

Labour suspends Corbyn

■ Human Rights watchdog blasts former leader for inaction over anti-Semitism within party

Labour has suspended Jeremy Corbyn from the party over his reaction to a highly critical report on anti-Semitism.

The Equality and Human Rights Commission (EHRC) found Labour responsible for "unlawful" harassment and discrimination during Mr Corbyn's four-and-a-half years as leader.

But he later said the scale of anti-Semitism within Labour had been "dramatically overstated" by opponents.

A Labour spokesman said Mr Corbyn was being suspended "for a failure to retract" his words.

Mr Corbyn reacted by calling the move "political" and promised to "strongly contest" it.

The suspension will remain in place while the party carries out an investigation into his remarks.

Sir Keir Starmer, who became Labour leader in April, said the publication of the EHRC report had brought "a day of shame" for the party.

It found Labour responsible for three breaches of the Equality Act:

- Political interference

in anti-Semitism complaints

• Failure to provide adequate training to those handling anti-Semitism complaints

• Harassment, including the use of anti-Semitic tropes and suggesting that complaints of anti-Semitism were fake or smears

'overstated'

The EHRC found evidence of 23 instances of "inappropriate involvement" by Mr Corbyn's office.

Sir Keir, who served under Mr Corbyn as shadow Brexit secretary, promised to implement the report's recommendations "as soon as possible in the New Year".

Responding to the EHRC's findings, Mr Corbyn said he was "always determined to eliminate all forms of racism".

He claimed his team had "acted to speed up, not hinder the process" and that the scale of anti-Semitism within Labour had been "dramatically overstated for political reasons by our opponents inside and outside the party".

Shortly afterwards Labour general secretary David Evans suspended Mr Corbyn.

The party said this was "in light of his comments" and "his failure to retract them subsequently".

Mr Corbyn, Labour leader from 2015 until this year, reacted on Twitter, promising to "strongly contest the political intervention to suspend me".

He said those who denied the party had an anti-Semitism problem were "wrong" and he would "continue to support a zero-tolerance policy towards all forms of racism".

In an interview, Mr Corbyn did not retract his earlier comments and said: "I'll be appealing to the party and those who made the decision to kindly think again."

This seems not to have been a deliberately designed collision between the current party boss and his predecessor.

Jeremy Corbyn said anti-Semitism complaint numbers were "exaggerated"

But this was an explosive political parting of ways, provoked in part by Mr Corbyn's trademark determination not to bend.

'right decision'

This is an attribute admired by many of his devotees, a frustration abhorred by his detractors and a sadness to those in Labour who believe it coloured the party's handling of anti-Semitism.

For Sir Keir, this episode does, perhaps by accident rather than design, prove beyond doubt his slogan - Labour is under new leadership - to be true.

Jewish Labour MP Dame Margaret Hodge said: "[The suspension] is the right decision following Corbyn's shameful reaction to the EHRC report."

The party was "finally saying enough is enough, anti-Semitism can never be tolerated", she added.

Labour deputy leader Angela Rayner told BBC Radio 4's World at One: "Jeremy is a thoroughly decent man, but he has an absolute blind spot and a denial when it comes to some of these issues."

But groups on the left of the Labour movement attacked the decision to suspend him.

The Socialist Campaign Group said it "firmly" opposed the move, adding: "We will work tirelessly for his reinstatement."

And Momentum, among Mr Corbyn's strongest backers, said: "It is a massive attack on the left by the new leadership and should be immediately lifted in the interests of party unity."

The EHRC launched its investigation last year after receiving a number of complaints from organisations and individuals, including the Campaign Against Anti-Semitism and the Jewish Labour Movement.

367 more die on the darkest day since May

Health chiefs call for urgent action to stop more deaths

THE daily coronavirus death toll has soared by more than half in a week, with 367 deaths reported across the UK on Tuesday.

The figure was the highest since late May and up 52 per cent on last Tuesday's total of 241.

Some 22,885 new cases were confirmed, an increase of seven per cent from 21,331 on the same day last week.

Health leaders have now called for urgent action to stop the rising tide of deaths.

