Happy Monday as Covid lockdown starts to ease

■ Millions flock to parks, beaches and sports venues as long national nightmare starts to ease

IT was a very Happy Monday in the UK this week as millions ventured out after the first easing of lockdown – putting England firmly on the roadmap to freedom.

There were scenes of jubilation at parks, beaches, sports venues and tourist sites as friends and family were finally reunited.

And glorious spring sunshine, with temperatures climbing to 66F (19C), added to the delight.

There seemed nothing gradual about this initial lifting of restrictions in England as people embraced exercise boot camps, a wedding or two and even some midnight golfing.

All sorts of sporting activities returned, with lockdown-weary people enjoying swimming, tennis, windsurfing, football, aqua aerobics, bowls, gym classes and croquet, among others.

After a year of on-off restrictions, Happy Monday – as the country's tabloid press dubbed it – seemed a huge boost of confidence in the Government's much-debated roadmap to freedom.

Friends and families were able to meet up for the first time in months, albeit with social distancing rules still in place.

English Heritage said it had successfully reopened some 60 venues, though it was a bookings-only service for visitors at the likes of Dover Castle and the Battle of Hastings site in East Sussex.

Warm

On the coast, the warm weather and loosening of restrictions led to busy scenes at beaches including Brighton and Bournemouth.

As the new rules were ushered in at midnight on Sunday, golfers in Ilkeston, Derbyshire, used neon balls to tee off in the dead of night.

Seven teams used the glow in the dark balls and floodlit greens in a match to raise funds for Nottingham Breast Cancer Research Centre.

A few hours later, bosses at golf courses across the country woke up to long queues as players deprived of a round for months returned at the first chance.

Other outdoor sports were also reopened for business, with tennis courts, swimming pools and bowls greens across the nation welcoming back enthusiasts.

Many outdoor pools opened before dawn and were greeted by long queues. showed the keen uptake of the offer of a swim. Olympic swimmer Sharron Davies said: "The queues are ridiculous. Some of the pools have even had their doors open since 5am to try and get everyone in.

"People are desperate to start to just be more physically active and get into a swimming pool."

In addition to hitting outdoor pools across the country, many also attended Hampstead Heath Ponds and Serpentine Lido, in London, which opened up for the first time in months. And across the country, tennis club members returned to the courts for the new season.

Boris Johnson said he would be up for a game, while Labour leader Sir Keir Starmer is opting for five-a-side football.

The PM added: "I am personally thrilled that I will be able to play tennis. I do hope we can take advantage of this moment and the beautiful weather to play sport, to take exercise, to have fun and build our national resilience in that way too."

Sir Keir said he was looking forward to being able to "shout and scream" on the football pitch once again.

Leading gym chain David Lloyd welcomed back members, with classes and equipment in open marquees. In all, the

JOHNSON: WE DON'T NEED EU!

■ 60m jabs of new vaccine to be made in Britain, says buoyant Boris

BORIS Johnson has revealed 60 million doses of a new Covid jab will be made in Britain – ending the threat of an EU trade war.

Novavax will be “bottled” in the UK, not Germany as originally intended with pharmaceutical giant GlaxoSmithKline to “fill and finish” the new doses in the North.

The move will ensure a home-based vaccine industry, to protect the nation from any Brussels blockade on doses from abroad.

The EU had threatened to block vaccine exports to the UK earlier this month and their policy in this area is still unclear.

Previously, the Novavax vaccine was due to be manufactured in Stockton-on-Tees, in County Durham, but transported to Germany for bottling.

Now, the doses will be put into vials at a GlaxoSmithKline plant at nearby Barnard Castle.

Mr Johnson called the move “a potentially significant new weapon in our armoury against Covid”.

He announced the preparations to roll out the two-shot Novavax vaccine at a Downing Street news conference on Wednesday.

The vaccine is expected to be approved by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency in May.

Weapon

Mr Johnson said: “At the same time as we push forwards with our programme to offer a vaccination to all adults by the end of July, we’re building up our own longterm UK manufacturing capabilities.”

“I’ve already told you that Novavax – a potentially significant new weapon in our armoury against Covid – is going to be made in the North-east.

“And I can today announce that the Vaccine Taskforce has reached an agreement with GSK to finish and bottle this precious fluid, also in the North-east, giving us between 50 and 60 million doses of UK-made vaccine subject to the right approvals from the MHRA.”

