BOUNCE BACK BUDGET: Stamp Duty Holiday ■ Cheap meals out ■ VAT cut for six months ■ Jobs retention bonus ■ £2bn to get young into work

Rishi dishes up his £30bn budget of hope

RISHI Sunak paved the way for Britain's recovery this week with an audacious £30 billion spending splurge.

The Chancellor's mini-Budget included a jobs plan, a VAT reduction, a stamp duty holiday and eating-out discounts to get the country spending amid the easing of coronavirus restrictions. He promised to protect employment while warning that hardship lies ahead for many after the lockdown shrank the economy by a quarter.

And Mr Sunak pledged: "No one will be left without hope."

Measures to support jobs include a £1,000 bonus to firms for every employee brought back to work from the Government's furlough scheme and a £2 billion package to tackle youth unemployment.

To boost the housing market, the Chancellor announced an immediate stamp duty holiday to save buyers an average of £4,500.

And in a surprise move, he slashed VAT for hospitality and tourism firms from 20 per cent to five per cent, which could save hundreds of pounds on staycations.

The tax cut will apply to accommodation as well as food and nonalcoholic drinks from restaurants and pubs until January 12, 2021. It will also mean savings at hotels, caravan and campsites plus attractions such as cinemas and theme parks. The Government will be offering eating-out vouchers, worth up to £10 a head, during August.

'good and secure work'

Mr Sunak, who visited Wagamama at the Royal Festival Hall on London's South Bank on Wednesday, surprised diners by serving their meals.

Unveiling his support plans later, he said "people's fortitude and endurance" will be called upon.

He told MPs: "People are anxious about losing their job, about unemployment rising.

Tuck in! Boost for restaurants with 'eat in to help out' program

Diners are to be given half-price discounts on eating out through an innovative government scheme to fill up restaurants.

An estimated £500 million of taxpayers' money will be used to subsidise food next month, with pubs, cafés and other venues also covered.

The hospitality industry welcomed Rishi Sunak's "eat out to help out" plan, describing it as a "huge bonus" and "extremely positive".

Participating venues will be able to offer customers 50 per cent off meals and non-alcoholic drinks from Monday to Wednesday during August. The total discount can be up to £10 a head and is in addition to a cut in VAT on meals, from 20 per cent to 5 per cent, that will apply from July 15 to January 12 next year. The combined measures mean that the cost of a Big Mac meal at McDonald's will fall from nearly £5 to little more than £2 if the chain decides to take part. The price of an individual Big Mac could fall to £1.36, cheaper than anywhere else in the world.

At Strada, the Italian restaurant chain, a chicken milanese and chips for two will fall from £37 to £15.73. Customers will not have to provide a voucher.

The discount will be automatically knocked off the bill and the restaurant, café or pub will claim the money back from the government. The chancellor promised that venues would get the money back within five days.

The discount applies only to food and non-alcoholic drinks consumed on the premises and the limit of £10 per person means that the cost of eating at the most expensive restaurants will not fall proportionately as much as elsewhere.

Diners will be able to take advantage of the discount as often as they like. It is likely to lead to a surge in demand and has raised concerns about how it may worsen the obesity crisis. Tam Fry, of the National Obesity Forum, said that it was "a green light to promote any old junk menu that the participating restaurant feels it can get away with".

The Treasury said that it would cost an estimated £500 million but that the final cost could be higher depending on take-up. John O'Connell, of the Taxpayers' Alliance, said that it would leave taxpayers with a "bad taste in their mouths".

Nonetheless, the policy was welcomed by the hospitality industry. Kate Nicholls, of UK Hospitality, which represents restaurants, pubs and hotels, thanked the chancellor and said: "Customer confidence is key to our sector's revival and our ability to help Britain's economic recovery. Applying every precaution to provide safe venues will count for nothing if customers are not coming through our doors."

£10bn test and trace system STILL not working as it should, Treasury reveals Taxpayers have had to stump up £10bn for a test-and-trace system that is still not fully operational, it has emerged.

The Treasury also revealed that it spent £15bn on PPE during the pandemic "amid scrutiny of the government's procurement process", The Telegraph reported this week.

"Campaigners blasted officials for an enormous waste of taxpayers money" after PPE, coronavirus testing and contact tracing programmes were shown to have "accounted for almost four-fifths of extra health spending", the paper said.