Some hospitals have cancelled routine operations to cope with the surge in Covid-19 patients, it was said.

Dr Yvonne Doyle, medical director of Public Health England, warned that the toll is expected to climb further.

She said: "We continue to see the trend in deaths rising and it is likely this will continue for some time.

"Each day we see more people testing positive and hospital admissions increasing.

"Being seriously ill enough from the infection to need hospital admission can sadly lead to more Covid-related deaths.

"We can help to control this virus. We know that by washing our hands regularly, wearing a face covering and socially distancing we can save lives by slowing the spread of the virus." The UK's official coronavirus death toll now stands at 45,955, with total cases confirmed through testing at 965,575 and set to pass one million within days.

'far greater'

Latest figures show there were 9,199 patients in UK hospitals on Sunday, including more than 800 in mechanical ventilation beds.

Hospital managers in Leeds revealed the pressure on beds had become "far greater than in the first wave" and said operations had been cancelled.

Staff at Leeds General Infirmary and the nearby St James's University Hospital were told the growing number of admissions meant it is "looking even more likely" the city will be moved into Tier 3 of restrictions.

David Berridge,

deputy chief medical officer at Leeds Teaching Hospitals, said there were 237 Covid-19 patients in wards on Tuesday, with 25 in critical care.

Mr Berridge said: "These numbers are close to the peak seen in the first surge and prevalence data indicates that it may continue to rise for another one to two weeks.

"Our current overall bed occupancy is far greater than in the first wave so there is very significant pressure on our inpatient capacity.

"Unfortunately, as a result, we have had to cancel some operations and expect this to continue throughout the week due to pressures on beds in all areas of our hospitals."

'grave'

Another hospital trust in South Yorkshire which runs Doncaster Royal Infirmary announced on Monday that the number of coronavirus patients on their wards was now "far beyond the first wave earlier this year".

Rotherham Hospital also reported a jump in cases to beyond the spring peak.

Latest figures show there were 9,199 patients in UK hospitals on Sunday

Mid Yorkshire Hospitals Trust said it has closed three operating theatres at Pinderfields Hospital in Wakefield to enable staff to care for critically ill virus patients.

Layla McCay, director at the NHS Confederation, said action was urgently needed to curb the rise in deaths and reduce pressure on the already stretched health service.

She said: "These figures clearly illustrate how grave the situation has already become, and how difficult the coming weeks and months are likely to be.

"Our members tell us that in many cases their capacity is severely stretched. This is only likely to deteriorate over time, as we see more Covid-19 patients needing hospital treatment, alongside those with the usual winter illnesses.

"Furthermore, if staff need to be redeployed to Covid-19 services, it will be even more difficult to restore and maintain routine services."

Bulger killer Jon Venables 'uses pornography to cope'

CHILD killer Jon Venables used sex and pornography "as a means of coping", Parole Board papers revealed this week.

The detail emerged in documents explaining why he was denied parole last month and should not be sent to an open prison.

Aged 10, Venables

and Robert Thompson snatched James Bulger, two, in Merseyside in 1993. They were jailed for life but released on licence in 2001. Now 36, Venables was jailed in 2010 and 2017 for possessing indecent images of children and has been serving a 40-month sentence.

Earlier this year, the Parole Board was asked to review his case.

The papers said up to his offending as an adult Venables had "a sense of dissatisfaction" in life.

He did not request release and was attending courses to address his "propensity for sexual offending", the papers said. He will be eligible for another review after two years.

UK's eldest dies at 112

BRITAIN'S oldest person has died at the age of 112.

Joan Hocquard passed away at a care home in Poole, Dorset, on Saturday, her nephew Paul Reynolds said.

Even though his aunt was born in 1908 she did not believe in any secret to a long life, said Mr Reynolds.

She shared her birthday, March 29, with the world's oldest man, Bob Weighton, who died in Hampshire in May aged 112, and with Alf Smith of Perthshire, who died last year at 111.

Mr Reynolds said she "enjoyed butter and cream and she scoffed at the idea of dieting", having cooked at a French hotel in the 1930s.