Novavax manufacturers say trials show it to be 86 per cent effective against the Kent variant and 96 per cent effective in preventing cases caused by the original version of the virus.

If approved, the stockpile would be big enough to inoculate half the UK adult population with the required two doses.

It will also mean the UK has access to four vaccines after the Moderna jab was approved recently to add to the Oxford University/AstraZeneca and Pfizer stocks.

Health Secretary Matt Hancock said he was “delighted that GSK will provide manufacturing support to the Novavax vaccine onshore”. He added: “British life science is going from strength to strength.

“We’ve all seen just how important onshore vaccine manufacturing capabilities are, and this fantastic deal will ensure more of these vital products can be produced here in the UK.

“The UK’s vaccination programme has been a national success, with over 30 million people now having received a first dose of a vaccine.

WHAT ME, GLOAT? Boris milks the moment this week

“Should the Novavax vaccine meet our medicine regulator’s high standards of safety and effectiveness, the agreement reached today will boost these efforts over the coming months.”

Mr Johnson also used the news conference to celebrate “a big day for many of us” with the replacement of the Government’s “stay at home” message with new advice to enjoy the outdoors. The PM said: “I must stress that it is only because of months of sacrifice and effort that we can take this small step to freedom today and we must proceed with caution.

“It is great to see that yesterday we recorded the lowest number of new infections for six months. Deaths and hospital admissions across the UK are continuing to fall.

“But that wave is still rising across the Channel and it is inevitable as we advance on this roadmap that there will be more infections, and more hospitalisations and sadly more deaths. So what we need to do is continue flat out to build the immunity of our population, build our defences against that wave when it comes.”

FORGOTTEN ALREADY? the scene in Nottingham this week

Don't blow it now, Hancock warns as sun-loving Brits jam beaches and parks

CAREFREE crowds ignoring Covid rules were warned this week: “Don't blow it now.”

Health Secretary Matt Hancock urged Britons not to jeopardise the easing of lockdown as scores of people were pictured at beaches and parks on Wednesday with little concern for social distancing.

On the hottest March day since 1968, thousands embraced the new freedoms to meet outdoors, enjoying picnics and barbecues.

But as images emerged of crowded spaces, Mr Hancock made an urgent plea for everyone to enjoy the sunshine safely.

He tweeted: “Let’s enjoy the sun but let’s do it safely. We have come so far. Don’t blow it now.”

in tackling the virus, lockdown restrictions were eased this week to allow up to six people, or two households, to meet in outdoor spaces.

But ministers have warned that social distancing is still vital, saying people who do not live together should resist the temptation to hug.

Paul Hunter, a professor at the University of East Anglia, said transmission of Covid was "much less efficient outdoors than in".

But he added: "If we are to avoid having to go backwards into another lockdown it is essential that we keep to the rules in force."

"We are still a long way from being able to put the pandemic behind us. There are still a lot of new infections being reported each day and we do need to be cautious."

"If we relax too much too quickly with current levels of infection we could find ourselves in another surge in infections. That would mean having to backpedal on lifting lockdown and then having to extend restrictions for more months with the negative impacts that would have on society and the economy."

Latest vaccination statistics show more than 30.6 million people have now had a first dose, while 3.8 million have had both jabs.

While many people enjoyed temperatures in the high 70s, safely, others were slammed for breaking rules and putting progress at risk.

In Leeds, hundreds of people soaked up the sunshine at the Woodhouse Moor park, close to the main student hubs of the city.

One resident said: "There's hundreds here, literally hundreds. People have barbecues going on. It's really frustrating, to be honest."

"I get it, it's hot and people want to enjoy the weather, but we're literally a few weeks away from lockdown ending. Can they not just wait?"

Similar scenes were pictured in Southend, London and Cambridge as scores of people mingled in the sunshine.

LONDON FALLING: No deaths in capital for the first time in 6 months

LONDON had a day without a Covid death on Sunday – its first in six months.

There were two fatalities recorded in the capital on Monday as every English region saw deaths down to single figures, while there were none in the North East.

The most was five in the East of England.

The Government's data dashboard also showed there had been 443 virus deaths across the UK in the last seven days – down 25 per cent on the previous week.