Labour MP Meg

Hillier, chair of Parliament's public accounts committee, said Whitehall officials have "questions to answer" about the track-and-trace programmes, which "won't be supporting the unlocking of the economy for some time to come".

Matthew Lesh, head of research at the Adam Smith Institute, added that the amount spent on the programmes was "astonishing".

Reports suggest that only 75% of people who tested positive for the virus and were passed on to the NHS system "were reached by tracers and asked to share information of their contacts", according to The Sun. And of the contacts who were contacted and told they may be infected with coronavirus, only 73% could be reached and asked to self-isolate.

The NHS app intended to support the system was later ditched after it failed to detect most contacts. Health Secretary Matt Hancock said the government would work with tech giants Apple and Google to launch a functional app.

Pressure is growing on the government to launch a public inquiry into spending on the coronavirus response.

Hillier has "warned the government would have to justify the huge price of PPE amid intense scrutiny over its procurement strategy", The Telegraph says.

Heat up obesity fight, TV chef Jamie urges BoJo

■ “The policies are oven-ready, so let’s get on with it, says Oliver

JAMIE OLIVER: seeking a 9pm watershed for TV adverts about unhealthy food

JAMIE Oliver is urging Boris Johnson to back radical moves to promote healthy food and combat obesity.

The celebrity chef, 45, wants business rates cut to zero for companies that sell healthy food. He also wants a 9pm watershed for adverts about unhealthy food.

He said: “This gives Boris a massive opportunity to change the health trajectory of millions of kids.

“To use Boris’s own words: the policies are oven-ready, so let’s get on with it and put child health at the heart of the Government’s upcoming strategy.”

He praised Tony Blair for funding school meals and George Osborne and David Cameron for introducing a sugar tax. But he added: “There has to be a recognition that this is a massive public health issue and, crucially, that the Government needs to act.

“It looks like Boris has definitely realised the massive importance of this issue and I’m really pleased about that.”

The Prime Minister has changed his stance on obesity since he contracted Covid-19 and ended up in intensive care earlier this year. He is encouraging the nation to shed some pounds to better their chances of surviving the virus if they catch it and has been spotted running several times in recent weeks. Speaking last week, Mr Johnson said that he had dropped his “very libertarian” view on obesity.

However, he did not commit to any specific measures, saying the “arguments need to be gone through” on tax and on other measures. Meanwhile, a report published yesterday warned a healthy diet is too expensive for many families and more pressure should be put on the food industry to cut sugar, salt and unhealthy fats to save the NHS billions. The research, published by the House of Lords’ Food, Poverty, Health and Environment Committee, said the pandemic should be a “wake-up call” for urgent action.

HE’S STILL STANDING Sir Elton said the honor was ‘a truly humbling milestone’

You’re on the money, Elton!

SIR Elton John is to be immortalised on a commemorative coin to mark his 50 years in music.

The Royal Mint will be issuing a series bearing the singer’s iconic glasses and straw boater.

Sir Elton, 73, is one of the artists to be honoured on a coin as part of the Royal Mint’s Music Legends series.

It will be available to buy in gold and silver with prices ranging from £13 up to £64,950 for the heavier gold designs.

The coin’s design is inspired by Sir Elton’s look in the music video for 1983 classic I’m Still Standing.

Other designs include a piano-patterned edge and pulsating star. The superstar said: “It really is a fabulous honour to be recognised in this way.

“The past few years have contained some of the most memorable moments of my career, and this is another truly humbling milestone on my journey.”

A one-off version will be auctioned to raise money for the Elton John Charitable Foundation.

Threat of revenge porn ‘must be crime’

THREATS to post revenge porn should also be a crime says a domestic abuse charity, as it revealed one in seven young women has been threatened.

Women aged 18 to 34 are most likely to have intimate or sexual photos of them shared or posted online against their will – and the number of threats are rising, the charity said.

Refuge, which offers support for women and children experiencing domestic violence, conducted a survey of 2,060 people.

Sharing an intimate image is already considered a crime. But one in seven young women and one in nine young men in England and Wales had experienced threats, it found.