She had driven ambulances in wartime London.

The world's oldest person is Kane Tanaka, of Japan, aged 117.

'Milestone' in hunt for Covid vaccine

■ Oxford jab shows strong immune response in over-55s and the young HOPES of a coronavirus vaccine breakthrough rose this week after early trials showed a "strong immune" response in older volunteers.

Tests of the Oxford jab also found the over-55s had lower levels of side-effects than younger participants.

Experts hailed the development as a "milestone" in the race to secure a vaccination that will help the world recover from the Covid-19 pandemic.

The risk of becoming seriously ill with coronavirus increases with age, meaning any vaccination programme must be effective in the older population.

Interim results from the vaccine, produced by Oxford University and pharmaceutical firm AstraZeneca, suggest it produces a robust immune response in the old and the young.

Analysis of blood tests on the over-55s echoed early research on younger volunteers that showed the shot prompted the release of antibodies that help fight Covid-19.

The jab is one of the most advanced experimental coronavirus vaccines in the world.

The university said the latest development is a "key milestone" in its work to find a vaccine.

A spokesman said: "Our ongoing trials will provide further data, but this marks a key milestone and reassures us that the vaccine is safe for use and induces strong immune responses in both parts of the immune system in all adult groups."

The vaccine is currently in a phase three clinical trial, which means the safety and effectiveness of the jab is being tested by thousands of participants in a number of different countries.

Data from the research is expected to be presented to regulators within weeks.

The findings on the immunity boost for older people follow analysis of data from phase two trials over the summer.

PROGRESS? The Oxford vaccine is currently in phase three clinical trials

Full details are expected to be laid out in scientific journals once they have been reviewed by other experts.

AstraZeneca said the reactogenicity – the common, expected side-effects – were lower in older adults.

A spokesman said: "It is encouraging to see immunogenicity responses were similar between older and younger adults and that reactogenicity was lower in older adults, where the Covid-19 disease severity is higher."

The company's shares rose as much as 1.4 per cent in London after the findings emerged.

Stephen Evans, a professor at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, said scientists wanted to see the findings "before concluding that the responses were similar" between the older and younger age groups.

He said a reason why the side-effects could be lower is because of the type of dose used during trials.

Scientists around the world are racing to find a vaccine against Covid-19. Around 240 are under development.

Some 44 are currently in clinical trials and nine have reached phase three testing.

Ministers have signed a number of contracts to make sure the UK is ready to go once one is found.

The contracts total 340 million doses. Frontline health and care home workers, people with serious diseases, the elderly and ethnic minorities are first in line to receive a jab.

Matt Hancock this week said a vaccination programme is expected to be largely rolled out by next summer. The Health Secretary said preparations are being made to vaccinate NHS staff within weeks in case trials go "perfectly".

While he did not rule out the first jabs being administered before Christmas, Mr Hancock insisted it was more likely to be next year. He said: "The programme is progressing well.

We're not there yet."

Quit Marines, Harry advised

PRINCE Harry has been told he should step down as ceremonial head of the Royal Marines while he lives in the US.

Major General Julian Thompson, who commanded 3 Commando Brigade during the 1982 Falklands War, said the Captain General needs to be available for regular visits to units.

General Thompson sees Harry's brother, Prince William, as a suitable replacement.

He said: "You cannot do it remotely. A big part of the job is meeting the Royal Marines' units."

Covid-19: West Yorkshire to go into Tier 3 from Monday

West Yorkshire is to be placed under tier three Covid restrictions from Monday, the strictest level of rules.

The area - home to an estimated 2.3 million people - includes the cities of Leeds and Bradford.

The government has promised a further financial package of more than £59.3m for the region.

Casinos, soft play, adult gaming centres, betting shops and car boot sales will be shut, as well as pubs and bars not serving substantial meals.

Under the tier three - very high alert - rules, there can also be no mixing of households indoors or outdoors, including in private gardens.

It comes as a major study of Covid-19 in England suggested that Yorkshire and the Humber, where one in every 37 people has the virus and includes West Yorkshire, is the country's worst affected area, followed by the North West region.