The seven-day deaths total has tumbled almost 95 per cent since January 24, when there were more than 8,600.

Prof Chris Whitty, England's chief medical officer, said: "The best news really on this is that the number of deaths of people who had a positive test for Covid in the UK is continuing to fall."

'still rising'

"A large part of this is due to lockdown, but also partly and increasingly due to the vaccine rollout."

Total UK deaths reported on Monday were down to 23: none in Scotland or Northern Ireland, one in Wales, 20 in English regions plus two deaths in England not assigned to a region.

There were 4,654 fresh Covid cases.

Despite the downward trend, Boris Johnson warned that it was "inevitable" more people would die.

The Prime Minister said: "It's great to see that we recorded the lowest number of new infections for six months [and] deaths and hospital admissions across the UK are continuing to fall."

"That wave is still

rising across the Channel and it's inevitable, as we advance on this roadmap, that there will be more infections and unavoidably more hospitalisations, and sadly more deaths."

restrictions

Prof Whitty said that positive Covid tests had "dropped a long way from the peak in January". But he too warned of a possible rise as restrictions are eased.

Data for England showed there were 3,466 people with Covid on wards this week, including 532 in intensive care.

The number has plunged by 90 per cent since the peak of 34,336 on February 18.

Saffron Cordery, deputy chief executive of trusts body NHS Providers, said "things are on the right track" but added: "Covid-19 cases have not gone away."

"We must remain vigilant against new variants of the virus. As with every stage of this pandemic, we are still in uncharted territory and there is a way to go before we defeat it."

Meanwhile a memorial to people lost in the crisis has been started on a wall opposite Parliament. Bereaved families are hand-drawing almost 150,000 coloured hearts for hundreds of yards along the southern bank of the Thames.

The tribute has been organised by the group Covid-19 Bereaved Families For Justice UK, which is calling for a public inquiry into the Government's handling of the pandemic.

Co-founder Matt Fowler, 33, lost his 56-year-old dad Ian. He said: "Each heart is individually hand-painted [and] utterly unique, just like the loved ones we've lost. And like the scale of our collective loss, this memorial is going to be enormous."

Helpers are working in socially distanced groups of no more than six, in line with coronavirus restrictions.

Patel gets tough on date rape drug GBH

HOME Secretary Priti Patel has ordered tighter restrictions on a drug used by two of Britain's worst sex attackers.

GHB is to be reclassified as Class B, meaning offenders will face harsher penalties. The drug was used by serial rapist Reynhard Sinaga to incapacitate scores of victims.

Killer Stephen Port used the drug to murder four young men after luring them to his home.

It has been described as a sex attacker's "weapon of choice".

Ms Patel said: "GHB and related substances have been used to commit some truly sickening crimes including murder, sexual assault and robbery.

Victims "I will do everything in my power to protect people from harm, which is why I am tightening restrictions around these dangerous substances.

"These changes will make the drugs harder to access and introduce tougher penalties for possession."

Known as G, the highly addictive drug is meant to give users a sense of euphoria. But an overdose knocks out victims and can kill.

Sinaga, Britain's most prolific rapist, was jailed last year after he was found guilty of raping and sexually assaulting 48 men at his flat in Manchester.

However, police fear he attacked more than 200 victims after taking them home and giving them drinks spiked with GHB.

Port, 45, drugged four men with lethal doses of GHB and left their bodies near his home in Barking, east London, in 2014 and 2015.

The maximum penalty for the possession of a Class B drug is five years in prison, an unlimited fine, or both.

Piers: You can't call me a racist just because I didn't believe Meghan PIERS Morgan has savaged today's so-called "cancel culture" – and denied being racist for refusing to believe the Duchess of Sussex.

The former Good Morning Britain host, 55, stormed off the ITV show on March 9 after being challenged on air by colleague Alex Beresford, a day after Meghan and Prince Harry's Oprah Winfrey interview was shown.

Piers said doubting Meghan, 39, was dubbed a race hate crime and it was time to "cancel the cancel culture before it kills our culture".

He said he could not be labelled racist just because he did not believe parts of Meghan's interview.

He also attacked Harry for a "disgraceful betrayal" of the Queen.

Piers added the Duchess's credibility had been eroded by news she and Harry, 36, had not in fact wed in private three days before their official wedding – after telling US chat queen Oprah they had.