Eight in 10 (83 per cent) of the women who received threats said their mental health and well-being suffered and more than 10 per cent said they felt suicidal. While 60 per cent of those who experienced threats were aged under 40, around one in eight was in her 60s.

Refuge’s The Naked Threat campaign is calling for the Government to make threats to share intimate images or videos a crime and to consider revenge porn as a type of domestic abuse. The charity says 27 per cent of young men and 43 per cent of young women have shared images. Its head of policy and public affairs, Ellie Butt, said: “The law needs to recognise that threats to share these images cause serious harm, regardless of whether the threat is then carried out.”

A Government spokesman said: “We have asked the Law Commission to make sure our laws are keeping pace with these evolving crimes.”

Free TV licences for the over-75s have been provided by the government since 2000

Auntie to Oldies: no more free TV for you

The BBC is to go ahead with a plan to end free TV licences for most over-75s, after a two-month delay because of the coronavirus pandemic.

That means more than three million households will be asked to start paying the £157.50 fee from 1 August.

Only those who receive the Pension Credit benefit will be exempt.

The BBC said the new scheme is “the fairest decision”, but the government said it was “the wrong decision” and Age UK called it “a kick in the teeth”.

‘bitterly disappointed’

The controversial change was originally due to be made on 1 June, and the BBC said the delay had cost £35m a month.

The cost of continuing to provide free licences to all over-75s could have reached £1bn a year over time with an ageing population, according to the corporation.

BBC Chairman Sir David Clementi said the decision had “not been easy”, but the broadcaster is under “under severe financial pressure” and a further delay would have had an impact on programmes.

The BBC has previously warned that making no changes would have led to “unprecedented closures” of services.

It has also previously said it must make an extra £125m savings this year as a result of the pandemic, including the cost of delaying the over-75s changes.

Free TV licences for the over-75s have been provided by the government since 2000, but responsibility for the provision was passed to the BBC as part of its last licence fee settlement.

The Age UK charity said it was “bitterly disappointed”, describing the move as “a kick in the teeth for millions of over-75s who have had a torrid time during this crisis”.

More than 630,000 people signed an Age UK petition when the BBC first announced the plan in 2019. The charity has now urged the BBC and the government to “urgently sit down and agree on a solution to keep TV licences free”.

‘frustrating’

Age UK charity director Caroline Abrahams said many older people would either have to give up their TV, which is “more of a lifeline than ever”, or other essential purchases.

“Everyone needs to understand that under the BBC’s scheme many hundreds of thousands of the poorest pensioners will be facing a bill they will simply be unable to afford to pay,” she said.

Prime Minister Boris Johnson’s spokesman said the BBC had made the “wrong decision”, and the government believes the licence fees in question “should be funded by the BBC”.

Culture minister Matt Warman said the move was “deeply frustrating”.

But Labour’s shadow culture secretary Jo Stevens said: “The refusal of the government to fund this vital service after promising to do so is nothing short of betrayal.”

“Many over-75s have spent months at home with TV providing an invaluable source of company during the pandemic. For the government to blame the BBC who are having to contend with huge cuts is simply passing the buck.”

Julian Knight MP, Conservative chairman of the House of Commons culture select committee, called the situation “a mess” and said the new regime would be “a body blow to millions of British pensioners”.

Stars come together for Ringo's 80th

SIR Ringo Starr staged a star-studded online extravaganza as he marked his 80th birthday on Wednesday.

The former Beatles drummer has held Peace and Love birthday concerts for over a decade. This year the pandemic forced the star to play it safe – and ask pals to perform from home. And they didn’t disappoint.

The Big Birthday Show kicked off with Sir Ringo himself performing It Don’t Come Easy which he called “a song George [Harrison] helped me write”. Gary Clark Jr reprised Come Together with his blues guitar and Sheryl Crow played a one-woman-band rendition of All You Need Is Love.

There were also clips of previous concerts, including a 2019 performance of Helter Skelter with former bandmate Sir Paul McCartney. And it debuted a star-packed version of his 2017 track Give More Love featuring Jeff Bridges, Jackson Browne, Elvis Costello and Willie Nelson among others.

Cash raised from the livestream went to the charities Black Lives Matter, the David Lynch Foundation, MusiCares and WaterAid.