When West Yorkshire goes into tier three from 00:01 GMT on 2 November, 11 million people - nearly a fifth of all those living in England - will be under the tightest coronavirus restrictions.

A statement from the Leaders of West Yorkshire Councils said they accepted the move into tier three "with great reluctance".

"The virus spread is now at a critical juncture. Not only are infections rising in our region, particularly amongst the elderly, but we already have evidence that the NHS is starting to struggle to deliver essential elective care," it continued.

Bradford currently has the highest Covid rates in the county, with 483.5 cases per 100,000 of the population in the week to 24 October.

Susan Hinchcliffe, leader of Bradford council and chair of the West Yorkshire combined authority, warned that "further economic restrictions" would be "damaging" for businesses and jobs.

She accused the government of "seriously underestimating the economic impact" of restrictions and vowed that local leaders would "challenge" it to "improve upon them".

Gillian Hartley, chief executive of Leeds Teaching Hospitals NHS Trust, said Leeds hospitals had "exceeded the peak position we were in earlier this year in April".

Hospitals in the city are currently treating 268 patients with Covid - up from 158 last week.

The neighbouring areas of South Yorkshire, Greater Manchester and Lancashire are already under tier three restrictions, as well as the Liverpool City Region and Warrington. Nottinghamshire goes into tier three from Friday.

News from Britain

Frank Bough dies at 87

FORMER Grandstand host Frank Bough has died at the age of 87.

The star, who was once one of the highest paid presenters on BBC television, died on Wednesday in a care home.

He started out as a host on Sportsview in 1964 before he moved to Grandstand and current affairs' show Nationwide.

He then launched the corporation's Breakfast Time TV programme in 1983, before being sacked in 1988 over a drugs and prostitutes scandal.

Good Morning Britain star Piers Morgan was among those to pay tribute, tweeting: "His career was ruined by scandal, but he was one of the great live TV presenters. Sad news."

Frank married Nesta Howells after leaving the army in 1959 and they had three sons David, Stephen and Andrew together.

Bough was also a presenter on LBC radio in the early 1990s and was also involved with the station for the launch of London News Talk and moved to the News 97.3 service until 1996 and LBC radio before retiring in 1998.

But he always considered working on Breakfast Time as a career highlight.

He said in 2014: "I still occasionally watch BBC Breakfast, although my sight is failing these days."

"When I started, it was with Selina Scott, Alan Titchmarsh doing the gardening and Russell Grant doing the stars.

Diana Moran, the green goddess, used to go to railway stations and get commuters in suits to exercise.

"TV-AM had David Frost, Anna Ford, Michael Parkinson and Angela Rippon – and they thought they were going to bury us. But we buried them."

Nigella: I'm glad to still be alive at 60

NIGELLA Lawson has revealed she is extremely thankful to have made it to 60 – and she is already excited about Christmas despite it being two months away.

The TV chef says: "I'm not a planner, apart from when it comes to food!

"But to be completely honest, I've never been able to take for granted that I'd be alive by this age. My mother died at 48 and my sister at 32. And then John [Diamond, her first husband] at 47.

"So, even if I were the sort of person who planned ahead, I don't think I would have seen myself here."

On ageing, she says: "I kind of think you can't do anything about it so why complain? I know what the alternative is, so it feels wrong when you've been surrounded by people who have died young to say, 'My hair's awful, I've got to get my roots done', or 'My hands look like lizards'.

"So I don't dwell on it. As long as you're healthy, that really is the most important thing."

Nigella, whose father is former Tory Chancellor Nigel, graces Good Housekeeping's latest cover. She tells the magazine she can't wait to be a Domestic Goddess when her two adult children arrive for Christmas. Asked what the festive season meant to her, she admits: "Being with my children, a lot of cooking, a lot of eating and lots of lying about. I love watching films with them and I enjoy not having things in the timetable.

"I'm also a bit cliched and like having the fire burning and lots of tealights and fairy lights. It's about turning my home into this cocooning, magical place."