He also insisted he was not making light of Meghan saying she had suicidal thoughts as a royal, but doubted her claim that she was told by court officials not to seek help.

Piers went on to opine that it was outrageous Sharon Osbourne had been "driven out" of US show The Talk "for the crime of defending me" against a colleague who said he was racist.

Backlash

He said of Meghan: "She is just one of many whiny, privileged, hypocritical celebrities who now cynically exploit victimhood to suppress free speech, value their own version of the truth above the actual truth, and seek to cancel anyone that deviates from their woke world view or who dares to challenge the veracity of their inflammatory statements.

"No, it's about a far bigger issue than one delusional duchess and that's everyone's right to be free to express our honestly held opinions, forcefully and passionately if we feel like it."

"If our rights to free speech are denied, then democracy as we know it will die."

'fork-tongued truth'

The presenter said the backlash on him and his family included his three sons being trolled on social media and people saying he was racist and "mocking mental illness" by doubting Meghan's claims.

Piers said although he had not voiced anything racist and cheered the presence of a mixed-race woman in the Royal Family, he was left to conclude that "questioning Meghan's fork-tongued 'truth' is now a racist hate crime".

The former Daily Mirror editor said the ex-Suits actress had endured no worse media treatment than other royal brides like Diana, Sarah Ferguson, Kate, Camilla and even Wallis Simpson.

But he said Meghan was quick to claim negative press was motivated by racism, "a very dangerous charge to make with so little to back it up".

Piers also recounted his dramatic exit from the GMB set after what he called weather presenter Alex Beresford's "censorious lecture".

He said Alex insisted

HAPPIER DAYS: Piers Morgan and Meghan Markle were once friendly.....

that even if Meghan's debunked claim about her son Archie being barred from the title of prince because of his skin colour was untrue, it was still her "lived experience" and should be respected.

Piers claimed that view was ridiculous, since someone could not have a lived experience of racism when "the fact you're basing it on is false".

He added: "Sadly, this is where we've now arrived in society: the gym chain reopened 79 clubs in England.

Chief executive Glenn Earlam said members were "desperate to get out of their houses and go and do something different".

In Warrington, Cheshire, children headed to Victoria Park rugby league ground for a training session, where they were joined by Culture Secretary Oliver Dowden.

He said: "I'm absolutely delighted. After this dreadful long winter of Covid, spring is in the air and grassroots sport is returning."

truth can be whatever someone decides it is, so Meghan Markle must be believed because it's 'her truth'. And if you don't believe her, you're a racist."

Support

Piers said after being told by ITV to apologise or leave GMB, he remembered a refrain from his ex-manager, the late John Ferriter, to "trust your gut".

He decided that in a free society he should be allowed to not believe someone and say so.

The presenter said had he said he now believed Meghan, he would be lying to his audience, "the very thing I've accused her of doing".

Piers said the following morning he received more than 1,000 emails and texts, including backing from Bear Grylls, Transport Secretary Grant Shapps – and even his old foe, ex-Top Gear host Jeremy Clarkson.

Former Tory minister Michael Portillo also said: "I didn't know that disbelieving Meghan was a sackable offence. Interesting. Presumably not believing Boris would not be?"

Piers wrote that one of his favourite messages was from a woman to his local pub.

She insisted she would buy his first post-lockdown drinks "as a thank you for the way he has held the Government to account since the beginning of the pandemic and his support for NHS workers".

Life for chip feud husband

A HUSBAND has been jailed for life after chopping up his wife because she mistakenly thawed a £3 bag of chips.

Thomas McCann, 49, strangled and cut up Yvonne, 46, before dumping her remains at a recycling centre and country park last May.

The father of three, from Stockport, even texted his dead wife saying, "I love you". He later admitted murder.

Manchester Crown Court judge Alan Conrad QC on Wednesday jailed McCann for life with a minimum of 13 years and four months.

He said: "Not just her death but the manner of her death at your hands has caused so many people so much grief."

'Diverse' UK hailed over narrowing of race gap

■ 'Britain a beacon to the world', says landmark review

Britain is a model on race for other countries, with children from ethnic minorities outperforming their white peers at school, a landmark government review has concluded.

The Commission on Race and Ethnic Disparities, formed last July after mass protests by the Black Lives Matter movement, said that Britain had become a more open society and that racial inequalities had narrowed in education and employment.