Paying tribute to the huge influence black artists had on the Fab Four, Sir Ringo said: “I don’t have to tell you that the Beatles’ early success had a lot to do with the influence we found in American artists.

“We loved listening to Ray Charles. Little Richard is my hero, Stevie Wonder, Sister Rosetta Tharpe...the list goes on and on.”

He added: “Black lives matter. Stand up and make your voice heard.”

His digital concert also featured best wishes from rapper Jaden Smith, 22, Beatles bandmate Harrison’s widow, Olivia, and Bryan Adams.

Sir Paul, who turned 78 last month, took to Instagram to send his pal birthday greetings on Tuesday, saying: “Have a great day my long time buddy! – Paul.”

'No exit strategy' for Prince Andrew

■ As Ghislaine Maxwell is detained by FBI, net starts to close on embattled Prince

LONDON: As the lurid headlines swirl in the wake of the arrest of Jeffrey Epstein's longtime confidant Ghislaine Maxwell, questions again are surging over what comes next for Prince Andrew, who is caught up in the high-profile affair.

Maxwell, daughter of the late publisher and arms dealer Robert Maxwell, is behind bars at a detention center in Brooklyn, New York, and is expected to appear in court in New York next Tuesday, having been arrested in New Hampshire last week. She will face charges on four counts in connection with the trafficking of a minor for criminal sexual activity and two counts of perjury.

Maxwell, 58, has not entered a plea, but has long denied any wrongdoing. Her attorney declined to comment after her arrest. Meanwhile, the scandal that has for years dogged Andrew, 60, the second son of Queen

Elizabeth II, does not appear to be going away. "It's a bit of a nightmare at the moment," British public relations agent Mark Borkowski said this week. "He's inextricably linked with this story, there is no exit strategy."

Borkowski said much now rests on exactly what Maxwell tells U.S. authorities.

He suggested Andrew should either stay silent or invite U.S. authorities "to come and meet him on home turf" in the United Kingdom and make public that he's attempting to "take the heat off him" by explaining his relationship with both Epstein and Maxwell.

Andrew has acknowledged that he knew both Epstein and Maxwell, the disgraced financier's former girlfriend, but has denied any wrongdoing.

In a widely panned television interview with the BBC in the fall, Andrew said that he had been introduced to Epstein by Maxwell, and that he went to stay with him in New York for four days in 2010. The trip was to break off the friendship, Andrew said, after Epstein served time for soliciting and procuring a minor for prostitution.

sovereign immunity

Andrew has also denied allegations that he had any form of sexual contact with Virginia Roberts Giuffre, who has repeatedly said she was trafficked by Epstein when she was 17 and directed to have sexual relations with the prince.

Andrew said that he had no recollection of ever meeting her — despite a widely circulated photograph showing the pair together.

Mark Stephens, a media lawyer at the London-based law firm Howard Kennedy LLP, who represented British cavalry officer James Hewitt after allegations of an affair with Princess Diana, said U.S. authorities were trying to "ensnare" the royal and that it was unlikely he would be extradited to the U.S.

ROYAL MESS: Prince Andrew has denied any wrongdoing.

Stephens said the principle of sovereign immunity — which makes certain individuals immune from prosecution — would make it difficult for Andrew to be summoned to the U.S.

If U.S. prosecutors wanted to gather information, they could do so through written testimonies or prosecutors traveling to the U.K. to collect evidence, Stephens said. This was done recently when U.S. authorities came to speak to U.K.-based survivors of the convicted rapist and disgraced Hollywood mogul Harvey Weinstein.

Even if he was extradited to America, Andrew would be under "no obligation to give evidence," Stephens added. "You can subpoena someone to court, but you can't force someone to give evidence," he said, citing an individual's legal right to silence.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Your boss planet Mars is now in your own sign. He will be visiting for some considerable time, so expect a lot of energy to get moving ahead in any part of life, just a little more patience needed.

TAURUS: You are not going to have the financial holdup you had this time last month or so. This is due to your boss planet Venus in your money area now for several weeks. Take stock of how life is today compared to then and you will be more at ease.

GEMINI: Your boss Mercury goes forward slowly but surely this week. This will move everything held up in any area of your life. It's all good if you keep positive and remember to be thankful for all you have achieved of late.