Safety first as Queen will skip Christmas service

THE Queen has ruled out attending church in the Christmas royal tradition in a bid to prevent the usual crowds gathering for the annual family turnout.

But Her Majesty is still planning a family get together at Sandringham – hoping the Rule of Six will be suspended.

Aides are working on the assumption that she and Prince Philip will spend the festive break at the big house on the 20,000 acre royal estate, despite a staff revolt over attempts to make them isolate from their families.

But, barring a dramatic change in efforts to tackle the coronavirus pandemic, the 94-year-old monarch has abandoned going to church for the traditional Christmas Day service at St Mary Magdalene Church on the estate.

The relaxed family affair has always been popular with an adoring public, too, who turn out with gifts of flowers and to wave – and possibly even grab a brief chat.

It is thought to be only the third time in her reign that she will miss attending church with her family on Christmas Day – and the first that the Windsors have not attended en masse in that time.

difficult

In 2016 she missed the Christmas Day service at Sandringham because of a heavy cold and in 1953 she was abroad.

The Queen has celebrated Christmas at Sandringham since 1988 and before that at Windsor Castle, where the family would usually attend the Christmas Day service at St George's Chapel.

In 1953 she was away in New Zealand during a long Commonwealth tour.

Senior royal aides are finding it difficult

Attending the Christmas service at Sandringham church is a royal tradition to plan the Queen's programme over the festive season because of rapidly changing Covid-19 restrictions – but are pinning their hopes on Boris Johnson and his ministers allowing families to celebrate together.

Mr Johnson has held out the promise of suspending the Rule of Six restriction over Christmas, even though lockdown has been tightened in many areas during major festivals for other religions, including the end of Ramadan and the Jewish new year.

A royal source said: "We will simply follow government guidance."

There has been speculation that the Queen might stay at Windsor instead this year, but royal sources say she is a stickler for carrying on the Sandringham tradition. She and Prince Philip went to Balmoral in the summer despite coronavirus restrictions preventing them entertaining in the usual way.

Joe Little, managing editor at Majesty Magazine, doubts that the wider Royal Family will gather.

He said: "I think everybody is just going to end up in their own homes.

"If it is just the Queen and the Duke and they are rattling around in the big house, then it's Balmoral part two, because they can't entertain and what's the point?"

Palace officials are still trying to deal with a staff revolt at Sandringham.

The Queen was said to be furious last month after it emerged that cleaners, laundry and maintenance workers on the Norfolk estate were refusing to isolate from their families for weeks to be able to join a small bubble of close aides serving the monarch over Christmas.

Brits in LA

White Privilege ...from my perspective

For our final installment celebrating Black History Month UK we hear from long time and much loved Brits in LA member Kara Miller. Even though this month is now over it doesn't mean we have to stop the movement, in fact it would be a real shame if we did. We welcome contributions from all of our members. Email us at info@britsin.la if you have something to share. Last but not least, if you can vote make sure you do!

Now over to Kara....

I am a Black Jamaican woman and I understand first hand what 'white privilege' is. How the hell is that possible?

'White privilege' does NOT mean, if you're white, that you're privileged and there's nothing bad happening in your life. What it means is that there are things (big and small) that you don't have to think about, that other people do and you may not even be aware of them. And, because you're not aware of them, from your own personal experience, you may find it difficult to believe or understand the experiences that other people are sharing.

How do I know so much about 'white privilege'?

When I came to Britain from the Caribbean, I had 'West Indian privilege'.... I'd grown up in a Black majority world. There were no limits to what I could do or to what people expected of me. People did not treat me differently based on the colour of my skin. Race wasn't a defining factor for the way I was treated by police, for academic opportunity and achievement, for home ownership, for career advancement or anything.

In Jamaica, the official national motto is 'Out of Many, One People'.

There is a real celebration of the racial and cultural diversity in our melting pot society (African, Indian, Chinese and European). We see the differences and we celebrate them...and because of that they are ALL part of OUR culture. There isn't a dominant culture that 'the others' need to fit into (or maybe I was a part of that dominant 'majority' culture so I would say something like that lol!).

