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Morten Tyldum be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on Sept. 23, 2020 at 8:30 AM in Dept. No. 9 located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF SUSAN MANUEL

Case No. 20STPB03666

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of SUSAN MANUEL

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Jeffrey Siegel in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Jeffrey Siegel be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on Sept. 25, 2020 at 8:30 AM in Dept. No. 29 located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Fictitious Business Name Statement:

UNITED: Coronavirus cost us £28m

Manchester United say the coronavirus pandemic has cost them an initial £28m - and expect the final figure to be far higher.

United revealed their third-quarter results to 31 March on Thursday.

Chief financial officer Cliff Baty said they are set to hand back £20m in TV revenue to broadcasters even if the Premier League season is completed.

United lost an additional £8m over the final three weeks of March, when they had three matches postponed.

A total of 11 United matches have been postponed because of the pandemic.

Speaking in a conference call after the latest financial results were released, Baty explained that Premier League television broadcasters would get £20m back from the club because of changes in dates and kick-off times resulting from the pandemic.

With games called off - including matches in the Europa League and FA Cup - Baty said that sponsorship revenues had "contracted", and that retail sales had been "impacted" with the club store at Old Trafford still closed.

He added that matchday revenues were "significantly impacted", with an acceptance games will be played behind closed doors for the foreseeable future.

United have refused to put a figure on what the anticipated overall financial cost of the pandemic will be ultimately - but executive vice-chairman Ed Woodward said the major burden would fall in the current quarter, which runs to 30 June.

"Our third-quarter results reflect a partial impact that the pandemic has had on the club but the greater impact will be in the current quarter and likely beyond," said Woodward.

Revenues for the quarter fell by 18.7% to £123.7m. The club's debt rose by £124.4m to £429.1m.

Baty said the postponement of the Premier League trip to Tottenham on 15 March cost United £4m alone.

"These are unprecedented times and we must recognise that this crisis will not disappear overnight," said Woodward.

THAT'S RICH: a total of 11 United matches have been postponed

EFL: relegation and promotion to continue

Clubs will still be promoted and relegated from the three divisions of the English Football League if seasons are ended amid the coronavirus crisis.

Play-offs will also be played, but with no more than four teams.

The EFL has confirmed that 51% of Championship, League One and League Two clubs need to agree for the campaign in each division to be curtailed.

This could pave the way for the League One season to be cancelled, with teams currently split over a resolution.

Talks last week stalled after at least six clubs in the third tier, including Sunderland, Portsmouth and Ipswich Town, said they wanted to continue the season.

With only 23 teams now in that division, following Bury's expulsion by the EFL, any vote is certain to be decisive either way.

If the season is brought to an early conclusion, using the unweighted points-per-game system proposed by the EFL eighth-placed Wycombe Wanderers would move into the play-offs at the expense of Peterborough United - another of the sides determined to carry on playing.

The new regulations still have to be voted on by all 71 EFL clubs before they can be implemented.

While League One could follow League Two in being curtailed, the Championship is hoping to resume in June alongside the Premier League.