CANCER: It's good to make amends to anyone or anything that caused you any upset feelings. This next week or so will bring any situation some peace of mind. Mercury going forward soon in your sign will help. Happy Birthday.

LEO: You must get to the bottom of any emotional feelings you may be holding on to. This is a time to prepare to move forward and not look backwards. Life is getting better every day, enjoy it.

VIRGO: If you feel disappointed or maybe somewhat confused be honest, first to yourself and then with another. You probably know deep down what needed to be done to change this. Now you can get on with life a little faster.

LIBRA: Mercury goes in a positive direction this week and whatever has been on hold can get moving forward. Life is slowly and surely returning to some kind of normal. With this in mind be clear with your intention going forward this next week.

SCORPIO: You have the power to do whatever you decide you can. Be sure to keep a positive attitude now as your boss Mars is in Aries and he will be showing where you should put your energy now.

SAGITTARIUS: Your boss planet Jupiter going slow is in your area dealing with communications. Just be sure when put on the spot not to put your foot in it. Mars in your cousin sign is on fire now but do not be blunt with words or you could be the one to get burnt.

CAPRICORN: So it seems like time to make big decisions, however not so fast you have to be sure of what you want. You have very powerful planets going backwards and so do not rush to complete anything until later in the month.

AQUARIUS: You have never liked being boring or restrained from doing anything in your life. Times of late have made life difficult for you energetic souls. Nothing lasts forever and soon it will be time to move forward with your plans.

PISCES: You could be dealing with family situations currently. This means that other things that are important are put on the back burner. Mid-month you are back on track. Do take life slowly even though you are eager to get going now.

Sports: "The same referee that was the VAR against Sheffield United. In the world, everybody knows that is a penalty. And I say everybody, I mean everybody.

"It's not just my opinion, everyone in the world, everybody knows that is a penalty. And when I say everybody, I say everybody, everybody.

"Like Sheffield, the man of the match was not one of the players. But at Sheffield I could blame myself and the players, today I could not do that."

BBC Match of the Day pundit Dion Dublin said: "It's clear because Harry is setting himself ready to head that ball and he gets fouled. It is a penalty."

Moments after Trezeguet hit the post for Villa, United won a penalty which Fernandes converted to set them on their way to a 3-0 win.

The Portuguese pirouetted on the ball and appeared to catch Villa defender Ezri Konsa's leg - but referee Jon Moss awarded a penalty, a decision supported by the VAR.

Fernandes scored from the spot to set United on their way to victory and leave Villa four points from safety.

The Premier League

match centre told Match of the Day: "It was the wrong decision. It should have been overturned by VAR but wasn't and should actually have been a foul on Konsa."

Villa boss Dean Smith called it a "disgraceful decision".

"I can understand Jon [Moss, referee] getting it wrong but I don't know what VAR are looking at," he said. "They have a screen they can go and look at it but they don't seem to be bothered.

"Fernandes is trying a double drag-back - his first touch is on the ball, his second touch is on Ezri Konsa's shin."

His Manchester United counterpart, Ole Gunnar Solskjaer, disagreed.

"I think it's a penalty. The boy sticks out his leg, Fernandes does a fantastic Zidane, Maradona turn and he lands on him," he said.

Test cricket returns to England

First Test, day two, Ageas Bowl, Southampton. England 204: Stokes 43, Holder 6-42, Gabriel 4-62. West Indies 57-1

TEST CRICKET restarted in England this week with the First Test between England and the West Indies.

At press time on Thursday England had been dismissed for 204 in their first innings thanks to West Indies' captain Jason Holder's superb 6-42 on day two at an empty Southampton.

Holder, who at one stage took 3-1 in 14 deliveries, was backed up by 4-62 from the pacy Shannon Gabriel.

On a pitch offering plenty for the bowlers, England's batsmen showed obvious signs of rustiness in their first Test since the coronavirus lockdown.

Captain Ben Stokes was dropped twice in his 43, wicketkeeper Jos Buttler briefly impressed for 35, and it needed a last-wicket stand of 30 between Dom Bess, who made 31 not out, and James Anderson to carry England past 200.

England were then not at their best with the ball, with West Indies moving to 57-1, 147 behind.

On a grey, murky day, the floodlights were on throughout, and bad light forced the close with 26.3 overs still remaining.