Its report, published on Wednesday, said that the success of much of the ethnic minority population in education and, to a lesser extent, the economy "should be regarded as a model for other white-majority countries".

Education was "the most emphatic success story", it said, pointing out that pupils from Indian, Bangladeshi and black African backgrounds in England scored better on average across eight GCSEs than white British children. It added that there was increasing diversity in the elite professions and that the pay gap between ethnic minorities and the white population had shrunk.

The review, chaired by the educationalist Tony Sewell, found that claims that the country was institutionally racist were "not borne out by the evidence". It called for workplaces to phase out unconscious bias training for their staff in favour of more "evidence-based" alternatives. However, the commission concluded that Britain was not a "post-racial" society and that disparities persisted at the top of the public and private sectors.

It said that there was a sense of "deep mistrust" in some ethnic minority communities that were "haunted" by historic racism, and that overt racism continued to be a problem, particularly online. "Both the reality and the perception of unfairness matter," it added.

The contents made public so far have led to criticism by some charities and unions, who said that the findings were

The Commission on Race and Ethnic Disparities this week said Britain had become a more open society....a claim quickly disputed by many a foregone conclusion when Sewell, long a critic of the idea of institutional racism, was appointed to lead it.

Halima Begum, chief executive of the Runnymede Trust, a race inequality think tank, said she felt "deeply, massively let down" and that the government had lost the confidence of ethnic minority communities.

"Institutionally, we are still racist, and for a government-appointed commission to look into [institutional] racism to deny its existence, is deeply, deeply worrying," she said.

The GMB union said that the report was "gaslighting" ethnic minority workers and communities. Rehana Azam, its national secretary for public services, said: "Institutional racism exists, it's the lived experience of millions of black and ethnic minority workers.

"We're paid less, we're more likely to be in high-risk jobs during the pandemic, we're more likely to die from Covid, we're more likely to be stopped and searched, to be arrested and to go to prison."

Brits in LA

Scotweek hosts celeb-filled live red carpet at Santa Monica's Fairmont Hotel

■ Two British publicists decide it's time to get their glad rags on!

Like most females in Los Angeles - I had forgotten how to put makeup on and was feeling rather pleased that my weekly laundry was now monthly, and consisted of dark colored sweat pants!

By Christine Peake

So when fellow British publicist Jane Owen gave me a call to partner with her for an upcoming red carpet event, I shaved my legs, plucked my brows, dyed my gray hair and said, "count me in!" Hello events and bye bye Netflix!

Mostly consisting of virtual events taking place in April for Scotweek 2021, the red carpet was to take place at the Fairmont Hotel and Bungalow in Santa Monica, CA. Another plus for me, it was walking distance!

Jane had hired a covid compliance officer for $500 so all the safety measures were in order. Plaid trousers on, blue eye shadow, (I was overly excited) I set off to work and looking forward to see a few familiar faces which I had missed.

On arrival it was certainly a different set-up to the other 100+ carpets I had done. The photographers were spaced 8 feet apart and stepped back to enable others to shoot their photos whilst politely waiting their turn, as opposed to telling each other "get the hell out of my shot you *+%-hole!"

There was also a sense of relief and appreciation in the air, we were with humans!

the mask slips...

VIP guests included actor Tony Curran, singer Samantha Mumba, Producer Cj day Cowboy, actresses Tara Reid, supermodel Eugenia Kuzmina, Scottish actress Erin Gavin, accessory designer of the year Margaret Rowe, actor Matthew Postlethwaite, socialite Lady Victoria Hervey, Producer Cindy Cowan, comedian Jessica Winther, influencers Shaka Smith, Hari Tahov, reality TV stars of Gown And Out In Beverly Hills Patrik Simpson & Pol Atteu, along with artist Amber Goldhammer, celebrity real estate agent Bronwyn Leigh Jones and other industry leaders from both Scotland and LA.

All guests were asked to keep their masks on before and after walking the red carpet. Things went smoothly until one guest had a 'royal' heated argument with the compliance officer/photographer and refused to abide by the mask rules, and the Balvenie Scottish whisky hadn't even been opened at this point!

Jane and myself tried to calm the situation down as we found ourselves in new Covid waters. Luckily rules are rules and things went ahead as planned.