But when I got to Britain, what struck me was that (unlike in the Caribbean) conversations about race were verboten.... There was an unspoken rule that the Black friend or Black friends in a friendship group (or even in a corporate environment) shouldn't cause any 'awkwardness' by talking about any 'uncomfortable' history or experience that differed from their white friends.

And if the subject of race was brought up:

"But I'm colour blind. I don't think of you as Black. You're just like me."

"How can I be racist / prejudiced when I don't even see colour..?"

These white, British people meant well, they meant to include me. But I knew that many of the things that made me different, that also made me 'me' weren't being seen. I was being praised and accepted for the ways I was exactly like them and any points of difference just weren't being seen. Or were politely looked over.

So the real conversations can't happen and no one gets a chance to really share themselves. No one gets a chance to really hear what is being said and to understand that there are things other people are experiencing that they have no clue about.

"Black people in Britain are 9 times more likely to be stopped and searched than white people." (Home Office figures published in The Guardian - 27 Oct 2020)

My first, and only, police stop happened in Britain. I was 18, and I will never forget it because I was so genuinely surprised by it. I was a first year law student at Oxford, and I was visiting a West Indian friend in London (who was studying to be a criminologist) when she and I were stopped in a car. We were stopped for no discernible reason and the way the police treated us.... We couldn't understand it. The policemen were so rude, they didn't believe anything we said and they treated us like criminals.

Fast forward to now. George Floyd, Breonna Taylor and so many more. It's always been happening but now we're talking about it. Finally. Now, in 2020, honest conversation is not a luxury, it's a necessity.

We need it to move forward as a society in both the UK, the USA and around the world.

When my friend Craig Young (co-founder of Brits in LA) called me and said he wanted to do something to celebrate UK Black History month, to amplify Black voices and to start a discussion, I was an immediate YES! We created a video podcast series which all can be viewed on Facebook or Vimeo @BritsinLA:

EPISODE 1: 'How To Talk About Race With Your Kids' - As part of Brits in LA's celebration of UK History month, we've brought you Uju Asika to lead you step by step through the process! Uju is author of the new book cont. on page 9, col. 1

EPISODE 2: 'Black & British' - As part of Brits in LA's celebration of UK Black History month, we've brought you a panel of some extraordinary Black British people for a frank, no holds barred discussion filled with insights, revelations & some laughter too.

EPISODE 3: 'Black, British & Out' - As part of Brits in LA's celebration of UK Black History month, we've brought you a panel of some extraordinary Black British LGBTQ people for a discussion that is insightful, funny and at times shocking. Such honesty. This is a must watch. NOTE: ADULT CONTENT.

EPISODE 4: An interview with actor T'Nia Miller (of 'Dr Who' and 'The Haunting of Bly Manor') - Black, British, LGBTQ trailblazer!

I saw a handwritten board that said, in all caps: "IF YOU'VE EVER WONDERED WHAT YOU'D HAVE DONE DURING SLAVERY, THE HOLOCAUST OR THE CIVIL RIGHTS MOVEMENT...YOU'RE DOING IT RIGHT NOW!"

It's funny, because of the exact time we're living in - you don't have to risk your life to make a difference (e.g. running an underground liberation movement or fighting in WWII or being a Freedom Rider on a bus in the deep south in 1961...). You can be a hero, just by exercising your right to vote.

However you want to vote. Just use it to effect change. Because, it will. Your vote matters and so, so much is on the line.

Meet A Member: River Alexandra Song

Meet River Alexandra Song from who is not from the UK, but from Colon, Michigan and moved to LA 35 years ago to pursue a career in the entertainment industry.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

LA called to me because it was a lot warmer than where I was living and I had wanted to get into creating a small rep company as I had when I was just out of school. It was LA or New York so I headed toward the sun.

What do you miss most from home?

I miss the seasons and hearing carols playing while shopping for Christmas presents, but I don't think that happens anywhere anymore. I also miss the Magic Convention we used to have every summer.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since?

My first impression was that, like most actresses, Hollywood needs her make-up in the morning. Now it's my home and it's not like, say Chicago, where everything is downtown. LA is a cross-section of humanity if you travel from the West side to the East side you can see it all.