To make all guests/teamsters feel safe for upcoming events many changes are in place. A city certified Covid compliance officer must be present throughout the entire event, microphones for interviews must have covers that are changed between interviews, several stations with sanitizer and extra masks throughout the event space replace beverage and food stations, masks on when not on the carpet and keep your distance. It certainly is a new way of doing things, but Jane and myself were grateful for the opportunity to get back to work and feel a sense of achievement.

Much different might I add to the recent achievements I am proud of such as watching Bridgerton (twice) in one sitting and eating two Easter Eggs from the Kings Head Shoppe in one sitting without being ill!

Lucky guests were given wonderful gift bags that contained a selection of treats including 'Wish Beads', Whisky Flasks and Balvenie Whisky from William Grant & Sons - whisky flasks Ales from MacLeods Ale Brewery, an 'Essence of Harris' Beverly Hills gift certificate and 'Urban Dapper Club' Pocket Squares.

Held mostly virtually on April 16 and 17, ScotWeek 2021 aims to be the most amazing event to date. Both days start early with presentations, motivational talks, fun panel discussions and

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: In the present times it's harder for you than most. Fear not, this is the beginning of your new year. Imagine what you can do when life gets really moving again. Happy Birthday!

TAURUS: You should be ready to put into process any plans for when this time frame ends. Get a list going of what you can be doing in the meantime. You are nearly through this.

GEMINI: Best thing you can do is to meditate if you do not already. This has been a tough time for you busy souls. So it's a relief to see the end of the tunnel now. Travel in any form is on your mind.

CANCER: Whenever you feel down remember this time is ending slowly but surely. Don't look at what is not happening, rather make plans for what you want to put your energy into now.

LEO: You can relax as you have probably done a lot of work in your home area. Just don't forget to keep up with your extended family. Get ready because you are getting together soon.

VIRGO: You are not alone in your feelings of relief. This is across the planet as we are mostly all in the same boat. Work on positive thoughts every day and plan for a great summer.

LIBRA: The things that you have put off doing in the past months should now get a second look. Whatever it is get going and enjoy. Your boss Venus is in your cousin sign of Gemini so will help.

SCORPIO: Intensity is often a part of how you deal with life in general. This often works out in a positive way and as this month begins you will see how much you can achieve by surrender and just let it be.

SAGITTARIUS: In common with your cousin fire signs you feel that there are some things that cannot wait. Well, we are all in the same boat and you can only plan ahead. Jupiter your boss is in your cousin sign to help you move forward very soon.

CAPRICORN: All the emotions that have come forward for you in this uneasy time should be ending soon. Jupiter is visiting your money area and so that is good news indeed.

AQUARIUS: While the current times are uncertain for all folks you actually are feeling more positive. Jupiter visiting you is the reason. You know you will get through this, so let go and relax.

PISCES: You are probably feeling somewhat disoriented in this current timeframe. This of course is in the process of changing soon. Life will be sweeter than for many months.

with injuries and made just 14 appearances so far, scoring three goals.

Losing the 32-year-old, who has had several offers from clubs in England, Europe and South America, will leave a huge hole in City's squad.

Manager Pep Guardiola is now expected to step up plans to sign Borussia Dortmund sensation Erling Haaland, below, as his replacement.

Aguero joined from Atletico Madrid in 2011 for £38million and has become City's all-time record scorer with 257 goals in 384 appearances.

He is widely regarded as one of the greatest players of his era, having won 10 major trophies at the Etihad.

Scotland bash Faroes

Che Adams netted his first goal for Scotland as they thumped Faroe Islands 4-0 Wednesday night at Hampden and claimed a first World Cup 2022 qualifying victory.

John McGinn's double and Ryan Fraser's third goal in three appearances brought to an end a five-game winless run.

And it stemmed creeping criticism following opening Group F draws against Austria and Israel.

With Denmark thumping the Austrians 4-0 in Vienna, the win moved Scotland up to second in the table.

Steve Clarke's side are unbeaten in three games as they bid to reach next year's finals in Qatar.

Northern Ireland draw a blank

Northern Ireland had to settle for a disappointing scoreless draw despite dominating possession against a toothless Bulgaria at Windsor Park on Wednesday night.

Stuart Dallas hit the crossbar with a first-half header for the hosts while Gavin Whyte and Niall McGinn went close after the break.