The biggest difference in living here versus Colon, Michigan?

I was never a small town girl at heart, I wanted to go places and do things. I still want to see Scotland! As a child I went to Chicago whenever I could, so the excitement and the variety of things to do is so much more than I've always wanted.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

Hidden gems seem to be getting harder to find of late. Then there is Mama Shelter at the corner of Wilcox and Selma. Rooftops drinks and food, a great view and YES - it's open. I stumbled in after passing this gem and it was instant love. Good food at the indoor restaurant too!

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

Remember life in Los Angeles is not cheap. I've been here a long time and I've been really lucky with landlords and rent. Be kinder than you have to be and people will treat you a bit nicer. Talk to people, you never know who you may run into.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

I won't claim this was said to me but it's one of my favorites. "None of us are getting out of here alive, so please stop treating yourself like an afterthought. Eat the delicious food. Walk in the sunshine. Jump in the ocean. Say the truth that you're carrying in your heart like a hidden treasure. Be silly. Be kind. Be weird. There's no time for anything else." My other favorite is "Hold tight and pretend it's a plan."

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment?

Well I am building my own website (with help). Recently I have re-invigorated my blog drriverasong.wordpress.com. It comprises stories whose content may be Whovian, fairy tales, or crime. I have a Facebook page (facebook.com/SpoilersSweetie) where I keep with conventions and panels that I do - and instagram/ currently looking for riveralexsong.com, where more virtual conventions there is occasionally a smartass comment and pictures of me and things I find interesting.

RIVER ALEXANDRA SONG: "Be kinder than you have to be and people will treat you a bit nicer."

Record breaker: With his victory at the Portuguese Grand Prix on Sunday, Lewis Hamilton surpassed Michael Schumacher's tally of 91 wins

Europa League Round Up

Arsenal's squad players impressed boss Mikel Arteta as they eventually broke Dundalk's resistance to win their Europa League group game at Emirates Stadium Thursday night.

Eddie Nketiah pounced from close range to give the Gunners the lead and Joe Willock blasted a shot into the roof of the net 125 seconds later.

Nicolas Pepe's brilliant effort from the edge of the box seconds after the restart killed the game off.

• Jamie Vardy became Leicester City's oldest European goalscorer as they beat AEK Athens to make it two wins from two in the Europa League.

The 33-year-old gave them the lead from a penalty after he was fouled by keeper Panagiotis Tsintotas.

The Foxes looked comfortable when Hamza Choudhury doubled the advantage with a smart side-footed finish.

But Muamer Tankovic gave AEK hope after ghosting in behind the Foxes defence moments after coming off the bench.

• Tottenham slipped to a first away defeat since July after a mistake by Ben Davies helped Royal Antwerp leapfrog their Europa League opponents to go top of Group J.

Davies, making his 200th Spurs appearance, was easily dispossessed by Dieumerci Mbokani, whose pass allowed Lior Refaelov to smash past Hugo Lloris.

Flat and uninspired, Spurs struggled to carve out chances and Jose Mourinho made four changes at the start of the second half in an attempt to inject some urgency into his side.

But it could have been worse for Tottenham, Mbokani somehow blazing over from three yards out with Simen Juklerod also missing a fine chance for the hosts.

A clearly furious Jose Mourinho said "my future choices are going to be very easy" after the surprise loss.

Mourinho made four changes at half-time after appearing to lose patience with some of his fringe players in Belgium.

Dele Alli, Steven Bergwijn, Giovanni Lo Celso and Carlos Vinicius were all replaced at the break, although the changes did not salvage a point.

"I would like to have made 11 changes at half-time," said Mourinho.

England midfielder Alli, 24, has started three matches this season and been replaced at half-time in two of them. This was the first time he had been in the starting XI for more than a month.

"I don't want to analyse individuals. I don't like to do that," added Mourinho following his side's first defeat since the opening weekend of the season.

"And tonight my future choices are going to be very easy."