The visitors almost stole a win at the end but Bailey Peacock-Farrell produced a superb save from Dimitar Iliev.

It leaves Northern Ireland with one point from two World Cup qualifiers.

They are still looking for a first win during 90 minutes in 11 matches under Ian Baraclough.

Their next Group C game is away to Lithuania in September.

Howe looks favorite for Celtic job

Eddie Howe is the clear favourite to become the next manager of Celtic, with talks between the two parties at an advanced stage.

The former Bournemouth boss, 43, has held discussions with members of the club's board, including major shareholder Dermot Desmond.

Howe left Bournemouth in August 2020 when the club's five-year stay in the Premier League came to an end.

Celtic's search for a successor to Neil Lennon officially started when the Northern Irishman left in February - in reality it started well before and Eddie Howe's name was always one the board kept coming back to.

At Bournemouth he became known for bringing in young players, making them better and selling on at a profit - that has been Celtic's strategy since Martin O'Neill left.

In Howe they also have a man who has very obvious similarities to former manager Brendan Rodgers. A player whose career was cut short through injury and so opted for coaching from an early age. A man who has proved himself in the English Premier League and a man known for his attention to detail.

Harry late show gives England win

■ Maguire seals the points to bail out Stones blunder

Harry Maguire's late winner made it a maximum nine points from three World Cup 2022 qualifiers for England as they overcame Poland at Wembley on Wednesday.

Poland presented a much sterner test than the formalities against San Marino and Albania and it looked like England would have to settle for a point until Maguire struck five minutes from time.

England's impressive first half brought a deserved lead when Harry Kane scored his 34th international goal from the penalty spot in the 19th minute, following Michal Helik's challenge on Raheem Sterling.

And yet England almost paid the price for a largely average performance after the break as Poland, who were without injured world-class striker Robert Lewandowski, equalised when a dreadful error by Manchester City's John Stones saw him concede possession on the edge of the area and Jakub Moder beat Nick Pope emphatically.

It was the first goal Pope had conceded in seven England appearances and looked like being costly until Stones made amends by showing superb athleticism to head Phil Foden's corner into the path of Maguire, who lashed a powerful drive high past Wojciech Szczesny to keep manager Gareth Southgate's perfect record in these World Cup qualifiers intact.

England's performance can be divided up into the two halves and ultimately they were very grateful for Maguire's late intervention.

In the opening 45 minutes they were controlled and composed after a slow start, cutting through Poland at will although they did not create too many clear-cut chances.

England dominated in midfield, were barely threatened at the back, and the combination of Sterling and Mason Mount looked hugely promising on the left side.

And at the heart of it all was West Ham United's Declan Rice, knitting play together in midfield, not merely breaking up attacks but showing a willingness to start them as well. The 22-year-old looks the complete operator, growing in stature with every game.

Rice is a certain starter when England open their Euro 2020 campaign against Croatia at Wembley on 13 June and he demonstrated once more what a crucial figure he will be in manager Southgate's plans.

Kane, too, proved how important he will be as England again showed that they have the ability to grind out wins when not at their best.

In the second half, however, England were average and lost all of the fluency that allowed them to dominate in the first period.

Poland will be disappointed not to get a point after showing real spirit to fight their way back into contention, especially when they were without the stellar talent of Lewandowski.

In contrast to England, Poland's players did not take the knee at kick-off but very clearly pointed to the "Uefa Respect" inscription on the left sleeve of their jersey, which refers to the European federation's campaign against racism, xenophobia and intolerance.

For England, Maguire's decisive late contribution made it a satisfactory start to their qualifying campaign.

Aguero confirms City exit

SERGIO AGUERO has announced he will be leaving Manchester City at the end of the season.

The Argentinian striker is out of contract in June and both player and club have elected to part company.

Revealing his decision to bring to an end a decade of stunning success at the club, Aguero posted an emotional farewell message on Twitter. It read: "When a cycle comes to an end, many sensations arise. A huge sense of satisfaction and pride remains in me for having played with City for a whole 10 seasons – unusual for a professional player in this day and age.

CITY LEGEND: Sergio Aguero

"Ten seasons with major achievement, throughout which I was able to become the top historic goalscorer and forging an indestructible bond with all those who love this club - people who will always be in my heart."

Aguero will look back on a final campaign where he has struggled