• Alfredo Morelos equalled Ally McCoist's European scoring record for Rangers to end a frustrating night against Lech Poznan with a one-goal victory.

The Colombian striker came off the bench to head in a Borna Barisic cross for his 21st goal in 36 European games.

It means Rangers and Benfica, 3-0 winners over Standard Liege, top Group D after two successive wins.

But Steven Gerrard's side struggled to break down a side sitting 10th in Poland's top flight.

• Celtic's winless run extended to four games as they let slip a two-goal half-time lead in an engrossing Europa League stalemate in Lille.

Mohamed Elyounoussi netted an outstanding double before stand-in Celtic goalkeeper Scott Bain saved Jonathan David's weak penalty.

But the French side roared back with goals from Zeki Celik and Jonathan Ikone to stay unbeaten this season.

KASH & CLARETS!

■ Egyptian millionaire seals £200m deal for Burnley

BURNLEY have been sold to an Egyptian businessman for £200million.

Mohamed El Kashashy and sports lawyer Chris Farnell have signed sale and purchase agreements with the Premier League club after agreeing a deal with Clarets chairman Mike Garlick. It comes after Cheshire-based Farnell had his ban from being an owner of a football club lifted by the EFL.

Farnell failed the EFL's Owners' and Directors' Test in an attempt to buy Charlton Athletic but appealed the disqualification, claiming he had made an administrative error.

He then became embroiled in a bitter dispute with the EFL but has now been cleared to buy Burnley.

El Kashashy and Farnell have already provided proof of funds and the final hurdle is to pass the Premier League's Owners' and Directors' Test.

Millionaire El Kashashy made his money in food and he has been negotiating this deal for more than a year.

El Kashashy has also been interested in the Charlton consortium but has now pulled off a Premier League coup.

Garlick has admitted he has struggled with how the coronavirus pandemic has impacted at Turf Moor.

He had also been in talks with American

JOB SECURITY: Burnley manager Sean Dyche is understood to be central to the club's future plans investment firm ALK Capital, who believed they were close to a deal.

Burnley spent just £1m in the summer window in bringing in Dale Stephens from Brighton while squad goalkeeper Will Norris arrived on a free transfer. Garlick admitted the club stood to lose £50m because of the pandemic and was concerned about the long-term problems.

But it is understood the club had been on the market long before the virus struck.

The new owners insist there will be no wholesale changes, but fans will be keen for them to strengthen the squad. Boss Sean Dyche is believed to be central to their long-term plans.

Hamilton rewrites the record books

■ "I'm not finished yet," says Hamilton as Portuguese win takes him past Schumacher's victory tally

LEWIS HAMILTON has become the most victorious Formula One driver in history – and vowed to keep on breaking records.

Hamilton's crushing win at the Portuguese Grand Prix on Sunday was the 92nd of his amazing career as he overtook the mark he shared with Michael Schumacher, which he had equalled two weeks ago.

Mercedes star Hamilton was no match for his rivals, winning at Portimao by a mighty 25.592 seconds ahead of second-placed team-mate Valtteri Bottas. The Briton even battled cramp late on but held on to cement his standing as one of the sport's greatest drivers, 14 years after Schumacher won his last race.

Hamilton said: "I knew that we would win championships.

Did I think we would win as many as we have? No. Did I think that we would win this many races? Of course not.

"This is a phenomenal time for us and the great thing is it's not just me. What a time to be alive." Asked how he could raise the bar, Hamilton added: "Going by our history together, there's a lot more for us to do.

"I'm 35, I still feel physically strong but of course you wonder when is it going to tip over, when are you going to start losing performance? But, as shown by today, it's not yet."

The dominant win leaves him firmly on target to collect a record-equalling seventh world title this season – and also earned him plenty of plaudits.

Mercedes boss Toto Wolff said: "Who would have thought when we started this project in 2013... it's almost a surreal amount of wins. It's his absolute passion and energy and everything he puts into the sport – and the talent and the ability. He's just standing out."

Three-time world champion Sir Jackie Stewart said: "I take my hat off to him for his considerable achievements and I wish him well for his continuing career."
